FOUL MURDER COMMITTED

Rhode Island Man Killed Near Mentor, Minn.

Shot By His Companion While Out Hunting.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—As the story of the death of the man supposed to be Thomas Fontaine, of Woonsocket, R. I., whose dead body was found one mile the other side of Mentor, becomes known, it indicates that a most foul murder has been committed.

Fontaine and Joseph Guilmette, both of whom came from Rhode Island, had been in the vicinity of Mentor for several days. Last Friday the two men appeared at the La Page farm, and in a conversation Fontaine discovered that La Page came from the same vicinity in the East, and knew many of the same people. Fontaine owned a farm in the East and was fairly well to do. He carried considerable money, but the exact amount is not known. Fontaine made arrangements to have a hunt with La Page later. Friday night the two men stayed with the La Page family. They started hunting Saturday morning. They were seen in Mentor Sunday and ate at a restaurant, the employes of which have positively identified Fontaine's body as did La Page. Sunday night they spent at a farm house near town and again went hunting. Monday afternoon the two men were seen passing along on the railroad track by several members of the Marceaux family.

A few minutes after they had passed the Marceaux family heard a shot and ten minutes later a second shot, but were not surprised, as this season of the year shooting is general.

Fontaine was found beside the railroad track. A bullet had entered the head behind the ear and, tearing its way through the back of the head, came out on the other side.

Fontaine's body had been hauled by the heels, and dragged face downward over the uneven railroad ties. After being rolled down an embankment and dragged into the brush, another shot had been fired full into the face.

St. Paul, Oct. 20.—A special to the Dispatch from Crookston, Minn., says: Sheriff Sullivan has sent eight deputies to search for Guilmette, the companion of Fontaine, who it is announced in a telegram from Fertile, Minn., today, was seen there Tuesday evening and tried to buy a case for his shotgun at a hardware store. He was headed South when he left that place.

Sheriff Sullivan has sent out messages describing Guilmette and asking that he be detained.

A letter found in the pocket of the deceased bore the name of Albert Desorviers, of the firm of Desorivers Bros., druggists, Woonsocket, R. I.

Coroner Chesterman left for Mentor today to take charge of the remains.

Woonsocket, R. I., Oct. 20.—Philens Fontaine, the victim of murder in Minnesota, was well known here. He was about 32 years old and unmarried. He went West last summer with Joseph Guilmette, under a contract to gather spruce gum for Desrochers Bros., druggists, of Woonsocket, and was expected to return in a short time. Fontaine's family moved away from here soon after he went West.

GERMAN WAR VETERAN IN NEW YORK ENDS HIS EXISTENCE

New York, Oct. 20.—Inconsolable over the loss of his favorite son and an exile from the fatherland because he had shot and wounded a German army officer, who he believed intentionally caused his son's death, Adam Engelhart, a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, today shot himself dead, in the hall way of an East Side tenement, where he lived. Engelhart was 57 years old. He left a large family and it is said a prosperous business in Germany when he fled to this country. Before taking his life today, Engelhart had pinned on his breast all of his five medals received for bravery during the Franco-Prussian war, including one given him for his services at Sedan.

In Engelhart's room were found ten letters sealed and addressed, some to the police and others to his relatives in Germany. One bore the address "Oh, Dieser Mo6erer," which translated, means "Oh, that murderer." It is supposed that the letter is Engelhart's farewell message of hate to the officer, who is supposed to have killed his son.

TROLLEY LINE COMES TO AURORA CITY LIMITS BUT CANNOT ENTER

Aurora, Ill., Oct. 20.—One of the oddest street car fights that has ever been waged in the county is now on between the Auroora city council and the owners of the Auora, Elgin & Chicago line.

A new line, known as the Joliet & Aurora road, laid its rails to the city limits of Aurora, but is unable to make terms with the city on which it shall enter the business district. The Joliet line then arranged to connect its rails with the Chicago road so that the latter could bring the Joliet cars into Aurora.

The fight was then transferred to the Chicago line and the mayor and council threatened to use the entire police force of Aurora to prevent the running of the Joliet cars over the Chicago line within the city limits.

LOST WOMAN FOUND.

Wandered Away In Delirum and Locked In Closet.

New York, Oct. 20.—After a fruitless search which began last Saturday and had been taken up by the police of the five boroughs of Greater New York, Mrs. Rita Singer, 20 years old, has been found locked in a closet within less than a block of her home in East New York. She had been imprisoned four days without food or water.

While her nurse was absent for a few moments last Saturday Mrs. Singer, who had been ill for some time suddenly arose, threw a wrap and fled from the house in a delirium of fever. Seeking refuge from imaginary pursuers she hurried down the street, ran into an unused building in the rear of a mission, and closed the door. A spring lock snapped behind her and she was a prisoner.

At lucid intervals the woman screamed and pounded on the door but the neighbors paid little attention to the sounds until they had continued intermittingly four days. Then a woman who happened nearby discovered the source and rescued the unfortunate patient.

Mr. Singer, who had searched the city continuously for some trace of his wife, arrived just as she was found. She recognized him at once, and it is believed, will recover.

DOLLY SPANKER WINS RACE.

New York, Oct. 20.—Dolly Spanker, heavily played at 16 to 5, won the Southampton handicap, one mile and a sixteenth, at Jamaica yesterday, defeating last year's Futurity winner, Hamburg Belle. Wotan made the running to the stretch, where Redfern on Dolly Spanker, who had been trailing the field, moved up along the rail and won easily by two lengths from Orthodox with Hamburg Belle third, two lengths away.

The Democratic state ticket is headed by George W. Peck and the other state tickets are the same as nominated in the various conventions.

THE OPINION OF JUDGE CASSODAY

Madison, Wis., Oct. 20.—The long-delayed opinions of the supreme court in the case of the Republican contest was filed this morning by Judge Marshall. It makes sixty typewritten pages, and merely affirms the decision made two weeks ago, quoting authorities voluminously.

The principal interest centers in the dissenting opinion by Chief Justice Cassoday, which is in substance that the Stalwarts were right and the Half Breeds wrong in their contention. He holds that the case comes within the first clause of section 35, revised statutes, and that the duties of the secretary of state are ministerial, and hence subject to the control of the court. He holds that the second clause merely intends to cover cases not mentioned in the first one, and that when there is a division in a party it should be covered by the first clause. Where there are two statutes, the earlier special, and the latter general, the first should govern. In other words, the official ballots should be prepared by the secretary of state under the first clause of the section, subject to the control of the court.

"I am also constrained to dissent from the opinion that the state central committee had exclusive jurisdiction to determine the controversy. Without going into the question of the committee being biased, giving it exclusive jurisdiction would deprive voters of the right of being represented in the state convention of the party, to which they belong, by delegates of their own choice." The opinion reviews the action of the committee acting as a committee on credentials, and deciding in advance just what delegates should be allowed to enter the hall of the convention and participate in the organization. This feature of the convention is commented on in scathing terms, and the judge says the committee assumed more power than the convention itself possessed.

"To bar from the convention lawfully elected representatives of voters is, in my opinion, to bar out the voters who sent them. The right to select candidates for office is as sacred as the right to elect candidates so selected.

"The right to choose delegates includes the right to have properly certified delegates admitted to the convention."

HIGH PRICE FOR PIG IRON

October Has Brought Best Returns For Past Year.

Cleveland, Oct. 20.—The Iron Trade Review this week says: The increased activity in the iron market that set in with October has kept up and in pig iron the past week has seen the highest prices of the year. Consumption has been overlapping production for several weeks and while meiters of pig iron bought in the market, particularly foundries, find no marked increase of orders, they are steadily melting more iron than in the summer months. The statistics indicate that pig iron output on Oct. 1. was at a rate of about 16,500,000 tons a year, while in March, April and May, the spring "freshet" carried it up to a rate of 18,000,000 tons.

REPAIRING WARSHIPS.

Getting American Squadron Ready For Winter Maneuvers

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.—With the arrival of the battleship Massachusetts at the League island navy yard preparations were begun to repair the formidable squadron of war vessels at the navy yard so they can be mobolized next December. An officer of the navy yard said that by Christmas all of the vessels must be at Hampton Roads for winter maneuvers. As soon as the Massachusetts fastened to her dock today a large corps of mechinics boarded the ship. All classes of war vessels are at League Island, including the first-class battleship Massachusetts and Alabama, the cruisers Denver and Montgomery, the auxiliary cruiser Prairie, the torpedo boat destroyers Stringham and Hopkins, the monitors Miantonomah and Florida and several sea-going tugs.

FARMER DROWNS HIMSELF.

Breckenridge, Minn., Oct. 20.—The body of Anders Larson, of Orwell township, Otter Tail county, was found in the Otter Tail river, two miles east of here, and was brought here by Coroner Truax and an inquest was held. A son and son-in-law came over from Otter Tail county and identified the remains. Larson was a man 65 years old, and lived on a farm with his family. The poor crops this year worried him, and he had repeatedly threatened to drown himself, and would often say he would be better off dead than alive.

THE NEXT DEVELOPMENTS IN THE GREAT FIGHT ARE LOOKED FOR TO EASTWARD

REPEATED ASSAULTS AND COUNTER ATTACKS OCCUR AT PT. ARTHUR

Further Minor Positions Have Been Captured By the Japanese.

Siege Guns Continue to Drop Shells Into Beleaguered Harbor.

Che Foo, Oct. 20, 3 p. m.—The important recent events at Port Arthur include the capture by the Japanese of further minor positions near Rihlung mountains and the severe damage of a Japanese torpedo boat destroyer by striking a floating mine.

According to Chinese advices, which reached here today and which are confirmed in essential points by Japanese letters from Port Dalny, the Japanese made assaults on the remaining outer works of Rihlung mountain at dawn on Oct. 8 and were repulsed. The following day the Russians made an attack on the Japanese trenches and they in turn were repulsed. The Japanese immediately followed with another assault, resulting in the capture of an iron railroad bridge and the heights south of the bridge, which is 500 yards from the main fortress.

The importance of these captures lies in the fact that they curtail the Russian fire in harassing Japanese who may attempt to advance on the trenches located on the slope of Rihlung mountain. This attack seems to have been a surprise for the Russians, the Japanese claiming that they lost only fifty men. Since the capture of the points mentioned the Japanese assert that they have successfully resisted numerous sorties in attempts to recapture them.

At 10 o'clock in the morning of Oct. 12, several Russian torpedo boats emerged from the harbor of Port Arthur and later they were followed by two more destroyers. This squadron proceeded to Shaolingtan and bombarded the Japanese left flank. Four Japanese torpedo boat destroyers hurried to the scene and the Russians retired to the harbor, followed by the Japanese. The pursuit ceased upon entering the mined area. One Japanese destroyer while returning hit a mechanical mine and was severely damaged, but she managed to reach Port Dalny and is now being repaired.

Meanwhile the Japanese siege guns continue to drop big shells in the harbor, the Japanese claiming that they damaged the Russian gunboat Giliak, whis is alleged to have been hit tiree times and to have changed her anchorage from the east basin to the shelter of Tiger hill. It is also believed that the funnel of another Russian warship was pierced as a dense cloud of smoke followed the landing of a shell on board of her.

A Chinaman who arrived here today declares that during the Japanese assault on Rihlung mountain the Russian battleships fired almost incessantly to the north. The Japanese at Taku mountain have dropped a ceaseless storm of shells on the Chinese town and many rifle bullets also fell into the place. The Chinaman adds that the fighting was very severe and that the Japanese loss was considerable. He says he left Port Arthur Oct. 18 because he was frightened by the shells.

It is asserted that the Russian force at Port Arthur now numbers 5000 men, excluding the militia, which is not engaged in fighting, but patrols the streets, doing provost duty and guards the arsenals, etc.

Winter clothing is very scarce at Port Arthur, shoes particularly. The Russian soldiers are wearing Chinese shoes and some of them are unable to obtain even these and wrap rags about their feet.

The garrison is greatly worn out by the many months of exhaustive fighting. The town is full of wounded. Flour is plentiful and the slaughter of horses, mules and donkeys continues.

Chinese who have reached Che Foo from Port Dalny say that Japanese reinforcements continue to arrive daily. The Japanese confirm this. A junk which reached this port today from Port Dalny was allowed to leave only on condition that she take no coolies, whom the Japanese are using in large numbers in constructing warehouses and removing the dead and wounded.

The wounded are taken to the railroad and thence are transported to Port Dalny, from which port they are shipped to Japan. The Japanese have practically completed immense warehouses between Port Dalny and Port Arthur and have therein supplies sufficient to last them until spring. Similar preparations have been made at Newchwang and therefore the Japanese expect the release of sixty transports next month.

Che Foo, Oct. 20, 8:30 p. m.—A jung which left Liaoti promontory yesterday was driven by a gale and arrived here tonight, bringing 100 coolies, who left Port Arthur because they feared injury from Japanese shells. The coolies say that on Oct. 13 there was fierce fighting for several hours on the slopes of Rihlung mountain between comparatively small forces, during which the Japanese lost 300 killed or wounded. The coolies weer unable to give the details of the fighting, but, apparently, it was the result of one of the numerous sorties made by the Russians against the Japanese, who were attempting to advance from their trenches.

Japanese wounded say that the soldiers in the trenches suffer severely from the cold, although the Japanese army is now almost completely supplied with winter outfits. It is said that the garrison is frantic for news of the operations of Gen. Kuropatkin, from whom the defenders expect relief.

The news that the Baltic fleet nas sailed for the Pacific was announced to the garrison and greatly encouraged the Russians.

AMES JURY SHOWS SIGNS OF AGREEMENT

Receive Instructions From Court Concerning an Accomplice.

Minneapolis, Oct. 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The jury which has the fate of Dr. A. A. Ames, of Minneapolis, in its hands was still out this morning, with no signs of agreement. No word of any kind had been sent to the court, indicating an approach to an agreement. It was reported that a hot debate prepailed all night in the jury room on the top floor of the Hennepin county courthouse.

The jury went out at 5 o'clock last night, after the charge by Judge Harrison.

Shortly before noon the jury came into court and asked Judge Harrison for further instructions. Three questions were asked:

1—What is the definition of an accomplice?

2—Must this definition be applied to the crime in the indictment and no other?

3—Must the defendant in the case stand as the principal to establish the fact of an accomplice?

These questions show that the defendant's contention that Brown, Norbeck, Gardner and Ames were accomplices and that their testimony was therefore not corroborative, is the pivotal point in the case.

The court's instructions today were that an accomplice must be one who has aided with common intent with principals in a common crime charged in the indictment. Brown and Ames are not regarded, therefore, as accomplices. It now appears that an agreement is probable. How the jurors stand is impossible to guess as no hint has been given out.

THREE GREAT TOBACCO COMPANIES CONSOLIDATE.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 20.—Papers were filed with the secretary of state today, providing for the carrying out of the plan of merger of the American Tobacco company, the Consolidated Tobacco company and the Continental Tobacco company. The consolidated companies are to be known as the American Tobacco company, with an authorized capitalization of $180,000,000, of which $80,000,000 is preferred stock, with 6 per cent cumulative dividends and $100,000,000 common stock. The papers filed gives the names of the officers and directors of the company, including J. B. Duke, president; W. H. McAllister, secretary, and John M. W. Hicks, treasurer.

The terms of merger in respect to the absorption of these companies are those agreed on and published some time ago and which have been the subject of litigation.

CARRIAGE BUILDERS ADJOURN.

Milwaukee, Oct. 20.—The Carriage Builders' National association adjourned sine die today, after deciding to meet next year in Philadelphia and electing new officers.

The First Battle of Shakhe River May Be Said to Have Ended.

No Official Estimates of the Losses Have Yet Been Received.

Tokio Hears That Russians Have Been Reinforced By 30,000 Men.

The suspension of actual fighting in Manchuria continues and the first battle of Shakhe river may be said to have ended. Both the Russian and Japanese commanders are resting their battle-worn troops and making redispositions, and in Russian military circles it is hinted that the next developments may be looked for eastward. The roads continue soggy, impeding operations on an extended scale. No official estimates of the losses in the recent fighting have been received, and the fragmentary and unofficial reports are contradictory. Tokio hears that the Russian forces have been reinforced by about 30,000 men, and that in all six divisions now confront the Japanese left. From Che Foo come reports of continued activity at Port Arthur, where fighting is almost daily in progress.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 20, 2 p. m.—The suspension of operations below Mukden still continues. It is hinted in military circles that the next developments should be looked for eastward, but whether on the part of the Japanese or the Russians is not revealed.

No news has reached the war office of the reported annihilation of a Russian battalion while recrossing the Taitse river.

A dispatch from Gen. Sakharoff, dated last night, reports that all was quiet along the front yesterday and that in spite of the soggy condition of the country roads, which are described as seas of mud, the Russian scouts continue to show great enterprise in examining the Japanese positions. A detachment of two hundred Cossacks Tuesday night reconnoitered the Japanese left southwestward along a line extending westward from the railroad where it crosses the Schli river, through the villages of Haitsantai, Tadousampu and Sandepu, the latter fifteen miles West of the railroad. The Japanese sentinels fired and retired as the Cossacks rode rapidly along the line, but near Sandeput the Cossacks unexpectedly ran into a good sized Japanese force, with machine guns. The latter opened a murderous fire on the Russians, killing many horses and mortally wounding Capt. Turgenieff but all the Cossacks succeeded in getting away. Not one was killed on the field.

No statement is made as to what is transpiring on the Russian left.

The war office is now disposed to believe that the Tokio report of the drubbing given to Gen. Yamada's brigade is the Japanese version of the capture of Lone Tree hill, nicely turned to minimize its importance.

The reports that Gens. Rennenkampf and Meyendorff are wounded are denied. The former's chief of staff, Col. Rossiesky, was wounded.

LOSSES IN BATTLE.

That of Japanese Left Army Placed at 5000.

Tokio, Oct. 20, noon.—Reliable reports received from private sources estimate the losses of the Japanese left army during the recent battle at about 5000.

The number of Russian dead is largely increased by the further discovery of bodies, notwithstanding the nightly removals by lantern light.

The Russian forces have been reinforced by about 30,000 men of the Seventeenth corps, a large portion of the Tenth corps and portions of the Fifth and Sixth Siberian corps, which recently arrived. In all, six divisions of the Russian army now confront the Japanese left army.

Heavy rains have impeded the movements of the opposing forces since Oct. 17.

INTERVENTION TALK

By Foreigners Is Deprecated In Russian Papers.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 20.—The Novoe Vreyma this morning, deprecating the renewed talk of foreign intervention in the Russo-Japanese war, says:

"Such talk, if based upon the fact that now and again the voicing of an urgent desire for peace is heard in Russia, must reflect the marvelous ignorance of or indifference on the part of foreigners to Russia's true internal condition. The fact is that in Russia, as in other countries, there are several parties; two of these want peace—the extreme reactionaries, because they constitute what was known in the United States during the Spanish-American war, and in England during the Boer war, as 'Peace at any price' men—and the radical, because they are in favor of a humiliating peace which would weaken the present government. But these parties are insignificant beside the great body of moderate progressives, who wish to see Russia's interior economical capabilities developed to their fullest extent, and who realize that only through a decisive Russian victory in the far East can the wound be healed, not plastered. Russia has the opportunity for interior development, on which their heart is set."

WITH OKU'S ARMY.

Japanese Correspondent Tells of Seven Days' Battle.

With Gen. Oku's Left Army at the Front, Oct. 16, 4 p. m., via Tien Tsin.—(Delayed.)—The seven days' battle north of Yentai was the heaviest blow yet struck the Russians by the Japanese, so far as the loss of life is concerned. The left Japanese army during the week buried 4100 Russian dead left in front of its lines. A village in front of the left wing contains many Russian dead, but the shell fire of the retreating Rusians prevents the Japanese from reaching them. Conservative estimates place the Russian casualties at not less than 25,000. Probably many more dead are on the field in places not yet searched. The Japanese report their total casualties at a little over 3000 killed and wounded. The principal Russian casualties occurred in determined counter attacks on each village captured by the Japanese. The Russian attacking parties were in many cases entirely annihilated. For the first time the Russians have met the Japanese on an equal footing, not having strong defensive positions to depend upon and for the first time they attacked the Japanese in their own trenches. The Russians fought bravely, but they were unable to drive the Japanese out or to hold their own positions against fierce charges. Almost in ever case the Russians retired from their positions at the first charge, then made repeated attempts to recapture them. The Japanese left army, with a front of nearly ten miles, moved forward about five miles, fighting over every inch of the ground. The final retreat of the Russians was almost a rout. The Japanese extreme left advanced, driving the remnant of the Russians ahead. The Russians covered their retreat well with artillery and carried away much baggage and many wounded. At 7:30 this morning the Russians made a determined counter attack at Lamutung with two regiments of infantry and two batteries of artillery. They were repulsed, after a half hour's fighting, with heavy loss. The Japanese left army during the past seven days' fighting has captured thirty-four guns, a large number of rifles and overcoats and 100 prisoners. The strength of the Russians opposed to the left army were three corps and thirty companies of artillery. All but a very small part were newly arrived troops.

The Japanese soldiers were practically the same that fought before Liao Yang, Chinese report that heavy works are ready for the Russians along the Hun river. The Japanese are undecided where the next stand will be made.

Details of the operation of the right and center armies are not obtainable.

Tokio, Oct. 20, 2 p. m.—It is announced at headquarters here that the left Japanese army captured, near Langtouchie, six ammunition carts, 5354 rifles, 4920 rounds of field gun ammunition, 78,000 rounds of rifle ammunition and tents, clothing, sabres and implements. Additional casualties of the center army just reported are twelve officers killed and thirty wounded.

COMPEL JAPS TO SURRENDER.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 20.—A dispatch to the Bourse Gazette, from Mukden, dated Oct. 19, says that on Oct. 18 a detachment of the Russian vanguard, on the west front, surrounded a Japanese battalion and compelled it to lay down its arms.

DENMARK'S NEUTRALITY PRACTICALLY ASSURED.

The ministry, the premier added, desired to extend the system of parliamentary government, which was the only means of assuring to the people a share in the direction of their own affairs.

LAND RUSH ENDED

Total of 285 Entries Received During the Three Days.

But Two Timber and Stone Filings In Entire Lot.

Applications to the number of 285 for homestead and stone and timber claims in the three new townships in St. Louis county opened for settlement at the Duluth United States land office this week have so far been received. The last township of the three, 62-21, was opened today and eighty-five applications, only one a stone and timber entry, were made. Twenty of these came in by mail. Fifteen of the applications, fourteen out of the twenty coming in by mail, were not allowed. Eleven of them were contests, and will come up at hearings, the dates for which have not yet been set. Three were suspended because of clerical errors.

The first entry today was made by Hugo Jeske, who filed under the stone and timber laws for the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter and the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 7. There were but two stone and timber filings in the entire lot of 285 entries, breaking all previous records in this line at the local office, and proving that the claims are being taken for their agricultural value alone.

Only one woman was in line at the land office door this morning. She looked very forlorn, standing about midway in the line of fifty rough-looking men. Her name was Miss Regina G. Mohr, of Aitkawa. At the opening of township 62-19 Tuesday there were twelve women in line, and two were in evidence yesterday, when 6-3 was thrown open to entry.

The line for today's opening commenced forming Tuesday night and at 9 o'clock this morning when the door opened to the first man there were just fifty homeseekers in line. All was quiet and perfectly orderly at the two previous openings, but this morning there would have been a decided disturbance but for the intervention of two hefty policemen who were on hand to see that order was preserved. A little, dark-skinned man, apparently under the influence of liquor, was detailed to hold second or third place in the line, despite the fact that he was not entitled to it. He made repeated efforts to sneak into the position, but every time was detected by the police and jerked away. Finally, after a sneaking trial fairly made the teeth rattle, he trotted down to the end of the line, growling angrily to himself.

The second application today was filed by Erlingof Branum, of Aitkawa, on the northeast quarter of section 4.

Peter Barnum came third with homestead entry on the southwest quarter of section 3. The fourth man was Anders Nelson, who filed on lots 3 and 4 and the south half of the northwest quarter of section 2. Fifth came J. N. Skaer, with an application for the northeast quarter of section 5.

The next four in the order named were as follows: Charles H. McDuffy, northeast quarter of section 8; Oscar H. Jacobson, northwest quarter of section 18; C. J. Hassen, northwest quarter of section 25; Herbert Larson, southeast quarter of section 7.

Hugo Jeske, first in line today, filed yesterday under the homestead laws for a section in township 58-20. Today he made a stone and timber application.

Shocking Story of Accidental Shooting of an Eight Year Old.

Detroit, Oct. 20.—A special from Mt. Pleasant says that sixteen year old John Burns, of Loomis, who is detained in the county jail as the result of the fatal shooting of eight year old Arthur Burwash while the lads, with Clyde Harvey were in the woods together, declares that the shooting was an accident and says that he left the wounded and dying boy in the woods at his own request. Burns says that Burwash was fooling with his (Burns') gun, when it was accidently discharged the charge entering the boy's thigh and nearly severing the leg. The wounded lad refused to be carried home, Burns says, and did not want assistance brought to him, so Burns and Harvey lifted him out of a pool of blood and laid him on the roots of a tree. The little fellow fainted and they, thinking he was dead, hurried back to town.

Three times Burns went back to look at the wounded boy, who had revived a little, but from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 11 o'clock at night he kept the dreadful affair to himself. When Clyde Harvey had broken down and told the story, Burns led the searchers to the dying boy, who was taken to town, where he lived one hour. Burns says he expects to be punished, but seems to be very little disturbed over the affair.

Saving one's money by not doing necessary advertising in conducting business, is like saving it by starving to death.

DR. MULLER DEAD.

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.—Dr. Auguste Friedgelch Muller, chief of the staff of the Germantown hospital, died at his home today of cancer. He was 64 years old. Dr. Muller was born in Alsace Loraine and came to this country later with his parents, who resided in Wisconsin. INNOCENT PARTY

To Divorce May Remarry After One Year's Time.

Episcopal House of Deputies Adopt Compromise Resolution.

Boston, Oct. 20.—The house of deputies at the Episcopal general convention today adopted, by a large majority, the compromise resolution on the divorce question, by which the innocent party in a divorce for adultery may remarry one year after the presentation of satisfactory evidence of the fact.

Boston, Oct. 20.—The forces favoring a rigid divorce canon in the Episcopal church and those who oppose them were present in full strength at the forenoon session of the house of deputies today an agreement having been reached yesterday to consider the issue and settle it if possible, for the present. The contest came before the deputies again on the question of concurring with a resolution adopted by the house of bishops forbidding the remarriage of "the innocent party" in divorce for infidelity. The action of the bishops was met yesterday by the committee on canons in the house of deputies, which proposed as a compromise, an amendment forbidding remarriage within one year after the granting of a decree by the civil court and compelling clergymen to examine the court records before performing the ceremony.

At the opening of the house of deputies, Rev. George Hodges, of Cambridge, chairman of the committee on Christian education, read a report, which indicated that Christian education was making remarkable progress. The committee on Christian unity in a brief report expressed under the committees instructions and an enlargement of its powers was considered desirable. The house adopted a resolution instructing the committee to seek the co-operation of the other religious bodies in the proper observance of the Lord's day in preserving the sanctity of marriage, in the religious education of children and on other matters which would bring about a better understanding.

No action at this time was recommended by the majority of the committee on prohibited degrees in marriage, but a minority report signed by Bishop Leighton Coleman of Delaware, included a resolution asking that the table of prohibited degrees of church of England be binding on clergymen of the American church. The minority report was defeated and the recommendation of the majority accepted.

LUCKY BETS.

Some Made By Mistake Turn Out Well.

"When the horses Toupee and Teepee ran in the same race a while ago," said a bookmaker to the New York Sun, "I had to turn my whole sheet on the race over to the ring's board of arbitration when the numbers were hung out showing that both of them had got into the money. The similarity in the names of the horses caused the confusion.

"Even before the field went to the post my sheet looked like a Chinese political manifesto, for about three-quarters of the bettors on the race got their bets down on the wrong one and came romping back to my stool and asked me to switch their badge numbers and amounts from Teepee to Toupee or from Toupee to Teepee.

"When I'm on the block I'm never too busy figuring out my percentage to take a bet off my sheet, or transfer one, when I'm civilly requested to. It took me a long while to annex that lesson unto myself. It wasn't until I had a long line of past performances behind me to prove it that I got wise to the peculiar fact that most of the bets people want to have wiped off are winning bets.

'An incident that helped to teach me that happened when I was down in Hot Springs one winter a few years ago. One of the plungers down there at the time was sick in bed and playing them in the rooms through a commissioner.

"One day he sent his commissioner over to the big store poolroom to get $2000 down on a horse scheduled to go in a New Orleans race. The commissioner became twisted on his way to the poolroom and got the $2000 down on another horse in the same race with a somewhat similar name, an eight to one shot.

"When the commissioner hustled back to the sick room of his principal with the ticket, the plunger threw whatever came handy at the commissioner's head, and ordered him to romp back to the poolroom proprietor and request him to rectify the mistake by taking the $2000 off the eight to one shot and putting the coin on the other one in the race that the plunger had doped out to win.

"The commissioner, in a panic, skated back to the poolroom and told his little tale of grief to the poolroom proprietor. The poolroom man gave the commissioner the gleat.

"'Not on your gold watch and chain,' he said flatly. 'Each and every bet made beneath this bamboo tree stands as it's made. What d'ye think I am, a moving picture? To the firs'."

"'But,' pleaded the hard luck commissioner, 'I'll lose my job with nis nobs if you don't make this switch for me.'

"'Never mind the cut-in-the-snow music on the G string,' heartlessly replied the poolroom man. 'When d'ye think I began to take money away from myself? That six to five nursing that your man wants to play is going to sift in all by his little solitude. Please g'way an' let me sleep.'

"The commissioner didn't dare to go back to his principal's sickroom and tell him that the poolroom man had refused to fix up the mistake, but hung around the poolroom, gnawing his nails, until the result of the race was called off. Then he gave a correct imitation of a Castilian castanet can-can and raced back to the sick room with a $16,000 winning in his Plymouth Rocks.

"The eight to one thing upon which he had put the $2000 by mistake came home in a bored and weary jog, and the Hot Springs players who were next to the middle of the incident jounced the poolroom man on the slack wire of their kidding for the remainder of the season.

"I put a lot of little incidents of that kind that came under my observation away for future reference, and I was money in when I harked back to them in actual practice as a layer myself. When that Pass Book hog-slaughtering went through I saved myself the cunnin' little matter of $3000 by refraining from swelling up when asked to rub a bet off my sheet.

"I had just finished putting up the figures on that race when an excited little man banged his way through the crowd around my stool, stuck a $20 bill within a couple of inches of my nose, and yelled:

"'Pass Book, straight!'

"I had 150 to 1 chalked up against Pass Book, so I gave the little man $3000 to $20, and looked upon the double sawbuck as just about right for dinner money and loose cigar change.

"A few minutes later I heard a great wrangling between a man and a woman somewhere behind my stool, and I wheeled around to see what was coming off. The little man who had bet the $20 with me on the Pass Book joke was being backed into a stanchion on the edge of the lawn by a big, raw-boned woman, evidently his wife.

'She was some several cubits taller than he was, and she looked as if she could demolish him with both hands tied behind her back. She was shaking a long forefinger in his face and ordering him, under dire threats, to get the twenty-dollar bill off Pass Book, while he was feebly trying to convince her that Pass Book had a chance.

"'Dno't you dare try to tell me such a thing, you fat head!' she was saying to him. 'The very idea of your trying to squander our installment money on such a sausage as Pass Book—the very idea! You go to the man this instant and tell him that I want that $20 put on the horse that I told you to play, d'ye hear me?'

The little man slunk over to my stool.

"'Say, old man—' he began, but I cut him off.

"'It's all right, mate,' I said to him. 'I heard her handing it out to you, and I'll fix you out. Give me your number and I'll swab the bet. What's the one she told you to play?'

"He named the horse-I forgot which one of the crabs is was—and I had the change made on the sheet. The little man went away with his shoulders hunched forward, looking blue.

"About four minutes later Pass Book had trotted home in front of his field, and I was just $3000 on the nice side because I hadn't got the weight lifter's vest on when the little man asked me to change that Pass Book bet.

"I was in the same car with the little man and his raw-boned wife on the in trip from the track. She was jawing him at a great rate, and what d'ye suppose she threw at him?

"'If you was anything like a man at all, 'stead of a shrimp,' I heard her hiss at him, 'we'd have $3000 right this minute. If you wasn't a noody-naddy you wouldn't ha' let me nor no other fool woman make you take off that Pass Book bet!'"

BISHOP AND THE GREEN SERVANT.

M. Marcel Prevost, the well known French novelist, is fond of telling the following story, says the M. A. P.:

"Whenever I see an English bishop," says M. Prevost, "I laugh a little to myself, for the good man's stately presence reminds me of a mishap that once befell me. I entertained a certain bishop last year at dinner. My butler, an elderly man, had brought in from a friend's house an inexperienced lad to help him in the dining room, and it seems that this lad during the laying of the cloth annoyed the butler beyond endurance with questions as to his duties.

"'How shall I hold the plates?'

"'Do I serve the dishes on the right or on the left side of the guests?'

"'Must the bishop be served first or second?'

"So he continued interminably, and at last the impatient butler said:

"'All you will need to do will be to stand behind the bishop's chair, and, whenever his lordship puts down his glass you must reach over and wipe his mouth with a napkin.'

"That, as the butler expected, silenced his assistant. But the young man actually took the butler's ironical remark for a serious order. As soon as dinner began he stationed himself behind the bishop, waited until his lordship had drunk and put down his glass, and then, deliberately as his nervousness would permit, he opened out a large napkin and wiped the dignified old gentleman's mouth. Imagine my horror!"

CHINA'S OIL TREE.

Five years ago the attention of American importers was called to the value, as anastringent and drier in varnish for the finer kinds of furniture, of the product of the Chinese wood oil tree, says the Manufacturers' Record. Since then two American firms established branches at Hankow, China, for the exportation of the oil, and one of them has shipped nearly 200,000 gallons since last fall. Because of the fact that no barrels are manufactured in the provinces where the oil tree grows, a Hankow firm has imported from New York shooks for 5000 barrels and machinery for setting them up. About a thousand seeds of the oil tree have been planted in California and are doing well.

The mind is most receptive of impressions after dinner. Your advertisement in The Evening Herald tells its story to willing ears.

BOLTLESS PORTABLE BASE, Etc.—The legs, base, skirtings, foot rails and hearth each slip in and out of their places. No bolts, helpers, waste of time, lifting or breakage in mounting or unmounting. Equal convenience attends the cleaning of nickel work and removal of soot.

TRIPLE FLUES—In the bottom and back, furnish splendid and perfect distribution of heat over all, and increased radiating surface.

HOT AIR CIRCULATION—Conduits between the ornamented projecting back flues carry the air from the floor to the dome sections, thence into room or elsewhere.

DOUBLE HEATER—Every RADIANT ESTATE can be used as a double heater.

FIRE POTS—And lower magazine sections are REMOVABLE through the front doors.

GRATES—Combination duplex and shaking grates or draw-center shaking grates, are furnished as ordered.

The luncheon and reception held yesterday afternoon and evening at the Spalding, at which the Greysolon du Lhut chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution celebrated "Lord Cornwallis day" and their own natal day, was a delightful affair and was enjoyed by a large number of the daughters in the city. The weather was a drawback to many, but the dining room of the Spalding was cheery and beautiful with its tables decorated with the national colors and pretty red roses.

Luncheon was served about 3 o'clock and about thirty members were guests. Mrs. William S. Liggett, the state president, was the guest of honor. After the luncheon the reports of officers were read. Mrs. N. F. Hugo gave a delightful address and at roll call, vacation reminiscences were told and several charming little anecdotes of the summer were recounted. Mrs. J. M. Barnes gave the report of the historian for the past year, which dealt principally with the efforts of the chapter to secure funds for the Greysolon du Lhut window, which will be placed in the reading room of the library about Nov. 8.

The officers for the chapter for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Regent, Mrs. N. F. Hugo; vice regent, Mrs. George M. Smith; secretary, Mrs. M. W. Turner; treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Harbison; historian, Mrs. J. M. Barnes; registrar, Mrs. W. D. Underhill; chaplain, Mrs. L. M. Merriman.

Mrs. Liggett spoke to the members, congratulating them upon their achievements in the past and the memorial which they have raised in honor of Greysolon du Lhut.

A reception was held in the evening from 8 to 10 o'clock in the su parlor of the Spalding and the guests were the Daughters of Liberty chapter. The room was prettily decorated with flags and red roses and the evening was a delightful one to those wao called.

Mrs. Liggett left on the evening train for her home at Minneapolis.

A beautiful home wedding took place last evening at the home of the bride's parents when Miss Ethel Howard Tallant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Tallant, became the bride of Robert Wendell Marshall. The rooms were prettily decorated in green and white and at one corner a dainty canopy was arranged with ground pine and white satin ribbons, under which the service was read. Rev. A. W. Ryan, of St. Paul's church, read the service at 8 o'clock. There were no attendants. The bride wore a beautiful gown of Brussels net over silk and carried a prayer book. A large reception followed the ceremony and a large number of guests called. LaBrosse's orchestra played during the service and the receiving hours. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall left for a wedding trip and upon their return will be at home at 814 East Second street.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Tallant, Webster Tallant and Miss Bessie McCall, of Minenapolis.

Mr. Kretschmar is a master of his instrument and on the rare occasions when he has played solos has invariably met with the warmest reception. On Sunday he will play Thornton's fantasie for clarionet, "Une Pensee Lointaine," which, though demanding the most brilliant execution, has a beautifully melodious theme and accompanied by Flaaten's orchestra, will be one of the most attractive numbers in the exceptionally enjoyable program which has been prepared. Mrs. James McAuliffe will sing the magnificent aria from "Mignon" which she sung with so much success in the role of Fillipina and as the number will be accompanied by the entire orchestra with piano the effect will be entirely operatic.

Ellen Terry's Whim.

Ellen Terry who is again to charm American audiences, has two marked peculiarties, says the New York Times. One is her childish desire to own everything new and bizarre that she sees, and the other is her habit of carrying with her everywhere a handbag bursting with letters and papers. On the actress's visit to this country these two foibles came together in a way that was a little peculiar and not a little amusing.

It was when she was in Toledo, O. At the hotel where she was registered the ice for the drinking water was carried to the rooms in brass pails of rather artictic shape, and no sooner did Miss Terry see one of these than she sent the boy to the office to ask the price, and bring back one for her personal property. Of course, the clerk sent up the best pail he had in stock with the compliments of the house, and for the next fortnight the worn and battered handbag gave place to the brazen pail, in which the actress carried everywhere, in the street and on the train, her little personal vademecums.

Dampen the Air.

Now that the steam heat is about to be turned on, housekeepers are once more reminded of the necessity of keeping an open vessel of water on the radiator, says the New York Evening Post. It is not unusual for an entire household to be afflicted with slight headaches the first days of cold weather. They are caused by the sudden change in the atmosphere, not of the outdoors, but of the house. The drying of the air is demoralizing to health throughout the winter, but it is felt with full force at the beginning. Russian brass bowls and jars are excellent for radiator use, being decorative, unbreakable and comparatively inepenxsive.

Get Enough of Them.

The Mormon propagandist was evidently making progress, but suddenly a serious objection offered itself to the possible convert, says the New York Sun.

"D'ye have to keep 'em all insured?" he doubtfully made question.

At present, even when he only had one insured, he had been obliged to teach her how to pull down the front blinds, lock the door and sit quietly on the back stairs whenever the smiling collector appeared from around the corner with his little book in his hand. Could he do this with five or six if he had to keep 'em all insured? It was evident that the possible convert was wavering. "D'ye have to keep 'em all insured?" he repeated.

"Bah," cried the Mormon propagandist. "Marry enough of 'em and it pays to carry your own insurance—like a railroad company insuring its property, you know!"

"By Jove!" exclaimed the possible convert, brightening again, twirling his mustache with a self-satisfied little twist and staring complacently out into vacancy. "By Jove!"

And did he join them? Did he? Didn't he, though.

CAPT. PRATT'S SILVER WEDDING

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"The whole street is talking about it," said Tom Devitt. "Let 'em talk," replied Capt. Pratt. "It's nonsense."

He said more than is here set down; he qualified the nonsense.

"Shame," remonstrated Mrs. Pratt; "with a chapel right opposite, too."

"If all Parker street has set it's mind on your having a silver wedding," said Mr. Devitt, "I guess you'll have to."

"I'm sure it ought to be a holy event in his mem'ry," put in Mrs. Pratt. "He took me from three lovers, and he might be thankful he got me."

Some emotions are so deep-seated and hallowed that they admit of no expression vocally. Probably Capt. Pratt's gratitude at having won Miss Pratt was of this nature, for he said nothing.

"Cap'n Balling says he wouldn't miss it for anything," added Tom Devitt.

Capt. Balling, though living in the more aristocratic atmosphere of Ann street, was an authority in Parker street and on the water front. He owned two of the finest clippers that sailed from the port, and was the proud parents of Elsie Balling, the prettiest girl in the section—nay, according to Mr. Thomas Devitt, who was clear down to the scuppers in love with her, she was the prettiest and the nicest girl in the world.

What Miss Elsie thought of Tom Devitt was not generally known, not even satisfactorily by that gentleman himself. What Capt. Balling thought of Mr. Devitt as a prospective son-in-law was widely known. He negatived the idea so promptly and with such emphasis that Mr. Devitt had avoided the Balling mansion, and took chances at meeting Miss Elsie on the street.

"My daughter," said Capt. Balling, "marries no man short of a mate, and a good one at that."

Mr. Devitt was a fore mast hand.

Capt. Pratt was not adamant, and the pressure of public desire became so severe that he yielded with a rather bad grace to the silver wedding plan.

"If," said Capt. Pratt, at the ship chandlery, "people are asses enough to bring presents in return for seeing me and my wife make asses of ourselves, why let 'em."

No one took a more enthusiastic interest in the forthcoming festivities than did Mr. Devitt. He kept Capt. Pratt busy ruling out suggestions and ideas which, had they been adopted, would certainly have made the event a unique one. One thing there was on which Tom Devitt insisted, and here he had the weighty influence of Mrs. Pratt in his aid. He insisted on the ceremony being performed over again.

"It brings back those days of old," said Mrs. Pratt, with emotion, "when I left my father's house to wed Samuel. Father says, cryin' as he was: 'Go to your chosen husband, Cynthia; take him for better or for wuss, and I think it's for wuss,' he says.

This reminiscence did not seem to soften Capt. Pratt. He swore gloomily to himself.

The evening of the event Capt. Pratt arrayed himself, with some emphatic and caustic comments on the asinine prediliction of people in general, in a long frock coat, advised by Mrs. Pratt and furnished by Mr. Cohen, of the corner above. Mr. Cohen, when selling the coat, had remarked enthusiastically that if Capt. Pratt had been born in that coat it couldn't have fit him better, but certainly no man could have looked more uncomfortable in the stocks than the worthy mariner did in that coat. Mrs. Pratt, with a subdued countenance and wearing a silk dress which the captain had smuggled in from China, received the guests.

Mr. Devitt, in the highest possible spirits, brought in the minister from the chapel opposite. He was a new shepherd in Parker street pastures, and seemed a trifle bewildered at the appearance and customs of his sheep.

Capt. Balling came in holding fast the arm of Elsie. He scowled like a tropical thundercloud at Mr. Devitt, but smiled benignly on Capt. Pratt. "It's not every one who gets the chance of marrying the same woman twice," he said.

"It's not every one'd take the chance if he got it," retorted Capt. Pratt, with emotion.

The guests were expecting the beginning of the marriage ceremony. Mrs. Pratt was smiling inanely, and her husband was in a sold sweat, when there was a commotion at the door.

Capt. Balling was wanted at once on his brig at the wharf.

Capt. Balling cast a glance at Elsie. She was demurely talking to some elderly ladies, and Mr. Devitt was invisible. He unwillingly hastened after the messenger.

Then Mr. Devitt became visible. He hastened to Miss Elsie, took her arm and moved up to the end of the room where the minister stood.

"Go ahead," said Mr. Devitt to the minister.

"Here's your log-book," remarked Capt. Pratt, handing the reverend gentleman the family Bible, fully six inches thick.

People stared and giggled as the much embarrassed clergyman proceeded to make Miss Balling Mrs. Devitt, but no one interfered. Possibly the fact that Mr. William Simmons, a fellow seaman of Tom Devitt and a man of huge proportions, was the best man, prevented any interference, if any one dreamed of such a thing.

When Capt. Balling returned, foaming at having been fooled by a bogus message, Capt. Pratt and his wife stood up and allowed the ceremony of marriage to be pronounced over them a second time.

Some one whispered in his ear and Capt. Balling, red-faced and furious, seized Capt. Pratt by the arm as he received the blessing.

"You were in this thing, were you?" he gasped.

"I!" exclaimed the captain. "Why, it was you who started the whole blamed nonsense."

"You knew I had sworn Elsie shouldn't marry under a mate," roared Capt. Balling.

"That's easy fixed," replied Capt. Pratt calmly. "Jones has resigned as mate of your brig Petrel. Make Tom mate, and you'll have kept your word and got a good husband for Elsie."

In an absent-minded sort of manner Capt. Pratt poured out two glasses of rum from a bottle on the table. Capt. Balling lowered on his friend and then glanced at the glasses.

"He'll make a first-rate mate," said Capt. Pratt, emptying his glass.

Capt. Balling drank his rum in silence, but Tom Devitt became mate of the Petrel.

TREATMENT OF PILES.

Permanence of Cure the True Test.

Many so-called pile remedies will afford the user slight temporary relief, and the majority of those afflicted do not expect more than this.

The average sufferer, after having tried every preparation recommended for the cure of piles, comes to the conclusion that there is no cure except by an operation, and rather than undergo this "last resort," he suffers on, resigned to the situation, so far as maybe. The attention of those interested is invited to the following experience.

"After ten years of suffering from blind, bleeding and protruding piles, and after using every remedy I could hear of without any benefit, I finally bought a fifty-cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure, and used it with such good results I bought next a dollar box, which finished up the job. That was nearly six years ago, and as far as piles is concerned I am cured, and have never felt a symptom of them since.

"Many others have used this remedy by my advice, with the same results, and I always recommend it to sufferers with piles." C. H. Potts, Burlington, Kans.

Tetstimony like this should convince the most skeptical the Pyramid Pile Cure not only cures, but cures to stay cured. It is in the form of a suppository, can be applied in the privacy of the home, directly to the parts affected, and does its work quickly and painlessly.

Druggists generally sell this famous remedy for fifty cents a package and sufferers are urged to buy a package now and give it a trial tonight. Accept no substitutes.

A little book describing the causes and cure of piles is published by the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and same will be sent free to any address for the asking.

JOY OVER BIG VERDICT.

Family Made Happy By the Daughter's Victory.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Gathered around the table in the "sitting room" back of the little confectionery store at 439 Western avenue, the Grenell family planned a roseate future. A jury in Judge Abbott's court had just awarded the oldest daughter, Emma, 15 years old, $40,000 damages against the West Chicago street Railway company, one of whose cars maimed her.

Talk with the "half-breeds" and they will tell you they are all right for Roosevelt, but they fear the others fellows are not. Talk with the "stalwarts" and they are all for Roosevelt, but they are afraid the "half-breeds" are going to cut him and then try to put the blame on them. Which is just a trifle childish and petty on both sides.

Only one set of presidential electors will appear on the ballot in this state, and their names will be printed on the regular, or La Follette ticket. The Scofield ticket is a legal ticket, and is entitled to a place upon the ballot. But it will not carry the names of the electors. Probably Roosevelt will lose some votes through faulty markings of the ballots. Of the 50,000 or 60,000 "stalwarts" who are expected to vote for Peck a proportion may fail to put the marks effectively for the Republican electors. But this is a rule which will work both ways. Thirty or forty thousand Democrats are expected to vote for La Follette, and naturally some of these will blunder when it comes to voting effectively for the Parker electors. There will be a great number of split tickets in Wisconsin this year, but the loses through errors in the election booths will be largely counterbalanced as between the parties.

It seems pretty clear that the Republicans are doomed to suffer losses of congressmen in this state. Representative Babcock is likely to be beaten. At any rate, he is engaged in perhaps the hardest battle of his life. Two years ago he had 8000 majority over his Democratic opponent, and that looks like a pretty safe thing. But the La Folletteites are after Babcocks scalp. He was one of the prime movers in the "stalwart" cause, and pulled more strings even than Spooner to defeat the La Follette delegation in the Chicago convention. Now the governor's friends frankly admit they are after revenge. They make no secret of their intention to cut Babcock at the polls, and it is well understood the governor himself approves their course. It is of course a question whether or not the "half-breed" bolt is formidable enough to overcome such a heavy normal Republican majority. Mr. Babcock remains in New York attending to his duties as chairman of the Republican congressional committee.

Four Republican congressmen are in danger in this state—Babcock, Minor, Otjen and Smith. The two last named represent the two Milwaukee districts. Probably their successors will be Socialists, and thus socialism will for the first time drive a wedge into the American house of representatives. Men who think that in the future we are to have but two political parties in the United States—a conservative party taking the name of Republican, but made up of men from both of the old parties, and a radical party, taking the socialistic form and perhaps the name will find confirmation of their views in the situation here. The Socialists are making a great campaign in Wisconsin, and they expect to cast 40,000 or 50,000 votes for their state ticket. Most of their strength is in this city, where they threaten to carry both of the congressional districts.

It has not escaped the notice of careful observers that the Socialist movement is spreading rapidly throughout the country. The prediction has been made that 500,000 votes will be cast for Debs, though that is probably much too high. It is said Milwaukee is the only large city in which the Socialists draw more from the Republicans than from the Democrats, though in Chicago the two old parties suffer in approximately equal ratio.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Wealthy Farmer Snatches Purse From a Young Lady.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Gust B. Walker, a wealthy farmer, is charged with highway robbery. It is alleged he snatched a pocketbook from Miss Kate Ivey. He was pursued by the girl and many citizens and was taken at once before a police justice and fined $10. Later he was rearrested on a charge of highway robbery. To those who are best acquainted with Walter, the theory of temporary insanity is the only reasonable one to account for his conduct.

Several men engaged in a fierce fight on top of a three-story building. A plumber employed on the roof of the new Ward hotel became involved in a quarrel with the carpenters, and the men came to blows. Hostilities ceased before any one was knocked off the building or injured.

The registration list of Aberdeen voters already shows over thirteen hundred names.

Sioux Falls—Owing to the fact that no grand jury was summoned, the regular October term of United States court probably will not be prolonged.

The case of the South Dakota Central Railroad company vs. the Milwaukee, involving condemnation of a strip of land about half a mile in length on the right of way of the Milwaukee company, in the northern limits of Sioux Falls, was argued. Judge Carland denied the motion to dismiss, and Friday was fixed as the time for trial before a jury.

Edgar S. Pullen, a business man of Milbank, was arraigned on an indictment charging him with having sent objectionable matter through the mails. The indictment contained five counts, and he pleaded guilty to the first, whereupon, on motion of the government, the remaining four counts were quashed. Judge Carland imposed a fine of $150.

Groton—A telegram just received from J. F. Edwards, deputy sheriff, who went to Minot, N. D., after the team stolen from Senator Koepsel, on Sept. 16, says the officer has secured the team and one man, and is on the trail of others. As about seventy-five horses have been stolen in a few counties the past few months, this news from Minot means much to the Groton vigilants.

Elk Point—Richard Malloy is dead of cancer of the stomach at the age of 66. He served in the Confederate army through the civil war.

Groton—The city council was arranging to refund bonds to the amount of $500 which are now outstanding. The bonds draw 6 per cent and can be refunded at 5 per cent.

Hetland—The deadlock over the matter of selecting a principal for the local public schools has been broken by the election of Miss Wilhelmina Brown, of De Smet.

Bryant—The plant of the Erwin Advocate has been sold to the publishers of the Hamlin County News, who have combined it with their own.

Parkston—Judge Frank B. Smith has issued an order adjourning the October term of court for this (Hutchinson) county until next spring.

Fort Pierre—The city jail was burned Wednesday. It was a wooden structure in which a dozen disorderlies had been confined for the night, and the fire was started by them.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Lidgerwood—At the recent meeting of the state high school board the local high school was advanced from the second class to the first class classification. This is due largely to the work of the high school faculty and the public spirited members of the board of education. N. C. Macdonald, the superintendent, and Mrs. Katherine Macdonald, the principal, are graduates of the University of North Dakota, and have done nearly a year's post-graduate work in the University of Chicago. The former has charge of the science work, and the latter English. I. M. Rockne, who has charge of the Latin and commercial, also holds the B. A. degree from the state university.

PRESIDENT CERTAIN

To Get Wisconsin's Electoral Vote, Says Walter Wellman.

Factions Jockeying For Position In Dealings With Cortelyou.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Walter Wellman, in a Milwaukee special to the Record-Herald, says: There is no doubt whatever that Wisconsin's electoral vote will be cast for Roosevelt. The plurality may be 50,000; it may be 100,000. A dispatch from New York quotes Senator Spooner as saying Wisconsin is still in doubt; that conditions are mixed, and that much depends upon noninterference by the national committee. Governor LaFollette said yesterday the outlook for Roosevelt would be brighter if the national committee would order its speakers who visit Wisconsin to say a good word for the local tickets. These little growls from the chiefs of the warring factions have no significance as to the result of the election. What they do mean, and all they mean, is that there is bitter rivalry as to recognition by the national committee, looking to the future.

The national committee was compelled to recognize the La Follettetes after the court decided in their favor. No other course was open. Senator Spooner and his friends do not complain as to that. They recognize the inevitable. What they do complain of is that before the court's decision was rendered the national committee announced at Chicago they would follow the court and recognize the faction which got the verdict. According to the "stalwart" this attitude was correct. But it was not fair to advertise it, for no sooner was the announcement made than the lawyers for the "half-breeds" changed their briefs and put before the court the fact that the national Republican committee was prepared to bow to the court.

Then there is the squabble over the place on the national committee created by the death of Henry C. Payne. Naturally, both sides want it. Senator Spooner thinks he and his friends ought to control the selection; Governor La Follette holds that the regular party organization should be recognized and Vice Chairman New, at Chicago, who has handled this Wisconsin mess with a good deal of tact, recommends to Chairman Cortelyou that no appointment be made till after election. There is no doubt this recommendation will be followed. Mr. Cortelyou knows a hawk from a handsaw when the wind is westerly. There is nothing in a new national committeeman could do before election, anyway. As a matter of fact, Henry Payne had done nothing in that office since the Chicago convention.

But each side is afraid the other may gain some advantage. Spooner is in New York, close to the ear of Cortelyou, and the La Folletteites don't like that. Neither do they like to have the national committee's spellbinders come into the state and say not a word for the regular Republican candidate for governor. Senator Fairbanks grieviously offended the "half-breeds" by his discreet silence, though the governor was present and his friends were there in large numbers, prepared to whoop it up for Rossevelt—and La Follettee.

The only national speaker who has mentioned local candidates was Mr. Cannon. And he made a mess of it. At a meeting in the third congressional district "Uncle Joe" called for "three cheers for Roosevelt and Babcock." He got three—just three. Not content with this meager response, "Uncle Joe" remarked that perhaps the audience had not understood, and renewed his request.

That time one of the three men renigged, and the voices of the other two were very faint. "Uncle Joe" was so provoked that he threw a cuss-word at every telegraph pole all the way down to the Wisconsin-Illinois line.

* * *

The truth is that in their present state of sensitiveness and soreness neither faction feels cordial toward the Republican national managers. Each is trying to play upon the fears of Mr. Cortelyou and his associates to the end that the other fellow may not gain an advantage. But the talk that Wisconsin is in danger of going to Parker is all bluff. There is no such danger, and everyone knows it. Spooner and La Follette as well as anyone else. Men in both factions may growl at Mr. Roosevelt's managers, but no one is heard to say a word against the president himself. Broadly speaking every Republican in the state, be he "half-breed" or "stalwart," is going to vote for Roosevelt, besides a few Democrats, Populists and Independents. And there are from 75,000 to 100,000 more Republicans than Democrats in Wisconsin.

TO DEDICATE NEW CHURCH

English Lutheran Church to Be Opened In West End.

The old Swedish Bethany church, corner Twentieth avenue west and Third street, which was purchased last August by Immanuels Lutheran congregation, has lately undergone thorough repairs, and is once more ready for use. The exterior has been repaired, and with judicious use of paper and paint, the interior has been transformed into a thing of beauty.

The most noticeable feature is the seats. The old Lyceum Opera house chairs have been purchased, repaired and recovered till they are again as good as new, giving this church the finest seats of any in the city. Inside the chancel a fine altar has been placed, adding much to the general appearance.

The church will hereafter be used for English Lutheran services; the work being in charge of Rev. E. Wulfsberg. The first service will be held next Sunday morning at 10:20, when Professor E. Hove, president of the Synod Theological seminary at Hamline, will deliver the dedication sermon. He will be assisted by Rev. Chr. Anderson, of Minneapolis, who will conduct the altar service; Rev. J. E. Inechrigson, of Grand Forks, N. D.; Rev. H. M. Normann, of Superior, and the resident pastor, Rev. E. Wolfsberg, Jr. The service will be in the English language.

People Who Enjoy Being Sick.

Nine Persons Out of Ten Have Kidney Trouble—Warner's Safe Cure Is the only Positive Cure.

There are thousands of men and women going about the world today with kidney trouble, who are apt to die at any moment of Bright's disease, diabetes or blood poison.

They evidently enjoy being sick and subject to sudden death, because they don't or won't even take the trouble to find out what's the matter with them.

Some of them don't suffer enough—they think it's "nothing much and will wear off of itself." Kidney disease never cures itself.

Others have doctored so much and are so completely discouraged that they have made up their minds there is no hope for them anyway; the doctor has told them they must die, and at last they believe him.

And yet thousands upon thousands every year, even in the most advanced stages of kidney trouble, when too sick and weak to move in bed, even when the shades of death are hovering near, have been cured—literally snatched from the grave—by Warner Safe Cure.

LOOK TO YOUR KIDNEYS.

If the morning urine becomes cloudy, containing a brick dust sediment, or if particles float about in it when it stands in a glass or bottle 24 hours, it is absolutely certain evidence that your kidneys have been diseased for months. You need Warner Safe Cure, and need it quickly. It will purify, tone-up and strengthen the kidneys, so that they will do their work properly, and then you will feel and look well all through.

Don't tamper with your kidneys by delay; don't snuff out the last chance of permanent cure by taking the dangerous, useless doctrines sold as "kidney cures." Warner Safe Cure is the only scientific, certain cure. It's recommended by doctors, and sold by druggists everywhere at 50c and $1 a bottle. You should have our medical booklet; it's free. Write our Doctors fully and in confidence for free advice about your health or the health of your family. Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y.

A POKER HAND

Dealt In the Civil War Just Now Pleged.

One result of the recent Grand Army of the Republic reunion in Boston was an unusual poker game played in Western New York, says a Union Hill dispatch to the New York Sun. For if it hadn't been for the reunion James Weatherbee, of Denver, Col., would not have met an old comrade here and incidentally would not have finished a little jack pot that was being nicely opened on the night of April 2, 1865, on the outskirts of Petersburg. The explosion of Fort Drewery and the burning of Richmond, in sending Grant's 70,000 men scuttling after Lee's veterans, with Sheridan hanging on the flank, interrupted the game.

While on his way home from Boston, Weatherbee stopped off in Rochester to visit friends. While there he took a trolley ride to Sodus Point. As the car was waiting at Union Hill he heard a man mention the name of Prattley, a well known farmer.

"Hey, there," he cried out of the window; "are you folks speaking of Enos Prattley, a civil war veteran?"

The station agent told him that the group was speaking of Enos L. Prattley.

"I got out here," cried Weatherbee to his friends. "Pick me up on your way home."

He walked a mile before he came to his old comrade's home.

"Is this Enos? Shake. I'm Weatherbee. Do you remember April 2, 1865?" he asked of Prattley, who was about to enter the house.

Prattley grinned and said:

"Let's see, Jim; we was opening a jack-pot when old Drewry blew up and you hed to git."

"And that last deal cost me an arm," replied Weatherbee, still clinging to the other's rough palm.

"That's why I never came back to finish that pot. I was dealing, remember? You were scowling at your cards, and pretending you couldn't open. Lord! Seems as if it was but yesterday. And I never knew what I held in my hand."

"Some inside, Jim," invited the farmer. "I sealed them cards up and I guess we'd better finish that pot."

The two hands, yellowed with age, and the balance of the grimy old deck were brought out of a cupboard and the two again examined their cards.

"You were right, Jim. I'd calculated to open. Here's the original stake. We was playing a ten-cent limit game. So I'll open it for ten," said Prattley.

"Weatherbee slammed 20 cents on the table.

"It'll cost you ten more to draw cards," he cried.

"Well, these look pretty good. I'll fuss with them. Gim'me awo cards," retorted the farmer.

"Prattley held three deuces. Weatherbee had four, five, six, seven of diamonds and the queen of spades. He had waited thirty-nine years to discover that he stood a chance of making a straight, or a straight flush. He caught the three of spades.

"Ten cents," said Prattley.

"And ten," replied Weatherbee, cheerfully.

"Same to you," challenged the farmer, who had caught two jacks.

"They're just as good as they were in 1865. Up again," retorted Weatherbee.

Prattley raised again and once more and then called. His pot amounted to $1.50.

"We won't play another pot, as it would take away the poetry of the whole thing," said the Denver man. "But after recovering from my wound I went West and made a little money, and if you'll sell me the cards and jackpot for $50, I'd be much obliged, Enos."

"I'll help out on the taxes, I'll do it," agreed Prattley, and the old cards and the handful of silver were sealed up and handed over to the Westerner.

Prattley says that ever since that long ago night when he expected young Weatherbee to return with the morning at the least, he has always felt that the interrupted pot would be opened some time.

DAUGHTER RULES THE KAISER

Before his daughter was born the Emperor William was often heard to say that he did not want any girls; that they complicated matters in a royal household, for they must have private governesses, ladies-in-waiting and must be dressed in fine linen and lace, while boys can all be put in uniforms that are all cut out of the same piece of cloth, and they can be reared with less attendance. But I have it from good authority that the young Princess Victoria rules the roast, her father included, says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle. She has his domineering way.

This is the story I heard from one who was witness to the scene: The princess in Berlin often visited a house in which there was a wild black cat, and she tamed it so that he would allow her to pet it, and it would oftentimes go to sleep on her lap. One day the cat got ugly, growled, went under a chair and no one dared to go near it. But the young princess got up, went to the cat, pulled it from under the chair, and when once more on her lap she gave it a sound thrashing, and, strange to say, the cat took it without a protest, and in a little while went to sleep on the lap of the princess. The father laughed when he was told the story and said she was a chip of the old block.

JAPS FILE PROTEST

Against Alleged Use of Chinese Clothing By Russians.

Russians Pronounce the Charge to Be Most Absurd.

Washington, Oct. 20.—As indicated in the Tokio dispatches, the Japanese government, through Minister Takahira, here, has entered a formal protest against the use by certain bodies of Russian troops of Chinese clothing, the offending troops being specified in the complaint. The state department has transmitted the Japanese protest to Spencer Eddy, the secretary of the American embassy at St. Petersburg, and charge in the absence of Ambassador McCormick, for presentation to the Russian government.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 20, 6:07 p. m.—The Japanese protest, through the American state department, charging the Russian troops with using Chinese clothing, in violation of the supplementary articles of The Hague convention, has not yet reached the foreign office, and nothing is known of the alleged circumstances either at the foreign office or at the war office, but the latter explains that it is possible that some of the Russian scouts in the mountains may have provided themselves with Chinese overcoats, as a protection against the cold, but the idea that there had been anything in the nature of a substitution, such as to constitute an infraction of The Hague convention is pronounced absurd.

In this connection attention is called to repeated reports of Russian war correspondents at the East encountering Japanese scouting parties in the mountains disguised as Chinese.

The Russian authorities have been unofficially assured that the report that the United States contemplated tendering its good offices in the interest of the restoration of peace in the far East is untrue.

The assurance was received with satisfaction, although the report had not been given credence in government circles.

BATTLE WORN ITSELF OUT.

Mukden, Oct. 20, via Pekin.—The big battle has practically worn itself out, leaving the two armies facing each other with the Shakhe river as the dividing line.

An exchange of artillery fire continued all day on Oct. 18 and all day on Oct. 19, the Russian center advancing slightly each day under a heavy shell fire.

COMING OF NEW PASTOR

Rev. John Sternberg of First Norwegian Lutheran Church.

The arrival of Rev. John Sternberg, the new pastor of the First Norwegian Lucheran church, corner of First avenue east and Third street, this morning, came with a few escaping rays of sun which pointed from the sky to the longing Duluthians and was regarded as a cheerful sign by the church committee, which assembled at the Omaha depot this morning to meet the incoming pastor, who came on the Chicago train.

The committee consisted of John Grandy, president of the board of trustees of the First Norwegian Lutheran church; Anton Ringsred, P. H. Grotheim, Hans Gronseth, Carl Hvaal, Louis Frost, John Olsen and Christian Weik, all either members of the board of trustees or board of deacons, Mrs. Grthelm, Mrs. Grorseth and Mrs. Olsen.

Rev. Sternberg is accompanied by his wife and their two children and for the present the family will be the guests of the household of Mr. Grandy, at Eighth avenue east and Fifth street. He is expected to preach his first sermon to his new charge on Sunday morning and on Monday evening there will be a reception in the church that the new pastor may meet and be met by the members of his new parish.

He comes from Leland, Ill., where he has preached for ten years, the congregation there having had his ministrations ever since he started preaching. There is an extensive Norwegian settlement in the Illinois town, and they are said to have been loth to let the pastor leave for a new field. Pastor Sternberg is a young man in appearance, apparently in the early thirties, smooth faced and with a countenance denoting a happy character.

He prefers to speak in English and it is the expectation eventually that a large proportion of the addresses to his new flock will be made in the adopted tongue. At present, however, the First church is having a portion of the preaching done in the mother language for the benefit of the old members, who are not so familiar with English and the young people who have but recently arrived from abroad. Rev. Sternberg will preach Sunday morning, when Rev. Lium, of West Superior, will assist at the services.

On the night of Oct. 31 a lecture will be given at the First church by Ola Johann Saerwold, B. A., of Decorah, Ia., on "A Journey Through the Land of the Midnight Sun." Mr. Saerwold's talk is to be illustrated. He has been heard in Duluth before.

Tart Politeness.

Louisville Times: Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, tells of a rather neat retort made by a young man employed as a commercial drummer to an unkind observation made by a young woman whom he had met at the house of a mutual friend in the city mentioned.

In the course of their conversation the young woman in question, who is of Eastern origin, inquired as to the occupation of the young man.

"I am a commercial traveler," remarked the chap, modestly.

"How very interesting!" exclaimed the young lady in a patronizing tone. "Do you know that in my part of the country commercial travelers are not received in good society?"

The young fellow bowed politely. "They are not here, either, madam," he replied.

TROUBLE FOR RAILROADS

Wet Weather Causes It on Shipments of Lumber.

Weather like that lately on tap in this region is bad on the railroads so far as lumber is concerned. Wet atmosphere and falling rain means that the lumber will get wet, and as it is carried by the pound the owners do not wish to pay for the water that is in it.

This would mean a considerable item on any long haul of wet lumber by the railroads and more cost to the shipper than he cared to incur. Most through lumber that is not on a hurry shipment at this time is sent from the head of the lakes Eastward by water, and the boats that carry it keep it under the hatches, out of the wet.

The short haul from the mills to the steamer docks by rail does not mean much of an added cost for wet lumber, and the water transportation is computed per 1000 feet of lumber hauled.

Mr. Fitch Says Nothing.

W. F. Fitch, president of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, was in the city today from Marquette. When asked in regard to the report that the road would build an extension from this city to Thief River Falls he did not deny it. But neither did he affirm it. He was absolutely noncommittal. This it might be said is characteristic of Mr. Fitch.

He was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Eldridge, of Marquette. Mr. Eldridge is general counsel for the road.

Railroad Notes.

For the National Irrigation congress at El Paso, the railroads will make a rate of one lowest first-class fare plus 50 cents for the round trip, to sell Nov. 10, 11 and 12, good returning until Nov. 22. If tickets are deposited at El Paso a 30-day extension can be had.

Northern Passenger Agent Brostedt, of the Great Northern, has adorned the Superior street window of his office with a fine picture of the development of water power at Spokane, Wash., owned by the Washington Water Power company. The picture is a photograph, about 10 feet long and three feet high.

W. M. Hardin, traveling freight agent of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, is here today from Twin City headquarters.

Thomas Owens, of Two Harbors, superintendent of the Duluth & Iron Range road, arrived today in company with his father, Evan Owens, of Nilfosh, who will visit the former. The elder Owens is nearly 85 years of age. Both registered at the Spalding this morning.

The Presidential Fight.

The political leaders of the country are now actively engaged in a presidential contest. Speeches are being made all over the country and both sides are presenting their strongest arguments in favor of their candidate. The strongest argument in favor of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a family medicine for stomach, liver and bowel complaints is the fact that for over fifty years it has never been known to fail. Many persons who have taken other remedies without a cure have been restored to robust health in a short time by the use of the Bitters. Then there's no need for sickly people to be discouraged; just get a bottle of the Bitters from your druggist today, for it positively cures headache, bloating, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, female complaints and malaria. Don't accept a substitute.

FOOTBALL!

Duluth Central High School vs. St. Paul Central High School. Athletic Park, Saturday, Oct. 22, 3 p. m. Admission, 50c.

THE WOUNDED JAPANESE.

A Japanese brigade commander writes for Leslie's Monthly some incidents of the battle of the Yalu:

"There was a fellow to the right of me, somewhat up the stream, who was also pushing ahead. Suddenly he turned a somersault in the stream; the stream brought him down rather close to where I was wading, and he gained his feet almost in front of me. He raised his hand to his forehead, from which blood was dripping. It was very evident that a spent bullet hit him upon the forehead and knocked him down into the water.

"The bullet did not strike him square against the forehead. It glanced around his head, piercing the skin only, and stopped just above his temple. He stuck his finger into the hole and took out the bullet. He looked at it curiously for about a tenth of a second and put it into his pocket and rushed straight ahead.

"As I was rushing over the sandy stretch in front of the Kiullencheng I almost stumbled over a private who was seriously wounded. I said:

"'Are you wounded?' On the pallor of his face broke a broad smile; he raised his hand and said, in a voice as slender as a cobweb thread, 'His Majesty, Banja;' then he added, 'Oh, it is very slight; let your heart be at ease. Only I pray you to bring the battle to a victory for our country.'

"I saw two soldiers who were pretty badly shot; one of them had at least three bullet wounds. hTe only thought of these men seemed to be to conceal their woumds. They hurried into the thick of the fray, and upon them was that thievish air which you sometimes

MAY AGAIN BE TOGETHER

Reunion of Kyrle Bellew and Mrs. Potter Is a Possibility.

Signs point to a reunion of Mrs. James Brown Potter (Mrs. Cora Urquhart Potter, rather) and Kyrle Bellew, and if such a combination is brought about it would not be surprising if they were to wed. At any rate their starring as a joint feature after years of separation would be one of the romantic happenings on the American stage, as well as a most notable cooperative dramatic venture, from the standpoint of artistic importance, before the public.

For Mrs. Potter has not met with a disastrous failure in London, as reported, according to S. M. Weller, manager of Kyrle Bellew, who was in the city this morning. Recently some London letter was printed in various newspapers noting the alleged ignominous failure of Mrs. Potter almost concurrent with the leading to the altar of a new bride by her former husband. The article stated that Mrs. Potter had been forced to take to the woods, figuratively and literally, as her new play in London was alleged to have been such a failure that she was simply howled off the stage and had to take to retirement at her suburban home out of London, never to act again, according to the story.

"There was nothing strange about Mrs. Potter or anyone else of fame or without being hooted at on a London stage," said Mr. Weller this morning, "and any such report is certainly without true foundation, as you have stated it to me. It is a common thing for the best of talent to get the most outrageous reception, as you might imagine it, on the London stage. It is the practice there to either applaud your approval or shout your disapproval, and every American actor that has ever gone over there has been given the experience. The Englishman feels when he goes to a theater that he has paid his money and is entitled to either clap his hands in delight or expend his vocal ammunition in denouncing what he has seen and heard.

"Only one exception to this kind of treatment has ever been had by an American artist and that was De Wolf Hopper. The ordinary procedure is that the player is called before the curtain at the end of the act by applause. Then as soon as he thinks he has gotten out there to respond to a fine reception, he is immediately notified of the contrary by a jeering and hooting that will not let him open his mouth, and he retreats in great disorder.

"Hopper went over several years ago in 'I Capitan' and was called out. He went and they started to jeer him. He yelled something in that big voice of his and it took the gallery so that the audience insisted on a speech and he gave it.

"But as for Mrs. Potter being hissed out of her artistic career, such a report as that is simply out of the question. It would surprise nobody to see her playing again with Mr. Bellew, and if she does, you can look for one of the greatest combinations that has ever been before the public, for the art of this pair has been the delight of theatergoers in a past decade, and will prove itself just as delightful if all signs don't point wrong.

"The fact of the matter is that George Tyler, senior member of our firm, has been over to the other side on this very proposition, but nothing definite has been done, so far a I know. I do know that Proctor offered her a short season in vaudeville—fifteen weeks or something like that—which she declined for the reason that she would not go into the continuous. She was unwilling to give two appearances a day, although the salary was satisfactory.

"The scheme was to get her to give 'Osier Joe' and one or two other bits of verses that were among her famous delivering when she was an amateur, and then she and Mr. Bellew might tour some of the large cities in the spring. But Mrs. Potter is no failure. She is not much over 40 years old. The reason that she was not attracted to offers already made her was, probably, that she wanted to try this play, 'The Beauty and the Barge,' which has been shown unworthy in London."

Bellew's devotion to Mrs. Potter in years gone by was the talk of the United States and English-speaking Europe. Her husband was expected to get a divorce from her, but did not, and it is said that she would have been willing, and was even anxious for him to do so, that she might wed the handsome English actor, but he did not. Now that he has his divorce and is married again, with Mrs. Potter's London venture ill-fated, it seems as though the romance would reach its climax and that Mr. and Mrs. Bellew might be the style of a new company in the near future.

Bellew and Mrs. Potter have been separated for many years. He originally was her theatrical mentor, her tutor, teaching her the stage work, which she had had but a scant idea of when she was the beautiful young amateur elocutionist, Cora Urquhart, in "Ostler Joe" and other numbers at church fairs and festivals.

Bellew, so the critics said, was submerging his art for her benefit when they first went together, as she was not a good actress. But Bellew had faith and coached her unflinchingly, with the result that she got to the highest point in the popular favor. After their separation he went to Australia, and while she was playing in London, after he had been in the bush for four years, he went back to London, where she was, at the behest of Henry Irving, where he acted in "Robespierre," with Irving. But he was too near Mrs. Potter, and yet too far, so returned to Australia. Later he returned to England and is now back in America.

Some of their notable appearances together were made in "She Stoops to Conquer," "Charlotte Corday," "School For Scandal," "Romeo and Juliet," "Society" and "Therese." The last named, from Zola, gave the moralists many touches of anxiety, and they were glad when the Potter-Bellew combination was a thing of the past, which made the play go into oblivion.

FUN NEW YORKERS MISS.

The Buggy Riding of the Country Youths.

"There!" said the adopted New Yorker, to the Sun, as a buggy passed up Fifth avenue with a young man and a young woman within, "there is a sight you don't often see in town. I suppose buggy riding is not a popular form of amusement in New York. It must be too expensive for most of us.

"When I was down in the country this summer I found that buggy riding was still much what it used to be. The girls came out on the front porches between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon, clad in gay light gowns that fluttered with ribbons. They all sat in rocking chairs, and as they rocked their ribbons flew about so that I could not help feeling that they acted almost as signals.

"After the girls had got well started to rocking the young fellows began driving up and down the village street in shiny new buggies with sleek horses and whips adorned with ribbons. The ribbons, I learend, were the gift of the girls. Every now and then a shiny new buggy would stop in front of one of the porches, and before you could think what was happening one of the girls would be whisked off for a drive.

"Some of the young men wore 'dusters,' an ugly garment that I had hardly seen in twenty years. Mostly the girls came back to the porches in time for the 6 o'clock supper. I suppose if there had been a moon a great deal of the buggy riding would have been done after nightfall.

"One thing has changed, though, in the matter of the country buggy; the young fellows buy it a good deal cheaper than their fathers bought theirs. A good buggy used to cost from $175 to $250. It was often made by the local wheelwright or by a carriage manufacturer in the nearest town. When it got out of order it was repaired, and when its paint began to look ill it was repainted. Buggy owners used to pay $50 to $60 to have their buggies put in perfect order, and it used to be said that such a buggy, fresh from the repair shop, was as good as new. A buggy would last ten years or more.

"I asked one of the young men down in the village what a good buggy cost, and he said he never paid more than $150 for his. He bought a new one every two years, and rarely put a dollar's worth of repairs on his buggy. When he was ready for a new one he took the old one, which was really new according to earlier standards, to the local agent of a Western manufacturer, and the agent would allow his $10 or $15 for the vehicle. Thus he always had a buggy in perfect condition, one that never rattled and was in no danger of breaking down.

"In ten years he spent on vehicles about two-thirds as much as his father used to spend, and the old man always had something the matter with his buggy.

"What became of the old buggies? Well, down there they were sold to the colored people. Thrifty colored men were able to buy a buggy every five or six years. The price was not above $30, and it might be less. The construction must be pretty good, for a whole family would ride to church in one of those buggies."

VEST'S HARD LUCK STORY.

Senator Vest used to tell a story of good luck and hard luck without a counterpart says the Saturday Evening Post. He says: "One day while I was a member of the Confederate congress I lost a month's pay somewhere on the streets of Richmond. Just as the woman in scripture who lost a piece of silver called together her friends and neighbors and sought diligently until she found it, I called my friends and went with them on what seemed a hopeless search through the snow covered, dimly lighted streets of Richmond. The chances were a thousand to one against success.

"We hadn't been out fifteen minutes when a young lieutenant in our party stooped down and picked up my lost roll. I was in high glee and wanted to treat. We were piloted to a cafe which, pending some repairs, had a ladder of about a dozen rungs instead of stairs. We all climbed up, considering it a great lark, all the while talking about what a lucky fellow the young lieutenant was and predicting great things for him. As we climbed down again the young lieutenant fell from the ladder and broke his neck."

SNAPSHOTS 2000 A SECOND.

An Italian named Luciano Buttel has perfected a photographic apparatus capable of registering the incredible number of 2000 photographic impressions per second, says the London Globe. The most minute and least rapid and casual movements of birds and insects on the wing, which have hitherto defied science, can, it is claimed, be registered with accuracy, thus opening a new world of natural observation to ornithologists. The films used cost £2 per second for the 2000 impressions.

HIS LAST DAY IN INDIANA

William J. Bryan Addresses Large Crowds In Various Cities.

Booneville, Ind., Oct. 20.—William J. Bryan made the first speech of his last day of the present Indiana tour today to a large crowd. The speech followed former lines used in addressing laboring men and especially miners. Reference was made to the fact that this is the home of Representative Hemenway, chairman of the appropriations committee. Mr. Bryan spoke feelingly of Abraham Lincoln and of the mother of the martyred president whose grave was in plain sight as he spoke.

Other speeches scheduled for today were at Lincoln City, Huntingburg, English, Corydon and the tour to close tonight at the park between New Albany Ky.

PROBLEMS IN PHILIPPINES

Discussed By Various Speakers at Lake Mohonk Conference.

Lake Mohonk, Oct. 20.—The morning session of the Lake Mohonk Indian conference was devoted to the consideration of problems in the Philippines. Dr. Fred Watkinson, of the Brooklyn polytechnic institute, who organized the American public school system in the Philippines was the first speaker today.

Dr. Atkinson was followed by W. Leon Pepperman, of the bureau of insular affairs of the war department.

Brig. Gen. G. A. Goodale followed Mr. Pepperman. Gen. Goodale, who was in command of a regiment stationed at Jolo for a year at the beginning of the American occupation of the Philippines, gave a detailed account of his experiences among the Moros, including a visit at the court of the sultan and the sultana to whom he bore a gift of money from the United States government. Gen Goodale said he believed that the government of the Moros will prove to be one of the most difficult problems we have to fear in the islands owing partly to their Mohammedan faith and certain practices going with and sanctioned by that form of religion, such as polygamy.

M. G. Baumgaugh, first commissioner of education in Porto Rico, then addressed the conference.

Dr. Samuel McCune Lindsay, who succeeded Dr. Baumbaugh in Porto Rico, followed.

The closing address was given by Jacob H. Hollander.

USED A GIRAFFE

As a Messenger to Announce His Engagement.

Paris, Oct. 20.—Henri Petou, the well-known painter, has astonished his friends by announcing his engagement to Mlle. Leonie Cabart, a rich banker's daughter. As Petou is as poor as a church mouse and Leonie's father one of the most conservative and purse proud financiers, the news created quite a sensation, but the story of Henri's and Leonie's lovemaking is even stranger.

The artist's studio is situated in the courtyard of Cabart's residence, and Papa Cabart charged his janitor with keeping an eye on the young man and not permit him to communicate with his daughter.

But love finds a way somehow. Henri persuaded an animal dealer that he needed a giraffe for a picture of the Sahara he was painting, and a full-grown animal was sent to his studio.

To allow the giraffe plenty of fresh air Henri cut a hole in the roof, which, in the event of rain, could be closed by a trap door. The opening in the roof was adjacent to Mlle Leonie's sitting room, and the girl soon became acquainted with the giraffe.

One day Henri fastened a love letter to the giraffe's head and Leonie was quick to see the point. She sent an ardent answer, and the correspondence continued with the result indicated.

LEAVE THE FORCE

Three Policemen Resign Under Circumstances That Are Disgraceful.

If Proved Guilty By Jury Could Be Sent to Prison.

Three members of the Duluth police force, Officers Frank Bailey, Edward Schulte and James Kennell, have resigned their positions as the result of certain disclosures made by Ida Casey, a fifteen-year-old girl, who was recently brought back from Eveleth by Humane Officer Withrow and was waiting to be taken to the Red Wing training school on the charge of incorrigibility.

The girl claimed that the three patrolmen had had sustained intimate relations with her at different times before she left the city to go to Eveleth. The disclosures were made to Humane Agent Withrow when he was cross-questioning her in regard to the reasons for her leaving home, and the girl later repeated her statements to Chief Troyer.

The chief of police immediately started an investigation, and laid the matter before Mayor Cullum.

The officers were summoned before the mayor to answer to the charges. The conference was a secret one, and at its close the three men handed in their resignations.

It is claimed that two of the officers admitted that the charge against them was true, while the third denied it.

"I am innocent of any connection with the girl," said Officer Frank Bailey this morning, in speaking of the matter. "I have met the girl several times and have once or twice talked to her for a few moments, while on my beat, but I deny the charge she has made against me. She claims that I spent Friday night with her at Little Jake's saloon on West Michigan street. That is a lie, pure and simple. The keeper of the lodging house will confirm my statement. The girl who was with her at the time stated that she could not identify me as the man. The suspicion against me in the minds of the authorities appeared to be strong, however, and I felt that it was a question of resign or be fired.

"The last time I saw the girl I was walking along Superior street. She was on a car, and saw me. She got off at the next corner and waited for me to come up. I talked to her for a minute or two and walked on. I know that she used to stand and wait for the other patrolmen in the same way."

Mayor Cullum was very reticent on the matter when questioned this morning.

"This is a question on which I do not care to say very much," he said. "While I do not like to appear to wish to withhold any information from the public, I believe that this is a matter entirely within the department, where the details of the matter should not be given out and only the results made public.

"To give out the details would, I believe, work not only great hardship, but some injustice, to the men concerned. They are all men with families, and the wife of one of them is very ill with consumption. All I can say is that the men are no longer members of the police force."

Chief Troyer is in St. Paul and will not return until tomorrow morning.

Ida Casey is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Casey, of 210 Gilbert street. Last week she ran away from home and went to Eveleth. Humane Agent Withrow was informed of the matter, and on going after the girl, found her just preparing to go to work as a waitress in a Chinese restaurant. She is a large girl for her age, and has the appearance of a girl about 18 or 19 years of age. The humane agent brought her back to Duluth and was preparing to have her committed to the Red Wing training school.

Schulte and Kennell were mounted patrolmen, and had been on the force but a short time. Schulte is one of three officers of the same name, and should not be confounded with Anthony Schulte and Detective Frank Schulte. Bailey was a patrolman and had been covering a beat in the central part of the city.

In regard to the criminal aspects of the case, just what steps will be taken is doubtful. If the charges against the officers can be proved, it is a state's prison offense, since the girl was under the age of 18 years. The matter is one for the county authorities to take up. Whether or not there is sufficient evidence against the men or any one of them to secure conviction, is for County Attorney McClintock to decide. The girl's mature appearance, or the fact that she was looked upon as an incorrigible, would not cut any figure as extenuating circumstances if the case against the men could be proven.

DEMOCRATS CONFIDENT

F. L. Ryan Says State Committee Finds Bright Outlook.

F. L. Ryan, chairman of the Democratic county committee, returned today from St. Paul, where he attended a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic state central committee held yesterday. It was largely attended, but three members being absent.

"The meeting was held for no especial purpose," said Mr. Ryan today, "but simply to keep in touch with the canvass throughout the state. The Dunn papers have tried to make some capital by claiming that there is disorganization in the Democratic committee and dissatisfaction with the management and have asserted that Rivhard T. O'Connor was to be placed in control of the campaign. There is not a word of truth in it. The committee is more than pleased with the way things are going, and Chairman Frank A. Day is managing and will continue to manage the campaign. The shifting of managers in the middle of the campaign is a thing which originated with the Republicans and we have no reason or desire to emulate that example. Mr. O'Connor was not even at the meeting The Democratic committee sustains very pleasant relations with him, and in his capacity as one of the leading Democrats and most effective workers in Ramsey county, is, of course, consulted by the committee. He is doing valuable work for the ticket there and is a loyal Democrat.

"This attempt to persuade voters that there is trouble in the Democratic committee is simply made for the purpose of diverting attention from the demorlization that existe among the Republican managers. Among the members of the executive committee present at yesterday's meeting there is an enthusiasm such as Minnesota Democrats have seldom had and it is brought about by the tremendous strength which their candidate, John A. Johnson is developing. All quarters of the state tell the same story. Judge H. L. Buck, of Winona, was present at the meeting and he said that in his corner of the state Johnson will get a tremendous vote. Practically every member had a rosy story to give.

"I can say in all sincerity that the committee is confident of the election of Mr. Johnson by a good majority."

The Lake County Murder.

It is now said that the man murdered near Two Harbors was Alfred O. Hammerburg, and not Erickson, as first stated. Joseph Johnson, of 2007 North Twentieth street, Superior, is a brother-in-law of Hammerburg, and he has gone to Two Harbors to view the remains. Hammerburg worked most of the time in the woods, but also spent considerable time in Superior. He has a wife and two children in Sweden, but never accumulated enough money, on account of his drinking habits, to bring them to this country.

MADE OF PEANUTS.

Ingenious Designs Exhibited in Competition.

Peanut parties have been popular at some of the summer resorts this season, says the New York Sun. A week or so before the party a handful of peanuts is given to each guest, who constructs something of nuts or shells to enter in competition for the prizes.

Much ingenuity is displayed in these competitions. At one peanut party the first prize was awarded to a woman who took a small oblong table and formed on its surface a map of the countries involved in the present war between Japan and Russia.

Japan, China, Russia and Korea and the adjacent waters were all made of ground and powdered peanuts gummed to the top of the table. The whole was bordered, first, by a line of the brown inner shells, and outside this with half shells fastened on lengthwise in a row. Each corner of the table was ornamented with a small pattern of the shelled nuts, while the sides of the table were draped to the floor with the flag of Japan.

The second prize was captured by a Noah's Ark made of pasteboard, with Noah and his wife, constructed of peanuts, standing at the door. A peanut giraffe, with matches for legs and a tall toothpick for neck, upon which the inquisitive head, composed of a peanut, was set at a knowing angle; an elephant with flapping ears (pieces of peanut shells) and a ponderous trunk, a lion with whiskers and a fierce tuft at the end of his string tail; a dascshund who properly sagged in the middle and had a leg at each corner (made of four carpet tacks), and many other animals were in line for the door of the ark, upon whose roof perched a fat peanut dove with the historic olive branch (made of a bit of cedar) in its beak.

A third prize was won by "The Knock-out Blow," which consisted of two prize fighters, about four inches high and made of peanuts strung on wire, who had great peanut noses and were of enormous muscular development very apparent in their pugilistic attitudes.

Then there was a Japanese lady, beautifully painted and clad in yellow paper, with bead pins in her black hair, carrying her fan and leading a spaniel. This was labelled "The Coming Race."

Don Quixote made of half a peanut shell and mounted on a peanut camel with a peanut windmill beside him was an admirable figure. A peanut log cabin, with trees and a mirror pond set in moss and surrounded with pigs, dogs, ducks and chickens, a woman chorister, a Dutch peasant in full costume, a ballet girl in scarlet paper, doing some high kicking, a long peanut snake in the grass(strung on silk and twisted in a bed of moss), a peanut moth clinging to the shade of a small lamp and a fat worm painted green and crouching on a balsam bough; all these were very realistic.

One large piece which took fourth prize was a peanut boathouse with ground peanut beach and blue water painted on its pasteboard stand—water upon which sailed a peanut steam launch with cotton smoke and many peanut shell sailboats.

There was a fat pig, an owl perched on a peanut rail fence, and an eggshell chariot drawn by winged peanut steeds.

After the prizes had been awarded there was a peanut supper, with sandwiches spread with peanut butter, peanut wafers and dates stuffed with broken peanuts.

BIG SALES MADE

Two Centrally Located Properties Change Hands This Week.

William H. Pattison of Superior Owns Foote Building.

Two large real estate deals of centrally located property, and involving an aggregate consideration of $52,000, were closed this week through the offices of Stryker, Manley & Buck and William Prindle & Co., representing the owners and the purchasers, respectively.

I. M. Thomas, of Pennsylvania, through the realty firm of Stryker, Manley & Buck, has sold to William H. Pattison, of Superior, what is known as the Foote building, at 110 West Superior street, adjoining the New Jersey building. The consideration was $32,000. The property is described as the east half of lot 22, block 5, Central division. William Prindle & Co. represented Mr. Pattison.

The property comprises, besides the lot, a building with one story on Superior street and two on Michigan street. It is at the present time under lease to Smith & Marcus.

Mr. Thomas has, in turn, purchased of local parties for $20,000, the 50-feet of frontage on West First street, just west of the new Mendenhall building, between Fifth and Sixth avenues. The property is described as lot 90, block 18, Duluth proper, Third division, and comprises a brick lodging house and two frame dwelling houses.

This purchase by Mr. Thomas of West First street property is regarded as another indication of the tendency of some of the outside capital to invest in frontage on that street, believing it to be a good speculation. Mr. Thomas made his purchase through the office of Stryker, Manley & Buck.

West Duluth

Not content with the city engineer's opinion that the muddy condition of Central avenue is in no way due to a faulty pavement, property owners in the district affected are preparing to protest to the common council on the condition exsting, and petition that steps be taken to remedy the evil. A paper setting forth the facts of the case, to be signed by men interested, is now being made ready, and will probably be circulated tomorrow, so that it will be in readiness to present at the council meeting next Monday night.

The city engineer examined the pavement, while covered with mud, something over a week ago, and expressed it as being his opinion that the mud was due to foreign dirt and dust being tracked and blown onto the avenue. Certain of the property owners along Central avenue took exception to these statements, and said the mud was entirely due to the faulty construction of the pavement. As a result of the argument, the street was inspected by the board of public works Tuesday. A member of the board stated that the board could not very well do anything regarding the matter in opposition to recommendations of the city engineer, even if the members so desired.

It was suggested that the best way out of the difficulty would be to present an intelligent explanation of the matter to the council, with the request that proper action be taken, and this will accordingly be done. It is held that too much dirt and powdered stone was used in the construction of the pavement, resulting in mud whenever it rains.

DIPHTHERIA AGAIN.

Authorities Say There Is No Occasion For Alarm.

Diphtheria has again broken out in West Duluth, but the health officers say there is no occasion for alarm. Three new cases were reported yesterday. One was that of Miss Maude Wallace, 135 Sixtieth avenue west, an operator in the Duluth Telephone company exchange in West Duluth. Miss Wallace was taken home and service in this part of the city over the old telephone lines was discontinued during the afternoon and night. The exchange room was thoroughly fumigated during this time, and the instruments changed. Service was resumed this morning.

Health authorlites are at a loss to account for the new cases. It is thought possible that the last outbreak is due to the Longfellow school. The building will be thoroughly fumigated as a precaution, tomorrow afternoon and Saturday morning. It will be disinfected from top to bottom, and will remain closed until Monday morning.

Officials say there is no cause for alarm, and that the disease will be thoroughly under control in short order. There are about the same number of cases now as there were at this time last year. Although the little epidemic is not regarded as being particularly dangerous, the authorities request that great care be exercised for a time, and that all new cases, and all cases not properly attended to, be immediately reported.

"All we need to effectually stamp out the disease is a little help from the people," said an official this morning.

T. U. have on foot a project to furnish a room or rooms as a sort of club for boys in this part of the city, and an open meeting, at which it is desired that everyone in any way interested will attend, will be held this evening at Gilley's hall to discuss the matter, and devise ways and means, if possible, for the establishment of such quarters.

A feature of the evening will be an address by Secretary Phil Bevis, secretary of the Duluth Y. M. C. A., who will speak of association work, particularly of the work in the juvenile department. A short musical program will be rendered and refreshments will be served. There will be a discussion of the subject in all its lights, and it is expected that as a result the plan will be carried through to a successful issue in the very near future.

GRAND RALLY.

Republican Meeting In Great Eastern Hall Saturday Night.

A grand Republican rally, under the auspices of the West Duluth Republican club, will be held Saturday evening at Great Eastern hall. Dar F. Reese, of St. Paul, now making campaign speeches through the state under direction of the Republican state central committee, will be the principal speaker of the evening. Local spellbinders will also talk on the political issues of the day.

Mr. Reese is a very able speaker, and a favorite in West Duluth, where he appeared at one of the Republican club banquets three years ago. It was thought likely that the club headquarters on Central avenue would be hardly large enough to accomodate the crowd desiring to hear Mr. Reese, so the Great Eastern hall was engaged for the evening. The club management desire to have it particularly stated that the meeting is open to the general public, and is in no sense a regular club meeting.

THE LABOR GRAFTER.

Another labor leader grafter has been convicted of blackmail and extortion in New York. His name is P. Weinseimer and he was charged by George J. Essig, a master plumber, with extorting $2700 from him under a threat to not permit work to continue on an apartment house. He will appeal the case but the evidence appears conclusive that he was guilty. At least the jury thought so.

It is an unfortunate fact that some labor unions make the mistake of placing too much power in the hands of their leaders and walking delegates. If the plumbers in this case had reserved the right to vote on all strike propositions Weinseimer would have had no power to extort this money and the union would have avoided the unpleasant notoriety that will follow.

There is a disposition among the labor unions at the present time to cut loose from the dictation of walking delegates and business agents. While the business agent is a necessity they have come to the conclusion that a dictator is not necessary. The placing of unlimited power in one man's hands has led to many abuses and much grafting, the result of which is that both the workingmen and the public get the worst of it, while the grafter lives on the fat of the land.

The conviction and punishment of a few of these grafting business agents ought to have a salutary effect as they furnish the union men with an object lesson from which they should profit.

THE PEOPLE'S FAULT.

The annual report issued by the interstate commerce commission on Oct. 18 shows that the total number of casualties to persons on railroads in the United States during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1904, was 55,130, comprising 3787 killed and 51,343 injured. This shows a large increase.

The total number of collisions and derailments was 11,201, involving $9,383,077 of damage to cars, engines and roadway. This is an increase of 648 collisions and derailments.

A showing of this kind is a strong indictment against the civic spirit of the people of the United States. This terrible record is a direct result of inadequate laws and lax enforcement of existing statutes. It is a direct result of the greed of the owners of American railways and their disregard for the safety of their passengers and workmen.

The people have it in their power to put an end to this terrible slaughter, but they can never do it as long as they permit the railroads and other trusts and monopolis to control both national and state governments. A law is of no value unless it is enforced and the man who controls the government controls the enforcement of law.

TO PREVENT LYNCHING.

Judge John L. Hopkins, a distinguished member of the Georgia bar, and a man whose fame as a jurist and lawyer may be said to be national, has offered through the columns of the Atlanta Constitution what he considers would be a remedy for the lynching habit, that is now so prevalent in the South as well as in other parts of the country. His propositions follow:

1. Allow the state the right of changing the venue in all cases, civil and criminal, where the opposing party has such right.
2. When a human life is taken by what is known as lynching, if a prosecution and conviction do not occur within a limited time, the county in which the lynching occurred shall be liable to a fine of $10,000, which shall go to the common school fund of the state.
3. Let there be a revision of criminal procedure with a view of procuring as speedy a trial of all criminals—embracing lynchers as well—as may be consistent with the ends of justice.

There is little doubt that such a program, if adopted by all the states and faithfully carried out, would effectually put an end to the crime of lynching and mob rule. His suggggestions are not entirely new but they are forcibly put. But there will be serious objections to the first two propositions. While they would be effective the people would be slow to adopt them, even many of those citizens who are opposed to lynch law.

That a state should have the right to take a change of venue where a defendant has the same right is in some respects reasonable. Many times a man guilty of crime and especially of the crime of lynching cannot be convicted in his home county because a majority of the people are in sympathy with him. And sometimes it seems that American criminal laws are too much in favor of the man who commits crime. But the idea of compelling a man to go away from home and friends to defend himself and to incur the extra expense made necessary thereby is repugnant to the American idea.

Again, the fining of a county for failure to convict when a lynching occurs, would hardly be just. In that case a man whose guilt was not clearly established might be convicted because the jury and the authorities desired to avoid the payment of a fine by the county. Furthermore there are many other serious crimes besides lynching that are never punished, because it is difficult to procure the necessary testimony. And many a county in which a lynching occurs experiences that difficulty. On the other hand, if the authorities of a county knew that if a lynching occurs the county treasury would be mulcted in a good round sum they would undoubtedly be more alert to prevent the taking of prisoners by mobs. It would seem, therefore, that if a county is to be fined at all it should be fined whenever a lynching occurs within its borders, regardless of whether the guilty parties are convicted or not. That would have a tendency to make every man in the county his brother's keeper.

But the ultimate solution of the lynching problem is the creation of a public sentiment against it. And that cannot be done as long as newspapers and public men continue to advocate lynching and commend those who take part in it.

It would seem that the decent people of the South and of every portion of the country who desire to abolish lynching should first take steps to put an end to such utterances. And that could be done by putting a good stiff fine or jail sentence on every man who counsels violation of law.

PITH OF THE PROBLEM.

In an address to the independent Parker clubs at Esopus Judge Parker reached the pith of the Philippines problem with these words: "Wherever there may exist a people incapable of being governed under American laws in consonance with the American constitution, the territory of that people ought not to be part of the American domain."

The American people should not and there is reason to believe that they do not desire to have any territory annexed to this country that cannot be governed by the same laws and in exactly the same manner as every other part. That is Americanism and that is the idea of those who are justly entitled to be called greater Americans.

It is not the duty of this republic to govern other lands as colonies. It is its duty, as in the case of Cuba, when weaker people are oppressed and maltreated by greater powers, to assist them in gaining their freedom and to assist them in setting up independent government of their own. If the people of such lands, after their independence has been secured, desire to have their country annexed to the United States and if the people of this country also desire such annexation, well and good. It should be done. But the desires of the people of both countries should be definitely learned before such action is taken, and the authorities of this country should have no power to make such annexations of territory when it is against the people's desire.

Instead of a benefit to the people of this country the annexation of both the Philippines and Porto Rico has worked them injury and greater injury to the residents of the annexed territories. No true American desires a greater country at the expense of a violation of the constitution and the principles of the Declaration of Independence.

THE REAL ISSUE.

Prof. E. W. Dubois, of the Atlanta university, has the true conception of the negro problem and all other race issues, if he is correctly quoted in a dispatch from Des Moines, Ia.

In an address before the American Missionary society he created something of a sensation by saying that the rise and education of the ambitious young negro student is a menace to the security and class superiority of the rich, the well born and the white. But in explanation of the word "menace" used in this sentence he said that the negro problem is only a phase of the greater problem of class distinction. "The greatest crime of the United States," he said, "is stealing, which is manifested in the arrogation of special prvleges by the well-to-do and the white over the poor and the black man."

That is the issue in a nutshell. The powerful rich desire to continue to steal from the poor and the proper education of the poor is a "menace" to that system. The powerful whites desire to continue to steal from the earnings of the negro, and the education of the young negro is a "menace" to that system.

It is solely for this reason that Governor Vardaman and the whites of his class, both North and South, are opposed to education of the negro and why the people of the South particularly are opposed to political equality of the races. It is not social equality that they fear, because they know that such a thing is absolutely impossible. What they actually fear is that they are going to lose the opportunity of robbing the black man.

That is all there is to the negro question. The race issue is the class issue whether it is in the United States or in any other part of the world.

THE FIELD SURVEY

Cloquet this season surpasses Minneapolis as the great lumber manufacturing center of the Northwest. It will not be long, however, until there will be no great sawmill industry in Minnesota. The timber is going very fast. But when the timber is gone the farmers will come and most of the towns that have depended almost entirely upon lumber production will be all the better for the change.

It is charged that Richard Van Cott, Republican candidate for the New York assembly, has been colonizing voters in his district and paying them each $3 and six weeks' board. Van Cott is a son of the postmaster of New York, whose dismissal was recommended by the postoffice inspectors because he had violated the laws and appropriated government money to his own use, and who was charged with willful violation of the civil service laws in the collection of campaign funds. Notwithstanding all this he was kept in office by President Roosevelt. This appears to be a case of "like father, like son," and the probabilities are that the Republican machine will use its power to prevent the punishment of the latter as President Roosevelt used his power to prevent punishment of the father.

The state supreme court has nipped in the bud the scheme of Republican politicians to prevent the printing of the names of candidates for county offices of the Public Ownership party on the official ballots. As this party did not poll sufficient votes in Otter Tail county in previous elections to entitle it to participate in the primary election the supreme court decides that it has the right under the law to nominate by petition, and directs the county auditor to place the names of its candidates on the official ballot.

The first responsibility of the Republicans, the New York Sun says, is to support Roosevelt and Fairbanks. "The second responsibility arises from the necessity of crushing the Grocery. No higher duty can be conceived than that of ridding the state and the party of the corrupt and corrupting faction of grafters that is striving now to disgrace them." The "Grocery" refers to Governor Odell and his machine. The Courier-Journal of Louisville, commenting on the Sun's course, says: "But what can be said in support of a national ticket whose leader gives his moral and physical support to that same corrupt and corrupting faction of grafters? The morality must be very blunt which does not see the force of such inconsistency." Yes, just about as blunt as that of the man who did what he could to assist in the election of McKinley and Roosevelt in 1900 while professing to be an opponent of trust rule in national affairs.

If there was nothing to criticise or "kick" about there would not be much to say.

Hotel Gossip.

Patrick Ellard Dowling, editor of the Star, Eveleth, was a passenger in yesterday from Chicago. When asked to give some expression of political sentiment as he found it drifting in Chicago he said he had not learned anything.

"Did you hear anybody express themselves?"

"No, sir, I was not with a class of men while I was there who are interested in politics. I went down purely on business and had no chance to find anything out about the politics."

Speaking about conditions on the range he said that things were moving along fairly well, and that a good year was looked for next year in a business way. As to politics he said he expected to see the range vote well in favor of the Republican ticket, and that certainly all he could do toward that end would be done.

"I want to see Dunn roll up a big vote," he said. "I would like to make a good record for myself and I believe that the very best way to do it is to have him in the van."

Mr. Dowling is one of the two nominees for the legislature in his district and his election is a foregone conclusion, being merely a question of how large or how small the vote is.

'Anything new?"

This was the good old reliable question used yesterday by the hotel scribe in addressing Nathan Nolle, postoffice inspector. It was raining and the inspector had no overacat nor umbrella, but in each hand he held a suit case and in his mouth he held a cigar. In addition to all these he wore a smile which surrounded the cigar in a most satisfied way. The inspector was just ready to start from the government building to the depot.

"This much is new—I've just lost an overcoat," he said. "Rather somebody stole it. I've been laying for a couple of days to see if some man would get onto the fact that he might have taken the wrong coat, but no one has shown up to give me back my coat, so it's a plain case of steal.

"That's the third one I've parted with in the last four years, and it's getting to be something of a chestnut."

A year ago he had one taken in the depot at Minneapolis and four years ago he lost one at Grand Forks, N. D. The first one was a forty-dollar article and the next cost five dollars less. The last one was a grade lower in price than the second, but Mr. Nolle did not say what he expected to pay for the next one. But he does not like to pay a fat price and have the article removed without compensation so he lowers the ante on each new deal.

He walked to the depot in the rain.

"Your hotel dog's all right," declared a bewhiskeded constituent on the hotel route today. "He may not like the Spalding any more for reasons best known to himself but he is prospering, nevertheless. He has moved a little farther down Superior street, and his beat is between the Glass Block store and Henry Folz's market. Maybe he's better fed there. He's quite a dignified chap, friendly, but rather stiff in his manner.

"I notice that he does not bark at every vehicle that goes by, but seems to be particularly averse to those with red wheels. Anything that comes moving along on red wheels gets the worst of it from that dog. Shouldn't wonder if some red wheeled rig had bumped into him or snipped his foot at some time or another.

"He's a black dog with some brown, wiry haired and about 18 inches high isn't he? Yes, that's the dog."

It was during a performance at the Lyceum and it loked very suspicious. It happened on the steps during one of the intermissions. A short, heavy set man with a noble paunch walked hurriedly up the steps and at the landing met one of the ushers who had sneaked out.

"Did you get them?" the usher asked.

No answer from the short man, who put his hand in his pocket and handed something to the usher. He believed that actions spoke louder than words in a case like this and did not wish to criminate himself by speaking. The usher took what was handed him, placed his hand carefully in his coat pocket and went into the house, a suspicious and self constituted sleuth following.

The usher saw he was followed and thrust something from his pocket into his mouth, looking guiltily at his purser. He began chewing, to hide his crime, thought the sleuth. But not so. The chewing was rather to reveal the true state of affairs, for it was an olive.

The boy liked olives and was too young to go into a barroom and filch them from the free lunch department. So he prevailed on the short man with the paunch, who was a frequent visitor at the thirst station, to bring him some.

The quartet remained at the hotel Tuesday night on the original registration, but yesterday's developments changed the arrangements, for Frank Curtis went to the courthouse and bought a marriage license for Miss Mary Cromer and himself and they were married last evening.

Her Pickaninny Protege.

Argonaut: Mrs. Gazena Lightfoot, of Montgomery, Ala., has in her menage a pickaninny protege who had been taught to recite the line from the Master: "It is I. Be not afraid."

When the little fellow came before the negro Sunday school, where he was to do his part, he was ashy with stage fright, but with his small voice full of tears and trembling like calvesfoot jelly, he managed to say: "'Tain't nobody but me. Don't git skeared."

WHAT MAKES PANICS.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: The bankruptcy proceedings against D. J. Sully, late "Cotton King," have called attention to an unfailing symptom of the madness that foreruns and breeds financial panics.

At the height of his bubble prosperity Sully encouraged his daughter, a mere child, to spend $8,000 in a jeweler's shop as if she were buying a bag of peanuts or a pound of candy.

The incident at once recalls such money-spending excuses as the notorious "Waterbury Circus." It also recalls the hysteria of the money-spending mob that surged through the Waldorf-Astoria in 1900 and 1901.

When the tide of speculation rises so furiously that the riders of its waves are no longer able to imagine same ways of using their winnings—when numbers of outwardly successful men find their appetites for pleasure so jaded that they can see amusement only in "burning $1000 bills" instead of saving them against the inevitable reaction—then the community in which these conditions exist is ripe for panic. And the panic always comes.

It comes because speculative energy has been pressed to exhaustion and has become that sheer delirium of which pure waste of wealth is the unfailing symptom.

In their hysterical excesses men lose that judgment without which the fabrics whereby they have climbed to wealth cannot be sustained. Their social folly is the sure percursor of commercial folly and collapse.

In their madness they live and lead those they influence to live, beyond their means. And the result is always disaster.

A FINANCIAL DRUNK.

Pittsburg Dispatch: Mr. John Wannamaker, in a short interview on the business situation, attributes the recent reaction to "a financial drunk" which preceded the reversal of a year ago. The term is a strong one, but it is possible to perceive that it is realistically descriptive.

There may be differences of opinion as to the best description of those fantasies which produced the backset. But whether they are called ballooning, kite flying, rocket shooting, or, as Mr. Wannamaker suggests, financial inebriety, the proper digestion of the lesson depends on recognizing that those exigent features were the cause of the trouble, and the reaction and readjustment constitute the process of cure. We are wont to class the boom as prosperity and the reaction as the reverse. But the fact is that the real trouble dates from the time when our captains of industry began to issue bonds on the pleasures of hope and to keep the stock exchanges active by capitalizing the fertility of their imagination.

However, Mr. Wanamaker agrees that business has sobered up and the process of recuperation has carried us to a new era of activity. All tests agree in showing that result. The restoration of activity on sound and conservative foundations means a real prosperity that will continue until we get around the cycle again to the periodical stage of speculative intoxication.

His Well Known Name.

Kansas City Independent: An English manufacturer who has just returned from a tour in Scotland is relating an amusing incident which occurred during his trip.

In a remote village in the lowlands he came across an inhabitant of such venerable appearance that he stopped to chat with him.

"By the way, what is your name?" inquired the traveler. "Robert Burns," was the answer. "Dear me, that's a very well known name." "Nae doot it is, mon; I've been blacksmith in this village for nigh on sixty years."

Not Sure She Had Seen Him.

Cassell's Saturday Journal: A would-be exquisite, in a tram car, seeing a young lady whom he thought to be impressed with his personal charms, crossed over and took a seat beside her and said:

"Haven't I met you somewhere before?"

To which she replied, in a voice heard by the other passengers: "I'm not sure, but I think you're the man who cleans our windows."

The passengers laughed and the young man hurriedly left the car.

Those Sickly Octogenarians.

Scottish American: They were neither of them brilliant scholars, but they liked to move with the times as regards their knowledge of current events, so the daily newspapers was regularly delivered at their humble domicile, and it was Jennie's duty to read out during breakfast time all the most interesting items of the day. One morning, after wading through the latest intelligence from the front, she turned to another page of the paper and said:

"Herbie, it says here that another octogenarian's dead."

"What's an octogenarian?"

"Well, I don't quite know what they are, but they must be very sickly creatures. You never hear of them but they're dying."

Through the Field Glass.

Kansas City Times: Kurosafetypin was hurrying towards the Japs. Turning, he saw Col. Damilmoveski leaning against a tree.

"Why don't you come on?" yelled Kurosafetypin. "We are going to drive the Japs back." "Oh, I guess I'll wait here for you—you'll be back soon," replied the colonel, as he began the perusal of a military work entitled, "How to Run When Pursued."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

St. Cloud Journal Press (Rep.): The Monticello Times, Democratic, is supporting Dunn for governor, and at the same time is abusive of Congressman Buckman, and charges him with the theft of public timber. As Buckman reported the trespass himself, which occurred in Northern Minnesota, while he was in St. Paul as state senator, and Auditor Dunn sent his cruisers up to report on the case, and then fixed the amount which Buckman should pay, and which Buckman has paid, we cannot see the consistency of lauding Dunn as a protector of the state's property, and at the same time denouncing Buckman. Naturally, after Buckman had voluntarily reported the case and offered to make settlement, he looked after his end of the case. It was the duty of the state auditor to protect the interests of the state. It would seem in a fairminded man that the public official who violates the law is equally liable to censure along with the man whose employes did the trespass act.

Le Seuer Sentinel: The great Republican revolt in Minnesota, keeps getting greater and greater and greater, as the days go by. On every hand we hear of leading Republicans who are open and free in their statements that they will not vote for their party candidate for governor. Democrats will, of course, vote for their candidate as there is not a cleaner or more desirable name on either ticket than his.

Itasca News: For having as many murders as has Beltrami county, it is only a queer coincidence, perhaps, that it has no murderers.

St. Cloud Journal Press: Maj. J. M. Bowler, who has been one of the rankest populists in Minnesota and later a Hearst Democrat, now says he is coming over to the Republicans. This is the hardest blow yet.

JAPAN IN FORMOSA.

New York Sun: If we may judge by Japan's experience in the island of Formosa, she has a very good idea of the best method of treatment of the fruits of victory. Under the terms of the treaty of Shimonoseki, ratified at Chefoo, on May 8, 1895, Japan became the proprietor of Formosa, formerly a den of thieves and a rendezvous of pirates. The island has an estimated area of 13,500 square miles and a population of about 3,000,000, equivalent to the area and population of Massachusetts and Connecticut combined.

According to the statements of a correspondent of the London Times, Japan leaves our own work in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines somewhat in the rear. There is a striking difference between the policy adopted by Japan in Formosa and that pursued by the United States in the islands under our control. While Japan has not neglected those educational and sanitary institutions to which we have given, in our experience, the first and greatest attention, her efforts have been primarily and most strongly directed toward the sound economic establishment of the people of her colony. This feature, in all of our work, has been generally neglected. We sent our charitable contributions to Porto Rico after her disastrous hurricane; Gen. Wood left the impoverished Cubans to work out as best they could their own economic salvation, while he spent 45 per cent of their revenues for school houses and street sweeping; and we have done very little for the industries of the Philippines beyond a meagre reduction in our tariff on their imports.

In Formosa Japan has established peace among local belligerents; has maintained order; has built 1000 miles of highways and 125 miles of light railway; has sunk a vast number of artesian wells; affected extensive sanitary reforms; established savings banks, postal and telegraph services; built school houses and hospitals; established productive industries; introduced improved systems of cultivation and forestry; and has effected a notable development in mining enterprises.

The Times correspondent closes his review of Formosa's development under Japanese control as follows:

"Surely the foregoing details should suffice to convince even the most sceptical that Japan is not only an able colonizer, but possesses quite exceptional aptitude for colonization; and other colonizing powers may well go to Formosa in order to learn from the magnificent example which Japan has set to the world in colonizing that savage island."

If the corespondent tells the truth, his conclusion is fully warranted. Japan's eight years in Formosa stand perhaps without rival in the history of colonial development.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: If a man likes to work very hard with nothing to show for it, he is a fool not to get married.

It's funny how a girl's lips can smell of tobacco smoke when she has been in a room alone with a man.

There is something singularly consistent in a feminine way in a bleached blond singing in a church choir.

A girl would hate to think that a man she likes could suspect how narrow a seat she could sit in with him.

Lots of people who worry over the misery of the pagans don't care if they don't give their own servants enough to eat.

Bolivar Brown on Football.

Kansas City Times: "Futball are the cheefe study uv evrie collige, butt you gotta have leng hare an' know how to yell 'Rah zip rip bume' to learn it. It are played on a big fielde bi fellers whu wants to have the ladyes an' girls say, 'How big an' fyne he is.' To be a futball playir you putt on a baseball suite an' dirty it in the mudd. The warser you git bunged up the bettir playir you are. If you kin git knocked insenseless you are a knacker-jack. The best play is whot they call the 'Down.' It is for all the players to pick out sum littel feller an' pile ontu him. Aftir the fellers whu are away back whare it's safe tromps on him they let him up an' evrieody sez, 'How grand.' It doan't take much braynes to play. That are why thay are so many gud players among collig boyz."

Cost of the Philippines.

Springfield Republican: When Judge Parker published his letter of acceptance he stated that the Philippines had cost the United States about $650,000,000 up to date, as nearly as could be estimated. Secretary Taft then said that the cost up to 1902 had been $189,000,000, and that up to date our Oriental adventure had cost under $200,000,000. By the way, $200,000,000 is no small sum to draw out of our pockets. But that aside. Here come Mr. Olney and Judge Parker, repeating that the Philippines have cost this country, up to date, some $650,000,000. They decline to accept Secretary Taft's figures. In so doing they are well advised. Mr. Taft's estimate is ridiculous, and could not stand the test of an exhaustive analysis.

TAKE LONG TRIP

Duluth Built Yacht to Sail Down the Mississippi.

M. H. Alworth's Handsome New Launch Is Ready For Service.

From Duluth to Florida by way of the Mississippi river will be the trip made by a Duluth yacht carrying a party of Duluth people.

The yacht is M. H. Alworth's Seafoam, which has just been completed at a local shipbuilding establishment. It is one of the largest and finest gasoline launches on fresh water, being 66 feet in length and 14 feet 3 inches in beam.

The boat is fitted up with several berths resembling those on a Pullman sleeper, and is decorated throughout the interior with mahogany. It contains two engines and is fitted with two separate propellors, to provide against accidents. The cabin is commodious and luxuriously furnished, and the boat can comfortably carry a party of a dozen or more on an extended cruise.

The boat was not designed for high speed, safety and comfort being the first considerations, but it can nevertheless make 14 to 16 knots an hour when necessary. The average speed is about 12 knots.

The yacht will be measured by the local customs officials, and next week will start on a journey of several thousand miles. In charge of the captain and crew, it will be taken to Chicago by way of Mackinac. The party, which is composed of M. H. Alworth and family, with one or two guests, will join the yacht in Chicago, thus avoiding the disagreeable trip down the lakes. Sailing down the drainage canal and the Illinois river, the Seafoam will reach the Mississippi and proceed directly to New Orleans, with a short stop at St. Louis. From New Orleans the Seafoam will go to St. Augustine, where some of the members of the party will leave the yacht to spend the winter at the Florida hotels. Mr. Alworth himself, however, will probably make a tour of the West Indies in the boat, touching at Cuba and some of the other islands, and possibly crossing over to the South American coast before returning to St. Augustine to pick up the other members of the party.

The Seafoam, while a gasoline launch, has every appearance of a steam propelled vessel, being fitted with a stack.

The trip is undoubtedly the longest and most interesting ever taken by a Duluth yacht.

CONNECTIONS POSTPONED

Health Department to Stop Proceedings Under Sewer Ordinance.

The health department will compel no more property owners to make sewer connections this year, on account of the lateness of the season, and all those which have been ordered will be allowed to go over until next spring.

Out of the 100 connections ordered by the health department, sixty-nine have been made, and legal steps have had to be threatened by the city before the property owners would connect their premises with a sewer in compliance with the order of the health department.

The other thirty-one property owners on the showing that they would make improvements in the spring were allowed to postpone making the connections.

WANT SHERIFF TO PAY

Amount of Bill Which He Neglected to Collect.

St. Paul, Oct. 20.—Unusual proceedings by which the sheriff of Hubbard county may be held responsible for the amount of debt due a St. Paul firm because he failed to levy an execution promptly to collect that debt, and by which, incidentally, he may be forced to pay a fine of $200 to Ramsey county, have resulted in the issuance of an order by Judge Brill, of the district court.

A petition addressed to the district court by Somers & Co., local jobbers, informed the court that the petitioners secured a judgment last January against W. Evrdengberg, of Chamberlain, Hubbard county, for $64.15, the value of goods sold and delivered.

The judgment was sent to Sheriff Petrie for execution, but it is alleged he failed to levy on property of the firm, which is now insolvent. Somers & Co. asked that Sheriff Petrie be cited to show cause why he should not be compelled to pay judgment, $64.15, and also a fine of $200.

Judge Brill issued the order as prayed for and appointed the hearing to be held in St. Paul, Oct. 29. The order was served on Sheriff Petrie at Park Rapids last Monday.

WATCHMAN DISAPPEARS.

Goes to Get Drink and Does Not Return.

Making the statement that he was going to get a drink, Nels Nelson, watchman on the Bon Ami, left the steamer a week ago Tuesday night, and has not been seen or heard of since.

Nelson was a man of about thirty or thirty-five years of age, and so far as is known had no relatives in the city. He had been employed during the summer as night watchman on the boat.

He had been paid the Saturday evening before his disappearance and consequently had but two days' wages coming to him.

BONDING A DESERT

Kansas Get-Rich-Quick Idea In Political Finance.

Now Turns Up to Complicate the State Campaign.

Topeka, Kan., Oct. 20.—A queer story of early financiering in Kansas has been revived by a libel suit brought by three state officers against a newspaper publisher of Topeka.

The newspaper recently printed a story which in effect charged Secretary of State Burrows, State Superintendent Dayhoff and Attorney General Coleman with conniving with a bond agent to invest state school funds controlled by them in Comanche county bonds—a purchase which, as the newspaper said, indicated a reckless disregard for the safety of the funds. The three men, being nominees on the Republican ticket for reelection, sued the newspaper for $15,000 damages. The reply of the newspaper has just been filed, and it brings out a unique chapter in get-rich-quick schemes thirty years old.

In 1870 the legislature of Kansas, in a generous mood, created Summer, Harper, Comanche, Barbour and other counties out of the uninhabited section of the state, and defined their boundaries. Comanche county is on the Southern border, adjoining the Indian Territory, and a little West of the center line.

Its altitude and its location place it beyond the rain belt. It is composed of high bluffs, deep canons and table land, is unfit for agriculture and is of indifferent worth as a grazing country. In 1873 the Indians and hunters were killing buffalo all over that section, and Comanche was uninhabited save by occasional marauding bands of Indians.

In the fall of 1873, as was afterward established by legislative investigation, A. J. Mowry and four or five other men started in a wagon from Hutchinson, the nearest point on a railroad, to Comanche county, seventy-five miles distant, taking with them a city directory of St. Joseph, Mo., and a scheme for corralling a pile of boodle. The scheme was to organize the county, issue bonds, sell them and divide the proceeds.

Under the law it was necessary that the county be shown to have 250 householders to entitle it to organization. As soon as the party arrived the members proceeded to take the census of the county by writing in a book names they found in the St. Joseph directory. This census they sent to Topeka, and in due time they received official sanction to proceed with their organization.

A pretended county election was held, at which Mowry was elected a member of the legislature, James Hopkins county school superintendent, and W. Allen county clerk. As a matter of fact, there was no one in the county limits but the wagon load of Hutchinson men. At the pretended election the country, by unanimous vote, ordered the commissioners to issue bonds for bridges, for general expenses and to build a court house.

The total issue aggregated $72,000, and as the interest rate was generous, the bonds found ready sale in the East to men who knew none of the facts. When the first interest payment became due they discovered how they had been swindled.

The bondholders wrote much and protested loudly, but could do nothing. They put the bonds away in their safes and waited. Their time came in 1880, when the boom struck Kansas.

The overflow sent about 5000 persons into Comanche county, which was no sooner organized than it was served with notice of a suit by the Eastern bondholders. The county tried to evade payment, and the legal fight went from the state courts into the federal tribunal, being finally decided in favor of the bondholders.

Meanwhile an exodus had begun from the county. At present there are not more than 1700 inhabitants in it, and these have the hardest task of their lives trying not to accumulate enough property to make the bonds valuable. By a compromise effected in 1890 the bond issue was reduced to $133,000, a sum much less than the amount of the judgment, with interest and costs.

Mowry and his confreres, finding bond issuing an easy road to wealth, then formed two school districts, and issued two bonds of $1000 each, which they sold to the state board of educational lands and funds for $875.

Mowry's vanity and desire for political prominence, however, were his undoing. When the legislature met at Topeka in January, 1874, he appeared with his credentials and obtained a seat as the member from Comanche. Soon afterward the story of the bond deal became known and a resolution of inquiry was adopted. The committee reported that Mowry was not entitled to a seat and he left town.

A special session of the legislature met in September of 1875, and the attorney general was instructed to investigate the story. He visited the county, found nobody living there, and learned that nobody ever had resided there for long. The final paragraph of his report reads:

"As Marius sat amid the ruins of Cathage and wept, I camped upon the townsite of Smallwood (named after one of the state officers who bought the school bonds,) the county seat, and feasted upon wild turkey with no (white) man to molest or make me afraid. In Smallwood there are two log cabins, both deserted, of course, without doors, windows, sashes or blinds. About a mile off is another deserted ranch, and these comprise the houses of the householders of the county. In this county there is not an acre of land or a dollar's worth of property subject to taxation. Its sole inhabitants are the Cheyennes and the coyote, the wolf and the Arapahoes, and its organization is and always was a fraud."

When the legislature of 1876 convened Mowry turned up again as a member, this time from Doniphan county. Indignant members had a committee appointed to investigate his conduct in Comanche county, and he was expelled. The committee's report shows that, not having enough men in the party to effect an organization of the two school districts, fictitious names were signed to the bonds by Mowry, who deposited the money received from their sale to his own credit in a bank, the blank school bonds being secured by him from the state superintendent. A criminal proceeding was threatened, but Mowry dropped out of sight. The two state officers who bought the bonds were banished from politics. The bonds themselves are still held by the state school fund.

MURPHY AND TOWNE AT WAR

Over Tammany Leader's Order Regarding Indorsement By Populists.

New York, Oct. 20.—Indications point to an open breach between Charles F. Murphy and the three congressional candidates, William R. Hearst, Chas. A. Towne and William Sulzer, whom he commanded to decline an endorsement at the hands of the Populists.

Leader Murphy sent out the anti-Populist order last Wednesday, but the Populist nominating petitions have been circulated in all three of the districts uninterruptedly ever since. Not a line of protest from the Democratic candidates has reached the Watson managers, and all of the nominees have been aware of the activity in their behalf.

The petition of William R. Hearst, at whom the Tammany order was principally directed, was completed yesterday, the requisite number of signatures having been obtained. It will be filed with the election commissioners.

Representative Sulzer has met Mr. Murphy's order to get off the Watson ticket by deliberately relieving the Watson managers of the expense of circulating his petition, and has sent out his own followers to solicit subscriptions. He expects to have his petition ready for filing with Hearst's tomorrow.

The circulation of Former Senator Towne's petition by the People's party has brought that candidate in open collision with Borough President Cassidy, of Queens, and some of their followers have actually resorted to the aribitrament of knuckles.

Towne's district embraces besides the area in Manhattan, two wards of Long Island City, President Cassidy's bailiwick.

Some of Cassidy's retainers were in a saloon where the notary ventured, and they pounced on the Towne emissary, tearing his petition to tatters. It was repeated four times, in each instance the list meeting with disaster when over half completed.

STRANGE STORY OF GIRL

Who Went to Buffalo to Be Married.

Fostoria, Ohio, Oct. 20.—Early last Friday morning, Miss Virginia Botto, of this city, and Bernard Defava, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., boarded a train for Buffalo to be married there. Saturday night Louis Botto, a wealthy commission merchant, the brother of the bride, received a telegram from the proprietor of a Buffalo hotel that his sister was very ill there. Another telegram, signed by Defava, reported that she had been sent to a hospital. He left at once for Buffalo and returned with her today.

On the way to Buffalo Miss Botto confided to the conductor that her brother had arranged to give her to Defava, and that she did not want to marry the man. She said that he was armed with a stiletto.

In Buffalo, by a ruse, the conductor managed to spirit her away and hid her in a hotel.

Mr. Botto says he found his sister in a Buffalo hospital. She is so changed as to be hardly recognizable to those to whom she has been best known, and unable to recognize any one. She wrings her hands constantly and moans. She shrinks from seeing any one, and thinks that all who address her wish to kill her. Her brother says that she had the best of treatment while in Buffalo and hopes that a few days of quiet will restore her mind.

Defava appears to be well known in Buffalo, and all whom Mr. Botto met speak in the highest terms of his character. It is denied that any attempt was made to force her to marry Defava. Her condition is explained by saying that she merely changed her mind about marrying.

CHURCH WINDOWS

Nailed Up to Keep the Pastor Out.

Wheeling, W. Va., Oct. 20.—Members of the Church of God congregation in Elm Grove, suburb, have nailed the windows and barred the doors to prevent the admission of Elder B. C. Bartelbaugh, who was appointed by the conference to minister to their spiritual wants. Recently the churches in Elm Grove and Park View amalgamated, and Elder Bartelbaugh was named as the new pastor. Members of the congregation declare solemnly they will have none of him, and will shut up the church until another minister is named.

UNUSUAL DEVOTION

Of Indiana Girl Rewarded By a Judge.

Richmond, Ind., Oct. 20.—In the Wayne circuit court Miss Bernardina Imhoff asked for $1835 from the estate of her mother, Mrs. Maria Imhoff, who died some months ago.

The testimony showed that the daughter had nursed her mother and sister, both of whom were invalids for 14 years. In addition, the young woman had personally cultivated a small tract of ground planting and harvesting the crops. She asked $2.50 a week for a period of 734 weeks.

Judge Fox ordered the claim paid, saying that such devotion was unusual, and that the amount asked for such service was very small. None of the other heirs objected to the payment of the claim.

WOMAN SUES LEADING MEN

For Money Lost By Her Husband In Poker Games.

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 20.—Alleging that her husband has lost heavily in games of poker in the Buchtel hotel, and by reason of the losses his business has declined and the health of his family has been impaired, Mrs. Florence V. Curtis, 899 May street, has filed a petition in common pleas court against sixteen prominent citizens, who she says won her husband's money, and against whom she asks the court to render judgment for $3000 severally and separately. Mrs. Curtis is the wife of W. L. Curtis, agent for the Erie railroad.

The defendants named are M. J. Hoye, health officer; Charles Hatch, superintendent of canals for the Northern Ohio district; John W. Payne, city engineer and president of the Mens Society of the Woodland M. E. church; Andrew Martin, councilman from the Fourth ward; Charles H. Isbell, ex-city clerk and prominent Democratic candidate for council in the First ward; Don A. Goodwin, proprietor of the Buchtel hotel; William L. Bretz and John G. Williams, employes of the hotel; Daniel McGarry and C. Mulcahy, prominent contractors; Ed R. Patterson, Ed Mackay, William Windsor, Jr., and John F. Windsor, prominent business men, and Russell Port.

The defendants made the claim, through their counsel, that the whole matter is in the nature of a hold-up, and that the petition was not filed until they had been requested to pay certain sums of money in settlement. It is stated that some of those whose names were in the petition as originally prepared have made the settlement demanded, and that their names do not appear in the petition as filed in the common pleas court. One of the defendants in the case raises the point that some of the men who were first named as defendants having been relieved by the payment of money, and their names having been withdrawn from the petition as filed in court, all are relieved of liability. The case promises to bring up some pretty points of law before it is finally disposed of in court.

WIFE NO. 2 DID WASHING

To Help Husband Pay the Alimony Due Wife No. 1.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 20.—Because wife No. 2 was compelled to take in washing to help pay the alimony due wife No. 1, Noah B. Smith appeared in court to ask for a modification of the order providing for the money for his first wife.

Mr. Smith married wife No. 2 as soon as he was divorced from wife No. 1. He was ordered to pay $20 a month for the support of his two children when the divorce was granted last February. He told the court yesterday that he had great difficulty in paying the $20 a month alimony granted Mrs. Smith No. 1.

Smith had been cited to show cause why he should not be fined for contempt of court for refusing to meet the payments of $20 a month. It was shown that out of $165 that had fallen due since the granting of the divorce he had only paid $65. He said that he had been ill and that the payments were too high. He said: "I have mortgaged my property and I have pawned my watch and my wife has taken in as high as three washings a week to help me pay the money due my first wife. I simply could not meet the payments."

Judge Leathers agreed that under the circumstances $16 would be sufficient for the support of the children.

FOLLY IN GRAIN TARIFF.

Northwest Mill Conditions Argue For Reciprocity.

New York, Oct. 19.—The Journal of Commerce says: "The milling interests of the Northwest are just now presenting in a striking light the effect of imposing duties upon raw materials and trying to mitigate the effect by a drawback when the product from the material is exported. Primarily, wheat and flour are food products and the former has not until recently been considered in the light of raw material for the manufacture of the latter in relation to foreign trade. Now that our surplus of wheat and flour for export is getting small, the effect upon the milling industry and upon the export trade of the absurd duty of 25 cents a bushel on grain is becoming manifest, as also is the advantage of manufacturing wheat into flour before exporting it.

"There is no protection in the duty, and if the time should come when we had to import staple articles of food, short work would be made of our 'corn laws.' Thus far the purpose of the duties on ordinary products of agriculture has only been to 'fool farmers,' who are all the time paying duties upon manufactured goods for the supposed benefit of other people.

"There is no reason in the world why the Northwest should not receive supplies of material from Canada free of duty and convert the bulk of the Canadian surplus into flour for export. The duty is preventing this and encouraging the building up of manufacturing and transportation in Canada instead of in the United States."

CHOKES A MULE

Robert Myers Guilty of Inhuman Cruelty to Animals.

Hitches a Team of Horses to a Mule's Neck.

In an attempt to move a heavy brewery wagon which was stuck in the mud, Robert Myers hitched an extra team of horses to the mules he was driving, by tying a chain about the neck of one of the mules. The act led to his arrest by Humane Officer Withrow, and his arraignment in the municipal court this morning.

Myers was a driver for the Duluth Brewing & Malting company. When driving up Twenty-fourth avenue west his wagon became stalled and the mules became balky. Myers began beating them with a heavy stick, but they refused to move. A teamster with an empty wagon happened along, and offered his assistance. Myers fastened a heavy chain from the wagon around the neck of one of the mules, and after nearly dislocating the animal's neck succeeded in pulling the wagon out of the hole. The mule fell to the ground a moment later and was with difficulty revived.

Information concerning the affair reached the ears of the manager of the company, and Myers was instantly discharged. His action also came to the notice of the humane officer and he was placed under arrest on the charge of cruelty to animals. When arraigned in court he pleaded guilty to the charge, and Judge Windom fined him $15 and costs with the alternative of spending twenty days in jail.

"This is a case when I feel like fining you about $100 or sending you up for ninety days," said the court in passing sentence. "The truth of the matter is that you became crazed with rage at the animals because they refused to move, and you thought that was an excuse for treating them as inhumanely as possible.

"If it were not for your family I would not show any leniency whatever. But you have lost your position on account of it, and if I gave you a heavy fine or a long imprisonment, it would work greater cruelty to your family than you showed to the mule. That is the only reason why I let you off as easily as I do. You have been driving long enough to know that hammering a balky horse or a mule does not do a particle of good, and the other act was unjustifiable cruelty. You just wanted to vent your rage on the mule."

REMARKABLE STORY TOLD

In Court of How It Felt to Die of Opium.

New York, Oct. 20.—Restored to consciousness as he bordered between life and death from a draught of opium poison, taken while despondent, "James R. Jones" was able to tell in court yesterday the sensations he felt as the coldness of death was creeping on him. When arraigned before Magistrate Mayo, in Jefferson market court, he told the following remarkable story:

"Yes, your honor, it is true I tried to kill myself. I am sure, though, that if you knew all the circumstances you would be lenient with me. I came from Virginia several years ago and taught in Hartford, Conn. A change came, and I walked to this city from there. For the past week I have wandered through the city, unable to get a chance to earn enough for my subsistence.

"Strangers repulsed me, and even a millionaire friend refused me aid. All my desire for life fled, and I made my plans to end my woes in death. I bought some poison and walked to Madison square.

"There was no taste to the poison. I thought it would be bitter and almost impossible to take. It was really like a heavy wine and almost as soon as I had swallowed it the strange sensation began. Thrills of pleasure ran through me, and then vivid pictures of impressive scenes in my life were enacted in my mind. While these scenes were before me I seemed to have no part in them, but was like a spectator.

"Then a heavy feeling came over me, and great walls of wavering, dazzling color seemed to surround me. At first the colors were the daintiest pastel shades, making an opalescent effect, but the tones grew in intensity until the walls were glaring, turgid things, and then suddenly something seemed to snap and I thought I was in a black dungeon.

"I had been so interested before I made no attempt to talk, but now I felt as if I must say something, but when I tried to move my lips they were as immovable as iron and all my muscles began to twitch and strange sounds floated by my ears, bringing as much pleasure as the first sensation.

Soon my heart began to feel light, as if it were being painlessly lifted up, and the next thing I knew I had a faint visision of some one standing over me. It was the ambulance surgeon. I was told that a few moments more would have killed me."

As proof that "Jones" had deliberately planned suicide, the police presented a pathetically worded note, asking New Yorkers to give him a decent burial, and the following verse:

One more unfortunate, weary of death,
Rashly importunate, gone to his death,
Alas for the rarity of Christian charity under the sun,
Oh, it was pitiful,
Nigh a whole city full,
Home he had none.

"Jones" still declining to make known his real identity, was held in $500 bail for trial.

Eyes and Nose ran Water—C. G. Archer, of Brewer, Maine, says: "I have had Catarrh for several years. Water would run from my eyes and nose for days at a time. About four months ago I was induced to try Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, and since using the wonderful remedy I have not had an attack. I would not be without it. It relieves in ten minutes.—22.

WIN WEALTH IN U. S. STEEL

Lucky Employes Gain $800,000 By Rise In Stocks.

New York, Oct. 20.—There are about 10,000 employes of the United States Steel corporation who are together $800,000 richer than they were a few months ago. They are the men who took advantage of the billion-dollar company's second profit-sharing scheme, when preferred stock was offered them at $55 a share. Attention has been drawn to their profits in Steel shares by a report that the big concern intends to make its employes a third profit-sharing offer in December.

When preferred stock crossed 83, the 27,379 employes, who in January, 1902, purchased 48,983 shares at $82.50 per share under the profit-sharing plan, for the first time in a year and a half saw a chance to get get their money back. For the 48,983 shares they bought the employes agreed to pay the corporation $4,041,097 in monthly installments covering a period of five years, with 5 per cent interest on the deferred payments. In the later part of 1903 the corporation, to quiet the growing apprehension of the employe stockholders, pledged itself to pay $82.50 for each share, provided the men held the stock until 1908.

This guarantee was followed in December last by a new offer to let the employes have preferred stock at $85 per share, and it was accepted by 10,248 employes. These shares now are worth $809,532 mare than was paid for them. In adition the investors have received $27,633 in dividends.

ALL EYES ARE ON JUPITER

Big Planet Is the Sole Attraction For the Astronomers.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Every great telescope in the world was leveled at the planet Jupiter last night, because the belted giant of the solar system was "in opposition."

This does not mean that the brilliant star which now rises from Lake Michigan at sunset has suddenly decided to come out against Chicago's charter amendment; but merely that on the night of Oct. 18 it was in the opposite quarter of the heavens from the sun, with the earth in a straight line between the two. This position with the planet's unusual nearness to the earth gave astronomers the best chance to "Piperize" Jupiter that they have had for twelve years.

With the aid of a class of fifty "coeds" Prof. G. W. Hough (known as "Jupiter" Hough from his knowledge of the planet's ways), spent an enthralling night at the eyepiece of the 18½ inch telescope of Northwestern university at Evanston. There was the delightful possibility of discovering a sixth moon, but no new satellite was brought to light. The astronomical world will hold its breath, however, until all the great observatories have been heard from.

The coeds, after a struggle for "first peep," gave the professor the advantage of their observations in the following scientific comments:

"I'd hate to board there."

"Looks like an automobile lamp."

When he had stood all he could of this Prof. Hough cleared the room for work. To a few interested observers he first pointed out Jupiter hanging in the Eastern heavens, and appearing to the naked eye like an unusually large star of reddish tinge. Next through the small power telescope he showed the planet about the size of a dime with two of its moons on either side of it in a straight line. It suggested the searchlight of a mighty battleship flanked by the glimmering lamps of a torpedo squadron.

Through the 18½ inch refractor the belts and puzzling "red spots" of the planet were distinctly visible. The red spots first appeared in 1878 and according to Prof. Hough, who has made almost nightly observations since that year, Jupiter "hasn't had a well day since." It is supposed that the spots are a semi-nebulous substance caused by the differences in temperature on the planet's surface. Last night they were of a faint pink hue hardly distinguishable from the belts. A black speck appeared about 9:30, but this is not unusual and is attributed to the atmosphere. White globules, which are Jupiter's third affliction, were not visible.

Prof. Hough told his students that Jupiter, which has a diameter eleven times as great as the earth, was not as far developed as this planet. It has a density half as great as water. No life of any kind is supposed to exist upon it.

SURGEONS' FEARS.

Professional View of Secret Remedies and Heavy Charges.

Public interest is at present engaged in the Doyen-Crocker suit. The three chief points relate to the question of the use of a secret remedy, payment in advance for services and the charging of an exorbitant fee. Editorial comments in the lay press seem to be pretty fair toward surgeons in general, but the views are sufficiently varied to call perhaps for a concise statement relating to customs among surgeons in America, says a correspondent of the New York Sun. This is not to be taken as a criticism of Dr. Doyen, for we may not be properly informed upon the features of his case as a whole.

Secret remedies are generally held to be worthless, and to be advertised as remarkable for purposes of revenue only. A physician may believe that he has a certain remedy of great value, and learn later that he was mistaken. Mistakes are corrected quickly at the meetings of the medical societies, and representative members of the profession are eager for the approval or ready for the disapproval of such juries of their peers. This feeling is so general and so deeply seated that the claim of possession of a secret remedy immediately places a physician under suspicion.

Payment in advance for services is a transaction that is not customary between surgeons of high standing and patients of the responsible class. There are several reasons for this. A surgeon may find that he cannot accomplish quite what was expected and desired, and he naturally feels that his services were not so valuable as he had hoped they would be. On the other hand, he may find himself in the presence of an unexpected opportunity to exercise the last degree of skill in the application of his art, and to render invaluable services to his patient. This is all determined after the performance of an operation, and although a surgeon of experience can anticipate as accurately as an engineer, there are nevertheless occasions when he would not wish to be tempted to keep a fee that had been paid to him in advance. There is commonly—in New York, at least—a pretty good understanding between the patient, the surgeon and the physicians who are engaged upon any given case, and financial questions are settled upon the belief that all parties are friendly toward each other.

It is proper and even desirable for a patient to know in advance about what the expense item is likely to be, however, and it is not wholly improper to agree upon a contingent fee, although such an arrangement is not held to be quite professional. There are certain unwritten laws in the profession which cannot be understood by the laity, or even by members of the profession who are not imbued with the finest professional feeling, precisely as with the social code among gentlemen.

The third and last question relates to the so-called exorbitant fee. Among 5000 young men graduating from the medical schools of this country, perhaps 4000 wish to become surgeons. If 100 among the number give themselves the years of extended study and the special training that are held to be desirable, not more than ten of the 100 may find that they can carry the responsibilities and adapt themselves to the requirements of the life of the successful surgeon. Among the ten there will be one who does some one sort of work particularly well; another will do another sort of work with the skill of a genius. A surgeon who does one sort of work particularly well developes the art and the manual technique of that work as he gains in experience. At the time when he feels that he should charge $25 for a certain operation his services may not be worth that much to the patient. When he feels that he should charge $2500 for the same operation his services may be worth just about that amount, and when he feels that he should charge $25,000 for the same operation his services may be worth far more than that, and all the while it is the same surgeon and the same sort of an operation.

Now, who is to pay this $25,000, or more? There are few patients who would be willing and able, on learning the facts in the case. There are others who would be willing, but who would not be able, to pay one-fifth of the amount without serious deprivation. There are some who could pay but a trifle, and who would do that grudgingly. All may have the masterly services, however. It is not a case of the rich paying for the poor, because the rich are not the keepers of the poor. The principle is this: All should pay the same amount for the same kind of work, but if some are not able to pay, the surgeon may have the pleasure, and a real one it is, too, of giving.

It would not be possible to pay an exorbitant fee to some surgeons, and it is the surgeons themselves who would be willing to pay the largest fees. They are the ones who know.

An exorbitant fee is one that is not proportionate to the character of the work that is done, or in accordance with the financial customs of a locality. In some of the large cities, where things are on a grand scale, grand surgical services are rendered, and grand fees are paid; but this is always under the sanction and supervision of the medical profession as a whole, and usually of the family physician in particular, for in this country it is he who guides the interests of the patient. It is not a common thing for a patient to go directly to the surgeon. The surgeon is "prescribed" by the physician, who feels such a responsibility in the matter that he is not much swerved by motives of friendship or of policy in his selection of authorities to help him out in the management of a serious case.

I once knew a physician who rarely operated to charge a large fee for an ordinary operation that was not very well done, and the reason for his large fee was that it seemed to him that the affair was such a large undertaking. The incident was not likely to be repeated, because such things are "talked over" in professional circles, and patients are pretty safe against incompetent work and exorbitant fees at the hands of men who enjoy the right sort of recognition by their colleagues.

Surgeons fight a good deal among themselves, and they are jealous and envious and otherwise quite full of human nature; but the disturbance is all due to the effort to be most useful, and the professional spirit is on a high plane. Their ideals are ideals of intellect, of character and of skill. They are opposed to the idea of the use of secret remedies, the payment of fees in advance and the charging of exorbitant fees.

According to census reports, $360,000,000 were given to educational institutions during the last decade, but only a few millions went toward medical education. When $300,000,000 are given to medical education alone in a decade, the money will be expended upon men who are little interested in the matter of gain for themselves, and whose guiding motives are altruistic. Ask a physician whether he would rather have a large income, due to his own efforts, or whether he would prefer to have all expenses paid so that he could devote himself entirely to the scientific side of his work, and the common answer would surprise the average layman.

REVIVAL MECHANISM.

How Devices Are Used to Convert Sinners.

An astonishing interview with Charles M. Alexander, who is engaged in an international revival campaign conducted by Dr. R. A. Torrey, appeared in the Standard recently—astonishing not only because it discloses the magnitude of the results accomplished and the plans for the future, but also for the insight it gives into the mechanism of a great revival, says Public Opinion. George T. B. Davis, summing up the interview, says: "Such a soul-winning campaign has not been witnessed in this generation, and the magnitude of the movement is not realized outside of a small circle." Mr. Alexander, who is visiting this country during the cessation of the campaign which opens again in England in September, speaking of the work which has now extended around the world, said:

"It was in December, 1901, that Dr. Torrey left San Francisco. He went alone to Japan and China, and it was about three months later, in March, 1902, that I joined him in Melbourne, Australia, and we began the great meetings in Exhibition hall, which was crowded nightly with about 7000 people, and where at the close of the campaign the 7730 converts gathered for a farewell meeting. There were 30,000 converts in Australia, India and Great Britain during the first year, and 33,000 during the last nine months, making in all since we started on the tour 63,000 who came forward and publicly confessed Christ as their Saviour.

"The first thing I try to do is by some method to produce a home-like atmosphere among the people in the audience. One must make them forget that they are in a set service. I try to do nothing undignified or eccentric, but endeavor to induce such a feeling as you have in a company of friends gathered around a fireside at home. One of the best and quickest methods of getting into touch with a new audience is to pick out a little boy or girl from somewhere in the gathering, have the child stand on the seat where he is or call him to the platform, and let him sing the chorus alone. If too bashful, call two children together. This is rather risky, but it always works. The sympathy of the audience is caled out to the boy or girl. People forget the leader, forget themselves, forget the things they were thinking about when they entered the building. In beginning with a new audience I always select one of the simplest airs in the book. I may not even give out the number of the hymn, but just say: "Listen while I sing this chorus; I want you all to sing it with me." In a short time they learn the song, see my movements and what they mean, and follow me more quickly and easily in the remainder of the service.

"As a rule the enthusiasm increases with the size of the audience. However, the way people are seated has much to do with enthusiasm, and especially the appearance of a platform and the way it is filled. If a platform is closely crowded it is far easier to control an audience than when there is an empty, bare platform. Probably the hymn has been more used in immediate decisions than any other song. I have used as a solo has been Professor Towner's 'Would You Believe?' Another, however, entitled 'Tell Mother I'll Be There,' by Charles Fillmore, has, perhaps, touched and saved an equal number of people. As a congregational piece the one known as the 'Glory' song was the most popular in Australia and has been a success everywhere."

DETECTIVE INGENUITY.

Nearly four years ago a number of Nelson relics were stolen from Greenwich hospital, says the London Telegraph. Nothing was heard of them until February last, when one Carter wrote to the British museum from Melbourne an doffered to restore the Nelson watch and seal for a reward of £129. Later on the man himself arrived in London and boldly went to Scotland Yard, where he sought to drive a bargain with the officials. The police refused to deal, but induced Carter to give his address.

Inspector Arrow found, by inquiries at Carter's lodgings, that he had removed one of his articles of luggage—a Gladstone bag—and for this he made untiring search at the left-luggage offices of all the railway stations. He was, it is true, marvelliously helped by luck, for Carter had been rash enough to give his own name. Even when the bag was found there was no sign of the missing loot and nothing in the least suspicious.

But there was a concertina in the bag. In itself that was not incriminating. But concertinas may hold things more substantial than doleful sounds, and the inspector looked it carefully over while he debated whether he should make an autopsy. A scratch near one of the screws caught his eye. The scratch suggested the amateur use of a screwdriver; it cried aloud that some one had been opening the concertina, and as the owner was a man "known to the police," his object in opening it was more likely to be concealment than a desire to look at the works. Inspector Arrow was right. Inside the concertina was the Nelson watch, and the reward-hunting Carter was laid by the heels.

"Ready-made homes" appeal strongly to many people; and if you have one to offer you will find "takers" quickly through a "Furnished House To Let" advertisement.

PROSPERITY

for the next five years. Read extract from recent speech of J. J. Hill:

"Your prosperity and the prosperity of the country between the lakes on the East and the Pacific on the West, has been more marked in the last five years than that of any other part of this country at any time, except during the gold excitement in California. Cast your glance forward for the next five years and see what your opportunities are. Everything has come your way during the past five or ten years. Will it continue? I will stick a pin in the paper as a marker now, and ask you to be awake and alive to your interests, because the time will come when you will need to be."

INDIANA IS STILL CLOSE

It Is Said to Be "Anybody's Fight" In Hoosierdom.

Minneapolis, Oct. 20.—W. W. Jermane, the Washington correspondent of the Journal, says: The president doesn't feel sanguine about Indiana. Of the close states, it is the only one which he is unwilling to say will almost certainly go Republican. This isn't tantamount to a declaration that Indiana will certainly be for Parker, but it does mean that it really seems to be very close. There is no good ground for saying that the Republican outlook in Indiana isn't as good as the Democratic; it is. But so far as can now be seen, it isn't any better, and there's the rub. It's anybody's fight, and neither Republican nor Democrat can at present tell what the outcome will be. Many Republican politicians and some of the newspaper correspondents are saying that Indiana will be for Roosevelt by from 15,000 to 30,000 plurality, but these estimates are pure guesswork. The guess may in the end prove to be a good one, and all Republicans will hope that it may; but it is a guess just the same, and there isn't one scintilla of tangible evidence on which to base it.

Reports from Indiana to Republican national headquarters are to the effect that the situation is hopeful. Roosevelt is holding his own, the campaign interest is increasing and there are no breaks anywhere in the line. This is all well enough, but reports of precisely the same character come to Democratic national headquarters claiming this to be the Democratic outlook. Both reports represent the testimony of partizan experts, and since they are as alike as two peas, it is not strange that the president should look upon the state as being doubtful.

It was believed on both sides that the tour of Bryan would clear up the atmosphere to some extent, and so it has; but the clearing has been rather to the advantage of the Democrats. Bryan has come out dat-footedly and earnestly for Parker, and has filled with all the force and fervor of his wonderful oratory to bring his free-silver friends into line. It is hardly necessary to say that this trip has revived Democratic hopes in hoosierdom.

It is not yet possible to know what the full effect of the Bryan speeches will be. In a general way, however, that effect must be to help the Democratic electoral ticket. How much or how little it will help, will be brought to light when the final polls are taken. Meanwhile, the Democrats are feeling that Bryan has done them a great deal of good, while the Republicans are hardly in position to dispute them.

In a recent review of the Indiana situation, I referred to the fact that the president had a smaller personal following in that state than anywhere else in the middle west, due to the influence of Senator Hanna. Indiana was essentially a Hanna state, and had that gentleman lived and organized a campaign against Roosevelt's nomination, it would have stood loyally at his back. Hanna is dead, Roosevelt is the Republican presidential nominee, and the Indiana Republicans are for him, but still their support might be a lot more boisterous and emphatic than it is without doing the party any harm. Roosevelt's natural weakness in the state, and the Bryan tour may together be too much for the Roosevelt boomers. Still, it would be well to withhold all predictions for the present. Personally, I shall be surprised if Indiana does not go for Roosevelt, but I should today put it in the doubtful column of any table estimating the way the electoral college will divide.

DROWNED IN A TORRENT

Two Miners Meet Death and Another a Physical Wreck.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 20.—The following has just been received here by mail from the Upper Tanana country: Sick from hunger and exhaustion, Sheeley Hundley, a Pennsylvania miner, made a three days' race against death in the Upper Tanana country. Staggering into the telegraph office at Salcha, he won, but was a physical wreck from exposure and hunger.

Hundley, who arrived in a small boat, was the only survivor of a wreck which occured three days previously about thirty miles to the north of Salcha, in which his companions were drowned. Together with Robert Monro and Charles Brown, he was coming along the shore of an island where the current was very strong. Ahead of them they saw a stranded tree, but were unable to keep off it. The tree struck them in the middle of the boat with an awful crash and completely wrecked it. Hundley was thrown onto the tree, but the other two fell into the raging torrent and were drowned immediately. For hours Hundley sat on the tree, numbed with the cold. At last he managed to catch a floating log, and on this attempted to get ashore. The raging torrent took him toward the main land, where he was able to catch at a "sweeper," but became so num that he was forced to leave go and again swim in the torent. Again he caught a "sweeper," this time by an upper branch, and he dragged himself ashore.

With much difficulty he secured what he at first thought was a robe, but when he reached it he found that it was Monro's body which had been washed ashore. He then made a raft and started across country for the telegraph station. He walked forty miles down the river till he arrived at a point opposite it, and tried to gain attention by shouting and grounding the wire, but finally had to build another raft to get across. Here it was that he had the first meal in three days, but his condition was such that at the time of writing his life is feared for.

WILL DO ITS OWN STRIPPING

Jones & Laughlins Company Rejects Bids For Grant Mine.

All bids for stripping the Grant mine, on the Mesaba range, owned by the Jones & Laughlins company, have been rejected by that company, who will do the stripping instead of letting it to a bidder. The contract would have been one of the largest ever offered on the range, meaning 4,000,000 yards of dirt to be removed from over the ore. The Interstate Iron concern controls the mines of the Jones & Laughlins company, and is proceeding with the preliminary work on the stripping.

In stripping, a clamshell that will dip 25 cubic yards will be used and run much on the same principle as similar machines used to unload coal from boats in the local harbor. Two towers will be built, one where the dirt is to be lifted and the other to where it is to be strewn, and between these towers the clamshell will operate. It is said the bids for taking up the earth ranged from 28 to 50 cents per cubic yard, and that the stripping outfit will be used for loading ore after the mine has been uncovered.

PETITION DISMISSED.

Ambrose Briggs Divorce Decree Is Refused.

By order of Judge Cant, the petition of Ambrose Briggs for a decree of divorce from Jane Briggs has been stricken from the calendar in district court. Briggs alleged desertion as the ground for his divorce. They were married in Durham, England, in March, 1877, and the alleged desertion took place in May, 1895.

The case of Malensek & Company against John Murphy, to recover for goods for which no payment is alleged, has been taken under advisement by the court.

Edward Jarvi, who was arrested on the range recently on a complaint of non-support by his wife, was brought before the court on contempt proceedings yesterday but his case was postponed to await certain witnesses. Jarvi was ordered to pay his wife enough money to meet the costs of the case but he neglected to do so.

By order of Judge Dibell the case of Arrabella Sandstrom against the city of Eveleth was dismissed with costs against the city. Mrs. Sandstrom brought two actions, one against the jailor at Eveleth and another against the city. She lost the first case on trial.

The case of Bessie Snow, who is suing her common law husband Thomas Langtry for a division of certain property at Virginia, was dismissed by Judge Cant. The Snow woman claimed to have been living with Langtry for the past eight years. In 1901 she claims to have purchased two lots and a frame house at Virginia, where she and Langtry opened a saloon. Three years later she left Langtry on account of his alleged abuse and, on her return from the West, found he had married and claimed all the property. The case was dismissed on motion of the common law wife.

OLYMPICS OF SUPERIOR

Defeated By North Dakota University Team.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 20.—The university football team defeated the Olympics of Superior in twenty-five minute halves yesterday afternoon, 11 to 6.

The game was unexpectedly slow, the visitors not showing the form that was anticipated, and although ten pounds to the man heavier than the university. Deering was the only man who made any gains of moment. Williams scored the touchdown in the first half for the university by a series of straight gains. Wells missed goal.

In the second division Williams again scored a touchdown through straight ball and Fawcett kicked goal, making the university 11. Through rapid gains of Chapman and Clements Superior scored a touchdown and Deering kicked goal. Time was called with the ball in possession of the university on Superior's half-yard line.

POSTAL RECEIPTS

Largest In the History of the Country.

Washington, Oct. 20.—Postmaster General Wynne has taken up the postal estimates with the president. It was the most prosperous year in the history of the department, the total postal receipts being $143,582,624, a gain of nearly $9,000,000 over the preceding year. The deficit, of course, is due to the increase of the rural free delivery system.

"The postoffice is the best barometer of business conditions," said a prominent department official. "It keeps its fingers on the pulse of trade. The current appropriation by congress for the free delivery service for the current year is $26,814,000 and the estimate of the appropriation needed for the same purpose during the next fiscal year is $26,822,000.

A SOCIAL SCANDAL.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 20.—Some time ago a Soo line contractor living at Erskine returned home from a trip to find that his wife of eight months had been unfaithful to him. He had one man arrested, and this brought to light the fact that three other well-known Erskine men were implicated. Warrants were sworn out and two were let out on bail of $1500 each, and the third was lodged in the county jail. In the meantime the angry husband and the repentant wife made up, and it is likely all the cases will be dropped.

TRIPLETS

Are Born to New York's Poorest Home.

New York, Oct. 20.—Three strong and healthy children, only a few hours old, slept peacefully on a squalid bed today. By their side lay their mother, incessantly moaning: "Oh, what shall we do now? Has the Lord no mercy?"

The home into which the three unwelcome little strangers came probably is more poverty-stricken than any other in the whole city. The father of the triplets eighteen months ago was stricken with Bright's disease. Up to a few months ago the mother went out washing and earned $2.50 a week. In two wretched rooms in a rear tenement they made their home with their three young children, and this trifling sum kept them alive. But with the stork hovering over the home—one stork, it was imagined, and not a flock of them—the woman could not longer work. Today they were penniless and there was not a scrap of food in the place.

VALUABLE POODLE LOST.

New York, Oct. 20.—August Belmont has reported to the police the mysterious disappearance of Mignon, the celebrated French poodle for which Mr. Belmont paid $1000 in Paris eight years ago. One of the Belmont maids, whose especial duty it is to take care of Mignon, was walking near the big brownstone Belmont mansion, looking at the procession of automobiles, when Mignon vanished.

LOST A FOOT.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 20.—An accident occurred yesterday afternoon which caused the loss of one of Dan Dalhgren's feet, and for which carelessness on his part was alone responsible. He was sitting on a pile of boards at the edge of the curbing, with his feet resting on the unrolled macadam. The 20-ton roller came slowly up the street and Dahlgren was warned by the engineer, but remained until it was within a close distance, then making an effort to move. His trouser caught on a nail and the large side wheel of the roller crushed his foot, making amputation necessary.

BANQUETTED BY KING EDWARD

Officers of American Warships Entertained at Buckingham Palace.

London, Oct. 20.—King Edward today entertained at luncheon at Buckingham palace the officers of the American warships now at Gravesend, the guests including Rear Admiral Jewell, commanding the European squadron of the North Atlantic fleet; Capt. Colby, of the cruiser Olympia; Lieutenants William C. Watts and Charles T. Jewell, aides on the staff of Admiral Jewell; Ambassador Choate, Secretary White and Capt. Charles H. Stockton, the naval attache of the American embassy. The officers were all in full uniform. Admiral Lord Walter Kerr, first sea lord of the admiralty; Capt. Prince Louis, of Battenburg, director of naval intelligence, and Sir Thomas Lipton were included in the luncheon party, which was quite of a private and informal character.

WOULD KILL DEGENERATES.

Proposition Discussed at National Prison Congress.

Quincy, Ill., Oct. 20.—At yesterday's session of the National Prison congress an animated discussion started when Dr. Henry Patch, of Quincy, advocated the inflicting of death on degenerates as a means of preventing the spread of degeneracy.

Dr. Hitch advocated homicide or the right to let a diseased person take his own life when he is found to be incurable. He also would have the state dispose of the permanently insane and incurables by putting such persons to an easy death.

Dr. J. Bransom, of New York, declared reforms were started to save human life, not to destroy it. If the system advocated by Dr. Hatch was carried out the question would be to decide who would be the first victim. "I do not believe," he said, "we had better take it into our hands the functions of the Almighty."

SIGN CELIBATE PACT.

New York, Oct. 20.—Twelve young men and twelve young women of Bay Ridge have entered into a celibate pact. A club was formed a day or two ago at the Borough Park clubhouse. They agreed not to marry or be given in marriage, and all love is barred. The leading spirit in the new movement is James O'Connell, a school teacher. It is the leading principle of the celibates that married life is a check to independence and ambition, and that it is deadly to strong and enduring friendships. All members of the club are members of old Bay Ridge families.

OLD ACTOR DIES IN CELL.

New York, Oct. 20.—Maurice C. Pike, 67, once Edwin Booth's leading support, died last Friday at Hart's Island, where he was serving a sentence of six months for vagrancy. His death was not publicly known until yesterday. Less than a year ago Pike was a prosperous actor, playing Kugo, the hunchback spy, in "Darling of the Gods." When he left the company he began a debauch which dragged him to the gutter. He refused the aid of old friends.

SUICIDE'S BODY BURNS.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Oct. 20.—Miss Carrie Wohlford, living near Popejoy, Franklin county, committed suicide by shooting herself with a rifle. The weapon set fire to a strawstack, where she had gone to kill herself, and her body was consumed except a few bones. Motive for the deed is not known. She was a highly respected young woman and kept house for her two brothers.

GRAIN IS NEEDED

By Europe and Corn Will Supply Deficiency In Wheat.

Business Men Sure That Future Will Bring More Prosperity.

New York, Oct. 20.—Receipts by the New York bankers last week of Australian gold to the amount of $3,400,000 are but the beginning of gold shipments to the United States. A financier of international reputation, one whose sources of information are widespread and of the most accurate character, asserts that the season's gold receipts from Australia to the United States will surpass all records. In the nine months ending with March, 1898, Australia sent us $15,500,000. In the nine months ending with March, 1899, $21,500,000. This gentleman asserts, with the utmost confidence, that the high record of 1899 will be far exceeded when March of 1905 is reached.

All the nations of Europe will be purchasers of our products this present year. It is estimated that Europa will produce about 200,000,000 bushels of wheat less than it did in 1903, and this great deficiency will have to be made up from other countries, if not in wheat, then in other grains, which will take its place.

The past week has confirmed the statements made in my last letter as to the errors made three or four weeks ago on the size of the wheat crop in the United States, and it is known today that the wheat crop of 1904 is larger than the average crop raised for the last fourteen years in the United States. The Argentine Republic's crop is also very good, and that republic can ship to Europe quite a large amount of wheat to make up the shortage on that continent.

Our corn will go out largely to make up the deficiency in wheat. The cotton is going out of the country in amounts never exceeded in prior shipments, and the results of all these exports will be balances in favor of the United States at all financial centers, and remittances that will have to be made by the foreign purchasers. These purchases are already beginning to affect the money market of Europe. Paris, Berlin, London, Frankfort and Amsterdam are all commencing to realize that they must prepare for a drain upon their funds to pay for the purchases made in the United States by European nations. Of course, all of these things provide for an addition to the money supply of the United States.

It is about to be largely increased, not only by the production of gold at home, but by these large sums that are sure to come to us from abroad. Our increase in paper currency, furnished through the circulation by the national banks, is steadily increasing, and the widespread activity through all parts of the country, the greater volume of railroad traffic, the opening up of additional mills in the iron and steel trade, the increase in volume of business of all classes and kinds—slow during the spring and summer, but marked, pronounced and well-recognized for the last four weeks—will give use to many millions of the new money, and there may not be much diminution in the rates of interest as at present established.

Bankers are all exceedingly confident now as to the future. Business men are serene and generally happy with the good trade and fair profits, and the rates of money are not at all excessive, but conducive to a still greater growth and development of the country's commerce.

Advices from Minnesota and the Dakotas, where the principal deficiencies in the wheat crop of thsi country occurred, show that the prosperity of that section is not at all affected. Other crops have been large and have made up to the people of those states for the deficiency in the volume of the wheat, while the prices obtained for the wheat they did raise have produced them as much money as they usually have received for a bumper crop.

The Northwest farmers have for four or five years accumulated capital. They have furnished their homes comfortably and well. They are interested in mines, timber industries and securities. The land they own has advanced rapidly in value for the past five years and poor men of 1896 are rich men in 1904, even if they possess but the same acreage that they did in the former year. Many of the farmers in Minnesota and the Dakotas are independently rich.

These conditions being established, Eastern and Western manufacturing and business men generally are sanguine of a good fall and winter trade in the only section of the country where there was a decrease in the volume of the crops. An immense influx of new settlers and the cultivation of great areas of new land have opened up new trade in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and have created traffic for the railroads and increased the business of the manufacturer, the jobber and the retailer.

I note in an article published this week that thirty-seven new towns have been established in the state of North Dakota alone in the last eighteen months—towns created by the inflow of people to the state and the extension of railroad lines—and each one of these towns becomes a distributing point for the manufacturers of the Eastern and Middle states.

The stock and bond situation in this city for the past two weeks has been very active, and pessimists are silent, even if pessimists exist. There is no trace of it now to be found in New York, and the mourners of 1903 and the latter part of 1902 are confined solely to those who had to part with their holdings of stocks and securities during the period of low prices. Those who owned and held their securities feel today as rich as they did in the early part of 1902. Thousands of persons who three months ago were counting their holdings of United States Steel common at 10 and 11 today are making their calculations at 20 and hoping for a better price. And so with a hundred others—well known stocks. They are mounting, mounting, mounting stadily in price, until today some of them are breaking the records made in former years. Without designating any stocks, without having in mind any lines of securities, it is only reasonable and right to say that conditions justify far higher prices for good securities than were made even in the boom days of 1901 and 1902. This conclusion is reached from a firm belief that the volume of money in the world is bound to constantly increase for many years to come, and, therefore, the purchasing power of money will lessen, and higher prices for articles will obtain.

MAIL FOR NORWAY

New Parcels Post Makes Great Reduction In Rates.

Lower In Some Instances Than Between Points In America.

A change in the mail service between this country and Norway, which will be of interest and importance to thousands of people at the head of the lakes, has just gone into effect.

A parcels post convention was recently concluded between the United States and Norway and as a result a parcels post, greatly reduced the postage on nearly all mail matter except letters, has been established between the two countries. The parcels post also allows of several articles being sent which before were not allowed to go through the mails to the distant land. With Christmas time approaching this will be most agreeable to Norwegians in America who desire to send presents to their relatives and friends in Norway.

All packages under four pounds six ounces in weight may be sent at the rate of twelve cents a pound, where before the rate was ten cents an ounce, and no parcel weighing more than five and one-half ounces was taken. This rate was almost prohibitory, unless articles sent were quite valuable. And in any event such mail packages had to be opened in transit to see that no contraband articles were being smuggled.

Under the parcels post system the contents of each package is made known to the postoffice officials where the matter is mailed, and a tag, giving necessary particulars, is attached to the package, which must be sent unsealed. This is really the only material difference between the parcels post and regular mail, except in rates. Jewelry, celluloid articles, etc., may be sent by the parcels post, together with many classes of merchandise, where they would not pass through the regular mails.

A person may now send a Christmas present to Norway as cheaply, more cheaply in many instances, than he can to some other point in the United States. If a pound box of candy were mailed in the Duluth postoffice, for example, and addressed to the Spalding hotel, the rate on it would be one cent an ounce, or sixteen cents in all. The same box of sweets could be mailed in Duluth and delivered at any point in Norway for twelve cents, four cents cheaper than for city delivery. At present the only countries connected with the United States by the parcels post are Norway and Germany.

Parcels sent by the post must not exceed $50 in value, weigh more than four pounds six ounces, nor measure more than three feet, six inches in length and six feet in length and girth combined. Postage must be paid in full when the parcel is mailed, at the rate of twelve cents a pound.

There is no parcels post between points in the United States.

COLONIZING NON-RESIDENTS

Serious Charge Against Prominent New York Republican Politicians.

New York, Oct. 20.—Richard Van Cott, son of the postmaster of New York and Republican candidate for the assembly in the Fifth district, and Bankson McAvoy, cashier in the general postoffice, and a Republican worker in the Fifth district, were arraigned yesterday on a charge of colonizing non-resident citizens, with the purpose of their registering and voting at the coming election.

Benjamin D. Levy, who is said to have made a confession relative to the case, was a witness in the proceedings. He was an employe in the New York postoffice for several years and testified that he met Van Cott and McAvoy on several occasions, on one of which the latter asked him to get "seven or eight boys."

Later, at McAvoy's request, he testified he got several men from the Mills house. Levy picked out three men in the county room as having been engaged by him at the hotel. These men, it was said yesterday, have made affidavits corroborating Levy's statement.

He then said he went with McAvoy to several houses, and said that McAvoy rented rooms for several of the men. Soon afterwards he met McAvoy and Van Cott in a public square and complained to Van Cott that McAvoy had not treated him right because he spoke of wanting 100 men, and he had provided rooms for only seven.

Van Cott, he declared, replied that he had a list of fifteen rooms, and he wanted them filled. Van Cott instructed him to see him again, and at their next meeting, Levy said, he told Van Cott he had 100 men in a nearby park.

Slips bearing the addresses of houses where the men are alleged to have been lodged were identified by Levy as papers given to him by Van Cott, and were put in evidence. Soon after this Van Cott and McAvoy told him they washed their hands of him. Levy said the bargain made between him and McAvoy about procuring men was: "One dollar for registration, six weeks board and a couple of dollars for the vote on election day."

The examination was adjourned until next Monday, with Levy still on the stand.

GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE SWEETHEART.

McKeesport, Pa., Oct. 20.—James L. Curley, aged 21, a draughtsman at the East Pittsburg works of the Westinghouse Electric company, gave up his life to save his sweetheart.

Curley and a companion, named Meyers, were escorting Misses Walters and Kesler to their homes, and while crossing the Baltimore & Ohio tracks, at Eleventh street, a switch engine suddenly bore down upon them. Curley gave the alarm in time for Meyers and Miss Kesler to reach safety, but he and Miss Walters were a step or two behind the first couple, and Curley seized Miss Walters and threw her bodily clear of the track. Before he could recover his balance the locomotive cut him to pieces.

SAILORS RESCUED.

North Sidney, C. B., Oct. 20.—After subsisting on scanty rations for several weeks, during which they suffered intensely from the cold, eleven survivors of the stranded steamer Viking have been picked up from the otherwise uninhabited islands off the coast of Labrador by the tug Douglas P. Thomas, which had been dispatched to their relief. They were taken to the Hudson Bay company's post at Ragolet. When the men were rescued their rations had dwindled to an insignificant amount of salt pork, flour and water. The Viking is a total loss.

COUNTY SEAT FIGHT.

People of Badger, Roseau County, Want Court House.

St. Paul, Oct. 20.—The supreme court heard arguments in what probably is destined to be another bitter county seat removal contest.

Roseau, Roseau county, is fighting to retain the county capital against the encroachments of Badger, a flourishing village in the county.

A petition signed by the necessary percentage of the freeholders of the county, was presented to the county commissioners of Roseau county some months ago, asking a popular vote on the proposition to remove the county seat from Roseau to Badger. The county commissioners refused, however, enjoined by the Roseau partisans from granting the relief asked for, the objection being on technical grounds—that there was a defect in the proceedings and the commissioners had no jurisdiction of the matter.

The injunction sought by the Roseau people was dissolved by Judge Andrew Crindeland, of the district court and from this decision the Roseau people have appealed to the supreme court on questions of law.

MURDERED MAN

Found at Mentor, Minn., Was Not Desorviers.

Woonsocket, R. I., Oct. 20.—A telegram received by the police from Chief of Police Tagley, of Mentor, Minn., indicates that a man in whose pocket was found a card bearing the name of Albert Desorviers, of No. 3 Cumberland street, Woonsocket, had been murdered at Mentor. Albert Desorviers was found alive and well, but he said the dead man was either Thomas Fontaine or Joseph Gilleite, whom he had sent West early last summer on business.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 20.—A dispatch from Mentor conveys the news that an unknown man was found on the railroad track near there with bullet holes in his head. Two men were seen walking on the tracks. One carried a gun. It is thought that he shot his companion, but whether intentionally or by accident is not known, as he has disappeared. The police are looking for him. The dead man's identity was not disclosed in the message.

Loomis, Mich., Oct. 20.—A 16-year-old newsboy has been arrested in connection with the death of Arthur Burwash, aged 8. The dead boy lay in the woods ten hours with his left leg almost shot off below the hip. One of his two companions had shot him accidentally, it is alleged, and then became terrified, had carried the wounded boy to a swamp and after covering him with leaves, abandoned him to his fate. Clyde Harvey, aged 12, alleges that he was threatened with death if he reported the accident.

Straight Talk.

In EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE for November MR. THOS. W. LAWSON tells how George Westinghouse, a world giant, fought the "System" to a standstill, and how President Roosevelt kicked "Standard Oil" out of the White House. The description of his meeting with Henry H. Rogers deserves a place in literature.

We wish you to compare the November EVERYBODY'S with any magazine published. Read HALL CAINE'S greatest Story "THE PRODIGAL SON." Read in "NEW FIGHTING MACHINES" how Americans are supreme in devilish ingenuity. Read EUGENE WOOD'S joyous satire, full of sense on "IS BATHING GOOD FOR US?" Look at the beautiful sketches of Washington by VERNON HOWE BAILEY.

Read the bright short story, "SOUVENIR NIGHT," of a bachelor destroying the souvenirs of his many courtships before his wedding day. Look at the stage beauties and the portraits of the people who are doing interesting things. Read "Straight Talk," edited by our readers. Read our modest department "With Everybody's Publishers." Read the short stories by HARTLEY DAVIS and "CHE BUONO."

Read—well, read the whole magazine and you will find it the best ten cent general magazine in the world, with MR. LAWSON'S article thrown in for good measure.

The Publishers of EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE take this method of expressing their sincere gratitude to the public for the wonderful appreciation with which their efforts have been rewarded.

NEW YORK FIGHT

Both Parties Making a Strong Pull For Their Tickets.

Advantage With Democrats and Betting on President Even.

Indianapolis, Oct. 20.—James P. Hornaday, staff correspondent of the News (Ind.) sends the following from New York: The burning question in this state is will Roosevelt and Fairbanks be able to pull Frank W. Higgins, the Republican nominee for governor, through, or will they stall with the load and let Parker and Davis pass them on the homestretch? On the state ticket the betting odds are still ten to eight in favor of the Democrats. Even money is now being put up that the state will give the Republican electoral ticket a plurality. The old timers in politics are not yet ready to predict what the state will do. They say it will be foolish to make predictions until the developments of the last week of the campaign are known.

It is true that the Republicans are a good deal more hopeful than they were the week following the two state conventions. If the election had been held immediately after the convention, D. Cady Herrick, the Democratic nominee for governor, would have had a walkaway.

Many of the Republican voters are still unreconciled to the Odell ticket, but a good deal of the dissatisfaction has disappeared, and the managers of the Higgins campaign are counting on more disappearing within the next three weeks.

A turn of the tide in favor of the Republican national ticket is noted by all the political observers, and it is confidently believed that this increasing sentiment in favor of Roosevelt and Fairbanks will help the state ticket.

The two parties are well matched so far as machinery for getting out the vote is concerned. Here in New York city Tammany has, generally, had the advantage in campaign organization, but from all accounts State Chairman Odell has constructed an organization that is a good match for the Tammany machine. He has ousted all the old-time district workers who, according to common report, were willing to dicker with Tammany, and has put in men in whom he has confidence. Some of his lieutenants are out-of-town men, and their presence has not been pleasing to the resident politicians wh oaspire to leadership. It is said at Republican headquarters at the Fifth avenue Hotel, that the state committee is determined that there shall be no dealings between Tammany and the Republican district leaders this year.

Senator Platt, as far as the public can judge, is giving Odell and the state committee loyal support, but as he has been placed in a position similar to that occupied by William J. Bryan, a good many men are willing to wager that his heart is not in the state fight. If Odell should lose the state Platt would not get back his old place as leader, but it is barely possible that deep down he would feel "mighty good" over the fall of the goxy czar-chairman. The "easy boss" never comes around state Republican headquarters, and Odell does not do him the honor to consult him. At his office in lower Broadway, Platt whiles away his time dictating letters to his political friends throughout the state asking them to support the Republican ticket, national and state.

So far estimates on the result in this state are not available at either headquarters. The fact is that neither side is cocksure of anything at this stage of the game. Undoubtedly a good deal more confidence is displayed by the Democrats than by the Republicans, but the disposition on each side is to say: "The campaign in New York is to be lost or won within the remaining three weeks." The Republicans are playing up the national end of the campaign strong, while the Democrats are devoting all their literature and their speech-making to state affairs.

Business in New York city, which for a long time gave evidence of lukewarmness toward the Republican national ticket, is finally letting it be known that it is interested in the success of Roosevelt and Fairbanks. Within the last few days large flags attached to Roosevelt and Fairbanks banners have appeared throughout the downtown business district.

Fifty of the flag banners have been stretched across Broadway, between Twenty-third street and the Battery. They were put up by business men without any suggestion from the national or state committee.

The same sort of demonstration was made in 1896 and 1900, and the national committee feels that the repetition of it this year, voluntarily indicates very clearly that the business men of the metropolis have not lost interest in the policies of the Republican party.

TICKETS TO WEDDING

Are Being Sold By an Indiana Author.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 20.—James Sutton, of this city, who has been selling fish at the county fairs of Southern Indiana for almost thirty years, and who is known as "the boneless fish king of America," will be married in this city on the night of Oct. 30 to a Miss Newman.

It will be Sutton's fifth wedding. He has been divorced four times, and all his divorced wives are alive.

Sutton is one of the characters of Southern Indiana, and a few years ago wrote a bok entitled, "The Ups and Downs of a Young Married Man."

Sutton has engaged Evans hall for the night of his wedding, and will sell 2000 tickets for the wedding. He will charge 25, 35 and 50 cents for admission tickets, and will reserve 100 tickets for the newspaper men of Evansville and points within fifty miles of this city. Each person buying a ticket will receive a copy of Sutton's book.

Sutton is about 50 years old, and is well known in Southern Indiana and Southern Illinois. He believes his wedding will be a financial success.

HE TOOK POISON

Because a Baby Would Not Recognize Him.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 20.—"Give baby's picture to him and kiss him for me, and sometimes think a kind thought of your old friend."

Closing his farewell letter with these words Patrick Sutton took his life and was found dead in his bed.

He died because he thought he had lost the confidence and affection of a little child, the one-year-old son of G. L. Straub and wife, proprietors of the Palmer House, of 1626 Larimore street.

Recently Mr. and Mrs. Straub took the child to her parents' home in the country for a holiday, and when the boy came back he seemed to have forgotten Sutton. He refused to sit on his lap and cried for "Mamma." This broke the old man's heart and he went to his room and took poison.

RICHEST ASSEMBLY

Of Babies In the United States.

New York, Oct. 19.—The richest assembly of babies in the United States, perhaps in the world, is at present collected within one modest apartment house in New York—the Warrington, at 161 Madison avenue. Ten scions of families of great wealth, headed by little John Nicholas Brown, the richest baby in the world, and by the coming head of the house of Vanderbilt, the small son of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, now are "boarders" at this "incubator of millionaires."

At 5 o'clock, when this small party of curly heads assembles each day for dinner in the little flower-decked dining room, games and toys, and not stocks or frocks, are the weighty matters of discussion. Baby Vanderbilt, sitting at a center table with his bread and milk before him, looks enviously at youthful Brown, who is allowed to sit at a corner table without the mortification of a maid in attendance, and who is old enough to have sugar cakes with his cup of chocolate. But John Nicholas Brown, all unconscious of his $10,000,000, merely gazes back at Baby Vanderbilt with big, round eyes of sympathy and shows his milk teeth in a friendly smile.

Meanwhile at other tables are seated the two sons of Edward Ridgley, 8 and 10 years of age; the 4-year-old daughter of Louis S. Palouse; the two small daughters of Alvin Lewis, aged 10 and 12; the 12-year-old daughter of A. B. Cornell, and the children of other families of equal importance.

The Warrington has as its guests eleven multi-millionaries, with homes in Tuxedo, mansions in Fifth avenue and villas in Newport, who, tired of the loneliness of the big houses and weary of the servant question, have at last solved the problem of living, without trouble or responsibility, and have followed the rush for the apartment hotel.

TO BREAK INTO SOCIETY

With Million Dollars Made In Dance Halls.

New York, Oct. 20.—Edward B. Corey, for a long time the proprietor of the Haymarket, one of the most notorious dance halls in New York, has just bought the fine steam yacht Reveille from Commodore Frederick Bonne of the New York Yacht club, and proposes to spend the coming winter cruising in Florida waters. His headquarters will be at Lake North, but he proposes to be on the go a great part of the time.

Corey's career is a remarkable one. Starting with nothing, he amassed a fortune running dance houses which catered to the worst element in the community. He saved his money, and by judicious investment in New York real estate is now credited with having considerably more than $1,000,000, most of which he had gained within the last ten years. Some time ago the police authorities made it so hot for him that he concluded that he would retire. He is now credited by his friends with having the determination to break into high society, the purchase of the Reveille being the first step in this direction.

Corey's wife is said to be a most estimable woman, and for a number of years ran a high-class dressmaking establishment.

SPEAKS FOR THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

Senator Clapp Addresses Large Audience At the Armory.

Asserts That Dunn Was Fairly and Honorably Nominated.

A large and enthusiastic crowd, numbering about as many as attended the Johnson-Winston meeting, braved the elements last evening to hear United States Senator Moses E. Clapp deliver his "political indictment of the Democratic party," as the local Republicans are pleased to term it.

The downpour of rain commenced before the meeting and continued uninterruptedly all the time Senator Clapp was speaking and the noise of the rain beating on the roof, was such that he was compelled to exert himself at times so that he might be heard.

Republican enthusiasm seemed not to be dampened by the wet weather and not only was Senator Clapp given cordial reception, but every mention of Robert C. Dunn, Republican candidate for governor of Minnesota, and of Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, met with prolonged applause and cheers.

After opening music by the band and a male quartet, Oscar Mitchell, acting as chairman of the evening, introduced Senator Clapp.

Mr. Mitchell said that under the circumstances Minnesota's junior senator could hardly be expected to say good things of himself so he, Mr. Mitchell, would mention a few things which the people of Minnesota probably knew, or at least should know. He then went on with generous praise for the service rendered the Republican party in the state of Minnesota by Senator Moses E. Clapp, referring especially to his diplomacy in safely piloting the state convention, smoothing over all the troubles, reconciling dissenting factions and bringing the Republican party out of the turmoil with a harmonious feeling all over the state.

"The crisis brought forth the man," declared Mr. Mitchell. "Senator Clapp had the courage of his convictions. He said his duty demanded his services as chairman of the convention. He brought order out of confusion and at the close of the convention every delegate there was his enthusiastic supporter. No man has done greater service for his party."

Prolonged applause broke out as Senator Clapp arose to speak. In his opening remarks he spoke feelingly of his appreciation of the cordial reception given him and characterized it as an indication of the patriotism that has so gloriously existed in the past and will exist in the future.

"It is a peculiar condition that confronts those who are to discuss the issues of the campaign," said Senator Clapp. "From one end of this fair land to the other the condition is one of peace and prosperity, and coupled with it is a deep seated conviction, so far as political policies are concerned, that there will be no change. The people are given a feeling of satisfaction and security and it seems rather farfetched to ask the American people to listen to campaign speeches. We have learned, however, that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty and so it becomes necessary for us to keep up the work.

"Before discussing national issues I wish to speak to you on some of the state issues."

Senator Clapp then spoke of his pleasure in speaking in the home city of Judge Lewis, candidate for the supreme bench, referred to his long acquaintance with the judge and predicted him a splendid vote at the coming election.

"For some reason," continued Senator Clapp, "while everyone is predicting that this state will give 75,000 to 100,000 to Theodore Roosevelt, strange as it may seem, the Democrats appear to see a ray of sunshine in what they term the dissension in the ranks of the Republican party.

"There is one phase of the state convention which I am going to speak of to show you there was no partiality shown. Your state central committee asked me, last February, to preside at the state convention. It has always been my theory that United States senators, members of congress and officials from Washington would do well to attend to their own affairs and let the people of Minnesota attend to their domestic affairs, but this year there was an additional reason why there should be a presiding officer who would be impartial. We had but to look at the unhappy condition in Wisconsin to realize that no one man could stand impartial above the warring factions, and it seemed the best policy to keep aloof from the dissensions. However, I was absolutely impartial as between the candidates and had no more interest in the nomination of one than of the other.

"Twenty-five years ago a man entered the village of Princeton. He had to fight life's battles alone and single handed. He started a newspaper. It finally occurred to the people with whom he was associated year after year, to send him to the state legislature. He went and the first thing he did was to get the laws changed so as to insure as far as possible a fair disposition of the school lands of the state. So impressed were the people with his efforts that they elected him auditor of this state. A few years ago the state was loaning its school fund by buying bonds of other states. It occurred to Robert C. Dunn that instead of taking chances on other state bonds it would be a safer and a wiser policy to loan that money to our own people. That policy was carried out. Not only this, but living as he did in the northern part of the state, where there was one continual problem of development, he recognized the importance of that process. He conceived the idea of a state board of control, that as a matter of lessened expense it would be a wise thing to have the charitable institutions under the control of one board. He found that some of the land grants were in excess of the original amount granted. For eight long years he studied the needs of the state and time and again the Republican party in the state of Minnesota has pointed out to the administration of the state auditor's office under Mr. Dunn as a reason why Republican rule should continue in the affairs of this state. (Cheers).

"He became a candidate for governor, but no sooner was he nominated than a relentless, bitter, and, in many ways, an unfair warfare was commenced upon him."

Senator Clapp asserted that an erroneous impression has gone out over the state relative to the strength of the candidates for governor in the state convention. He called attention to the figures given in the political history, issued shortly after the convention, in which figures were given purporting to show the numerical strength of the candidates. Senator Clapp said he called Mr. Hall's attention to the figures, and was in turn referred to the tabulated vote given by one of the St. Paul papers at the time of the convention. This statement, he claimed, turned out to be incorrect in part, owing to a transposition of figures, and Mr. Hall admitted the mistake, and has since corrected it. The delegates to the convention, Senator Clapp claimed, know how the vote stood, and that Mr. Dunn was fairly elected to head the state ticket, but many people who did not understand the conditions have formed the erroneous impression that he secured his victory unfairly.

"Even if Hennepin county delegation had not voted," declared Senator Clapp, "R. C. Dunn would still have had a majority. His right to that vote cannot be impeached." (Cheers.)

"But no sooner was he nominated than these charges were made. In this case it seems to me that the best evidence is the fact that he left the office of auditor with the books and records open to the examination of any citizen, and came out manfully to challenge his right to be governor of the state of Minnesota on his record. If he had been guilty of any of these charges he would not have dared to face the people of Minnesota.

"To show as false the charges that have been made against him, all that Mr. Dunn has to do was to turn to the records of his office. The last charge, made recently, was that he was negligent of his duty in permitting a decree of the court whereby the Duluth & Iron Range Railway company was given some thousands of acres which should not have been included in their grant. The state auditor could hardly be expected to fill the office of an attorney. As soon as he knew of it Mr. Dunn took immediate steps to prevent it, so that the state did not lose an acre. All he has to do to refute the charges brought against him is to refer to his records.

"We all know that he is not a Chesterfield, a Cicero or a Demosthenes, but we do know that a man who may be all these can come before the people with smooth and pleasant address, but who is not what the people think he is.

"No man can live twenty-five years in one little town but that the people will find him out. If you want to know what Robert C. Dunn is go to Princeton, where very man, woman and child is his friend and admirer." (Cheers.)

"I have confidence in the fairness of the American people. They will not permit for any length of time an act of injustice or unfairness. As the people of the state of Minnesota begin to realize how unfair has been the attack on Mr. Dunn, there will be a reactionary movement, which will result in his election.

"His standing on the nomination for governor is not to be questioned; his standing on his record has been justified and I believe that the Republicans of this state will stand firm in support of Mr. Dunn. I believe that thousands of Democrats will cast their votes for R. C. Dunn for governor." (Applause).

Leaving the state issues Senator Clapp dwelt eloquently and at length on the general issues of the coming election. He touched first on the right of suffrage, how individuals can leave their imprint on the policy of the government through only one way—the agencies of political parties.

"Which of these great parties shall we attach ourselves to?" asked Senator Clapp. "It is not so much a question as to what issues parties stand on now, but what there is in their make-up which affords a guarantee that one or the other will solve not the problems we have already solved, but those of the future, which have not been solved. When McKinley was elected nobody dreamed of the Spanish-American war. When Roosevelt took the executive chair nobody had predicted the great strikes.

"As to the existing problems, the policy of the great parties has been mapped out in their platforms. If you take the trouble to read the national Republican plaform you read of fifty years of American achievement in building up American policies. On the other hand, if you take the Democratic platform you will not find there one policy that has been a part of our great commercial and industrial life. You can strike out the word American in history referring to some great policy and write the word Republican and not exaggerate things." (Applause).

Senator Clapp claimed that fifty years of growth and development under Republican rule has appealed to the American people. He arraigned severely Democratic leadership and asserted its utter inefficiency to meet the growing problems. He said that the policy of Democratic leadership for the past fifty years has been to get in front of moving objects and canonize dead Republicans. In a sarcastic way Senator Clapp said that Democratic leadership had got in front of and been run over in turn by the Panama canal question, American policy of neutrality in the Japan-Russia war, the American policy as to a larger navy, the pension order of President Roosevelt and the protective tariff.

Senator Clapp said he would not talk protective tariff for the reason that the American people believe in protecting their homes and industries, that it is a fixed policy with them, but he wished to remind them of one thing, and that was "the Dingley bill and prosperity came over the pike together."

"No sooner did this prosperity come," said the senator, "than Democratic leadership claimed the wonderful revival was due to the depression during Cleveland's term, and that depression was due to the revival in Harrison's term.

"Democratic leadership took up the question of tariff revision, but back of it was the old, undying hatred of protection. The American people will never again put into power a party that is antagonistic to the protective policy."

Senator Clapp criticised Judge Parker's attitude on tariff revision, and declared that it was all a pretense with the Democratic candidate for president, that he does not know much about the tariff anyway. Judge Parker's policy, he said, was like going to the doctor for a prescription, then buying the medicine and keeping it in one's pocket.

Senator Clapp also touched at some length on the trust problem. He said Democratic leadership suggested it, but could never solve it, that when the Republican party came into power it took up the trust problem as soon as it could, and at the last congress passed three laws to regulate and control the trusts. Although not much has yet been done in that direction, Senator Clapp claimed that so far as the Republican party has gone it has gone "eternally right."

He closed his speech with a few remarks on the free silver issue, and paid a tribute to the loyalty and hard fight put up by William J. Bryan for an issue that finally went down to defeat. Senator Clapp claimed among other things that in the past eight years of the gold standard the banks have increased in numbers, currency has increased and has not depreciated, and that never before in the history of finance has there been so memorable and splendid an achievement. He roasted Judge Parker's stand on the gold question, remarking that while he may have sent the famous telegram which compelled Democracy to take the "gold cure," at the St. Louis convention, he was found in 1896 and 1900 fighting for free silver, that his position was analogous to that of the patient who, after becoming insane, makes application to be put in charge of the asylum.

"I think free silver is dead," said Senator Clapp, "and you will find more dead things piled up in the backyard of the Democratic party than anywhere else in the world. The issues of tomorrow and the next day will be living issues, and what we want at the head of our government is the man who will send his telegram the day before, if necessary, not the day after." (Laughter and cheers.)

"Democratic leadership is on the run, and every man knows that on Nov. 8 the most splendid verdict of the American people will be rendered for the man who typifies their ideals—Roosevelt. He reflects in his personality the high ideals of the American people, the matchless Theodore Roosevelt." (Prolonged applause and cheers.)

The meeting closed with a selection by the quartet.

WOULD SAVE HIS SON.

Beuthein Assigns His Property In Two Counties.

Davenport, Iowa, Oct. 20.—The peculations of Arnold Beuthein, cashier of the New Liberty Savings bank, which he wrecked, have forced his aged father to make an assignment.

The father assigns all real estate owned by him in Cottonwood and Lac qui Parle counties, Minnesota, except the homestead and property exempt by law. All personal property is also scheduled by the Minnesota father, who hopes to save his son. Over 600 acres of land are listed. Liabilities on notes listed amount to about $20,000.

Arnold Beuthein has forfeited a bond of $5000 in a Davenport court, which his aged mother will have to pay. She qualified as his surety, having more than $5000 in her own right. It is generally understood here that the son has ruined both his father and mother financially.

The elder Beuthein is now under arrest at New Liberty, charged with embezzling $14,000 of the bank's funds.

Wheat Price Loses Some After Rather Erratic Fluctuations.

Demand No Better But Country Offerings Are Lessening.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 20.—Wheat was erratic today, opening lower, having a good rally and passing yesterday's closing prices by 1c and then losing all of the gain and closing lower. December in Duluth lost ¾c, in Minneapolis ¾-⅞c, in Chicago ¾c, and in New York, ⅝-¾c. Duluth shippers find no improvement in the demand from the East and exporters can speak no better of the foreign inquiry. At the same time they find country offerings growing less.

The Liverpool market closed ½d lower.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,659,767 bushels, last year 901,433 bushels.

Shipments 562,147 bushels, last year, 925,455 bushels.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼@⅜d higher. In the Chicago market December corn closed 1¼c lower. December oats closed ¼c lower.

Primary receipts of corn were 279,640 bushels, last year 426,20 bushels.

Shipments 384,540 bushels, last year 546,-600 bushels.

Trading in wheat was active and the market erratic. December opened ¼c lower at $1.16⅝, sold at $1.16¾ at 9:32, advanced to $1.17⅛ at 9:40 and then dropped to $1.16¾ at 10. It then bulged to $1.18⅛ at 11, but again reacted and dropped to $1.16¾ at 12:05. It rallied to $1.17⅝ at 12:32, dropped to $1.16⅝ at 12:36 and closed at $1.16⅝. This was a decline of ¾c. The May option fell ⅝c, closing at $1.16⅛.

Cash wheat was steady at 2c over the December price for No. 1 northern and 3c under for No. 2. Durum wheat advanced 1c.

Flax was rather slow. The October option advanced ¼c to $1.17¼, fell back to $1.16¾ and closed ¼c lower than yesterday at $1.16¾. The May option was also ¼c lower, while November was off ½c and December ½c.

Oats declined ½c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Considerable Liquidation Results In Weak Wheat Prices.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Easy cables and a break at Minneapolis caused considerable liquidation of long wheat here today, resulting in a weak market. At the opening the December option was up 1⅛@1¼c to ⅞@1c at $1.14⅞ to $1.15⅜. May was 1⅛c lower to ¼c higher at $1.13⅝ to $1.14⅜. After December had touched $1.14⅜ and May $1.13½, the market had a temporary rally on active buying of December by commission houses. On the advance December sold up to $1.15¾ and May to $1.14⅜@¼. Renewed liquidation caused a reaction, however. December declining to $1.15¼. May sold off to $1.13⅝. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 878 cars, against 827 cars last week and 575 cars a year ago.

On a sharp rally at Minneapolis, the market here developed considerable strength. December advancing to $1.10⅝. In the meantime May sold up to $1.14⅞. Later, however, the market again weakened in sympathy with a break in corn prices. On the decline Dec. sold off to $1.14¼ and May to $1.12⅝. The close was weak with Dec. off ⅜c at $1.14⅛@¼. May was down ¼c, closing at $1.13⅝.

Unfavorable weather in Iowa, small receipts and firm cables held corn steady in the face of a weak undertone in wheat. There was some profit-taking, but offerings were readily taken. December opened unchanged to ⅛c up at 49½c to 49⅝c, sold off to 49⅜c and then rallied again to 49½@⅝c. Local receipts were 79 cars, with three of contract grade.

The receipts at Kansas City of 5 cars of new corn which graded No. 2, started free selling by the pit crowd, resulting in a quick decline. Dec. sold off to 48c, and closed with a loss of 1⅛c at 48⅞c.

As a result of the weakness of wheat, there was some selling of oats by pit traders, but offerings were not large. The steadiness of corn had considerable effect. December opened a shade higher at 29@29¼c, sold at 29¼@29⅜c and settled back to 29c. Local receipts were 114 cars.

A steady tone of the hog market was reflected in provisions. Trading was exceedingly quiet. January pork was unchanged at $12.35. Lard and ribs were each off 2½c at 7.17½ and $6.45 respectively.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald says: Minneapolis millers are cleaning up a harvest of profits in the cash and speculative grain markets. The big millers are directing their energies to the widening out of the difference between the choice and the lower grads of wheat, flooding all other grain markets with the worthless grain at low prices and paying high prices at home for the few fancy cars received, meanwhile picking up the great bulk of the arrivals of average wheat at something like 30 cents per bushel below top figures for fancy sorts. The flour made from this ice box of the basis of the option market for wheat which is inflated to some extent by the sensational cash wheat prices.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Liverpool continues to show a heavy tone in the face of the strength here of the past few days. Notwithstanding this the market opened about unchanged and advanced sharply during the early part of the day. Later it broke about two cents a bushel and closed rather steadier. There is not so much talk about the flour demand in the northwest and our advices are that demand for flour in the southwest is disappointing. The active speculative interest in wheat continues to be with the bull contingent. Armour seems scalping on the short side, but there is no aggressive short interest. The hedging sales by elevator people are increasing, as the stocks accumulate. We hardly share in the confidence of the prevailing bullish confidence. We think at best there will be two sides to the market and that it will be favorable for scalping operations. The load the bulls will have to carry will at the present rate of movement rapidly grow heavier.

Corn—There were some efforts at profit taking at the advance and the improvement of yesterday and today was lost. We understand there were five cars new corn in Kansas City which inspected No. 2. Receipts continue very small and on the weak spots the market runs into a good shipping demand. We are still of the view that at the discount in May short sellers are offering, the odds are in favor of the buyer of May corn. We feel like buying May corn on the soft spots.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 20.—The business of buying Oregon and Washington wheat for shipment to Chicago and other Eastern markets has ceased. The railroad companies cannot supply enough cars to handle the traffic and consequently business is practically at a standstill. It is estimated that from 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels have already been sold on Eastern account, and of this amount not over one-third has been forwarded.

• • •

Cincinnati Price Current: Previous crop indications supported by later conditions and returns as to corn, wheat and pastures. Corn gathering will soon be under fairly active progress. Evidences of good quality maintained.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: The Great Northern railroad has sent out notices that no more cars will be furnished interior shippers until the blockade in its yards at Minneapolis and St. Paul is cleaned up. The Minneapolis millers have been using cars for storage purposes.

ACTIVE IN STOCKS

Market Was Strong Early But There Was Sharp Decline.

Liquidation of United States Steel Preferred Was Reserved.

New York, Oct. 20.—The opening stock market today was active and irregular with the majority of the important stocks a small fraction lower. There was evidence of strength amongst the coalers, Ontario & Western rising a point, but Reading ufluctuated feverishly. St. Paul and Illinois Central gained a ½. Tennessee Coal and Brooklyn Transit a point and Mearopolitan Street Railway 1⅜. The United States Steel stocks were under pressure, 4000 shares of the preferred selling at 81¼ and 81⅜, compared with 81¾ last night. The common lost a ½ and Pressed Steel Car ¾. Louisville & Nashville and General Electric were down a point.

After the opening period of hesitancy, the market gathered strength and retrieved its loss. Conspicuous bidding fo special stocks contributed to the general rise, but the improvement was checked by renewed liquidation of United States Steel preferred. In the interval, Ontario & Western rose 1⅜, St. Paul, Erie first preferred, Hocking Valley, Colorado Southern second preferred and Northern American 1 and Metropolitan Street Railway 2 points. Adams Express rose 4½, St. Paul's rise was cancelled and United States Steel preferred driven ⅞, the common and Union Pacific ¾, New York Central and Northwestern 1 and Kansas City Southern preferred 1½ below yesterday's closing at 1 o'clock.

Prices sagged lower, but the selling became so desultory as to invite an attempt at a rally. The local tractions led, but heavy selling was renewed in St. Paul, Missouri Pacific and Union Pacific and prices fell back to the lowest. Missouri Pacific got ¾ under last night, United States Steel 1 and the preferred 1¼. Central of New Jersey, Louisville & Nashville, Consolidated Gas and United States Rubber preferred lost ½. Snuff rose 5. Business was smaller than for several days past. Bonds were irregular at noon.

The market broke precipitately for a time after 12 o'clock and considerable stock was let go. Representative stocks of all classes broke sharply, losses reaching a point or thereabouts in some of the grangers, Pacifics, Southwestern, trunk lines, coalers and specialties. United tSates Steel fell to 20 and the preferred to 80¼. Prices ruled slightly above the lowest at 1 o'clock.

The decline carried New York Central and Pump preferred down 2½ and Colorado Fuel 2. The market then rallied with more vigor than at any previous time during the day. The entire list was led, Metropolitan Street railway rising 3¼, Metropolitan Securities 2¼, and Manhattan 1⅝. Chicago Great Western gained 1¼. The rebound carried St. Paul and Atchison a good fraction over last night. Colorado Fuel a point over and other active leaders to the neighborhood of last night's level.

Prices sagged slightly but stiffened again with the enormous buying of Ontario & Western up to above 40. Metropolitan Street Railway touched 127. Colorado Fuel gained 2 and Pressed Steel Car and Lackawanna a point. The top level of the rally was recovered and the strength of Ontario & Western held the closing firm.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Dick to B. E. Baker: We are still very bullish on St. Paul and believe it should be bought on this recession for another turn. It seems to us that Steel preferred should now be bought on a scale down. The good pig iron report of the Iron Age this morning is a bull card on both issues of the Steel corporation. Amalgamated should be bought on weak spots.

Coe Commission Co.: Among the stories in regard to the advance in St. Paul was one printed by a news agency to the effect that an agreement had been made by which Union Pacific would buy St. Paul at 200 in 4 per cent bonds. Another report current upon the street was that Union Pacific holds an option on Chicago Great Western and had given notice of its intention to exercise that option.

• • •

C. G. Smith to B. E. Baker: Nearly all the large commission houses sent out advices last night that the reaction was a good thing and that on any further decline they advise buying stocks. I think the market will do better some time today perhaps at the opening and during the forenoon. If it does, my idea would be to take some profits. If, on the other hand they become weak they should begin to buy in a small way at first. The situation is sound as a dollar but a reaction was due and it started yesterday and may continue today.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Oct. 20.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 1 point, following featureless Liverpool cables. There was some liquidation by yesterday's buyers, who were again disappointed by the failure of bad weather to materialize. One or two points in Texas reported light frosts, but temperature over the rest of the belt was reassuring and no rain of importance was noted. The early liquidation was offset to some extent by covering and buying from scattering Southern sources, but the market was very quiet, and the market gradually sagged off, being barely steady at a decline of about 6@7 points toward the end of the first hour.

Spot closed quiet, 10 points decline; middling uplands, 10.15; middling gulf, 10.40. Sales 1500 bales. Futures closed barely steady; October and November, 9.67; December, 9.79; January, 9.86; February, 9.90; March, 9.96; April, 9.98; May, 10.03; June, 10.04; July, 10.06.

NEED BIG ONES

Competition on Great Lakes Now Requires Huge Carriers.

Augustus Wolvin Now Unloading Record Breaking Coal Cargo.

It is said that the reason for so many lake lines building big freighters for next year is to get into competition with the owners of big boats like the Globe Steamship company and the Acme company, who own, respectively the Sahara and the Augustus B. Wolvin, the two largest craft now plying on fresh water in this country.

Owners of small boats find themselves entirely outclassed when it comes to doing business alongside the people who operate the monster steamer, so it is asserted. People who have made close observation of the question claim that a boat of, say 5000 tons capacity, can be run at practically no

LIONS SHUN WHITE MEN.

As He Advances In Africa They Retreat.

A foreign member of the geographical congress had an interested group around him the other day at the luncheon between the sessions while he told stories of pioneering in Africa, says the New York Sun. A question about lions started a flood of reminiscence that lasted till the crowd scattered for the section meetings.

"The lion will not live where there are many white men," he said. "A large proportion of the whites who go to Africa are keen sportsmen, and the lion soon learns to shun this variety of the human race.

"Twenty-eight years ago there was not a coast settlement in tropical East Africa that was not occasionally visited by lions. They would swoop down on the cattle or goats and now and then a man-eater would create the utmost terror and never leave the neighborhood where he had tasted human flesh. The only thing to do was to organize a big hunt, surround the jungle with hundreds of natives and leave no loophole of escape till the animal was slain.

"When the Germans first went to East Africa they never ventured into the streets of the coast towns after nightfall without carrying a revolver and a rifle. A prowling lion was likely to be met anywhere in the darkness.

"I remember one night one of our black men was pounced upon by a lion in the heart of the settlement. The unearthly howl the man set up and the wild commotion into which the town was instantly thrown so frightened the king of beasts that he left his prey and slunk back into the jungle. His claws had torn deep grooves in the man's scalp, but that was the only damage done.

"I suppose it is at least ten years since a lion has been known to visit one of the German settlements on the east coast. There are plenty of them in the interior, but as the white stations multiply, and the natives in the service of the whites are armed with guns, it is becoming very uncomfortable for beasts of prey, and they are disappearing from the neighborhood of all the stations.

"One day, toward evening, in 1890, I strolled out of Bagamoyo, the coast port opposite Zanzibar, for a walk of a few miles in the country. I carried only a light walking stick.

"The sun was low in the west when I started back for the settlement. I soon saw that 100 steps or so behind me a little Bantu girl, perhaps 10 years old, was following in my path, and about the same distance behind her were two native women.

"The night was fast closing in when I heard a shriek. Looking around the little girl was nowhere to be seen but I noticed a rustle in the jungle grass off to one side. The two women were screaming 'Simba' (lion) at the top of their voices.

"The girl was certainly doomed. Being unarmed I could do nothing except to run at top speed to the little fort which the Germans had planted at the inner edge of the town. Twilight lasts only a few minutes in that latitude, and it was pitch dark by the time I reached the fort.

"A force of natives with white officers was sent out to beat the jungle, but nothing was found. Of course the torches and the noise would frighten the animal away, but it was thought that at least the remains of his poor victim might be discovered. I believe no trace of the little girl was ever discovered, but this was not strange in such a sea of jungle.

"This man-eating lion was killed a few days later. There is much nonsense in the talk of the courage with which the greatest of African beasts of prey is endued. This particular animal saw me pass and let me go unscathed because I was a full grown man, but he pounced upon a little girl because he knew he could make her an easy victim.

"The lion disdains nothing in the way of animal food. Perhaps antelopes are his favorite, and he will wait hours for them by the paths along which they travel to the drinking places.

"But he will take anything he can kill, from a mouse to an elephant; and sometimes when game is scarce and the lion becomes thin and ravenous, he will even attack a man if he gets a good chance. When he becomes a man-eater there is nothing to do for the safety of the neighborhood but to hunt him to the death.

"The man-eater comes and goes like a ghost, and I have never seen anything more distressing than the panic into which a man-eating lion throws a native settlement. I remember one day we reached a native hamlet far on the road to Lake Tanganyika and found everybody in the greatest consternation.

"A lion had just run off with a half grown boy, the fourth member of the community whom he had killed in a fortnight. His visits had been made at various times of the day and night and there was not a moment's peace.

"We organized a hunt, and with our native escort we were able to surround a considerable tract of jungle where the animal was believed to be lurking. We beat the bush for half a day and found nothing. We thought the ground had opened and swallowed the animal up.

"In the heat of midday, while we Europeans were resting in the shade, we heard a volley of shots from beyond the area where we had been hunting. The lion had come out of the high grass and was retreating along the valley of Upanga Creek, when our men caught sight of him.

"The range was short, some of the guns were rapid firing, and it took only a minute to end his career. One bullet broke his backbone, and still he tried to sit up and menace us with his paws, but it was only for an instant.

"He was a large and aged brute, with a ragged mane and sides that bore long scars that had evidently been made by thorns. He was anything but handsome. The best looking lions I ever saw are the sleek and well fed fellows in the zoological gardens. They know nothing of the stress of life, but the lion in his native jungle has many troubles.

"I never saw more heartfelt jubilation than that after the dead enemy had been borne in triumph to the village. The people were beside themselves with joy and crowded around with shouts of delight. The maidens, one after another, sprang over the body of the foe with laughter and song, chanting the praises of their own lion slayers and the prowess of the white man with his wonderful guns.

"If I had to express in a sentence or two all I know about lions, I should say two things. One is that as a beast of prey he is a great nuisance, and I am glad of his tendency to disappear wherever the whites are getting a foothold; the other is that in lion hunting you need never expect that you will meet the same conditions twice.

"Every lion has his own peculiarities, and when you confront one in a fight you will find yourself face to face with special circumstances and emergencies. They have a phrase that is often used among the whites of German East Africa: 'Everything turns out differently from what one expects.' This is the case with lions."

SENATOR DUBOIS' PRESENCE OF MIND.

Senator Dubois, of Idaho, during the days when he was practising law in Boise City, was on a certain occasion sternly reprimanded by the judge of a court in that city because of alleged contempt of court, and in addition was fined in the sum of $50.

The next day, according to a custom followed in the Idaho courts, the judge called upon Mr. Dubois to occupy the bench for him during the transaction of some comparatively unimportant business. After the judge's departure from the court room Mr. Dubois exhibited an instance of that remarkable presence of mind for which he has ever been noted. The future senator said to the clerk of the court:

"Turning to the records of this court for yesterday, Mr. Clerk, you will observe recorded a fine of $50 against one Frederick T. Dubois. You will kindly make a note to the effect that such fine has been remitted by order of the court."

SUBTERRANEAN SUNSHINE.

North of the tropic of Cancer the sun's rays never penetrate to the bottom of a deep mining shaft, but south of the tropic there is at least one day in the year when the sun at noon will shine to the bottom of the very deepest mining shaft in case it is perpendicular, says Modern Mexico. In Sombrerete, Mexico, there is a shaft that the sun reached the bottom of on June 21, 1100 feet below the surface of the ground.

MEETING OPENS

Unitarian Ministers of Minnesota Are Now In Duluth.

Convention Will Last Two Days—Interesting Program Prepared.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Minnnesota Unitarian conference, which opened at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the First Unitarian church, Eighth avenue east and First street, is quite largely attended by ministers from different parts of the state. The meeting will come to a close tomorrow night.

The features of the first session were the reading of two papers, one an essay on "Unitarianism as a Philosophy of Religion," by Rev. Harry White, local pastor, and the other a book review, "The Evolution of Theology in the Greek Philosophers," by Rev. Richard W. Boynton, of St. Paul.

The several sessions will be open to the general public. The program for this evening is an interesting one, and will, it is expected, attract a number of outsiders. A. L. Agatin, of the Duluth church, will deliver the address of welcome, which will be responded to by Professor A. W. Rankin of St. Paul. The feature of the most importance, and probably of the greatest interest, will be the conference sermon, as delivered by Rev. Samuel A. SOME HARD GAMES AHEAD

Duluth to Meet St. Paul High School on Saturday.

Saturday afternoon the Duluth high school team will meet the St. Paul Central eleven at Athletic park, provided the weather clears up and dries the grounds sufficiently to enable the teams to play.

The steady rain of the past week or two has soaked the gridiron until it now presents the appearance of a miniature lake, but with two or three days of sunshine and a coating of sawdust, it can be put into fair shape.

Report says that the St. Paul team is heavy, and has a line that will average between 160 and 170 pounds. Their tackles have an excess of avoirdupois, tipping the scales at 180.

The boys have been practicing on the school campus for the past two days and are in good condition, having gotten over all the bad effects of their last Saturday's game. A full second team was out this afternoon and a hard practice indulged in. New men are being constantly put on the second team owing to injuries and to the poor showing that the first team men are making in their studies. Michaud will likely not play owing to a bad knee and Parks will also be out of the game.

The remaining schedule is a heavy one. On Nov. 5, the locals meet the Eau Clare team and on the 11th, Minneapolis Central at Minneapolis. Eau Clare has a back field weighing 185 pounds and a line averaging 165 pounds.

They defeated St. Paul Central two weeks ago by a score of 16 to 0.

SALE OF STATE PINE TIMBER

Twenty-Eight Parcels Sold at Most Satisfactory Prices.

St. Paul, Oct. 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The sale of state pine timber brought a large crowd of lumbermen to the state capitol this morning. The sale was conducted by State Auditor Iverson, in the senate chamber, which was comfortably filled by the principal lumber merchants of Minnesota.

On the whole the prices obtained were most satisfactory and in advance of the estimates, which were concededly high.

The total sales amounted to $289,671. Of this sum 25 per cent, or $72,417, is to be paid down in cash.

The timber is all located in the northern tier of counties, including St. Louis, Lake and Itasca. As a rule the bidding was not spirited, except on a few choice tracts, where the prices were raised from $7 per thousand to above $8.

The highest price paid was $9 per thousand for 3,300,000 feet pine, in 36-59-20. Shevlin, Carpenter & Co., of Minneapolis, were the bidders. There was very little demand for the mixed timber, in the way of Jack pine, ties, cedar poles, etc.

State Auditor Iverson withdrew the south of 36-142-32 from the sale. This provoked some comment, but Mr. Iverson refrained from giving any explanations.

Out of 114 parcels, only twenty-eight were purchased, or something less than one-fourth. On the balance no bids were offered.

MR. AND MRS. NEWLYWED

Furnish Much Amusement For Spectators on Superior Street.

Clad in a white muslin dress and carrying an immense bouquet of yellow roses, a happy bride walked down Superior street early this morning on the arm of her fond husband who was clad in gay attire with a bright red rose in his buttonhole, and oblivious to the merriment he was creating among the spectators, gazed fondly at his new wife.

Behind the proud couple walked the bridesmaid and the best man, also decorated with flowers.

The quartet were headed for the union depot, and the recent happenings were so hopelessly apparent that their progress was something in the nature of a triumphal procession between rows of smiling admirers.

PERMISSION TO 'STEND HIS VOICE.

"I'se de Rev. Andrew Jackson and I'se a min'ster ob de Gospel," was the introduction Chief of Police H. C. Irwin received from an aged, gray-haired negro of the old ante-bellum type yesterday morning, says the Charlotte Observer. The negro really had a reverend look, and Chief Irwin very kindly asked what he could do for him. "I jes' want to get de permission ob de orthor-ties to preach de Word on de streets where I can 'stend my voice and bring de chillun home."

The reverend explained that he was of the Primitive Wash-Foot Baptist church and wanted to make his doctrine more extensively known among the colored people of this poor benighted city.

The old darkey was very much in earnest, and Chief Irwin finally give his permission for the Rev. Andrew Jackson to "'stend his voice" on the streets.

IBEX WITH GOLD-COATED TEETH.

Particulars were given in several London papers recently of sheep, when killed, being found with gold coated teeth owing to their having cropped short grass in gold bearing districts of Australia, says the London News. The story was not new, but it has called forth the following information from Australia:

A British army officer in Cairo, Capt. Tuoins, states that when he was ibex shoting in the Sinai peninsula, in May and June last year, he bagged two fine old rams, and one of the first things that he noticed when skinning the heads was that all the sides of the back teeth were coated with a bright metallic substance of the color of Australian gold. Capt. Timins asked his "shakarri" the reason of this, and was told that it was due to the ibex feeding on a certain shrub.

WANT THEIR HATS TO SHINE.

"These brokers are queer cattle, as a rule," remarked a dealer in hats in La Salle street, the other day, to the Chicago Tribune. "They want their silk hats to shine all the time as if they were just out of a factory. Swell young men about town have that sort of desire, but it doesn't seem to be characteristic of business men generally—except in the case of the brokers. Some of thes brokers have their hats ironed—or think they do—every day, and have got so in the habit of that sort of thing that I have to keep two men who do nothing else but keep hats in order either by blocking or ironing."

It costs from 50 cents to $1.50 to block them, so the broker escapes the necessity of this expense by going to his hatter daily to have them ironed. There is usually no charge for this service. Ironing is supposed to be the running of a hatter's hot iron over the glossy surface of the hat, and this always gives a lustre to the tile. It doesn't take much time, even when thoroughly done, but it does help to do away with the necessity of blocking a hat and does in a measure help to eat up the profits of a hatter. So the wily hatter has found a way to get even with the brokers.

"Hatters know, but the public generally doesn't," said one hatter, "how we get even with thes brokers, whose custom is naturally valuable to us, without offending these men in any way. Once in a while we iron the hats, of course, in order to keep them in good shape, but generally all we do is to rub them over with a bit of silk warmed until it is quite hot. That gives the hat the necessary polish."

GREAT ARMIES, MUCH EXHAUSTED, FACE EACH OTHER ACROSS RIVER

Maintain Their Respective Positions But Are Not Fighting.

Continued Reconnaissances Are Made By Both Sides

Developments Looked For as Soon as Roads Dry.

Fighting has not been resumed in Manchuria, and the Russian Gen. Sakharoff reports that the two armies maintain their respective positions. There is desultory artillery firing along the lines and reconnoissances are continuous on both sides, indicating that, with the rapidly drying roads, developments may soon be looked for. While official figures on the losses are still absent, St. Petersburg believes from information in hand that the total Russian casualties during the battle of Shakhe river will not exceed 20,000. There was heavy mortality in officers on the Russian side, 172 being killed in the fighting of Oct. 11 to 13, including one major general and 17 field officers.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21.—Gen. Zakharoff telegraphs that there was no fighting yesterday. The armies maintain their respective positions. There are continual reconnaissances on both sides.

ARMIES FACE EACH OTHER

But Operations Still Continue at a Standstill.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21, 1:42 p. m.—The two armies face each other across the Shakhe river, but operations continue at a standstill. The heavy fog which hung over the plain was burned up by the sun yesterday afternoon and there was some desultory artillery firing from some of the Russian batteries, but nothing important. One of the Associated Press correspondents says the Japanese did not reply, indicating a possible shortage of ammunition, or a desire to conceal the location of their guns.

The war office has no fresh news this morning, except a list of the losses of Gen. Ekk's Seventy-first division of the Fifth Siberian corps, and Gen. Mirazoff's First division of Lieut. Gen. Dembowsky's corps. Each lost half a dozen officers. The official lists of officers killed and wounded, between Oct. 11 and 13, totals 172, including Maj. Gen. Rabinski, and seventeen field officers killed. The wounded are in the proportion of one to six. The list of the heaviest day's fighting is still unreported, and doubtless will exceed the losses at Liao Yang, when 500 officers were killed or wounded. The losses among the men are not yet reported, but they are thought to approximate not much over 20,000.

News from Port Arthur brought to Che Foo by a junk, which left there Oct. 19, says a fierce bombardment, which began Oct. 16, was still progressing without interruption. Many buildings had been damaged, and ships in the harbor had also been hit by shells, but the character and extent of the damages are not stated. The Japanese main forces are now posted at Lindziatung. They have placed guns of large calibre on Iunjida mountain. The Russians continue making sorties successfully and inflicting heavy losses on the besiegers, whose losses since the commencement of the siege are said to have been 50,000.

HAVE LOST 50,000 MEN.

Japs Make Reckless Assaults at Port Arthur.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—A special to the Daily News from Che Foo says: According to a camp follower, who has been for some time with the Japanese army now besieging Port Arthur, and who is at present in Che Foo, having arrived from Dalny, the number of Japanese killed before the forts has reached 50,000. He says the mikado's men recklessly attacked the strongest positions, making wild rushes in masses, the soldiers being stripped of their accoutrements and clothing. The result was that the Russian machine guns mowed them down. He also asserts that there is some talk among the officers and men that leads to the belief that the Japanese mean to try to carry the inner forts and citadel this month.

EVERY MAN WOUNDED

In Encounter With Japanese Near Sandopu.

Mukden, Oct. 21.—Every man of the 200 Cossacks commanded by Capt Tourgenieff, who on Tuesday night reconnoitered the Japanese left, southwestward, and who, near Sandopu, unexpectedly encountered a good-sized Japanese force, with machine guns, was wounded, and every horse, except Capt. Tourgenieff's, was hit by the bullets from the Japanese machine guns. Tourgenieff, though mortally wounded, carried off one man behind his saddle, while others managed to creep back to camp. But, as already cabled, not one man was killed on the field. There is the greatest fear on the part of the Russian wounded of falling into the hands of the Japanese, the Russians being convinced that they torture their prisoners.

NO END VISIBLE

Of the Ghastly Slaughter, Cables Col. Gaedke.

Berlin, Oct. 21.—Col. Gaedke, war correspondent of the Tageblatt, telegraphed to his paper today from Mukden as follows:

Have been unable to telegraph for two days, owing to the absence of the censor on the 19th and 20th. Both armies are much fatigued. They occupy positions in close contact. Only an occasional shot breaks the stillness. A general Russian attack appeared to have been planned for the night of Oct. 20, but a freshet in the Shakhe river prevented it. The roads and fields are drying slowly. It rained again the night of the 20th. The Russian losses were frightful. Single regiments have as few as 800 men left. The Viborg regiment, of which Emperor William is honorary colonel, had twenty officers and 300 men killed. The feeling is accordingly grave. No end is visible of the ghastly slaughter."

FOG BLACK AT NIGHT.

Huansian, Manchuria, Oct. 20, Thursday, by Courier to Mukden, Oct. 21.—Wednesday passed quietly. Along the Russian center there was some desultory outpost firing, but nothing serious. Last night also was without incident. This morning the plain was covered with a blanket of fog, as thick as the darkest night. In the afternoon the weather cleared. The chief obstacle to a resumption of the advance continues to be the bad state of the roads.

JAPS RELEASE PRISONERS.

Tokio, Oct. 21, 2 p. m.—The military authorities have released the captured paymaster of the Russian armored cruiser Rurik, who is 70 years old, on account of his age, thirty-four Russian hospital attendants, and twelve battle-maimed soldiers. They will be sent to the Russian consul at Shanghai. In future it is probable that the Japanese will release prisoners whose wounds are healed and who are incapacitated from further fighting.

BALTIC FLEET SAILS.

Frederikshaven, Denmark, Oct. 21.—All the vessels comprised in the Russian Baltic sea squadron passed into the North sea during the night.

RUSSIAN CORPS ARRIVES.

Berlin, Oct. 21.—A dispatch to the Lokal Anzeiger from Mukden says the Eighth Russian army corps has arrived theer and that Gen. Kuropatkin will make new plans immediately.

RUSSIAN STUDENTS

May Now Wear Caps of Forbidden Colors.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21.—Permission has been accorded to the students of Dorpal (Livonia) university to resume wearing caps of the colors which were forbidden to such corporations under Alexander III, in pursuance of the policy of the Russification of the Baltic provinces. This step is considered to constitute another evidence of the conciliatory policy of the whole government which has marked the inauguration of the regime of Prince Mirsky, minister of the interior. Dispatches from Dorpal say the announcement was greeted with the greatest rejoicing among the students.

PRINCETON AND MICHIGAN MAY PLAY.

New York, Oct. 21.—Hopes of a football contest between the university of Michigan and an Eastern team have been revived by a report that Reiter, the Princeton half back, has gone to Ann Arbor for the purpose of presenting terms which may bring the eleven East.

With the failure of Columbia and Michigan to come to terms, it is understood that the matter was taken up immediately by Princeton advisers, and Reiter's journey is the result. If the proposal is accepted by the Michigan managers the game will be played at Princeton.

NAVY YARDS RACE IN BUILDING COLLIERS.

New York, Oct. 21.—A ship-building race between the New York and Mare Island navy yards has begun over the construction of two colliers authorized by the last congress. They are to be the largest and fastest boats of their class in the world. Each will be about 500 feet in length and cost about $1,250,000.

One of the ships was assigned to the Mare Island yard, San Francisco, and the other to the yard here.

H. Robinson, Louisville, Ky.; secretary, H. H. Putnam, Boston, treasurer, W. H. Mandeville, Olean, N. Y.; chairman of the executive committee, A. W. Neal, Cleveland; vice presidents, E. J. Tapping, of Milwaukee; H. N. Pinkham, of Portland, Me.; Charles Wilson, of Denver; J. W. Offenhauser, of Texarkana; J. G. Jano Wright, of Cincinnati; E. W. Beardsley, of Hartford; Fred Guenther, of Detroit; L. W. Childrey, of Norfolk, Va.; John T. Lyon, of Tacoma; Charles E. Anderson, of Baltimore, and John W. Robbins, of Omaha.

STARTLING TRAGEDY OCCURS IN RAILWAY STATION AT PEORIA

Prominent Society Woman Goes to Meet Man and Is Assaulted.

Man's Children Open Letter and Lie In Wait For Their Victim.

Woman Brutally Beaten and Lives Several Days In Great Agony.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Nellie Thomason, wife of a former prominent real estate dealer in this city, died at 12 o'clock, at Lacon last night, as the result of injuries received in a sensational encounter with Richard and Jennie Higgins, children of John G. Higgins, a prominent member of the board of supervisors of Peoria county, and prominent in Republican politics. The Higgins children intercepted a letter written to Higgins, Sr., by Mrs. Thomason, in which she asked him to meet her in the depot of the Rock Island, in this city. Higgins was at St. Louis, and his son opened the letter. The missive asked Higgins to be in the waiting room. When she arrived she was confronted by young Higgins and his sister. What took place is a mystery, as only the three and an uncle of Higgins were present. Some time later, however, the woman asked C. A. Brant, the agent, to assist her to the train. He did so, and when she was gone discovered the floor of the waiting room covered with blood. The woman lingered in great agony at her home in Lacon until last night, when she died.

Young Higgins is under arrest on a state warrant, charging him with murder. The case has created a sensation by reason of the prominence of the parties concerned.

Mrs. Thomason had lain in a comatose condition since Wednesday night, rallying enough to speak a word or two at times. During her last hours she vomited blood excessively. Her body presented a horrible appearance. Her lip was severed, both eyes blackened, one shoulder displaced, and her back was covered with bruises, evidently inflicted with a boot or heavy instrument. The intestines and internal membranes were evidently ruptured. Dr. John Potts, the attending physician, was unable to arouse the patient sufficiently to get a dying statement, although this was attempted by Judge Richmond of Marshall county, at whose suggestion the police authorities arrested Higgins. Higgins wept when placed in jail.

"We had been trying for years to break up the relations between my father and this woman," he said. "When we got that letter, my sister and I went down there to see if we could not make some arrangement with her. We met her in the waiting room. I went to her and touched her on the shoulder.

"Mrs. Thomason turned around quickly and said: 'Oh, it's you, is it?' and drew out her hat pin. I then pushed her sharply in the side of the face and knocked her over a chair. My sister then pulled me away and told me that I would be arrested, that we could do nothing with her. That's all there is to it."

His sister corroborated the above statement.

The attack on Mrs. Thomason occurred on Saturday noon. Young Higgins is 24 years old and his sister is 20 years of age.

Miss Jennie Higgins made the following statement:

"I had nothing to do with the affair whatever, only as a witness. I saw Mrs. Thomason attack my brother with a hat pin and then he struck her several times. I did not engage in the scuffle.'

Mrs. Thomason has not lived with her husband, J. W. Thomason, for three years, and at the time of her death did not know where he was located. They were not divorced.

The name of the uncle who was an eye witness of the tragedy is Douglas McDonald. He is a merchant at Monica, Ill.

BEDE COMING TO MINNESOTA

Believes That the Republicans Will Carry West Virginia.

Washington, Oct. 21.—(Special to The Herald)—Representative J. Adam Bede is in Washington today and leaves for Minnesota tomorrow. Mr. Bede has been touring with Speaker Cannon, having recently touched several points in West Virginia. At some points in West Virginia, Mr. Bede said there semed to be a confusion as to the candidates on the national ticket. It was a frequent occurrence for the Republican spellbinders, Cannon, Bede, et al, to be greeted with cheers for "Davis and Roosevelt."

"Notwithstanding the fealty of West Virginia to its leading citizen, Henry Gassaway Davis," said Mr. Bede, "I believe that the electoral vote of West Virginia will be cast for Roosevelt and Fairbanks. I leave Washington tonight for Minnesota, to attend to my own fences. I will address a large and enthusiastic audience at Austin next Monday night, and will speak at Waseca the following night. I will from now on devote my attention to Minnesota, and will swing around the circle I have the honor to represent quite lively during the next two weeks. I have been campaigning for the head of the ticket, and am now going home to make a few in the hope that my constituents will hearken and return me as a representative to the Fifty-ninth congress."

ROBERT SCOTT MADE BEQUESTS TO CHARITY.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—An estate valued at $825,000, of which $800,000 is in personal property, was left by the late Robert Scott, during many years connected with a local drygoods firm. The bulk of it is left to the widow and relatives, but charitable institutions and faithful employes of the dry goods concern also are remembered. The will, which has been admitted to probate, leaves $10,000 to the American Sunday School union for the Northwestern district, and the Moody Bible institute is a beneficiary to the extent of $10,000.

SLIGHT EARTHQUAKE.

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—A slight earthquake shock, traveling from northwest to southeast, was felt here today. The disturbance was recorded on the seismograph in the weather bureau exhibit of the government at the fair. The earthquake caused a slight rattling of dishes in various parts of St. Louis, but did no damage.

COUNTERACT MOVEMENT

Secretary McEwen Doing Evangelistic Work For Labor Unions.

In an attempt to counteract the "Parry movement," instituted by the Citizens' Alliance against the labor unions, W. E. McEwen, secretary of the State Federation of Labor, has spent three or four weeks in traveling through the southern part of the state, lecturing and reviving the interest of workingmen in the unions.

He returned to Duluth yesterday after visiting Albert Lea, St. Cloud, Little Falls, Winona, Brainerd, Hastings, Red Wing, St. Paul and Minneapolis during the last week.

"I do not find that the so-called Parry movement has had any great effect in this state," he said this morning in speaking of his trip. "Interest in the unions in all the towns I visited is just as strong as it ever was."

WILL BE SENT TO RED WING

Hattie Krause, a 14-year-old Duluth girl, who was recently committed to the state school at Owatonna, has been brought back to the city and will be sent to the training school at Red Wing. The girl is an orphan and was living with an uncle previous to her committment to the Owatonna institution.

The superintendent of the Owatonna school reported that the girl was having a bad effect on the morals of the school and sent her back to the city. Humane Officer Withrow will take steps to have her committed to the Red Wing training school.

PILGRIMS AND PURITANS MEET AT WORLD'S FAIR.

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—Several thousand descendants of the Pilgrims and the Puritans from various parts of the country assembled here today and appropriately celebrated "Congregational day" at the Louisiana Purchase exposition. An object of great interest and veneration to those in Festival hall, where the principal exercises were held, was a portion of Plymouth rock, on which the Pilgrims landed Dec. 21, 1620. This fragment of the famous rock is the property of the Chicago Theological seminary and was brought here for the occasion.

AMES JURY FAILS TO AGREE AND NEW TRIAL IS ORDERED AT ONCE

Jury Out From Wednesday Afternoon to Friday Morning.

Discharged By Judge Who Orders New Trial on Saturday.

Witnesses Have Already Been Summoned For Fourth Time.

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—After being out since 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, the jury in the bribery case against ex-Mayor Ames came into court this morning and announced that it could not agree. Judge Harrison thereupon discharged the jury. Dr. Ames was indicted for receiving money from women.

After the jury had been discharged, Judge Harrison made an order that the fourth trial of the case be begun tomorrow morning, witnesses having been previously summoned, when it became evident that the jury could not agree.

LITTLE ENTHUSIASM

Displayed For Dunn at the Hibbing Meeting.

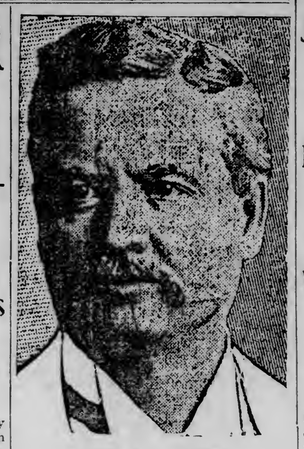

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Republicans had a rally at the Power theater last evening. Prof. Thomas J. Eaton, of Minneapolis, was the orator of the evening. The Hibbing band escorted the speaker to the theater. At the opening, at 8:30, about 150 people were in attendance, but this number dwindled to less than 100 before the speaker closed his address. Mr. Eaton's remarks were in defense of Dunn, but there was little enthusiasm displayed. At the mention of John A. Johnson, an enthusiastic Democrat in the audience applauded.

A Democrat, who is in a position to know what he says, remarked that he believed Johnson would carry Hibbing and Chisholm.

AN ANSWER TO TAFT

On Subject of Administrative Extravagance By Republicans.

Judge Parker Addresses New Jersey Delegation at Esopus.

DR. A. A. AMES.

Esopus, Oct. 21.—Judge Parker today addressed a delegation from Hudson county, N. J., on the subject of administrative extravagance, answering a speech made by Secretary Taft, in which he called upon the Democrats to give a bill of particulars in connection with their charge that economy in government affairs had been forgotten in the years the Republicans have been in control of national affairs. Judge Parker quoted a few totals from official reports which he asserted not only raised the presumption of extravagance but proved it. A bill of particulars will be given, he said, when a Democratic administration gets a chance at the books. From midnight until after noon today rain fell in torrents.

It had been the intention of the organizers of the trip to have two special trains of sixteen coaches each and a party of 2,000 persons. The trains were to leave Jersey City at 10 o'clock and arrive at Esopus at noon. At 10 o'clock rain was falling in sheets at Jersey City and few Democrats had arrived at the trains. An hour later a delegation sufficient to fill ten coaches had arrived, and unmindful of the deluge, determined to pay their visit to the candidate despite the certainty of a mud bath at the Esopus end of their trip.

Reaching Judge Parker's house, the delegation surrounded the verandah. Though the rainfall had ceased, the trees were dripping and umbrellas had to be raised. When Judge Parker stepped from the house he was greeted by cheers and handclapping.

The New Jersey delegation was presented to Judge Parker by Judge Allen Bellamy, of Bayonne, who made a short address.

Judge Parker said:

"The expenditures of the government—says the administration—have been managed in a spirit of economy as far removed from waste as from niggardliness. That the expenditures of the government have been free from niggardliness cannot, I think, be successfully denied—hence it was and is frankly admitted.

"With the claim that the expenditures have been managed in a spirit of economy we must take issue. The facts presented in support of the charge of extravagance have not been answered.

"We asserted that only seven years ago and under a Democratic president, the total expenditures of this government were less than $360,000,000 and we charged that in the last fiscal year the expenditures were over $582,000,000. These figures have not been denied and they cannot be. Deducting from the latter amount the sum paid by this government for the Panama canal and the Panama canal rights, we still have $532,000,000. After making that deduction, we find that it cost about $166,000,000 more to run the government last year than it did seven years ago. That statement on its face raises the presumption of extravagance and waste, a presumption which requires evidence to overcome. None has been presented. By way of indirect answer to the Democratic charge of extravagance the inquiry has been put up by the administration whether we propose to cut off the pensions.

"We answer, certainly not. And we further assert that the inference suggested by the question is not ingenious. The amount paid out in pensions has been decreasing every year since 1898. But for the unwarranted order No. 78, which was fully considered in my letter of acceptance, the amount paid for pensions in the seven preceding years would have exceeded the amount paid last year. As it was, the difference was over one and one half million of dollars.

"It is therefore necessary for the administration to look in other directions than the disbursement for pensions for the justification of the excess of expenditures of last year's over that of seven years ago of over $166,000,000.

"The inquiry is further made by the administration whether we would dare to reduce the cost of the army. We answer that most assuredly we would, and we ask the people to decide between the administration and the Democratic contention on that point."

POWERS INVITED

To Suggest a Day For New Peace Conference.

Washington, Oct. 21.—No important business was done at the meeting of the cabinet today. The meeting lasted less than a half hour and only a few routine matters were considered. Postmaster General Wynne at the conclusion of the meeting announced by direction of the president that no investigation of the New York postoffice was contemplated. Postmaster Van Cott's term will expire early next year and it is understood that he probably will not be re-appointed. In the absence of other important subjects, policies formed the principal topic of discussion at the brief meeting.

In the course of two days the president will dispatch formal invitations to the powers to name delegates to the new peace conference to be held at The Hague. The powers are invited to suggest a date or dates for the meeting of the conference. Secretary Hay submitted a draft of the invitation to the cabinet today.

CHOYNSKI CALLS OFF FIGHT WITH O'BRIEN.

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—The fight between Joe Choynski and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien scheduled for next Tuesday night, has been called off, owing to a brief telegram from Choynski, which said: "Call fight off, am out of game for good."

M'CORMICK CALLS.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Mr. McCormick, the American ambassador to Russia, called at the state department today to pay his respects to Secretary Hay and Assistant Secretary Loomis. The ambassador had satisfactory reports to make regarding the conditions of Russo-American relations.

TRAFALGAR DAY

Celebrated Throughout England and the Colonies.

London, Oct. 21.—Trafalgar day was celebrated today at home and in the colonies with the usual decorations and dinners. Nelson's flagship, the Victory, at Portsmouth, was gaily decorated with flags and decked with laurels and flew Nelson's famous signal. The base of the admiral's column in Trafalgar square here was elaborately covered with wreaths, prominent among the floral tributes being one of huge dimensions, tied with the French and Spanish colors, sent by the Navy league "With respect and honor to the memory of the gallant French and Spanish who fell at Trafalgar."

THREE TRAINMEN KILLED.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 21.—A special to the Herald from Geneva says: Two freight trains on the Pennsylvania division of the New York Central collided near this city today. Three trainmen, C. D. Rogers, Charles Hickey and Engineer Rouse were killed.

KILLED IN STREET DUEL.

Hobart, Okla., Oct. 21.—In a street duel today, T. P. Lea, a grocer, shot and killed Charles G. Hill, a barber. Lea was shot in both arms but will recover. Domestic troubles caused the shooting. The Leas were recently divorced.

THE MENTOR MURDER CASE GROWING MORE MYSTERIOUS

Supposed Dead Man, Phileas Fontaine, Is Alive at East Grand Forks and Now the Victim Is Thought to Be a French Canadian.

Bristol, R. I., Oct. 21.—Word that Phileas Fontaine, of Woonsocket, but formerly of Bristol, has not been murdered in Minnesota, reached his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lavalley, last night in a dispatch from East Grand Forks, Minn., and signed by the supposed dead man. The dispatch follows:

"If reported I am in trouble, it is a mistake. I am all right. Am going tonight to see what trouble with Joe Guilmette. PHILEAS FONTAINE."

The Lavalleys had arranged for an undertaker to go to Minnesota to bring back the body of their son. Lavalley is stepfather to Fontaine.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 21.—The Mentor murder mystery is growing more and more mysterious as time progresses and further developments are brought out. The man supposed to have been murdered, Phileas Fontaine, was located at Grand Forks, alive and well, and the authorities immediately brought him to this city to view the remains which were supposed to have been his own. Fontaine, who was a former chum of Joe Guilmette, the man believed to have committed the murder, identified the remains positively as those of Joseph Mongeaon, a Frenchman in well-to-do circumstances, whose home is at Saint Ple, province of Quebec. Mongeaon was seen at East Grand Forks with Joseph Guilmette, by Fontaine, on last Saturday, Monday the pair got off the train at Mentor, apparently for the purpose of hunting, and late in the afternoon of that day the tragedy ocurred. Joe Mongeaon is now, beyond doubt, the man who was killed. On his person was found a picture of a boy apparently 14 years old, presumably his son. It is understood that his wife, who has been dead for several years, resided at Saint Pie, and that a large number of relatives now reside at that place.

Woonsocket, R. I., Oct. 21.—The local police do not know Joseph Mongeaon, the victim of the Crookston, Minn., murder and are considerably mystified by the developments in the case. Mongeaon's name does not appear in the local directory. The fact that advices from Crookston received by the officials here three days ago indicated that the murdered man had a letter in his pocket bearing the maiden name of the wife of Joseph Guilmette, of this city, and that Guilmette was with Mongeaon when he was last seen alive is considered by the police as evidence that jealousy may have led to the murder.

GERMANY CANNOT USE GREAT BRITAIN'S HARBORS IN AFRICA

The Government Positively Refuses to Allow the Landing of German Supplies at Walfish Bay For War With the Natives.

Berlin, Oct. 21.—The government has asked Great Britain to permit Germany to use Walfish bay for the landing of troops and supplies essential in the war against the natives of German Southwest Africa. The British government has refused positively to grant the request. Walfish bay is the only good harbor for 1000 miles along that coast. It lies in that portion of the shore held by Great Britain near Swakopmund, the port of entry to German Southwest Africa. Swakopmund has always been a difficult harbor to enter and is especially so this year as the Swakop river has discharged immense quantities of sand into the shallows. The far-reaching shoals and heavy surf delay vessels for weeks in the discharge of their cargoes. It recently took a German transport four weeks to land three companies of troops, with their horses, guns and supplies. The men were landed without difficulty. It was the lighterage of the animals and freight that caused the delay. Great Britain's refusal to allow troops to land in Walfish bay will, it is asserted, interfere seriously with Germany's military plans in Southwest Africa.

Cable dispatches nearly every day bring news of some small German reverse in Southwest Africa. News was telegraphed last night that the German station at Nomesas had been captured by the Hottentots. Veterinary Surgeon Albrecht and a planter named Hermann were among the killed.

WILL PLAY ST. PAUL

Duluth Eleven to Meet Saintly City's Central School Team.

Heavy Bunch But Duluth Is Confident of Doing Well.

Rain or shine, the local high school football team meets the moleskin warriors from St. Paul Central in the biggest game of the season at Athletic Park Saturday afternoon.

Both are in the best of shape and will put up an article of ball that says "win" from the minute the whistle blows until time is called. The rivalry between the Twin City schools and Duluth has always been very keen and both teams are exceedingly anxious to win this game, which is the only one that will be played between the locals and the Saintly City men this season.

For the past several afternoons the first eleven has been practicing against the scrubs on the campus because of the rain, which has put the gridiron at the ball park in a wet, soggy condition. The grounds will be in good condition by Saturday afternoon, however, provided it does not rain during the interval. A coating of sawdust will be put in the lowest places and the sun will do the rest, as the field is easily dried in a short time, owing to its preperation by the baseball management for a like contingency.

None of the boys experienced any serious injuries in the Ironwood game, and will be in the very best condtion for their tomorrow's struggle. A full second team has been out every afternoon for the last three days and has been giving the first team a good, hard practice, playing four and five extra men against them and making them work for every gain. But in spite of this addition the regulars went through them steadily for five, ten, and twenty yard gains.

The St. Paul eleven is very strong this season. They have a fast, heavy team, and in the line it is reported that they are using a pair of tackles that average 180 pounds. They made a good showing against the Eau Claire team, which has a back field of 185 pounds and a line of about 165 or 170 pounds, holding them down to a score of 16 to 0.

In spite of their opponent's weight the local boys say that they expect to win. They are in good spirits over their victory of last Saturday and will endeavor to make up in speed what they lack in avoirdupois.

In the evening the senior class will give a reception to the St. Paul team in the high school building at 8 o'clock. All are invited to come.

CHILDREN SUFFOCATED.

Milwaukee, Oct. 21.—Clarence and Edward Schinner, aged respectively 4 and 2½ years, were suffocated by smoke in a clothes closet in the garret of their home, 738 Franklin street, last night. The mother of the children sustained severe burns while attempting to rescue the lads. It is presumed that the children were playing with matches and that the fire resulted from carelessness. When the flames began to spread the children went into the closet, closed the door, and were soon suffocated. The pecuniary loss was small.

HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Three Park Point Children Get Ducking In the Bay.

Three young Park Point children had a narrow escape from drowning in the bay yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock, by the overturning of a skiff in which they were rowing. The names of the three children are Robert Rinue, aged 12, Julia Bruner, aged 10, and Lambla Langton, aged 11.

The boat was the property of the Bruner boy. After school yesterday afternoon he suggested that it would be good fun to row the little Langton girl to her home near the canal.

They had covered about half of the distance when the Langton girl discovered a leak in the bottom of the boat, and in her excitement sprang to her feet. A sudden lurch threw her down against the side of the boat, overturning it and throwing the three children into the water.

The boy succeeded in reaching a place of safety by climbing to the top of the boat, and reaching into the water caught the Langton child by the clothing, drawing her up beside him. The little Bruner girl grasped the side of the skiff, and clung to it feebly, while the other children screamed for aid.

Their shouts were heard at the life saving station about a block away, and the crew put out to their rescue.

Beyond a severe chill and a bad scare, the children are none the worse for their narrow escape from a watery grave.

NEW INSPECTORS.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Capt. Henry M. Seeley of Boston yesterday was appointed inspector of hulls, and Theodore E. Mersereau, inspector of boilers in the steamboat inspection, to serve at New York. These appointments are one of the results of the conclusions of the Slocum disaster commission, the appointees taking the places of Messrs. J. A. Dumont, inspector of hulls, and Thomas H. Barrett, inspector of boilers, whose removal from the service for laxity and neglect in performing their duties has been recommended by President Roosevelt.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 21.—The action of the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias in barring saloonkeepers from acting as delegates in the grand lodge meetings was supplemented by a resolution, adopted, empowering the grand chancellor to employ assistants to ferret all members of the order engaged in the saloon business, and to enforce the law which bars such members from the order. The resolution was adopted without a dissenting vote.

WILL DEPORT YOUNG MAN

Youth of Impaired Intellect Must Return to Canada.

William Hine, aged 19, said to be of impaired intellect, was deported to Canada yesterday on order of Immigrant Inspector W. H. Dean. The boy landed in Duluth yesterday from Canada in company with an elderly woman, under whose charge he had been placed by a Canadian farmer, formerly the young fellow's employer. It developed that, with his weakened mind, he had been dismissed from an English charitable institution and left to make his own way through the world. He has had a very hard time doing this, according to the story told at the federal building.

Hines said that he was born in London. His father was a hotel cook. When a child the boy was placed in "Miss McPerson's Training School for Boys," a charitable institution in London, and afterwards was sent to Canada and placed in a branch institution at Strtford, Ont., later being bound out to a farmer. Ever since that time his life has been a hard one.

GRACE BOND WINS

The Kentucky Stock Farm Stake With Ease.

Memphis, Oct. 21.—Grace Bond, the Lexington Futurity winner, easily defeated a field of five 3-year-old trotters in straight heats for the Kentucky Stock Farm stake at the Driving park, yesterday afternoon. The daughter of The Bondsman led from start to finish in heats and never was in trouble. Alta Axworthy was the medium of heavy betting for the second heat. In several books he was literally backed off the boards. Grace Bond was also a favorite, however, and led Axworthy throughout the race. Sphinx S won the concluding heat of the 2:07 pace, unfinished from Wednesday. The finish was a spirited one, Spear landing the son of Sphinx winner by a narrow margin.

Miss Jeanette outclassed her field in the 2:30 trot and won eased up on straight heats.

RAISING PINE NEW INDUSTRY

Seedling Pines Are Being Gathered In Numbers For Nurseries.

A new industry which has sprung up in the Northwest in recent years is the sending from the northern part of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan to nurseries farther South, seedling, or small pine trees. It is said that a quarter of a million of these small trees have been taken out of Northern Wisconsin and Michigan this year, to say nothing of those taken from this state.

The young trees, when taken up from their native soil, are packed in wet moss and shipped to various nurseries where several hundred of acres have been set aside for their cultivation. The idea, it is claimed, is to ship the trees to all parts of the country when they are further grown.

The seedlings taken are only from two to ten inches high while the young trees which are to be sent out from the nurseries will be several feet high. The idea of reforestration through means of the nurseries is somewhat unusual and it is said that this year is the first time that any extensive effort has been made to deal in pine trees in that way.

Pine cones are also said to have considerable value this fall, bringing from 50 cents to $1 per bushel, a number of persons being employed to collect them.

WEDDED

In Quarantine, With Judge at the Telephone.

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—Standing in a telephone booth in his office, Magistrate John McCleary officiated at the ceremony that united in marriage Frederick Mehren, a smallpox patient at death's door, to Mrs. Eva H. Lyon as they clasped hands in the municipal hospital four miles away.

"Do you swear to keep her in sickness and in health?" asked McCleary of the sick man's proxy. The question was repeated to Mehren. "I do," he exclaimed through the transmitter. Mrs. Lyon answered the question herself.

"The law of the state having been complied with, I now pronounce you man and wife," shouted Magistrate McCleary in conclusion.

After saying good-bye to her husband Mrs. Mehren was led away to a fumigating bath.

WOMEN BARRED

From the Funeral of Col. James Boyd.

Morristown, Pa., Oct. 21.—Two policemen stationed at the door with explicit instructions not to permit any women or girls to pass in constituted a strong feature of the funeral of Colonel James Boyd, which was held Wednesday afternoon in his home. Since his wife died in 1876, Colonel Boyd has avoided womankind. He had requested that no woman should be admitted to his funeral and personal invitations were sent by the funeral committee to about one hundred men whom the colonel included among his friends. Nearly all the recipients of invitations attended the services. Among the honorary pallbearers were George F. Baer, president of the Reading railroad, and Wayne MacVeagh. All were either railroad officers or members of the Montgomery county Bar association, of which Colonel Boyd was the nestor, having practiced law sixty-two years.

ANOTHER HILL

Loses Money Which Was Kept Hidden In the House.

Unknown Thief Secures $215 From Empty Egg Case.

An empty egg case proved to be but a poor safety deposit vault for Mrs. Anna Hill, a Finnish woman, who has been employed at Gleason's lodging house at 206 Lake avenue south.

Mrs. Hill had the sum of $215 saved up from her wages. She wrapped the money up in an old rag and hid it in an empty egg case in the kitchen, thinking that it would be safe there.

This morning when she looked into the hiding place to see if the money was safe, she discovered that it was gone. Frantic with grief over the loss of money that represented the savings of nearly two years, she appeared at police headquarters and asked the officers to recover it for her.

The woman could give but little information that was of assistance to the officers. All she knew was that the money was stolen. She had no suspicion as to who was the thief, and beyond a description of the money, the officers have nothing on which to work.

The case is the second one of the kind reported within the last ten days.

Harry Hill, a Finlander of the same name, but no relation to the woman in this case, reported the loss of $451, which was hidden in a trunk. A large part of the money was recovered by the police and two girls are now awaiting the action of the grand jury on the charge of stealing the money.

The police hardly hope to do as well with this case, as their information is very limited, but it is being thoroughly investigated.

"I can hardly conceive of a person choosing such a place to hide money in," said Chief Troyer this afternoon. "It was about as insecure a hiding place as you could conceive of, and I only wonder that she kept it as long as she did."

SUCCESSFUL TRIP.

A. J. Pederson, of The Fair, Returns From East.

A. J. Pederson, of the Fair, Superior, has just returned from another of his special buying trips to the Eastern markets. Buying, as he did for spot cash, he was enabled to make one of the best purchases ever made by the firm, all of which will be placed on special sale as soon as the stocks can be arranged. The women of Duluth and Superior have been led to expect sensational bargains from The Fair's sales of the past, but Mr. Pederson says that at no time in the history of the store have such genuine bargains been secured as the coming sale will offer.

GOLF TOURNEY.

Second Round In the Individual Contests.

Hamilton, Mass., Oct. 21.—The clouds threatened rain and a high wind was blowing when play was started for the second round of the individual contest for the inter-collegiate golf championship on the links of the Myopia Hunt club. Five Harvard players, two from Princeton, and one from Yale remained in the running for this round, thus necessitating two matches in which Harvard men oppose each other. H. BELIEVE STORY

Thief River Falls People Look For Road to Duluth.

P. J. Neff Finds Johnson Sentiment Very Strong There.

"That either the Soo road or the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic is planning to build from Thief River Falls into Duluth appears to be a generally understood fact up in the former city and the adjoining country," said Porter J. Neff, who returned today from a trip through the western part of the state.

"The Soo road has just completed a branch line from Minneapolis to Thief River Falls. I rode on one of the first trains to go over the new branch, and the people up there say that there is to be a line in to Duluth or Superior.

"Surveying parties are said to be already at work on the line, and they seem to accept it as an established fact, although I have not heard anything about it here in Duluth."

When President Fitch of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic was in the city recently he was asked for some confirmation of the rumor, but would say nothing definite concerning it.

It has been reported heretofore that the South Shore road is to extend to Thief River Falls to connect with the Soo road, which is making a number of extensions through Dakota.

"There is a great deal of Dunn dissatisfaction in that district," said Mr. Neff, in speaking of the political situation. "I visited Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, Crookston, Erskine and several other towns, and all along the line I found a large number of the staunchest Republicans who were dissatisfied with Dunn and announced their intention of voting for Johnson for governor.

"That district is supposed to be one of the Dunn strongholds, but several men who are Dunn supporters told me confidentially that they believed Johnson would at least give Dunn a hard fight in that part of the state, and perhaps carry it. The farmers and settlers through that district appear to be familiar with Dunn's record and they appear to be far from satisfied with it.

"C. H. Martz, who was formerly president of the board of public works in Duluth, is located at Erskine, where he has a fine farm of 160 acres. He says he was never happier in his life, and his popularity in the town is evidenced by the fact that everybody calls him 'Charley.'"

Patent Medicine Swindle Successfully Worked In Cass County.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—For a year or two a young man has been disposing of a concoction for catarrh and rheumatism at prices ranging from $20 to $60. The purchaser would sign what was called a contract, but which turned up ultimately as a note. Some people paid and kept quiet, others are squirming, but one man who considers himself swindled declines to pay and has hired a lawyer to fight the case. Legitimate druggists say the stuff would be dear at even $5.

R. R. Bardin, who has been doing the selling, disposed of the notes to banks and elsewhere as quickly as possible, and it is estimated that he has pocketed about $9000. He only took the notes of men who were good, and he readily found speculators to buy "cheap" paper. It is said the trick is now being played in adjacent states and in the east.

The recently organized Fargo Humane society has begun a campaign against draymen and others who are notoriously cruel to their horses.

Minot—Charles Sankey, arrested at Great Falls, Mont., on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, was brought to Minot and lodged in the county jail on a charge of burglarizing the New York store about ten weeks ago. Sankey's room at Great Falls was searched and a quantity of guns, pistols, razors and knives found, besides a sack marked "Minot, N. D.," all of which was recognized as part of the burglars' loot known to have been stolen from the New York store.

In the past month more than twenty-five residences have been started in Minot, the most expensive one being that for Attorney C. A. Johnson, the cost of which will be about $10,000. Over 100 residence buildings have been constructed this year, and the demand for houses is unabated. Rents are higher in Minot than in any other city in the state. There are scores of applications for furnished rooms every week, and there are none to be had. The twenty-five houses under construction are all spoken for, and probably fifty more will be built before cold weather sets in.

Portal—The recent arrest of Albert Walberg for smuggling a load of grain across the line, was followed by the arrest of another supposed violater of the international law, but it developed on preliminary hearing that he was innocent.

Local papers are printing pipe dreams about the wholesale smuggling of grain across the frontier on account of the higher price paid in the states, and while it is true as to the higher price, it is nevertheless a fact that there is comparatively little smuggling. Customs officers at this point are on the alert, and it is safe to say that if there was anything of the kind going on they would get the offenders. Officials are traversing the entire frontier at all times, and it is not reasonable to suppose that men will so place themselves in jeopardy in this way.

Medora—Judge Winchester has isued an injunction restraining the county auditor of Billings county from placing on the official ballot a proposition to vote for an issue of bonds to build a new court house.

Miller—Inspired by deeds of daring by reading dime novels and cheap love stories, after a 2000-mile escapade in which they had many narrow escapes from pursuing officers and farmers' dogs, Ivan Godwin, aged 18, and William Eggbert, aged 17, are now in the Miller jail charged with stealing two valuable horses just east of here.

The boys left their homes in Indianapolis, as they told their parents, to come West and work in the harvest fields. They first stopped at Wessington, where they asked for work of a threshing-machine operator. Because he refused them their choice of the work, they came on, and after hanging around St. Lawrence an afternoon they saddled, bridled and rode northwest, their final destination evidently being Billings, Mont., with two of the most fleet and valuable horses o fthe town. Warrants were sworn out and placed in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Ed Dunn, who found that they had crossed the Missouri river far northwest and gone into North Dakota. Godwin was captured in Emmons county, his horse taken from the man to whom he had sold it and placed in a livery barn at Mandan, and the boy brought back to the scene of the crime, where he practically confessed all.

Now the chase after Egghert was renewed. It was learned that the boys had quarreled in their flight over the division of minor thefts, and had separated. Being without his older partner, Egghert decided to sell his horse and return to the parental roof in Indiana. Arriving there, he wrote a letter to Godwin at Billings, in which he wanted to make up with him, and incidentally prompting him as to the story to tell when he, too, should reach his Indianapolis home, so that the yarns of both regarding the western jaunt would not tangle.

The letter to Godwin was forwarded on from Billings to him at Miller, in care of the sheriff, who at once secured requisition papers and went after the author of the telltale letter. Returning to Miller with the boy, the two met again, this time in jail at midnight.

Bryant—Ole Arne has instituted a suit against the town for damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained by running against an obstruction on a sidewalk.

Evarts—S. J. Smithburger has purchased the State Journal from J. M. Kellogg and will support Democratic candidates and Mitchell for capital.

Mitchell—Sheriff Koch has two men, who were found with a team of horses alleged to have been stolen from this city, arrested at Canton. They gave their names as Martin Sorgott and Carl Woods.

THE BURBANK CASE OPENED

Filipino Woman Who Claims Lieutenant as Her Husband.

Leavenworth, Kan., Oct. 21.—After a year's delay the Burbank case has come up in the district court here for final hearing. First Lieut. Sidney S. Burbank, U. S. A., asks to have set aside an alleged record of an alleged marriage ceremony in the Philippine islands between himself and Mrs. Conception Vasquez. The woman, who is the defendant in the case, claims that she was legally married to Burbank at Valadolid on Jan. 25, 1902.

Lieut. Burbank is engaged to marry Miss Stone, a Leavenworth society girl. The woman from the islands filed her claim with the war department, and the department ordered the proposed marriage postponed until the claims of the woman had been thoroughly investigated. About twenty soldiers were present as witnesses, some for the plaintiff and others for the defense.

The evidence produced by the attorney for Burbank tended to show that the woman was a loose character, and the unreliability of the natives, the carelessness of the native record-keepers, and the existence of a conspiracy against Burbank. His line of defense is that he was hated by Mapa, the justice, who is alleged to have married them, because Burbank's detachment killed Mapa's brother-in-law in a skirmish. Burbank accuses Mapa and others of forming a plot against him because of their hatred.

The case is being watched with keen interest in the army, for there are fifty or sixty officers with Filipino "wives" whose marriage to American girls is being held up pending a decision in Burbank's case.

SOCIETY WOMEN

Ring Up Fares on Trolley For Charity.

Rutland, Vt., Oct. 21.—Fourteen young society women acted as conductors on the cars of the Rutland street railway company for charity in connection with the annual fall festival of the Rutland Missionary association for the benefit of the Old Ladies' home.

One citizen gave $500 for riding a few yards and there were many donations of smaller amounts. Several thousand dollars were cleared.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Menominee Woman Tries to End Her Life By Laudanum.

Menominee—Mrs. Myra McAdams tried to end her life Wednesday evening by drinking laudanum. She was found in an unconscious condition by her husband and her life was saved by physicians.

Sault Ste Marie—Joseph Charlatan, who shot Constable William Irving of the Canadian Soo while under arrest, will be hanged on Dec. 19. The convicted man is 24.

Ontonagon—The Ontonagon board of supervisors has fixed the salaries of the county officials as follows: Judge of probate, $1000; sheriff, $1000; clerk, $1200; treasurer, $1500; prosecuting attorney, $1200; county school commissioner (including expenses), $650; county game warden, $600.

Escanaba—For probably the first time in its history the Delta hospital at Escanaba has not a single medical patient under its roof. There are a number of patients but they are all in the surgical class. The doctors report that there is little sickness in Escanaba now, in striking contrast to the conditions prevailing months ago.

Munising—Joe Marsh, a hunter living near Munising, shot two raccoons the other day. He was bringing home his game when he encountered Deputy Game Warden Benaugh, who informed him that raccoons are protected by law. Marsh was let off with the light fine of $5, when arraigned before a local justice, his violation of the law having been unintentional.

Ironwood—The equipment of presses and type of the Finnish Printing and Publishing company, of Ironwood, will be sold by the mortgagee, the American Type Foundry company today, to satisfy claims against the concern. The venture proved disastrous to the local promoters and supporters of the company, not one of whom it is stated will get back a dollar of the money they put into the enterprise.

UNEASINESS

In Sweden Over Movements of Russians.

Stockholm, Oct. 21.—Recent movements of Russian forces on the Swedish border have caused great uneasiness in official circles.

It is feared that, in order to permit her withdrawal from the far Eastern war, Russia is planning to create a dispute with Norway and Sweden and then seize an Atlantic port. Gen. Horange, former commander of the Swedish forces, is reported to be making a secret investigation of the Russian designs.

WILL OPEN ON TIME.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 21.—The following official information has been given out at the Lewis and Clark centennial headquarters here:

In view of some grossly erroneous reports circulated mainly at St. Louis, it is made necessary to state that the Lewis and Clark centennial and fair will positively open on June 1, 1905. Postponement of the exposition has never for an instant been contemplated, cannot be considered and, from all the advanced preparations, no possible reason exists for postponement.

E. A. S. CLARK CHOSEN TO SUCCEED SCRANTON.

New York, Oct. 21.—Negotiations have been arranged, according to the Herald for the election of a successor to Walter Scranton, who resigned more than a year ago as the president of the Lackawanna Steel company.

E. A. S. Clark, general manager of the International Harvester company, well known in iron and steel circles in the West, has been chosen by the directors, it is stated, and after certain formalities the announcement of his election will be officially made.

Mr. Clark, well known in iron and steel circles in the West, was at one time the general manager of the Illinois Steel

SUPPLY OF APPLES

Fifty Thousand Barrels Will Come Into Duluth Market.

Talk of Scarcity of Turkeys Is Already Being Heard.

"More than 50,000 barrels of winter apples will probably be received in Duluth this year, either for consumption here or for re-shipment to the ranges and the adjoining territory," said one of the Michigan street dealers yesterday.

"This figure is exclusive of the early fall apples many of which were received by rail and of which it is hard to keep track.

"It is safe to say that more than half of these apples will be consumed in Duluth, making an average of from a-haired to a barrel and a half for each family in the city.

"Nearly all of the winter apples come up the lakes from New York state. The price is practically the same as last year. They are selling for from $2.25 to $3.25 per barrel, according to the grade and the variety.

"The crop this year does not appear to be quite as large as last season's, and the receipts in Duluth up to the present time have not been quite so heavy."

The butter and egg markets are firm at the present time, and butter prices are a trifle higher, creamery prints selling for 22½ cents in place of 22. The egg receipts have been rather light and the price has kept firm, showing a tendency to go higher. Fresh eggs are now selling at 20 cents.

* * *

In spite of the rumors concerning rotting in the potato crop, the price remains at 40 cents, and no rise has taken place during the week. The wet weather has undoubtedly had a bad effect on the potatoes, but the crop was such a heavy one that they are still very plentiful and the dealers are able to buy them in almost any quantity for 25 to 30 cents per bushel on the ground.

* * *

Little change has taken place in the fruit market. Grapes are now about the only fruit to be had, with the exception of apples. The grape season is still at its height, and consignments will continue to be received until after the Christmas season.

The usual rumors concerning a scarcity in the turkey supply are again beginning to be heard. Stories of wet weather in the early spring killing all the young birds, and of numerous other causes that will tend to high prices for the holiday birds, are being sent out. Whether these stories have had any effect or whether the farmers are holding back their birds for the holiday trade is not known, but the receipts in the city during the week have been exceedingly light and the price has gone up to 15 cents per pound. The poultry dealers state that the farmers throughout the country to the West are sending in reports of the scarcity of turkeys, and everything seems to point to high prices again this season.

The turkey, however, is fast losing his monopoly as a Thanksgiving delicacy, and housekeepers are beginning to show a willingness to take chickens, or ducks, or geese, if the price of turkeys is boosted to high.

Prices of chickens and ducks are also slightly higher this week, after the big drop taken a week ago. The demand has been fairly good, and receipts have been light.

No changes have taken place in meat prices since last week. The warm, wet weather has had a detrimental effect on the business of the local branch packing houses, all of the dealers report a quiet week's business.

SPECTACLES WORN

By Mother In Court Convicted the Son.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 21.—A pair of gold-bowed spectacles may be the cause of Earl Miller serving a term in the penitentiary for burglary. He was convicted but the jury recommended leniency. The maximum penalty is ten years.

The evidence concerning the spectacles was almost an afterthought.

Attorney T. P. Murphy was engaged in trying to prove an alibi for the defendant, when Martha Turner, of Fort Dodge, whose clothing was stolen from the house of O. E. Craven, 117 Center street, Aug. 15 last, walked over to County Attorney Whitney and whispered. "Ask that Mc-Farland woman what was done with the gold-bowed spectacles, which were in the grip that was stolen."

The query was quietly put to Mrs. McFarland, who had testified she went with Miller to help rob the house.

He said he was going to give the spectacles to his mother," the woman answered.

When Mrs. Miller, mother of the defendant, was on the witness stand, declaring that her son was home the night of the theft and had been home the night Mrs. McFarland had said he was with her, County Attorney Whitney asked the witness:

"Let's see, was it before or after the night of the burglary that your son gave you a pair of gold-bowed spectacles?"

"Why, why, I think it must have been before," the mother replied, "but I don't see what that had to do with this case."

"Have you the spectacles with you?" persisted the state's counsel.

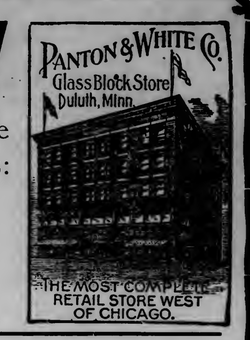

"Yes, here they are," said Mrs. Miller who took them from her nose, still insisting that the spectacles had noahing to do with the case.

County Attorney Whitney then recalled Martha Turner, who identified the spectacles as far as possible as the ones which she had recently bought before the robbery. She was morally certain they were the ones stolen from her.

RATTLESNAKE

Created Consternation at a Seminole Council.

Muskogee, I. T., Oct. 21.—Consternation was created among the members of the Saminole council at Wewoka when a large rattlesnake glided into the tent where the assemblage was being addressed by the attorney of the nation, Capt. A. J. McKinnon. Captain McKinnon was about to kill the snake, when one of the councilmen stoped him, explaining in broken English:

"Him rattlesnake; he come to Seminole council; no other snake do that. He sent by Great Spirit. He go South; that mean Mexico. We must all go Mexico soon."

The captain was told that the rattlesnake had long been a messenger to the Seminole tribe from the Great Spirit. They told him that just before their fight with Jackson in the South, many moons ago, a great rattlesnake crawled from the bank of a lake and came into camp. The medicine men assembled and told the members of the tribe that great trouble was about to come upon them. They would have a great fight, and, as the snake went west, they said a part of the tribe would be driven west. The Indians said that the rattlesnake had been looked upon as a messenger ever since.

Capt. McKinnon apologized for attempting to kill the messenger from the Great Spirit, and appeased the anger of the council by giving the members a box of cigars.

WALKS BACKWARD.

Injury to Spine Affects His Locomotive Powers.

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—Since Charles Ferguson slipped and fell last week, injuring the base of his spine, he has been compelled to walk backwards. He cannot approach any object while looking toward it, but in order to reach it he must "back" up to it. Ferguson's case is one of the most peculiar that has ever been treated at the Children's Homeopathic hispital.

He was taking the harness from the back of his horse in a stable at Marshall and Jefferson streets, when his foot caught in a loose trace and he was thrown. He arose to his feet with difficulty, and discovered that his powers of locomotion were reversed.

Realizing that his case was one for a hospital, he set out afoot for the Children's, four squares away. The first step he took brought him further into the stall.

Astonished at the trick his legs were playing on him, he turned and "backed" out. He "backed" along Marshall street to Thompson and west on Thompson to the hospital.

When he arrived there a mob of nearly 100 curious persons were following" at his toes." He "backed" up the hospital steps and rang the bell. Dr. Schley escorted his strange patient into the receiving ward and tried to diagnose his case.

Ferguson was examined, and it was discovered that the shock resulting from his fall so affected his brain that it lost its positive control over his locomotion, and that he can only propel himself in contrary directions.

Dr. Schley says that it is only a temporary disarrangement, and expects it to wear off in a few days.

SAVES TWO FROM DEATH.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Our niece, who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." PECULIAR CASE

Kentucky Father Arrayed Against Son In Poison Mystery.

Judge Mulligan Defends Wife on Hearing Gossips' Story.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 21.—The alleged attempt to poison the family of Judge James H. Mulligan promises to become one of Kentucky's great criminal cases.

From the night the attempt was frustrated by the negro, Louis Mitchell, breaking down and confessing to Mrs. Mulligan, until the present time, hardly a day has passed that some startling developments has not been brought to light.

When the negro first made his confession to Judge James H. Mulligan, in which he accused Judge Mulligan's son, James J. Mulligan, of being the instigator of the plot, every effort was made by Judge Mulligan to hush the matter up, but in spite of his efforts, when it became generally known that "Jim" Mulligan had been charged with the attempt by the negro, several influential friends of the young man set about to have an investigation and clear his name.

Attorney E. P. Farrell called up the young man by telephone in Chicago, whither he had gone, and asked him to come back and order the investigation, and, from that time, the family skeleton has been dragged before the public through the courts.

At this time Judge Mulligan remained silent, leaving the matter to a committee of friends who had undertaken to act for him.

Following the painful silence of Judge Mulligan some persons circulated the story of an alleged attempt to poison the family had been arranged by Mrs. Mulligan for theatrical effect, in order to further alienate the affections of Judge Mulligan from his son and daughters by his first wife.

When the stories came to his notice, Judge Mulligan issued a statement over his own signature in which he defended the good name of his wife and asked that a thorough investigation of the affair be made by the grand jury.

This last statement was the result of young Mulligan's bringing two detectives here from Chicago to work on the case, and their actions, in shadowing the wife and son of Judge Mulligan, while they were in the court house to appear before the grand jury, so incensed him that he issued the statement. In this statement he said:

"I have stood the slander from this recreant son as long as I can, and from now on the scabbard is off, and it is war to the knife. I give warning to all, whether they be snide lawyers or detectives, that if they invent any slander on my wife or any member of my family, I will avenge it with life's blood, and, if I am killed in the attempt to protect the good name of my wife, I will leave others behind to avenge my death."

All during this remarkable case and the publication of the family troubles, Dr. Louis Mulligan, assistant superintendent of the Eastern Kentucky asylum, located here, has stood by his father and stepmother and has appeared both in the examining trial of the negro, Mitchell, and before the grand jury and given his evidence in regard to the troubles between his own brother, young "Jim" Mulligan, and his step-mother.

Dr. Mulligan said that, although his brother and two sisters had left home, it was not the fault of their step-mother, as she had been as good, kind and affectionate to the first set of children as she had been to her own, and that nothing had ever occurred that would cause his brother and sisters to leave home.

The case has now resolved itself into a fight between father and son.

The case is of unusual interest owing to the prominence of Judge Mulligan, who is one of the most noted lawyers and literary lights in this state. During the term of President Cleveland he was appointed counsel to Samoa and while there his son "Jim," who has always been regarded as the favorite of his father, acted in the capacity of private secretary. For the past three years young Mulligan has been living in Chicago, and, three days before the attempt was made to exterminate the family, he came here to attend the wedding of his sister, Miss Mollie Mulligan.

While here he did not go to the home of his father, but asked him over the phone for a conference at the law office of Judge Mulligan. The latter did not meet his son from the fact that the was advised not to by Dr. Louis Mulligan.

Instead of meeting him, Judge Mulligan sent his son a note by the negro Mitchell, who has been a servant in the family for twelve years. Now Mitchell charges that it was when the young man read the note that he unfolded the plot to poison and promised him $100 to carry it out.

After placing the poison in some fish and and after it had been placed on the table for lunch, the negro weakened and told of the plot.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Letters were sent to Messrs. Hearst, Sulzer, Towne, Baker and Laughlin, nominees for congress on the Democratic ticket in New York, officially notifying them that they also have been nominated by the People's party.

Suffering from acute nervous disorders, Dr. George H. Purviance, of Washington, D. C., assistant surgeon general of the marine hospital service, jumped from the fourth story window of the Orthopaedic hospital at Philadelphia Thursday and was instantly killed. He was about 63 years old.

William Schwarting, president of the Farmers' bank at Walcott, Iowa, committed suicide Thursday by hanging. He is said to have been despondent over the loss of money in connection with the failure of a bank at New Liberty. As a consequence of the failure of the New Liberty bank, charges have been preferred against the Benthiens, father and son.

CLEAN-UP CRUSADE

That Caused the Office Towel to Explode.

Eldorado, Iowa, Oct. 21.—Bailey or Britt, the Iowa editor, prints the following on the clean-up crusade which the mayor of Council Bluffs has inaugurated:

"Council Bluffs has a mayor who ought to be obliged to die the rest of his days on bean soup and eat it out of a jug with a gimlet. He notified the leading newspaper of that town to clean its front windows. The editor obeyed the order, and then got more than even by calling upon the mayor to clean the streets. The stuff from the windows and window sills had filled the streets with debris, and it took the entire city force hours to gather it up and put it away.

"The brilliant light has now made six of the newspaper's compositors blind, and melted all of the rollers of the press; besides that, no one could find the office for three days, it was so changed. The sun's rays exploded the office towel, and the ink on the towel catching fire melted the type in the office and it ran out of the second-story window onto the street car track and soldered the switch solid, so that a man starting to Lake Manawa to swim went to Omaha and was run in by the police."

Bronchitis Neglected Ends in Consumption

The Life of Bricklayer W. J. Hales, of Houston, Texas, Providentially Saved by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, When Dangerously Ill With Lung Trouble.

Mr. W. J. HALES After His Cure by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

"I hope my close shave will be a warning to thousands of fellow workmen who think a cold too trival to bother with. I let mine run until it ended in chronic bronchitis so deeply rooted that it affected my lungs. Then I rushed for the doctors, but it was too late. They did me no good. I had to quit work. The grave stared me in the face. I was nervous, lost sleep, strength and flesh.

Fortunately at this stage I read something about Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, and determined to try it. What it did for me is forcibly told by my portrait. It completely cured me, and made me stronger, fatter and healthier than I'd ever been before. For over a year now I haven't had a cold, ache or pain of any description. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is a perfect wonder, and saved my life."—W. J. HALES, 1902 Pease Ave., Houston, Texas, Aug. 26, 1904.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

CHECKS THROAT TROUBLES IN BEGINNING—CURES AT ANY STAGE.

As in Mr. Hales' case, when a cold gets a start you never know what's to follow. Ninety-nine cases out of a hundred of consumption, bronchitis, grip, pneumonia and diphtheria start with a cough. Malaria, ague, typhoid fever and nervous breakdown are the immediate consequence of letting the system get into a low state of vitality, but generally begin with a cold. Check the cold right at the start with Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and be on the safe side. If you have let any of these troubles get a hold, or if you have indigestion, "Duffy's" will cure you, no matter how bad you are. Nine thousand doctors and hospitals use it exclusively. Druggists and grocers everywhere sell it. $1.00 a bottle. Nothing gives health to the sick, strength to the young and weak, and vigor to the aged and broken down so quickly and thoroughly. It is absolutely pure and free from fusel oil.

WARNING:—You need no other medicine, but be certain to get the genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, put up only in sealed bottles, with the "Old Chemist" trade-mark on the label. Don't be deceived by unreliable dealers into accepting a substitute that will not cure, but will do you harm. They tell you "is's just as good as Duffy's," because there is a little more profit in it for them. The genuine is never sold in bulk.

REMEY MAKES UNIQUE RECORD

Albuquerque, N. M., Oct. 21.—William B. Remey, son of Rear Admiral Remey, formerly of Burlington, Io., has established a record for horseback riding which is unique even in a country where the broncho is the universal mode of conveyance.

Mr. Remey came to New Mexico a year ago and during the last year has traveled several thousand miles on horseback, having ridden from Albuquerque to the Grand Canyon, in Arizona, and back, and made numerous shorter trips. For several months he was in the saddle almost continuously day after day, and wore out several horses, his mounts ranging from a lank range stallion to a buckskin cayuse.

Equipped with a combrero flannel shirt, corduroys and a sixshooter, Mr. Remey explored almost every nook and cranny of this part of New Mexico. He several times climbed the rugged trail to the top of the Bosca, the highest peak in this vicinity, and spent many nights in the open, his saddle and horse blankets comprising his bed, sometimes at an altitude of 10,000 feet, where the nights are cold even in hottest summer.

Once he visited the Pueblo Indian village of Isleta, and spent the night there, sleeping on the ground. The Pueblo Indians are not fond of American callers, especially the kind that stay all night. But Mr. Remey carefully attended to his own business, and they did not molest him. They gathered around in a curious and picturesque group to watch the "Americano" prepare his meal and bed. From the number of onlookers who watched his exit from the village the next morning, Mr. Remey was unable to decide whether these inhabitants of the desert were a greater curiosity to him than he had proved to them.

Near Magdalena, N. M., one time, Mr. Remey was overtaken by an armed posse who ordered him to hold up his hands and keep them there. He had often read of old time robberies of the western stage-coach, but he had never before experienced the situation of pointing his thumbs toward heaven at the instance of a battery of sixshooters while an angry mob debated his eligibility to a noose. After a careful search and due deliberation he was allowed to drop his arms and proceed on his journey.

He soon learned that a Magdalena bank had been robbed, and, being a stranger in a strange land, he was a suspicious character. He passed quickly through Magdalena and was hurrying on his way, congratulating himself that he had escaped the posse with so little inconvenience, when a second gang of deputy sheriffs hove in sight and again his arms were put up, while a court-martial was held over him. Finally he was allowed to go his way.

Although not yet 25, Mr. Remey has traveled extensively in Europe, having spent two years in France and Switzerland.

"DRY LAND" FARMS

In Montana Are Now the Most Prolific.

Great Falls, Mont., Oct. 21.—Paris Gibson, senator from Montana, preached twenty years ago the doctrine of the possibilities of this state as a farming region, and, although the original inhabitants—mostly stockmen—laughed long and loud at the idea of a man making a living on a homestead in Montana, the accuracy of the senator's forecast is now evidenced throughout great areas of this state.

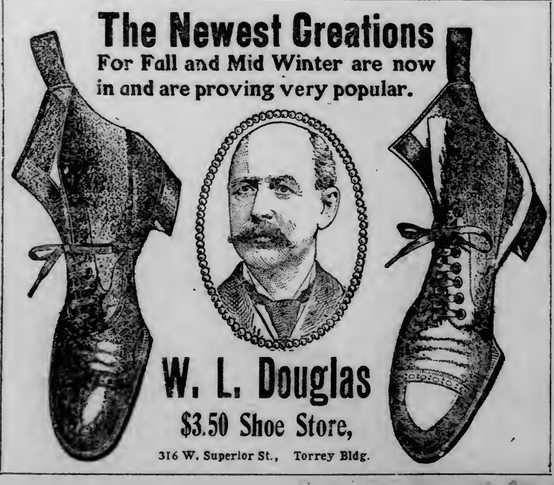

This dry farming land before it is broken looks as much like a desert as a rain belt farmer can well imagine. When the records for the last twelve years show the rainfall to average only 14 inches a year, the stranger would, without consideration, condemn the country as "fit only for the abode of wild beasts and wilder men."

But the soil is a wonderful black loam, and the rainfall comes just at the right time to nourish the crops. Without a drop of irrigation water yields are made of 40 bushels of wheat to the acre, 75 bushels of oats, 2 tons of timothy, 3 tons of alfalfa, 400 bushels of potatoes and other remarkable returns.

The banner yields are beyond ordinary belief. W. B. Talbot, near Great Falls, raised last year 308 bushels of potatoes on a quarter of an acre and sold 175 bushels for seed at $2 a bushel.

IN COPPER CIRCLES

More Sinking Necessary at the Allouez Than Was Expected.

Fate of the Adventure Still Hangs In the Balance.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sinking at the Allouez, which was suspended because of the diamond drill hole put down from the sump through the lode, has been resumed. The dip of the lode has been proven unexpectedly sharp, and there remains more sinking to be done than had been figured on, hence there will be little news from the Allouez until early next spring, when the lode should be reached by the shaft.

Centennial has about cleaned up its stockpiles, which have been sent to the mill from day to day since stamping was begun, and the returns secured from the mill hereafter will show an increase, due to a better average grade of rock being stamped. The Centennial management is giving out no figures of rock stamped, or percentage of fine copper secured.

Atlantic is showing a gain latterly in the percentage of copper carried by its rock. The Atlantic is such a low-grade proposition that everything broken between the foot and hanging walls is sent to the mill, and an increase of two or three pounds of copper per ton of rock stamped, while apparently trivial, in reality means greatly increased net earnings. The Atlantic is doing well this year, and will earn about $1 per share, in addition to which there are the prospects of opening one or two good mines on the square mile of section 16, which carries both the Isle Royale and Baltic lodes close to rich mines opened thereon.

Good progress is being made at the Victoria millsite, in completing foundations and preparing for the erection of the one-sthamp mill. The stamp itself, with much washing machinery, boilers, engine and miscellaneous fittings, shafting and sundries, was bought from the Belt mine, and the old plant, with the addliton of more modern jigs and tables for saving the fines, should do efficient work.

The new shaft of the Isle Royale, on section 11, is now down about 150 feet, and drifts have been started both north and south on the first level. The shaft was started in the foot of the lode, which carries the best values, and has gone, gradually, well over to the hanging wall, as the lode swings to a sharper angle in its descent, by reason of which the rock taken form the bottom of the shaft, while much above the average of the district, is not so rich as nearer surface, when the shaft remained close to the footwall. The lode is so rich, however, that practically every foot of the course penetrated is fit to send to mill, without selection, as soon as broken.

The fate of the Adventure still hangs in the balance, and it will be some months before its future is known delinitely to its management. There is no attempt on the part of its officials to minimize the serious nature of the condition in which the property is placed, but there is hope that the mine may pull through. Under the superintendency of Samuel Brady, of the Michigan, former economies have been increased and the property is running about as close to the wind as possible. Just at present the feeling is somewhat more hopeful than previously. The Adventure has some very rich ground, but the rich bunches are like the oysters in the church stew—few and far between—and there is much dead work to be done in ground that either is barren, or else very low in grade. Furthermore, the property is handicapped by the possession of seven parallel cupriferous beds. Were the mineral values contained in these seven beds, scattered over a belt about 1000 feet in width, concentrated in one or two beds of average width, the property would be a bonanza. As it is much time has been lost and large sums expended in attempting to open mines on five of the seven copper-bearing lodes. It is evident that the only hope of the Adventure lies in doing what the Mass has done, which is, to draw in its scattered energies and devote the time and money at its command to the development of a single lode, with, perhaps, a little development work in the better stopes on the other lodes, such work to be discontinued whenever the stopes turn so poor that something better than a new dollar for an old one cannot be seen immediately ahead of the pick. All this has been learned by experience, and while foreseen, perhaps, by some of the wise men engaged in holding postmortems, it is unfortunate that none of the gentlemen in question happened to go on record with their valuable opinions at an earlier date, when everybody but themselves knew less about the matter than today.

The Wyandot management is feeling cheerful over the prospects of getting the making of a mine in the new lode, on which work was begun this month. The lode looks more promising than anything yet opened by the Wyandot people, who have spent five years of time and several hundred thousand dollars of cash in securing about as poor results as ever have been secured for as much time and money as have been spent honestly and intelligently in this case. When the new lode was found, nearly a year ago, the company had but a little of it on the Wyandot lands, and not enough money to exploit it if more ground was secured, but the proceeds of an assessment have bettered the company's finances, and options of adjacent lands give nearly a mile of the lode's strike, so that the Wyandot will have ample ground in which to open a big mine, provided the work just begun proves that the copper is there for the mine's making.

The last lingering doubt that the amygdaloid opened in section 15 by the Superior Copper company is the northern extension of the Baltic has been dispelled effectually by the finding of the parallel cupriferous amygdaloid, at about the same distance as in the Baltic, Trimountain and Champion mines. The shaft on the Superior property is about fifty feet in depth, and has been fitted with a temporary headgear for sinking, and a small steam plant, adequate for development work.

Statements in Eastern publications that the Wolverine is making copper for 6 cents per pound are received with some incredulity locally, though it is certain that the Wolverine is making the metal for less than 7 cents, and it is possible, though scarcely probable, that the 6-cent mark has been reached. The company is getting better smelter returns than ever before and the earnings for the present fiscal year will be the best ever secured in all likelihood.

No. 5 shaft of the Mohawk, now in the ledge, makes a brave showing of copper in the few feet of rock penetrated. There is ample reason for believing that the new shaft will prove equal to the average of the mine, if not richer, and, some eighteen months later, should be of material assistance in feeding the mill.

Just as the Tamarack had completed an extensive campaign of betterments, and was supplying a full quota of rock once more, a broken hoist caused two weeks' delay and reduced the tonnage hoisted, though the rock supply cut off temporarily has been eked out as much as possible, from other sources. Eastern talk of a Tamarack dividend at the close of the year is premature. The property has made no net earnings so far this year, what would have been profits having gone back into betterments at the mine, and the net earnings for the balance of 1904 will not be large enough to render it advisable to declare any dividend this year. By June, 1905, if all goes as well as now promises, Tamarack shareholders should be rewarded for their patience with a small disbursement "on account."

Quincy production is showing gains latterly, and it is possible that last year's output of refined copper may be equalled, or slightly exceeded, despite the time lost in last winter's strike, and the repairs to the big hoist that put No. 7 shaft out of commission for some weeks.

While the season of navigation on the great lakes will not end for nearly eight weeks, the copper country ports will be closed by ice within four to six weeks, being on an arm of Lake Superior, and copper is being forwarded as rapidly as possible from local smelters, to secure the saving of about $8 per ton afforded by lake transportation to Buffalo.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

In the United States there are about 400 Christian Science churches, with about 100,000 adherents. According to Mrs. Eddy, its founder, the church is making tremendous strides in popularity, in which respect it resembles pillsbury's vitos, the popular cereal food.

BURGLARIES IN NEBRASKA

State Led Country In the Number of Bank Robberies.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 21.—More banks in Nebraska suffered from burglaries during the year ending Sept. 1, 1904, than those in any other state of the Union or Canada, according to the report made to the American Bankers' association.

Whether the number of depredations was the reason for establishing an office of the secrecy in Omaha last summer is not stated. The facts regarding the Nebraska robberies are revealed in the records of the crimes of this kind perpetrated in the United States and the Dominion of Canada.

Of fifty successful burglaries during the year nine were in Nebraska, or nearly one-fifth of the total number. Iowa is second with six. The proportion of cases where the thieves carried off booty is greater than where they failed only five were in Nebraska and three in Iowa. The banks of the Antelope states lost $14,-919, while $6633 of Hawkeye money was carried away.

But if Nebraska leads in bank robberies it has the satisfaction of knowing that it is still further in the lead in the matter of apprehending and punishing the criminals. Nine were sentenced during the year, not all of them, however, for depredations committed during that period. When it is taken into consideration that there were only twenty-four convictions in the United States during the twelve months, the proportion of convictions in this state is seen to be large. In the same time Iowa convicted four bank robbers and sentenced them to long terms.

In the report the detective do not tell why Nebraska and Iowa have been troubled so much by the "yeggman," as safe crackers are called. The two states have not been pestered so much as Eastern localities with swindling through raised drafts, forged checks and the like. But in old-fashioned bank robberies this state carries off all the honors. The summary shows this:

Oct. 16, 1903, State bank, Hubbard	1,100
Oct. 17, 1903, State bank, Farnam	2,485
Nov. 17, 1903, First National bank, Lyons	1,451
Jan. 18, 1904, Bank of McLean, McLean	250
Jan. 25, 1904, Bank of Murdock, Murdock	1,180
April. 19, 1904, Bank of Napier, Napier	1,702
Sept. 19, 1904, Farmers and Merchants' bank, Byron	2,539

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH.

A Pleasant, Simple, But Safe and Effectual Cure For It.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart or lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this comon and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. R. S. Workman, Chicago, Ill., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge there from passing backward into the throat reaches the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, catarrah of stomach, billousness, sour stomach heartburn and bloating after meals.

ALARMED BY SOCIALISTS

The Throne and Church Are at Stake In Italy.

Rome, Oct. 21.—The political situation in Italy, in view of the general elections, set for Nov. 6, is such as to cause serious alarm both at the Vatican and at the Quirinal.

The socialistic movement has made enormous strides in the last few years among all classes. While it has for its apparent purpose the bettering of the conditions of the working people, in reality it threatens the very foundation of monarchial institutions and the existing order of things.

This year, since the dissolving of parliament and the setting of the date for the general elections all the extreme parties have come together. The Socialists have united with the Republicans and anarchists to get a majority in parliament with prospects of success.

Premier Giolitti is moving all manner of encouragement to monarchial candidates, and to preserve order, has called out the militia reserves, which will not only help to repress all violations of law, but, under gentle pressure, will contribute many thousand votes to the monarchial cause.

Fearing, however, the enormous majority of socialists among the voters, the government has entered into a secret understanding with the Vatican by which some Catholics of monarchial proclivities will be allowed to run for parliament in districts where religious lines will form the principal issues of the campaign.

The present aim of the Socialists and Extremists is to overthrow the existing cabinet and substitute a Socialistic ministry through a majority in parliament, which could obstruct all legislation.

The recent general strike, ordered on the pretext of military interference in disputes between employers and employes, was only a forerunner of what the Socialists intended to do at the elections. The leaders, many of whom are now candidates, say their followers and sympathizers are so numerous as to insure for the party a large majority in the election.

The government's principal hope of success lies in the fact that nearly all the wealth of individuals and institutions is invested in government bonds, and many, who otherwise might support a Socialist candidate, will be deterred from doing so because a revolution or the overthrow of the government would lessen the value of such securities and rob thousands of their incomes.

The aVtican authorities are doing their utmost to prevent a Socialist victory, fearing legislation adverse to the church, especialy regarding the religious orders and religious teaching in the public schools. For this reason they readily agreed to give the government all possible help, notwithstanding the long feud with the Italian authorities regarding temporal power. Prominent Catholics are being urged to support the government, but, though such urging is secret, it has already aroused Socialist susceptibilities.

Many fear that Vatican intervention in Italian politics will increase the efforts of the Socialist party, whose members bitterly oppose the church and religion. Even many Christian democratic associations, which have been recently rebuked by the Vatican for attempted Independence are making common cause with their brethren in the Socialistic field, and, unless energetic measures are adopted by the church authorities, this contemplated action of the Christian democrats will greatly swell the ranks of the Socialist and Extremist parties in opposition to the present government and to the monarchial regime.

DAVID HARUM IN REAL LIFE

Grove Hurlburt Who, Although Worth $100,000, Wore Rags.

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 21.—Grove Hurlbut, one of the most remarkable characters in the Berkshires, who died at his home in this city last week, was 84 years old. He could neither read nor write, but amassed a fortune estimated at $100,000 through shrewd Yankee tinding.

Hurlbut was well known to thousands of summer visitors in Pittsfield. He walked about the business streets in old and ragged clothing, and in appearance might have been taken for a farmer from a rural Berkshire town.

He was a sailor in early life, and he admitted killing twelve persons in one fight with a knife. He said he preferred a sharp knife to a revolver in an altercation. He made thousands of dollars selling ties sixty years ago from the Berkshire hills to the Western railroad, now the Boston & Albany.

No David Harum was more shrewd in a horse trade or a real estate deal than Hurlbut. His real estate holdings in Berkshire comprised about 4000 acres, in amount being only second to the October Mountain estate of the late William C. Whitney. He owned practically all the shore of Pontoosuc lake.

He was a friend of the late Senator Henry L. Dawes, and said he handled Mr. Dawes' campaign fund in Lanesboro. For the last fifty years there has hardly been a court sitting in which Hurlbut did not have a case on the trial list, and he was frequently called the "Court of Appeals."

Hurlbut was an infidel. He believed neither in God nor immortality. He would say, "The Bible was written only for shallow minded and weak minded women. It was written to sell, and they were no fools who did it."

Hurlbut was 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighed 206 pounds. He was never known to wear a collar or necktie. He detested "boiled shirts" and "store clothes," and the last time he wore them was at the funeral of Senator Dawes, two years ago.

Born in the west part of Pittsfield, Hurlbut ran away from the farm when a boy and walked to Boston. He was gone six years on the sea. Always a Republican in politics, he at one time turned the election in Berkshire county by having fifty woodchoppers employed by him register and vote his ticket. For the last six years he had lived in a $10,000 Colonial house in a fashionable residential section of Pittsfield, near the Country club.

He called every woman "Hannah," and addressed well-known persons by their first name, though he hardly knew them. He is survived by a widow and three children.

West Duluth

The W. C. T. U., of West Duluth, held a very interesting open meeting in Gilley's hall last evening. There was a fairly large attendance. A discussion was entered into as to the merits of a plan to provide a room or rooms for boys of this part of the city to spend their spare time in.

Mrs. H. R. Patterson read a comprehensive and able paper on the subject, and several others expressed an opinion and advanced suggestions relative to it. Mrs. C. R. Keyes, as president of the union, presided over the meeting, and Mrs. Patterson acted as leader.

There was a short musical and literary program, followed by the serving of refreshments, and the meeting, at the conclusion of the business session, developed into a pleasant social gathering.

Secretary Phil Bevis, of the Duluth Y. M. C. A., was present and talked of the association work, speaking particularly of the juvenile department. Miss Lella Sparks gave a recitation which greatly pleased her hearers, and Misses Jessie Noxon and Vera Rockwell delighted the audience with a piano duet. Rev. H. W. Johnson, Rev. F. G. Clark and D. C. Eddy made short talks on the matter in hand. It is expected that steps will be taken within the next few days towards securing quarters for the boys.

HUNTING IS BETTER.

Ducks Are Now Gathering on St. Louis River.

Duck hunting along the St. Louis river is said to be better this week than it has been for some time past. The disagreeable weather has prevented many from going up the stream with their guns in search of the birds, and as a consequence ducks are more numerous than would otherwise be the case.

They are also coming down from the north in larger numbers now than they were earlier in the season, and from now on until the river freezes there will be more or less hunting along the river. For two or three weeks, earlier in the season, there were so many gunners out in their boats that the birds had small chance of escape, and those that did not fall victims to the sportsmen were most of them frightened to quieter waters.

STORK VISIT PROFITABLE

American Birth Insurance Company Is Organized In Boston.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 21.—In order that ample preparations may be made for the visit of the stork in any household, and to make such calls welcome, prominent women of this city, noted for their work along the line of advancement of their sex, have incorporated the American Birth Insurance company.

By taking advantage of this unique scheme, a mother, after the payment of an initiation fee and certain monthly dues, may at the birth of each child receive from $200 to $500.

Business will be begun by the company as soon as the names of 500 members are filed with the commissioner of insurance, together with dues of $3 each. It is said that the requisite number of members has been secured.

The president of the American Birth Insurance company is Mrs. Estelle M. H. Merrill, of Boston, and secretary and treasurer Miss Emma Menter.

On the advisory board are Miss Mary A. Livermore, who is so well known to every American; Mrs. Martha Dyer, jr., noted for her philanthropic work, now president of the Charity and Wintergreen clubs; Mrs. Mary E. Parmelyen Rice, president of the Mothers' and Fathers' club of Boston; Dr. Mary E. Jones, president of the Ladies' Physiological institute of Boston; Mrs. Agnes C. Fall, of Malden, who is said to have received one of the largest retainers ever paid a woman attorney; Dr. C. Patterson, of Boston, and Marian A. McBride, of Arlington.

Initiation fee is $3, annual dues $1, and there is a monthly assessment of $3. After the tenth payment, if a living child is born, the mother receives $200; after the nineteenth, $300; after the twenty-eighth, $400, and after the thirty-seventh, $500. It is stipulated, however, that eighteen months must elapse between the birth of each child in any one family.

The great object as expressed by the president and in its literature is to regulate the birth as far as possible and to provide for a parenthood thought, rather than chance, as is almost universal at the present time.

"If we can but accomplish this object," said Mrs. Merrill, "we can remake the United States and solve one of the greatest sociological questions of the age."

Mrs. Merrill said they had applications for membership from as far away as Africa and India.

GAVEL DOWNS THE DOCTORS

"Exposure" Gets No Hearing From Chicago Medical Society.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—An attempt to bring up before the Chicago Medical society the matter of the recent exposure of commission paying by some Chicago physicians was gaveled down by Dr. J. B. Murphy, the president. The disaffected ones withdrew to the lobby of the public library building, where an indignation meeting was held, which was addressed by Dr. F. A. Leusman.

While a motion to adjourn was being made Dr. Leusman was clamoring for the floor, but was not recognized by the chairman. The question was put by the chairman and declared carried before those who were siding with Dr. Leusman knew exactly where they were. Afterwards Dr. Murphy explained to the members clustered around him to protest against his arbitrary action that it was contrary to the bylaws of the society to bring up business questions at the monthly meetings. The place for the discussion, he said, was before the executive council.

In the afternoon Dr. Murphy consulted with the two doctors who made the investigation and were responsible for the sending out of the decoy letter, and he satisfied himself that the thing had been done in a manner which could not be impeached and with a view to the best interests of the medical profession. At any rate, he declared himself satisfied.

All during the meeting of the society and the reading of the papers there was apparent an undercurrent of excitement among the physicians. Sounds of a heated argument just outside of the hall could be heard every time the doors swung open.

There was only one topic, and that was the "exposure." Many opinions were expressed, some declaring heartily in favor of what had been done and others that it would cause harm. In the meeting the only mention of the subject which was permitted to escape was when Dr. Emil Ries arose to propose a vote of thanks to those who had read papers, and incorporated a motion that Dr. Murphy be thanked for the "notoriety" he had achieved. The motion was not put.

The "outside" meeting was attended by nearly all who had been in the hall. Dr. Leusman assailed the investigation started by the two medical men and at the same time demanded that the president be vindicated.

"What I wanted to say in the meeting, if they had let me talk, was this, that our profession has been attacked in public, and we ought to have a chance to defend ourselves. I was going to propose that a committee of three be appointed to find out who had perpetrated this dastardly trick, that they might be expelled from the society. I don't believe our president would lend himself to such a scheme, and I want him vindicated. As they would not let me bring this matter up at this meeting, I will take it over to the next one if you will stand by me."

MONTE CARLO MASCOT.

Yankee Stoker Set The Pace At Roulette.

"When I read the other morning about that Governors Island prisoner who made his escape in the riding breeches, the evening coat, the dress shirt and the red four-in-hand necktie belonging to one of the officers, I thought of Monte Carlo," said a naval officer to the New York Sun. "This may sound foolish, and so I'll tell the bit of a story that explains it:

"One autumn morning in the late '80s when I was attached to the flagship of the Mediterranean station, the ship pulled into the harbor of Ville-franche. All hands of the starboard watch were given liberty.

"The paymaster and I went ashore together. Neither of us had ever visited Monte Carlo, and we had long been promising ourselves a view of the principality of Monaco and a bit of play at the tables, just for the experience of the thing, and because in those days a naval officer who hadn't at least taken a peek at the Monte Carlo game was rather patronized by his messmates.

"We arrived at Monte Carlo in the afternoon, and after strolling about the place we started for the Casino. As we were entering we saw a fireman from our ship, an odd looking, redheaded Bowery boy named Rooney, trying to convince the pompous attendant at the door that he was entitled to enter the place in his blue-jacket uniform.

"The attendant couldn't see it. He couldn't speak English, but he shrugged his shoulders disdaintully as he interposed his large frame between the fireman and the passageway into the Casino.

"Rooney was addressing the doorkeeper eloquently in his tough New York dialect, but it was no use. The man at the door wouldn't budge from his position. Then Rooney, grinning amiably at all the time, began to cuss out the attendant.

"He looked as if he might be addressing compliments to the stumptuously uniformed attendant, but if the doorman had had any idea of the horrible things the fireman was saying to him there'd probably have been a riot and an international incident to follow.

"At this stage of it the paymaster and I made our presence known to the fireman.

"'What's the trouble, Rooney?' I asked him.

"The fireman saluted in form, and then looked sheepish.

"'Nothin', sir,' he replied, 'ceptin' that the dago won't let me git by him in me uniform. And I'm feeling a lot lucky this afternoon.'

"'Well, that's their rule, Rooney,' I told him. But I'll tell you what to do. If you're so anxious to get in—and as my suggestion isn't exactly regulations, you want to keep it to yourself when you get back to the ship. Do you mind? You run down to Nice, shed your bluejacket togs for a while, and rent yourself a suit of mufti. Then come back and they'll admit you all right.'

"The odd looking Rooney looked grateful for the advice, wheeled about and was off at a jog.

"The paymaster and I entered the Casino and watched the play for an hour or so, and then we ventured a few modest louis at one of the rouge-et-noir tables. We were still immersed in the game, not much winner or loser, when we heard a loud laugh over at one of the roulette tables, and we looked up to see what the fun was.

"The laugh was over our fireman, Rooney, who had just entered and was beginning play at the roulette table. Rooney was a figure of fun, if ever I saw one.

"He had rented an evening suit that was about four sizes shy of being big enough for him. The excrutiatingly tight trousers of the suit were about six inches too short, and their shortness afforded a fine view of Rooney's government straight brogans and white sox.

"His shirt was an elaborate pink checked affair, and his necktie was a huge red bow-knot. The sleeves of his coat only reached down to a point a bit below his elbows, which accentuated the immensity of his huge, ham-like hands. His shock of fiery red hair stood straight on end, and the coal-dust still clinging to the under lids of his blue eyes made it appear as if he had pencilled them that way, clown-wise, and had forgotten to wash off his make-up.

"Rooney grinned from ear to ear when he saw us looking at him, but the laughter of the blase people surrounding the table didn't bother him in the least, and he began to scatter his louis around on the roulette numbers.

"He was lucky from the jump, and inside of a quarter of an hour he had a fine stack of gold heaped in front of him. His the Russian, he played the limit with tention of many of the players and strollers in the room, and the men and women players at the table patronized by Rooney left off risking their gold for the fun of watching the queer moves of the unabashed fireman.

"He won so steadily that presently a Russian Grand Duke, who had been idly pushing little stacks of gold on the numbers, began to follow the fireman's play closely, risking on each turn of the marble many times the amounts risked by the fireman, and finally making it maximums every time on the numbers selected by the red headed furnace-feeder. Rooney's luck stayed right with him, and the Russian Grand Duke took down vast sums, while Rooney kept on with his five-louis plays.

"Then a dissipated looking young Englishman, a chip of the nobility who has since mended his ways and distinguished himself in English politics, took a hand at the fireman's play. He, too, followed exactly the numbers picked out by Rooney for his five-louis ventures, and, like the lead of a United States man-o'-war each whirl of the marble.

"Right on top of this a Hungarian Countess, noted as a plunger at that time, took up the fireman's game, or lack of a game, and then there were three utterly reckless limit players—people who were notorious throughout Europe for their daring gambling—deliberately following the lead of a nUited States man-o'-war fireman in bucking Monte Carlo roulette game.

"Rooney steadfastly resisted the temptation to raise his bets, but continued right along with his five-louis plays on the numbers, the three plungers following him on every play. This they stuck to it for hours, while scores of persons many of them notables, stood curiously about the table and peered over one another's shoulders to watch the play.

"At 9 o'clock that evening, when Rooney had no less than 1200 gold louis heaped up in front of him, and the three others following his game had positive pyramids of gold in front of their places, an official of the Casino approached the table —as it had been expected for some time that he would—and announced to messieurs and mesdames that the game was temporarily suspended.

"Rooney was on board the flagship, clean and sober as a judge, when the paymaster and I returned to the ship, and on the following morning he deposited the 1200 louis with the paymaster, to be kept for him until the wind-up of this cruise.

"The paymaster and I met the young Englishman who had profited so finely by following the fireman's play the next time we visited the Casino, a couple of days later. He had just had a vast losing, and he somewhat ruefully asked us where that red-haired beggar of a man-o'-war's man was, and when he was going to again visit Monte Carlo.

"'One week in that bloomin' lucky stoker's wake,' he declared, with a round oath, 'and I'd own the whole principality!'"

WALKAWAY MONEY.

"The best snap with any show is that of selling tickets," said the veteran circus man to the New York Sun. "Give me the walkaway money of any good-sized show, and I care not who gets the big salaries.

"The walkaway money is the varying pile of coin that is left behind by the hasty men who forget about having change coming to them, and it amounts to many dollars in the course of a month. With even the smallest shows it amounts to considerable, and with the big ones it will go as high as $25 a performance sometimes.

"On nearly every occasion when a show is in town some fellow will go home sore and charge that he was short-changed, when the fact is he was at fault himself. There is always a rush at the wagon, and when a man sticks a dollar inside the window he is in a hurry to get inside the big tent and see the animals.

"He will either grab the change at the same time he gets his ticket or he will walk away and leave it behind. If he doesn't return with a holler, the money is shoved to one side in the walkaway pile, and goes into the ticket man's pocket after the sale is over.

"The rakeoff is a perquisite of the ticket seller, because when there is any shortage, when the tickets at the door do not correspond with the cash on hand, he makes good.

"The West is the rich field for the ticket seller. Out at Cripple Creek $20 gold pieces are more plentiful than dollars, and there have been times in that region when the walkaway money amounted to as much as $150 a day.

"The miners all turn out to a show, and they all pay in gold. A man will come up, slap down a $20 gold piece and walk away without his change, because his attention is momentarily attracted by a conversation or a call from a friend. One or two come back to make a yelp, and their money is promptly handed out to them.

"With a big show the rakeoff from this source will run up to an average of nearly $50 a day. If a man comes around and puts up a kick about being short-changed, he cannot get up an argument with the ticket seller. His orders are that as long as he has any walkaway money in sight he is to shell out.

"Of course, if there has been none left behind at that particular performance the kicker gets turned down, because he is known to be a liar; but as a general proposition a man who wants to lie for half a dollar can make it pay by backing up to a ticket seller after a lively rush for tickets."

CONTEMPT FOR LAW

By President Roosevelt Is Clearly Shown In Panama Episode.

Senator Culberson Furnishes Additional Light on Disgraceful Affair.

New York, Oct. 21.—Under the auspices of the Reform club, a Democratic mass meeting was held here last night at Carnegie hall, at which Senator Charles A. Culberson, of Texas, Governor Andrew J. Montague, of Virginia, and Borough President Martin W. Littleton, of Brooklyn, were the speakers.

Senator Culberson devoted the greater part of his remarks to a discussion of the Panama canal, giving in detail the revolution by which Panama became an independent state and the subsequent negotiations which resulted in the canal treaty. Alluding to what he termed "the spirit of lawlessness, which led the president, in this disgraceful affair," he declared that the transaction "above all others in his career, strikingly typifies his contempt of all legal restraint and his insatiable passion for personal and arbitrary government."

Continuing, Senator Culberson said: "Choosing an ocasion upon which he could appeal to avarice of the people and thus temper their spirit of resistance to usurpation, he resepcted neither legal bounds nor national good faith and as the incident serves to illustrate not only his imperious and despotic nature, but the danger to the country which is involved in his election, it is well to understand it, for, besides a want of general information upon the subject important facts have been deliberately withheld from the public."

He then sketched the course of events in the passage by congress of the bill known as the "Spooner law," authorizing the canal and charged that the president in his course with Columbia "defiantly violated both its letter and spirit." He claimed that the Hay-Herran treaty, if not nullified by the unanimous vote of the Columbian senate disapproving it, expired by limitation upon the failure of Columbia to approve it within the time fixed for its ratification. He entered with detail into the legal aspect of the matter and continuing said:

"It is astonishing, in view of these indisputable facts, that the defense of the president with reference to this statute shall be placed by himself and his party upon the ground that when he entered into the Panama treaty the time within which he could lawfully deal with that route had not expired."

"It is interesting," added Senator Culberson, "in this connection, to read the president's message to congress Jan. 4, 1904, in which he said: '"As events turned out the question of reasonable time did not enter into the matter at all and yet there had not been a lapse of a reasonable time—using the word reasonable, in any proper sense—such as would justify the administration going to the Nicaragua route.'

"Then," he continued, "read the following letter from Secretary Hay to Minister Herran, which has never before been published:

"Department of State, Washington, Jan. 21, 1903—Dear Mr. Herran: I am directed by the president to say to you that in his opinion the 'reasonable time' allowed him by the statute to conclude negotiations with Colombia for the construction of an isthmian canal has come to a close and can not be extended. He authorizes me to sign with you the treaty of which I have had the honor to give you a draft, with this change, that the sum of $10,000 annual payment mentioned therein be increased to $250,000. I am not authorized to consider or discuss any other change whatever. * * *

"JOHN HAY."

"While the president," continued the speaker, "in defense of his revolutionary course was pressing the opposite view upon the country in his message and by his partisans in congressional debates, and while public opinion upon the question was forming, this letter was significantly withheld even from the senate for months, though others upon the general subject were transmitted.

"The character of this occasion necessarily precludes an extended discussion of the dates of the fabricated rebellion in Panama or the legal questions which pertain to it. It must suffice to say that the national administration in precipitate and guilty haste anticipated and discounted the time for the revolt. It magnified the number and character of the insurgents, and officers of the government connived at a subterfuge to deceive and corrupt the forces sent to subdue the insurrection. Not satisfied with these illegal and wrongful and discreditable acts purposing to complete the intended spoliation, the administration within two days recognized the mockery it already created and upheld and within two weeks in the very midst of actual, though bloodless war, it accepted a cession of the territory from a French adventurer who organized the conspiracy in the shadow of the national capital.

"I accept it as true that the executive officers of the administration did not officially and publicly instigate the revolt in Panama; but that the administration, including the president, privately favored and encouraged the movement and that this was widely known is susceptible of demonstration and in a matter of this character it was tantamount to committing the government to it. The very atmosphere of Washington was charged with this belief. The movements of the navy in consonance with the wishes and expectations of the conspirators is inexplicable, except upon the hypothesis of sympathy and foreknowledge. The press of the country, whose representatives at Washington visited the state department and White House, teemed with suggestions and prophecies of secession, recognition and a treaty with Panama, from June until November, 1903, without objection or protest or denial from the adminstration."

Senator Culberson then read the following letter to Dr. Albert Shaw, editor o fthe Review of Reviews.

"Personal (copy)—White House, Washington, Oct. 10, 1903: My Dear Dr. Shaw, I enclose you, purely for your own information, a copy of a letter of Sept. 5, from our minister to Colombia. I think it might interest you to see that there was absolutely not the slightest chance of securing by treaty any more than we endeavored to secure. The alternatives were to go to Nicaragua, against the advice of the great majority of competent engineers—some of the most competent saying that we had better abandon the canal at this time than go there—or else to take the territory by force without any attempt at getting a treaty. I cast aside the proposition made at this time to foment the secession of Panama. Whatever other governments can do the United States cannot go into the securing by such underhand means the cession. Privately I freely say to you that I should be delighted if Panama were an independent state, or if it made itself so at this moment; but for me to say so publicly would amount to an instigation of a revolt and therefore I cannot say it. With great regard, sincerely yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

"From this remarkable letter," concluded the speaker, "it seems evident that when it was written the president was advised of the contemplated secession of Panama which culminated Nov. 3, 1903, and it is equally evident that his information came from an authoritative source, for he considered and cast aside a proposition to foment the movement. While the letter in some respects is characteristic of the frankness and courage for which the president is distinguished, it exhibits also his rashness and his contemptous disregard of the rights of others when his purposes are involved. Writing privately to one who is publicly fomenting secession, his restless ambition creates a distinction between private and public instigation of conspiracy and revolution, and contributes by his name and exalted station to the dismemberment of a republic."

UNITARIAN STATE CONFERENCE OPENS

Sermon Is Delivered By Rev. Samuel A. Eliot of Boston.

A. L. Agatin Welcomes Visitors and Prof. A. W. Rankin Responds.

The pretty little Unitarian church at the corner of First street and Eighth avenue east was well filled last night, on the occasion of the second session of the eighth annual meeting of the Minnesota Unitarian conference, now being held in Duluth. Many of those present were members of the congregation, and people of other denominations gathered to hear the addresses of the evening. The feature, of course, was the conference sermon by Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, of Boston, president of the American Unitarian association, and a son of President Eliot, of Harvard college.

A. L. Agatin, president of the board of trustees of the local church, delivered a very cordial address of welcome, and said that the keynote of the convention would be freeness of thought and fulness of expression.

Professor A. W. Rankin, of Minneapolis, president of the conference, made a few well-chosen remarks in response, expressing his pleasure at being in Duluth to attend a meeting of this nature, but deploring the fact that more ministers were not in attendance. He took advantage of the occasion to remark upon Unitarianism in general, and to give his reasons in explanation of the fact that this particular church has a smaller following than certain of the other churches. He said the Unitarian churches in Minnesota could almost be counted on the fingers of one hand, and that they were so scattered that they could not well work in conjunction. Other churches had larger congregations, he explained, because they made the people attending them so comfortable. The people go there and don't have to think, or exert themselves in any way, or grapple with perplexing problems, and many choose such an institution because the path it points out is so easy to follow. Mr. Rankin predicted, however, that there was a good time coming for the Unitarians, and that in the future they would prevail.

Rev. Eliot is a tall, well-built man, smooth faced, with expressive features and a pleasant smile. He speaks with an ease and fluency denoting a finished education, and handles his subject in an interesting and convincing manner. He spoke of the relation of God and man, and of the dependence of one upon the other.

The speaker said that much had been heard of mortal helplessness and limitations, and of the dependence of the finite upon the infinite, and remarked that there was danger of forgetting the opposite truth, of how much God needs man. He spoke of the spirit finding expression through bodily channels, and of the dependence of the body on the spirit for life, power and individuality. The spirit must also depend upon the body to a certain extent.

It is very much the same with the church, he continued, which is dependent upon its people and their energies for progress and any successes it may achieve. The church manifests itself through the people's thought and deeds. Its advancement and the extent it helps mankind is due to the active co-operation of the congregation. Too many people do not have the true idea of what the church is for. They attend because they want help, but never think of giving anything in return. They go to church to see what they can get. It is nobler to go and see what one can give to assist in the uplifting of his fellow men, said Rev. Eliot, and he warned the people against becoming too passive in religious afairs.

He asserted that God cannot express himself except through his creations, and that the responsibility for human progress rests entirely upon human shoulders. One creates and the other reveals. Man and his powers are the expression of infinite creative love, and the essential agent of the divine good will.

He believed that many lives were empty and timid because of failure to put themselves in relationship with the divine energies. They are too willing to let God fight their battles, and not lend a hand themselves. One man seeks the religious life for what he can get out of it for himself, while another seeks it to ofer what he can give.

Following Rev. Eliot's sermon a new member was ordained into the church. Rev. W. M. Backus, of Chicago, delievered the prayer of ordination, and Rev. R. W. Boynton addressed the minister, telling of the work that he was entering. Later new members were taken into the church with necessary services.

The conference opened in the afternoon with a ministers' meeting at which Rev. Wilson M. Backus, secretary of the Western Unitarian conference, of Chicago, Ill., presided. The session opened with a short address by Rev. Harry White, of this city, on "Unitarianism as a Philosophy of Religion." Mr. White spoke of the need of a formulated theology of religion for Unitarism and regarded it as innecessary for the good of the church. He said that the essence of Unitarism lies in the fact that there is no explicit theology. No one article or fact or set of principles can be pointed to as the creed or confession of faith of this people. It is rather, an attitude of mind, heart and soul. The differences between Unitarism and other churches is that all others are to a degree authioritative to their people and the Unitarian church undertakes to be inspirational. So far the foundation of Unitarianism must be the implicit faith not explicated.

Mr. White' talk was followed by a general discussion in which the formulating of a theology of religion for Unitarism was upheld and defended.

Rev. Richard W. Boynton, of St. Paul, followed with an able and scholarly review of "The Evolution of Theology in the Greek Philosophers," by Prof. Edward Caird, of Oxford. The review which dealt concisely with the exhaustive subject matter of the book was listened to with keen interest and attention.

SALARIES OF TEACHERS

Are Not on a Par With Ability.

New York, Oct. 21.—Professor Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, does not expect the general adoption in this country of Sir William Ramsay's suggestion for better paid professors, teachers and officials in American government institutions, universities and colleges.

"As a general rule," Professor Wiley said, "the highest men in England receive more and the lowest less than in this country. Here, at least, the scale is more equable. The man, for instance, who holds the equivalent of my place in the government laboratory in London receives $7500 a year, while here the place is worth only $3500. Even so, it is only in the last two or three years that the salary has been $3500.

"For eighteen years I received $2500 only. The highest government places here, such as the librarianship of congress and that of secretary of the geological survey, receive only $5000. On the other hand, it should be borne in mind that here men in the lower grades average from $1800 to $2500, while over in England many men holding similar places receive no more than $40 or $50 a month.

"Do I believe an increase in the emoluments of heads of government institutions, university professors and so on is probable? Frankly, I do not. America is too democratic a country for such a step. It would be protested that the high-salaried man has only one vote, that he is no better than any one else, and so on. I certainly think, however, the salaries of the higher men might be increased with advantage."

WIFE CHEAPER THAN ALIMONY

And For This Reason Fritz Is Contesting Divorce Suit.

San Francisco, Oct. 21.—The divorce proceedings of Mrs. Emile Fritz against John R. Fritz were taken up in Judge Graham's court and the grievances of the couple were aired in a manner which caused no end of amusement to the few spectators present.

This is the second time that Mr. and Mrs. Fritz have been in the divorce courts. Four months ago the unhappy wife asked the courts for a decree, but the differences of the pair were patched up and they left the court room arm in arm. But their happiness was short-lived. Fritz persisted in his closeness in money matters, so his wife alleges, and as he would not provide for her in a proper manner she decided to be free from him once and for all.

Mrs. Fritz asserted that her husband forbade her to invite relatives to the house to meals. In order that she might not steal a march on him when he was away from home, Mrs. Fritz claims her husband placed a mark on the ham, the sugar barrel and other articles of foodstuffs in the family larder, so that he could determine on his return whether Mrs. Fritz had been feeding her relatives.

Fritz was placed on the stand to tell of his money-making schemes. Reluctantly he showed to the court notes from different people which showed rates of interest varying from 2 to 7 per cent per month. He said that during their married life he had taken his wife to the theater once or twice, but could not remember when. Several times in the last six or eight years he has expended car fare on his wife taking her to the park.

Fritz is contesting the suit. He figures that it would be cheaper to keep his wife than to be forced to pay her alimony.

NEGRO'S NEW FAITH

That Is Likely to Become Very Popular.

New Orleans, Oct. 21.—Abilene Antoine, a negro, is the founder of a new faith. He calls it the new Christ church, and the rites, if the testimony of the witnesses are to be believed, would make it very popular with the people.

One of the ceremonies observed particularly is kissing. The men kiss the women of the congregation, and vice versa, so that a newcomer into the meeting-house is greeted by kisses by all the females. The only drawback to this procedure is that some of Antione's flock are no longer young.

DISSATISFIED PANAMANS

Will Be Subdued By Means of Marines.

Washington, Oct. 21.—American marines will be retained on the isthmus of Panama for the present, prepared to meet any emergency which may arise because of the disgruntled elements in the new republic. This decision was reached yesterday and orders have been issued for a new battalion of marines to go to the isthmus about Nov. 15, to relieve the battalion which has been there for a year. The new battalion will be commanded by Lieut. Col. Thomas N. Wood. The exact number of men in this new battalion has not been decided upon but it probably will be about of the same size as the battalion now on the isthmus which is to be brought home and dispersed among the marine barracks in the Northern part of the United States.

That the situation on the isthmus is still not all that could be desired is the news which came to Washington today in a personal letter from an official now in Panama. While the Panama government is entirely loyal it seems that there are certain disgruntled elements in the isthmus and in view of the case with which revolutions are started in Central and South America, it is the official opinion here that marines should remain there for the present.

It is hoped that the mission of Secretary Taft will have a far reaching effect in bringing all elements on the islands into harmonious accord with this government's soverignity.

TO ATTACK PANAMA.

Colon, Oct. 21.—There is a rumor current here that a large body of armed Colombians has been concentrated near Culebra with the intention of making an attack there on Nov. 3, the first anniversary of the secession of Panama from Colombia. The canal zone authorities are investigating the report, though not much importance is attached to the rumor, the origin of which is attributed to malcontents.

The Cossacks In Duluth.

To the Editor of The Herald:

About 1:25 o'clock this morning a great noise in front of my building woke me up. Thinking that the Cossacks had entered Duluth, I hastened to look out through the window to find out if it was so; being careful not to expose myself to any bullets.

In front of the store were two powerful men in uniform charging and rolling three casks of pickles from the sidewalk, into the street. The pickles were left there on the edge of the sidewalk by a wholesale house late in the evening. By looking closer at the men I discovered that besides uniforms they were decorated with stars, indicating that they were guardians of the peace and property. I have sometimes wondered what we have policemen for here on Fourth street, as they could never before, so far as I know, be discovered when there were any disturbances going on. But from this and other late acts, I commence to understand why, and after this I will not charge up to boys and common ruffians things until investigated. I will also in the future feel proud of paying taxes for the maintenance of such honorable men.

ATTACKS THE COMPLAINT

Attorney For J. W. Sullivan Raises Legal Objection to Trial.

Claiming that a man cannot be accused of crime by proxy, Attorney M. H. McMahon yesterday asked for a stay of ten days in order to argue a motion to dismiss the case against his client, J. W. Sullivan, who was on trial in the municipal court for violating the wine room ordinance and allowing a young girl to frequent his saloon.

The attorney attempted to introduce evidence to show that Sullivan had repeatedly given his bartender instructions not to allow any woman in the saloon, and that he himself was not present when Stella Montgomery, the girl involved in the case, entered the saloon.

Under the ordinance recently passed a conviction in the municipal court is just ground for revoking his license, and the case will probably be fought out to the end by Sullivan.

Miss Rose Hennessy, well known as a poetess and elocutionist, of Lexington, Ky., tells how she was cured of uterine inflammation and ovaritis by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been so blessedly helped through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it but just to acknowledge it, hoping that it may help some other woman suffering as I did.

"For years I enjoyed the best of health and thought that I would always do so. I attended parties and receptions thinly clad, and would be suddenly chilled, but I did not think of the results. I caught a bad cold eighteen months ago while menstruating, and this caused inflammation of the womb and congested ovaries. I suffered excruciating pains and kept getting worse. My attention was called to your Vegetable Compound and the wonderful cures it had performed, and I made up my mind to try it for two months and see what it would do for me. Within one month I felt much better, and at the close of the second I was entirely well.

"I have advised a number of my lady friends to use it, and all express themselves as well satisfied with the results as I was."—MISS ROSE NORA HENNESSY, 410 S. Broadway, Lexington, Ky.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove beyond a question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble and at once, by removing the cause, and restoring the organs to a normal and healthy condition.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—About two years ago I consulted a physician about my health which had become so wretched that I was no longer able to be about. I had severe backache, bearing-down pains, pains across the abdomen, was very nervous and irritable, and this trouble grew worse each month. The physician prescribed for me, but I soon discovered that he was unable to help me, and I then decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and soon found that it was doing me good. My appetite was returning, the pains disappearing, and the general benefits were well marked.

"You cannot realize how pleased I was, and after taking the medicine for only three months, I found that I was completely cured of my trouble, and have been well and hearty ever since, and no more fear the monthly period, as it now passes without pain to me. Yours very truly, MISS PEARL ACKERS, 327 North Summer St., Nashville, Tenn."

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say without trying it "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, do not hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Her advice is free and helpful. Write to-day. Delay may be fatal.

PARISIAN DOCTOR

Whom George Crocker Sued Wants to Fight a Duel.

Rival Physician Who Talked of His Work Is Blamed.

New York, Oct. 21.—A Paris cable to the World says: "It looks to me as if this affair would end in a duel," remarked Dr. Doyen, in the office of his private hospital, No. 6 Rue Piccini. He was referring to George Crocker's suit for $20,000.

Mr. Crocker is a New York millionaire who has sued the doctor to get back $20,000 paid to him for treating Mrs. Crocker for cancer.

"Surely you do not wish to kill Mr. Crocker, too, because of his suit following his wife's death?" commented the correspondent, surprised by this bellicose utterance.

"No, I have nothing against Mr. Crocker, who is a cold, taciturn man, and irresponsible because he listened to suggestions of members of my profession who are jealous of my great success. This turned him against me and my serum treatment. I stand at the head of my profession and have a practice which excites the envy of my confreres. At the next conference of physicians, this subject is likely to come up, and, if the individual whom I have in mind as being responsible for Mr. Crocker's attitude toward me reiterates his charges I shall challenge him to a duel."

"But you might hurt him," suggested the correspondent.

"In such a matter I should be ruthless," replied Dr. Doyen. "And at the same time I purpose a suit for defamation of character against the law firm which has dared to give a lying letter to the Paris newspapers, which is contrary to all rules of decent usage. Messrs. Coudert Bros.' letter was submitted to me before publication. It was so ridiculous and libelous that I consented to its insertion, but reserved all rights—to prosecute its authors.

"First, it asserts that I promised that Mrs. Crocker's case was curable, and that then she consented to the serum treatment. This is a lie. I said simply that the serum treatment had helped similar cases.

"The second allegation is that no operation was ever contemplated. This is true, but what has that to do with the facts?

"Third, it is alleged that I said I would discontinue the treatment unless I were paid $20,000. This is utterly false; no such threat was ever made. This suggestion is ignoble, and one could infer that I was a veterinary surgeon called in to treat some inmates of Mr. Crocker's stables. If out of the eleven injections administered, I only administered two, it was at the request of Mrs. Crocker herself, who said that my assistant hurt her loss in the process.

"As to the last allegations, that Mrs. Crocker grew rapidly worse, I can say that the serum treatment has always increased the temperature, and that if I had been allowed to persevere in the treatment, without saying I should have cured Mrs. Crocker. I do believe the treatment would have proved equally successful, as in the case of Lady Clancarty and the wife of the Spanish minister at Buenos Ayres."

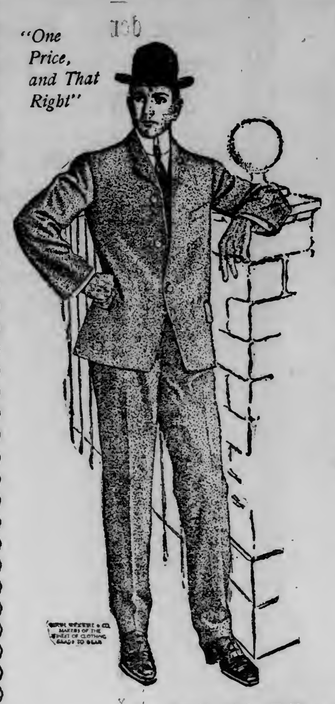

The most severe critic of Dr. Doyen is Dr. Rochard, and it is believed that it is with him the duel is intended.

In reply to the allegation that he is the Barnum of the medical profession, Dr. Doyen admitted performing operations before a cinemetrograph, but said the pictures were intended only to spread surgical knowledge in the profession, and that he was proud to have taken this initiative. In reply to the allegations that his private hospital is filthy, he showed the correspondent through the immense institution, which occupies nearly half a city block. In it great attention is paid to cinemetrograph and X-ray apparatus.

The coming legal contest will be interesting. Dr. Doyen denies calling Crocker "merely a Yankee bluffer going wrong."

The consensus of opinion among American millionaires is against Mr. Crocker's suit against Dr. Doyen. All admit they are liable to the same sort of thing, but they believe it is more dignified to submit in silence.

ALONE ON HIS HONEYMOON

Bride Was Ill and So He Went For Both.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Accompanied by his bride in spirit only, J. B. Forest, of San Francisco, husband of a California heiress, is here obeying her injunction to have a good time. He is doing it by squandering large chunks of her fortune on wine and automobile rides and scattering bills among the employes of the Victory hotel.

It was just about 9 o'clock when there came the toot of an automobile and Mr. Forest leaped from the machine.

They started for the register. Of course the man reached it first. He didn't stop to take off his gloves. He just spread "Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Forest" all over the book.

"Wife in the ladies' parlor, I guess?" queried the clerk, as he ran over the register.

"No, not with me. Only in spirit. On my honeymoon. But she couldn't come, and we are playing just like she was."

The clerk gave him a suite on the parlor floor. The two bellboys picked up his belongings and the three were gone. It didn't take more than a minute to reach the room. Evidently the bridegroom believed in distributing his money, for there was a dollar in the pocket of each of the bellboys' when he left. Two minutes later a waiter from the buffet was summoned.

"Might open a small bottle," suggested the "lone bridegroom." The waiter bowed, disappeared and returned a few minutes later.

"Send the best machine around to the entrance," requested Mr. Forest, I want to look at the town."

He returned at noon. The ride had cost him $20. He was in a gracious mood in the afternoon.

"You see, it was like this," he began after extracting another cork.

"I used to be a professional escort. My business was to look after the comfort of ladies at so much an hour. Well, did my best. Who wouldn't?

"Well, one of my clients—that' what we call them in San Fran—took a fancy to me. It was returned, I assure you."

Mr. Forest was again silent.

"Bring another, waiter," he commanded, and returned to his story.

"Well, the upshot of it was that we were married. Now, she had traveled much, while I had never been outside San Francisco."

There was another silence and another empty bottle.

"Again, waiter," he said.

"She suggested that we travel to New York on our honeymoon. Perhaps I've failed to mention that she possessed much money. Well, as I was saying, she had planned to take me to New York. We were married, but she became indisposed shortly afterward. Nothing serious, mind you, but she didn't feel like traveling."

Mr. Forest stopped for just a moment.

"Waiter make it your business to see that these glasses are kept full. And say, don't shirk your duty."

The waiter went to work.

"Of course, I wanted to postpone the honeymoon," continued Mr. Forest; "It didn't make any difference whether I started one day or one year after the ceremony, but my wife insisted, I just simply had to give in, and here I am. Waiter!"

"Coming, sir, coming."

"We planned it all very carefully. I'm to do just as I would if she were here When I register it is for both. When I go sight-seeing I'm to remember what I see that I may describe it to her. I'm not to be lonely. I'm to enjoy myself and have a good time. Rather odd honey moon, don't you think? Waiter!"

GOLD COULD NOT BUY DOG

Poor Shepherd Would Not Sell Companion For $500.

New York, Oct. 21.—A cable to the World says: The duchess of Roxburgh made a highly favorable impression by the neat, clever little speech with which she opened the bazar at Ledburgh. She was accompanied by a large party from Floors castle, and incidentally had a practical little lesson in the fact that money can't do everything. Just as the ducal party was leaving the bazar the duchess was attracted by an especially fine black and hazel collie, in the possession of a poor old shepherd from the neighboring hills. She called him to her and asked for how much he would sell the dog. The old man replied that it was not for sale.

The duchess offered $50, then $100, and so on, the shepherd still shaking his head. Finally she raised the offer to $500. The old man, who was miserably dressed in a shepherd's tartan plaid and Tam O'Shanter, drew himself up proudly and said: "Ma leddy, gin ye were the queen herself, me and me dowg will ne'er be pledged for siller."

The duchess said she admired his disinterestedness, and afterward sent him a handsome present.

By the way, the stork is expected to alight at Floors castle in the not distant future, and he is also looked for before long at the house of Jay Phipps, who wedded the second daughter of M. P. Grace. The Phippses have taken a house in Grosvenor square for the auspicious event.

Speaking of Jay Phipps makes this the place to mention that he is mourning the loss of a $500 prize dog. He left it in charge of a man servant at Claridge's hotel, and while the servant was dining the dog disappeared. The hotel manager contends that he is not responsible. Mr. Phipps has offered an enormous reward, but the dog has not yet been found.

FORGED TO AID DAN CUPID

Charged With Missing Sister-in-Law's Name In Courtship.

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 21.—One of the most unique cases of forgery on record has just been developed in Simpson county, where a young white man named C. M. Grayson has been placed under arrest on the charge of using the name of his sister-in-law for matrimonial purposes.

Grayson is a married man and the victim of his original confidence game was an illiterate old man named R. W. Booth.

According to the evidence submitted at the preliminary trial, Grayson went to Booth and told him that a young lady living in a neighboring town was smitten with the old man's charms, and was in a receptive mood to enter into a correspondence with him. The woman, he said, was his sister-in-law.

Booth immediately entered with great enthusiasm into the project.

Grayson convinced Booth that he could not pay court to the young lady in person, stating that his sister-in-law was very shy and timid and that the courtship would have to be conducted by letter. The old man could neither read nor write, but Grayson was engaged to write the letters for Booth, and also read for him the epistles from the fair charmer.

It was kept up for several weeks, Grayson not only writing the letters for Booth, but also writing and making the replies under the name of his sister-in-law, and frequently he would apply an artistic touch to the old man for coin, using various subterfuges.

Booth was very anxious to secure a photograph of the supposed inamorata, and Grayson diplomatically suggested that he should send her the money to have it taken with. Kindred methods were used to relieve the old man of his money, the amounts being always small, but footing up a good-sized sum in the aggregate. Several arrangements were made by the wily matrimonial agent for clandestine meetings, but the plans always failed of consummation, until Booth finally became suspicious, especially after he had purchased a wedding gown and delivered it to Grayson.

An investigation was started on his own account, which resulted in the arrest of Grayson, and he is now being held to await the grad jury session.

BOY TRAIN WRECKERS.

Lads Confess to Piling Rails on Track.

Ukiah, Cal., Oct. 21.—Charged with several attempts to wreck the Willits train, Henry Clay and William Van Bebber, boys, aged 15 and 16 years, respectively, have been arrested.

They have confessed that they piled large chunks of wood and some rails on the railroad track at Lahm's crossing, but they deny that they did so for the purpose of wrecking the train. Their story is that they merely wanted to see the logs and rails thrown into the air by the engine.

For several weeks attempts have been made to wreck the Willits train, the obstructions being placed on the track at such dangerous points that there was no doubt in the minds of the railroad people that the object was to throw the engine off the track.

SLEW HIS FATHER.

Lad of 13 Given Five Years In Prison.

Texarkana, Ark., Oct. 15.—Willie Watson, a 13-year-old boy, killed his father because he whipped his younger sister. Tried in the district court of Bowie county, Texas, he was convicted of manslaughter and will serve five years in the penitentiary.

Young Watson loved his 10-year-old sister and as far as possible shielded her from the parent. He had told Watson, Sr., that if he punished her again he would kill him.

A few days later the father whipped the little girl for a trivial offense. Willie demanded that he desist and when the elder man refused went to his room, where he had concealed a shotgun.

Slipping up behind his parent he discharged the contents of both barrels into his father's head, blowing out his brains.

When the officers came to investigate they found the boy comforting his sister, who was in hysterics.

"Arrest me; I did it," he said.

He refused to give any explanation of his deed. When neighbors sought to bring him to a realization of the offense he only replied: "I don't care; he deserved it."

In court the boy stolidly faced his accusers, and when asked to plead responded simply. "Guilty."

The prosecuting attorney submitted his case with a plea for clemency, calling attention to the alleged brutal treatment of his children by the murdered man.

Friends of the family will appeal to the governor for a pardon.

MEMORY FEATS.

Astonishing Things Accomplished By Chess Players.

Imagine being pitted against a mind that can visualize the positions of thrty-two pieces of ivory on as many squares, and every possible variation therefrom, and building one picture upon another, can foretell not only the end of the game, but the exact number of moves required to bring it about, and, as Marshall did in London, proceed to accomplish it in spite of all an ordinary player and his pieces can do to prevent, says Everybody's Magazine. Just what this means may be realized in view of the computation that there are 318,979,564,000 ways of playing the first four moves on each side of the board. Yet during the Cambridge Springs tournament I saw Pillsbury take a hand in a game of whist and at the same time play two games of chess and two games of checkers without looking at any one of the four boards. Mr. Pillsbury sat at the whist table with his back to the chess and checker boards, and the moves of the players thereon were called out to him, and without interrupting the whist game a moment he would call back the name of his own piece which he wished moved in reply, specifying on which of the 64 squares it was to be placed. In this way he won the chess and checker games and helped to win the game of whist.

Pillsbury performs these blindfolded plays seemingly with comparative ease. He has played against as many as 22 different boards at one and the same time, without seeing a single board, and has won a large majority of the games. Seated with his back to the other players and constantly smoking a big cigar, he is apparently able to visualize and to remember 22 different pictures, in each of which 32 chessmen are being changed about in an infinite variety of combinations. At each of those boards sits an expert chess player, with every faculty concentrated on his own game, caring nothing for his neighbors' difficulties, bent only on baffling the memory of the man at the end of the room, whose mind recurs to his particular game only once in every 22 times. There is seldom any hesitation on Mr. Pillsbury's part in recalling the picture presented on any given board. The referee calls the number of the board and the move made by the player thereon, and instantly the reply comes back from the master with a request for the move on the next board. Before Pillsbury's time the record for blindfold play was 16 games played in two days by Zukertort. In Chicago in 1900 Pillsbury played sixteen simultaneous blindfolded games in four hours and fifty-five minutes, winning twelve, drawing three and losing one.

Of course, Mr. Pillsbury has a system for memorizing the various games. By courtesy he is allowed the first move on each board. So he resolves the various boards into mental groups. In a twelve-game circuit he would probably group boards 1, 4, 7 and 10 together. Boards 2, 5, 8 and 11 would comprise the second group. Thus, he would need but three styles of openings on the twelve boards. If the standard, or what are considered the best replies, were made to these openings, he could make counter replies that would carry him several moves into each game. After that he would probably begin to subdivide his groups, or if a player tried a special variation, he would individualize that board and place it in a class by itself. Thus, eccentricity of play at any board presents no terrors for the blindfolded master. Rather does he welcome it, since it gives that particular board a character of its own, causing it to stand out in his memory. After a while each of the boards take on a character of its own, and then he is compelled to depend upon memory pure and simple, but that is so marvelous that it seldom fails him. As an instance of its far-reaching power—If any portion of a pack of cards is called off to him, he can successfully call the names of the remaining cards.

All of the masters indulge in blindfolded play, but none has equaled the Pillsbury feats. What is known as simultaneous chess is, however, a very popular recreation of the masters. In this as in blindfolded chess one man plays many games, but with all the boards in sight. O. S. Bernstein, of Berlin, recently engaged seventy-five boards at one and the same time. Pillsbury has engaged as high as fifty. The strain on the mind is not so great as in blindfolded chess, and the master, walking around and around the circle of boards, is able to engage them one after another with comparative ease. Nevertheless, a highly specialized mind is necessary for a successful performance. Naturally such a mind concentrated on one board displays the most precise foresight, for not only does the master know fairly well in advance just the kind of moves he will make throughout a game, but his knowledge of its technique enables him to divine the kind of moves his opponent will make. It comes very near to mind-reading.

Marshall's play has all the brilliance demanded by the one school, and all the modern science which has been the mainstay of the other. And as he is but 27 years old, his vogue must strengthen rather than decline, that is, unless he inadvertently overtaxes his powers. That, by the way, seems to have been the ultimate fate of most of the great chess players of the past. The emoluments of the game are not so great that ease of living is always to be enjoyed, even by a champion, and this fact, with the inevitable mental strain, has been productive of a number of sad endings to the lives of masters of days gone by.

Morphy early went insane, although his financial circumstances were easy. Kieseritzky and Neumann both died in an asylum. Goring committed suicide and Buckle tried to. Labourdonnais and Leonard died of starvation. Wisker died a drunkard. Zukertort latterly became almost imbecile in conversation. Steinitz broke down in 1897, and his death followed soon after. Thousands of devotees play chess by correspondence, and there is a game now going on between a man in Canton, Ohio, and another in Warsaw, Russia, that it will take several years to complete, each move being sent by postal card from one player to the other. Cable matches are of frequent occurrence, and many persons will remember the international game that took place some years ago between a team made up of members of congress and one composed of members of the house of commons. During that contest, one move was cabled across the Atlantic and a reply received in forty seconds. And now that wireless telegraphy has become a feature of ocean crossing, there are few days when some big liner is not exchanging a series of "moves" with a sister ship. So that it is to be doubted if the sad fate of some of the masters has been any detriment to the game of intellect.

SUPPLY OF GRINDSTONES.

Arkansas and New Hampshire supply us with most of our oilstones and scythe stones, although we import over $50,000 worth of "Turkey" razor hones, says the Philadelphia Record. Most of our grindstones came from Ohio last year, but we also found it needful to import nearly $100,000 worth of stones for grinding and polishing lenses. Burr stones still find application in grinding points, cements, etc., but other forms of grinding apparatus are gradually replacing them. New York state produces most of them, but some are taken from Pennsylvania strata.

Our state provides most of the quarts for sandpaper and some garnet, but New York, New England and North Carolina also provide garnets for sandpaper. The United States produced at one time enough corundum for its own use, but now we have to import from Canada and India. The Chester county deposits are no longer worked and North Carolina and Montana are now the only producers. Nature is being helped out to a wonderful extent in supplying abrasives by the manufacture of artificial corundum and carborundum in the electric furnace at Niagara Falls. Crushed steel is a new abrasive, being made in Pittsburg. It is steel of excessive hardness in a granular form.

WILL USE MORE

Concrete In Building Operations In Northwest Next Year.

Contractors Claim Many People Are Figuring on Concrete Houses.

Local contractors and builders are predicting a more general use of concrete in building operations here the coming year. Aside from the house which is already building of concrete blocks on Minnesota Point, and the prospective new county poor house, which will also be constructed of blocks of the same material, there are a number of local people who are figuring the cost of new houses to be built of concrete.

The claim is made for houses built of concrete blocks that they are warmer than the ordinary house of other material, owing to the air spaces in the blocks, also, that they are nearer fireproof, will last longer and require less repairs than other classes of houses. Whether all the things claimed for concrete houses are true remains yet to be proved in this climate, but there seems to be a number of people with faith enough in the concrete blocks to risk building with them.

It has been said that some engineers and architects are of the opinion that the use of concrete is being carried much too far. While freely admitting its advantages as a structural material, they maintain that its indiscriminate use in building and engineering operations is not to be commended. It is claimed that in certain localities and under certain conditions concrete possesses advantages over masonry. Particularly is this true where rapidity of building and economy of space is considered, but there are said to be cases where the placing of concrete is so expensive as to be practically prohibitive.

Engineers who have made a study of concrete structure claim much for its durability, that it will withstand the gases of the atmosphere, in fact grow harder as time passes. The concrete work at the Duluth ship canal is a good example of the durability of concrete block work, even though they have not been in place for so very many years. The blocks are wearing well, withstanding the action of water, freezing and pressure of ice without the least sign of disintegration. Collisions between boats and the piers have also demonstrated to the engineers that the structure is all that they had expected of it.

The same percentage of mixture of material for concrete in the new south pier at Superior entry was used as in the piers at the Duluth canal.

The fact that a concrete wall or pier, no matter what its size or situation, is not liable to crack, is a most important point to be considered by engineers, and because of their knowledge on the subject, the day of the timber piers for any important harbor work is over.

The railroad companies are now using a great deal of cement in making concrete foundations for their buildings, instead of using cut stone, as formerly. In most cases it is claimed to be less expensive.

A very poor production of "The Irish Pawnbrokers" was given at the Lyceum last evening. Aside from an occasional funny thing the performance was disappointing to even those who have seen the same production on former occasions. "The Irish Pawnbrokers" is a farce comedy not expected to have any plot to speak of, but its general plan is to make fun and to do that fast and furiously. The company presenting the production last evening fell far short of being able to do that. Perhaps the chill from the audience may have had something with frosting the latter part of the performance. Mazie Trumbull, whose Irish comedy specialties have been seen here before, and who is much more clever with her acting and dancing than pleasing with her vocal efforts filled the part of Angelena, daughter of the O'Flaherty, the retired milk dealer and sweetheart of young Murphy, son of Contractor Murphy. Ed Mack appeared as O'Flaherty and James Wesley as Murphy, two characters which were fairly good at times. Genie Pollard was the dashing and flirty Mrs. O'Flaherty, Louise Carver gave a unique characterization of Honora Hennessey, single, suspicious and looking for a man. Marie Dockman did a clever acrobatic stunt during the first act.

POWELL-PORTELLO COMPANY.

Last evening the Powell-Portello company which played last week at the Metropolitan opened for a return engagement of three nights with a matinee tomorrow. A large audience was present. The company has made many friends in Duluth. This evening "Trapped by Treachery" will be given.

"THE WORLD."

This evening at the Lyceum "The World" will be presented by a company managed by Earl Doty, who purchased the rights some time ago, from J. Z. Little who had presented the play for many years. It is said to be a strong scenic production.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Tomorrow afternoon and evening Thomas Jefferson will be at the Lyceum in "Rip Van Winkle." Nearly every man, woman and child is familiar with this charming fable of the Catskill mountains and the village of Falling Water, situated on the banks of the grand old Hudson river, long ago when the Dutch held title to those lordly shores. Mr. Jefferson's performance of the happy-go-lucky "Rip" is said to be delightful.

MOTTO SOUGHT FOR CRUISER

An Epigramatic Expression Wanted By City of Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 21.—This city wants an epigramatic expression which will do as the motto of the cruiser Des Moines and for the coat of arms for the city. Hundreds of suggestions have been sent to the committee. Many of them are thought excellent, but for the most part contain too many letters or words to be accommodated on the small area upon which they must be engraved. Thirty letters is the limit.

The suggestion which seems to meet with most favor is one of three words, "Alert, Progressive, Conservative." Across the upper portion of the bell on the cruiser and also on the coat of arms will be engraved the word "Des Moines." Below, as conspicious as possible, is to be its emblem.

"The figure to be used on the coat of arms suggests alertness, and that is characterastic of Des Moines," said one of the members of the committee. Progressive is also significant, for that has ever been true of Des Moines. Yet she has never been a plunger, she has not had the 'booms' which have been the experiences of other cities, often to their detriment. Therefore, conservative is a fitting expression. In all her alertness and progress she has at the same time been conservative and moved along safe lines."

Here are some of the suggestions:

"Des Moines, Iowa,—Leads Industry, Health, Happiness and Wealth."

"Time and I Will Conquer."

"Onward and Upward—Success Crowns All Her Endeavors."

"Iowa Americanism, Loyalty, Conservatism, Successful."

"Onward and Upward—Watchful, Discreet, Progressive."

"Alert, Sure and Safe—Ready for Fun or Fight."

"Has Faith in Her Namesake."

"Alert on Land or Sea—Tried and Not Found Wanting."

"Cautious But Not Cowardly."

"Semper Paratus—Always Ready."

"Non Nobis Solum Sed Patriae—Not For Us Only, But For the Country."

"Never a Boom, But Always a Rapid Growth."

"Protection, Representant."

"Des Moines, Duty, Destruction, Devotion."

"The Waiting Prairies Salute the Tossing Sea."

"From the Foothills to Heights Sublime."

"State of a Nation Honored By All."

GOOD SAMARITAN

Must Answer For Eccentricities of Statutes.

Columbus, O., Oct. 21.—"Got a buzzard here?" inquired Charles W. Heyl, deputy game warden, of Mrs. Frank Edgerton, of South Sixth street.

"Yes, sir," the woman replied.

"Want to sell it?"

"No, sir; but you can have it if you want it."

"Can I see it?"

"Certainly; just come this way, please," and Mrs. Edgerton walked back to the coal shed, where the bird was confined, opened the door and then walked back to the house. In a moment or two Heyl appeared with the buzzard under his coat. He flashed a badge and said: "Tell your husband that I am a game warden and for him to appear before Squire Lakin to morrow."

The son of Mr. Edgerton, who is an employe in the Panhandle shops, while strolling through the fields found a buzzard with a broken leg, and the lad captured it and took it home. The bird was fed and kindly treated and became quite a pet, running around the neighborhood as it pleased. When the family would go away from the house the buzzard would be confined in the coal shed. On the day when the deputy game warden went to the house Mrs. Edgerton was not at home, but soon returned.

The affidavit charges Edgerton with having "in his possession a buzzard not then and there being in captivity prior to May 6, 1902, and not then and there having the permission to do the aforesaid act."

RICH MAN,

Last of His Race, Enriches Friends.

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 21.—By the will of the late Henry Taft, president of the Third National bank of this city, $61,400 have been distributed among fifty friends and distant relatives. The bulk of the estate, after the bequests have been paid, will fall to Mrs. Frances I. Nichol, wife of Albert M. Nichol, of Granville, Ohio, of whom up to a year ago Mr. Taft had no acquaintance or knowledge. The banker had no children, and, he believed that he was the last of his race.

Mrs. Nichol established herself as a second cousin. Mrs. Nichol will receive $75,000, beside a gift of $3000 to her son, Alfred M. Nichol, of St. Louis.

BUILDING BIG DAM.

Agreement Finally Reached With Canadian Government.

International Falls, Minn., Oct. 21.—After several weeks of negotiations between the Backus-Brooks company and the Canadian government, (during which time all the preliminary work on the dam here has been suspended), word has been received from Toronto, advising that the matter has been settled to the entire satisfaction of the Backus-Brooks company, and it is expected that work will now be resumed at once. The point in dispute was the height to which the dam was to be built, Backus-Brooks company contending that they would have to be allowed to build it to what is known as the 497 bench mark, in order to raise the water in Rainy lake, and thus provide a satisfactory storage supply, while the Canadian government wanted to limit the height of the dam to the 494 bench mark. They finally agreed, however, on the 497 bench mark, so that there is nothing new to hinder the company from going ahead with the work of construction. During the time the negotiations were in progress, the Backus-Brooks company had a crew of sixty men at work at their camp at Brule Narrows, getting out the 5,000,000 feet of timbers which will be required in the construction of the various cofferdams; 900,000 feet of timbers will be rushed in here this fall before navigation closes, so that there will be no further delay in starting the work.

Messrs. Stevens and Curry, who will have charge of the blasting out the rock, are now on the ground, and will begin operations as soon as the first cofferdam is in place. Nytro-glycerine will be used in blasting, and a temporary plant will be erected here for manufacturing the explosive.

The company intends to develop 1000 horse power early in the spring to furnish electricity for lighting the work at night, and also for lighting the towns of International Falls and Fort Frances.

The Lanpher Furs

(NORTH STAR BRAND)

FUR QUALITY.

It requires more than simply workmanship to produce a good fur garment. The experience required to properly select the skins is a matter of very slow growth, and unless one's experience has been very wide, it is well to rely upon a brand of established reputation and in any case this is the safest way. We have been manufacturing fur garments of every description for men, women and children for twenty-eight years and our product is of the best.

Means Improvement.

The real results of this modern woman's movement are seen, I believe, says Dr. Lyman Abbott in the World's Work, in better wages to self-supporting women; in enlarged opportunities for productive industry; in consequent industrial independence for unmarried women; in a resultant release from the odious compulsion which drove women into marriage as the only means of livelihood open to them; in an end to that kind of marital subordination which grew out of the fact that an uneducated woman is inferior to an educated man; in an intellectual companionship in the married life based on a common understanding of all life-movements and a common interest in them all; in the ability of the mother to keep the intellectual respect of her boy after he has gone out of the home to college or to bunsiness, and to be his trusted counsellor and his inspirer; in woman's broader horizon, larger life, and more richly endowed character; in the ampler service she can render to society, to her country and to the world; and in her better equipment for the finest and highest service of all, that which is inherent in motherhood. "It is a woman's destiny." Balzac makes one of his characters say, "to create, not things, but men. Our creations are our children; our children are our pictures, our books and statues." This is the greatest career of all—greater than that of the lawyer, the doctor, the poet, or the artist. Law governs life, art presents a simulacrum of life; the mother creates life. The education of the future will recognize motherhood as the supremest of all destinies, and the curriculum of all schools and colleges worthy of the name will be fashioned to conform to this standard and to prepare for this service.

BAVARDAGE

By F. H. Lancaster.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Bavardage?" Eh bien, mon ami, there had been a heap of talk along Bayou Blenville. Heap of talk, yes. Some people said one thing and some said another. But it was all about Dazier and Nizile.

"Dazier had been goin' see Nizile long time; long time, yes. Most t'ree years," so madam, his mother, said.

And now he had bought a silver ring down to the store. Tout le mond knows what it means when a young man buys a silver ring. But yas; everybody along Bayou Blenville know.

Dazier didn't mean for anybody to know about the ring. Not yet. He wanted to make Nizile one surprise. Mais, Quel voulez-vous? A man must talk. And a Frenchman, mon ami. And only one paper a week.

Dame Tutute, Nizile's papa, got hold of the story. Titute was a stolid man, but he knew how to fetch a good bargain. When he saw Dazier's team coming up the road he laid down his hay fork and yelled: "Arretez." Dazier stopped his team with a long whoa-ho-whoa, and when the old man began to climb the fence, added that the sun was "sho hot."

Tutute said: "Hot sho," and held out his hand, and they both said: "Bon jour." Courteous inquiries were made concerning the well-being of madam sa mere and of madam, meaning, of course, his wife, then Dazier shoved back his hat and wiped his brow with his shirt sleeve while the old man wiped his palms on the seat of his pants and ran a critical eye over the waiting team.

"Das nice team you got," he said, slowly.

"Yas, sir. He's right nice, heem. Pull t'irteen hundred feet yesterday."

"Bon!"

There was a pause, during which the pines purred in the hot air and Dazier wiped his brow again. The sweat was oozing from his every pore, but it was not the sun's fault. Ah, que non! The thoughts he was thinking were enough to make a man sweat on a cold day. To ask a father for his daughter without first making a toilet for the occasion!

According to 'Cajan ettiquette a man may not ask the old man for his leetle gal without first giving himself and his horse also an extra grooming. There are certain things that must be done in a certain style. Everybody on or off the Bayou knows that.

But, Voila! Dazier got a hard grip on the great spoke of his carry-log wheel; he tore his stare from Jaques red flank.

"M. Leon"—Tutute's real name was Leon, mon ami, Leon Memuterre. Tutute was his baby name, and he went by it on all save grand occasions.

"M. Leon, I been come see Nizile good while."

"Good while, yas," assented Tutute.

"Das right nice leetle place I got down yonder."

Dazier faced up desperately, his strong fingers gripping that spoke; his strong jaws gripping each other.

"Seem like she and me might mek marry," he said, tensely.

"Sim so, sho. Mais, it'll be like my leetle gal say."

"Yes, I know me," he spoke softly.

"Sho is hot," said Tutute.

They shook hands hard.

"Bon jour, Dazier."

"Bon jour, monsieur."

Tutute climbed back over the fence. Dazier took up his long whip. It cracked and cracked again. And hope was in the cracking of it and shy pride and nervous joy.

Moise, down in the hollow, scowled. He had heard about the silver ring; he had heard the old man hail Dazier; now he heard Dazier cracking his whip. And Nizile was the prettiest girl along all Blenville.

Moise was no fool, as everybody agreed. Pas nigaud, though he had come to the bayou only a year ago. He drove teams in the turpentine orchard. He was good teamsters and made big money. Ah, que mon! He was no fool. Yet they distrusted him vaguely. Voyez, he had a red head.

"But das one fonne t'ing, mon ami. You can distrust a man, but when he come tell you one lie, you will believe that lie, yes. And das curious sho," as madam, Nizile's mamma, would have said, smoothing her apron the while. Curious, sho!"

Tutute should have known better than to believe what Moise told him. But Tutute was an honest man—and, eh bien, Moine was pas nigaud. He hailed Tutute genlelly.

"Been down to the store?" he added, invitinbly.

"No; I ain't been down to the store, me. I been hunt the ship."

"You find 'em? Das mouton? Bon!" Moise got off his wagon pole to walk beside Tutute's horse. "Dey talk heap 'bout Dazier P'dard down, yonder. I donno, me. Don't sim right to tell t'ings like das on a young feller—even if dey is true."

"What t'ings?"

"Say he have beg time when he go to Tete d'Eaux to sell his coal. Beeg time, yas."

"What he do? Ha?"

"Oh, race de horse, shoot de crap"—Moise shrugged his sweaty shoulders.

"He's young, heem," but Tutute's heart misgave him. Was the great good luck he had been gloating over to prove as worthless a red-heart log? Moise's voice sent a chill through him.

"Il y a pire," he said, significantly.

"Worse!"

"Dey say he gets dronk."

"Dronk!" Tutute felt old and alone and undone. Drunk. Presently he would get distrustful or angry, but Tutute was a slow man and—Moise was no fool. He slipped swiftly yet deftly from the troubling topic.

"Das mighty fine letle gal you got, M. Leon," he said, gayly.

"Yas."

"She all you got, yas?"

"All I got, me."

"I been waiting come 'round dere long time. Mebbe I come next Sunday. Das all right?"

"Das all right," repeated Tutute, stolidly.

Moise walked by M. Leon's stirrup the rest of the way home. They talked some and laughed much—loud, empty guffaws. That night Tutute told Nizile that she must have nothing more to do with Dazier, and Nizile asked pertinently and imperiously: "Pourquoi?"

Monsieur squirmed. "Moise is coming see you," he said.

"Moise. Un tete rouge."

Voila! The story was told and Nizile would not believe a word of it. There was a fine scene in the cabin on the bayou, and madam never knew how many cigarettes she smoked nor how many times she said: "Chere, chere" to Nizile, or how many times she said: "Laisser, laisser," to Tutute. In the end Nizile, quivering with fine fire, blazing with beauty, vibrant, laid down the law. "I believe Dazier get dronk when I see him dronk, and till I see Dazier dronk, I don't see Moise, 'tail, me."

Madam saved the situation for the last time.

"If Dazier do get dronk, he'll get dronk tonight, sho. Dere's das beeg chopping at M. Martine. Tout le mond goin' be dere. Amelia want me help her mek gumbo, but I'm in black, me. I can't go. Why don't you go see how Dazier do?" she appealed to monsieus. He shrugged his shoulders.

"Nizile won't believe less she see," he said, sullenly.

Nizile's fears had outrun madam's forethought. If Moise should tell Dazier that he, Moise, had been accepted by her father, Dazier might do something foolish. Fear turned courage to bravado. She faced her father with a high head.

"When a man get dronk at a chopping dey take away his ax. N'est pas? What you want bet Dazier come home with his ax?"

"If he pass up de road with his ax, he ain't dronk. No." Tutute assented, slowly.

"I'm goin' watch till he pass, me."

Voila! If Nizile would watch, madam would watch also, and monsieur. They moved their chairs to the gallery; they turned their eyes toward the south; they waited. Madam dozing, monsieur stolid, Nizile quivering. The white moon shone upon them, upon the road beyond, upon the pine like sentinels along its route. And the moon looked cold.

It seemed a long time, but it was not long. There was talk at the chopping that drove Dazier home—anywhere. As soon as the kiln wood was chopped and the first reel danced. Voila! As soon as he could decently do it, Dazier saddled his mare, shouldered his ax and fled swiftly from the merry-making where every look was a lash, every word a blow.

"Nizile going to marry Moise? Pourquoi? Moise made beeg money. But Nizile, Nizile. And he—Boyou Blenville should know him no more. That he swore by all the saints. He would take back what he had told the schooner captain about not wanting to sail with him. He would go round there tonight and tell he he was ready to make sail at sunrise—like he had wanted to, yas. His knees pressed the mare to her swiftest pace, the white road raced beneath him, the owl made moan. Through the swamp and around the bend and then Dazier sat very straight in his saddle. His knees relaxed and from long habit the little mare slowed at the turn. There was the gate where—there were the steps where—there was someone on the steps.

Nizile, standing, leaning forward, watching—as it would seem—the gleam of the moonlight on the bright blade of his ax.

"Arretez!" But Dazier had already drawn rein. His ax fell with a thud. They were around him, monsieur and madam, and Nizile slipped her slim fingers into his.

"So you didn't get dronk at das chopping," monsieur began, jocosely joyful.

But madam cut in:

"Dazier," she asked, quietly, "you ever been to Tete d'Eaux?"

"Non, madam," he replied, courteously. "I ain't never been dere yet. I sell my coal to de schooner, me."

It did not strike him as odd that he should be stopped in the middle of the road on a moonlight night to be questioned as to the extent of his journeyings. Only one thing he heeded, Nizile's fingers lingered within his, her hair brushed his sleeve. His arm closed around her for the first time. Forgetful of the old folk, forgetful of everything save that the girl he loved loved him.

Monsieur turned to his chair: "Das man Moise lie heap, yas," he said.

Madam turned him toward the kitchen. She replied, placidly:

"I wish to know, me, how a man can lie like das. Ain't it curious?"

But from the lovers on the steps there came by way of comment only a slight, inarticulate sound—and the moonlight looked mellow. Bavardage? Ah, que non!

Dies In Manitoba.

Word was received in Duluth today of the death of Mrs. Harry Selby, of Hartney, Man. Mrs. Selby was formerly Miss Jessie Cargill, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Cargill, of 416 Fifteenth avenue east. She was married to Selby about three years ago. Mrs. Cargill, Miss Anna Cargill, J. W. Cargill and D. H. Cargill left today to attend the funeral.

"Ready-made homes" appeal strongly to many people; and if you have one to offer you will find "takers" quickly through a "Furnished House To Let" advertisement.

Football tomorrow rain or shine.

TO DEPORT THEM

Fong Lum and Wong Yip Must Return to China.

Have Not Proper Certificates of Residence In Their Possession.

Fong Fung Lum, of Cloquet, and Wong Yip, of Duluth, two Chinamen who have been held in the county jail on the charge of being in this country with false certificates of legal residence in their possession, were found guilty of the charge at their hearing before United States Commissioner T. H. Pressnell yesterday afternoon, and were ordered deported to China. They are allowed ten days in which to appeal to the district court.

The government was represented at yesterday's trial by William D. Morse, inspector in charge of Chinese affairs for Wisconsin and Minnesota, and J. M. Dickey, assistant United States attorney. The prisoners had not engaged the services of attorneys.

Lum's guilt was easily ascertained by comparison of the certificate of residence in his possession and the certificate of the same number which, by request, had been forwarded from Washington. Lum's permit bore the number 2256 and description, with his picture. The description and name on the original document were entirely different. The original certificate had been made out in favor of one Chung Gone. This was regarded as strong enough evidence to warrant deportation.

There was a little more difficulty in establishing the guilt of Wong Yip. As he claimed to have resided in this country for a period of eighteen years, yet could not speak a word of English, it was evident that there was a screw loose somewhere. He claimed to have lost his certificate of residence. He could not remember the date of its issuance or number, and only knew that he had received it while in Chicago. He said he was 38 years old, but appeared to be about 12 years younger than this.

The two Orientals were returned to the county jail, and, unless an appeal is taken, will be deported at the expiration of the time limit. It is not considered at all likely that the case will be appealed.

BOTH YOUNG WOMEN HELD

Sophie Aho and Kate Smith Bound Over to Grand Jury.

At the close of their preliminary hearing in the municipal court yesterday afternoon, Sophia Aho and Kate Smith were bound over to the grand jury on the charge of stealing $41 from Harry Hill the St. Croix avenue grocer.

Miss Aho's case was the first one to be considered. When aked why she had confessed to the police that she had stolen the money, she said that she had done so to shield her friend, the Smith girl.

Miss Aho claims that on the afternoon when the robbery took place, she and a girl friend named Phoebe Suari were in Miss Smith's room over the store. When they were ready to leave she claims Miss Smith handed her a roll of money saying that she was afraid she would be robbed, and asking Miss Aho to keep it.

Miss Aho said that she had placed her money in her stocking just before starting down stairs.

Miss Saari denied having seen the money passed from Miss Smith to Miss Aho. She says that she was behind Miss Smith when they started down stairs and did not see any such transaction.

Judge Windom finally held Miss Aho to the grand jury, fixing her bond at $250.

Attorney Mahon on behalf of his client, Miss Smith, moved that the case against her be dismissed, but Judge Windom denied the motion, and Miss Smith after waving a preliminary examination was held to the grand jury in the same bonds as her companion.

INDIANA IS DEMOCRATIC

Will Vote For Parker and Davis, Says W. J. Bryan.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 21.—"The Democrats of Indiana seem to be ready to vote now," said William J. Bryan when he concluded his tour of that state at New Albany last night. The closing day of the tour through Indiana was regarded by Mr. Bryan and his party as the most successful of all in respect to the size and enthusiasm in the reports of campaign workers.

"I firmly believe that Indiana will return a plurality for Parker and Davis," said Mr. Bryan in opening his speech at New Albany. "The observations made during the trip which I have just finished reveal a most encouraging state of affairs. The evidences of unity and enthusiasm among the Democrats are so plentiful that it seems that the only hope for Republican success would appear to lie in their polling the entire doubtful vote of the state."

Mr. Bryan's prophecy was received with tremendous cheers by a crowd which completely filled Market House square, in New Albany.

Immediately on concluding his New Albany speech, Mr. Bryan made a dash into Kentucky, addressing a great throng which filled Phoenix Garden, Louisville.

BODY WAS AT THE OTHER END OF LINE.

Erie, Pa., Oct. 21.—A rowboat was yesterday found in the harbor, near Misery bay, containing only a coat, to which was tied the following note, written on the back of an old envelope:

"Fred Thompson: You will find me at the other end of this line."

The line was fastened to one of the carlocks, and when pulled in Louis E. Thompson's body was dangling from the other end. The deceased was 35 years old, unmarried and a son of the late Capt. E. L. Thompson of the tug Erie.

Despondency over his father's death caused Thompson's act.

UNITARIAN SESSION

Reports From Churches Show Progress--Luverne Wants Next Meeting.

"Practical Methods" Discussed By Speakers—Platform Meeting.

The business session of the annual meeting of the Minnesota Unitarian conference was held this morning. Detailed reports were given of the work of the churches throughout the state. The progress of the work on the whole was regarded as most satisfactory and a hopeful feeling was reported from all the churches. Reports were given of churches at Adrian, Fargo, Luverne, First church of Minneapolis, Nazareth church of Minneapolis, Hanska, New Ulm, St. Cloud, St. Paul, St. Anthony Park, Underwood, Winona, Winnipeg and Duluth.

An invitation was extended the conference to hold the next meeting at Luverne and the invitation will be acted upon by the business committee and it is probable that the next annual meeting will be held at that place.

The following committees were appointed:

Credentials: Rev. Harry White, Mrs. H. C. Marshall and Mrs. H. G. DeGraw.

Business: Charles W. Ames, Rev. E. W. Ennis and Mrs. Thomas Yapp.

Nomination: Rev. J. H. Jones, Rev. E. H. Cantrell and Mrs. Julius Schneider.

Following the business session, Rev. Wilson M. Backus, of Chicago, gave a short address on "Our Denominational Needs." Mr. Backus spoke of the work of the Unitarian church as that of a pioneer church with the demands of a high civilization, and presented the question as one for discussion. He spoke of having divinity students serve as apprentices to some working pastor, the good a conference paper would achieve and above all undaunted courage in the work which will lead the minds of the people after this time of materialism to the spiritual verities.

The meeting closed with a devotional service led by Rev. W. E. Ennis of Fargo.

The afternoon session was on "Practical Methods," with short talks by C. A. Smith, principal of the high school of this city; Rev. C. F. Niles, of Menomonie, Wis.; Mrs. C. W. Ames, of St. Paul; Rev. Amandus Norman, of Minneapolis; Rev. J. H. Jones, of St. Cloud, and Rev. S. A. Elliot, of Boston.

The program for this evening is as follows:

8 p. m.—Platform meeting, "Aspects of Liberal Religion.'

"The Simplicity of a Rational Faith," Rev H. F. M. Ross, Winnipeg, Canada.

"The Place and Authority of the Bible Today," Rev. E. A. Cantrell, Luverne.

"Herbert Spencer's Contribution to Religious Thought," L. J. Hopkins, Duluth.

"The Unique Value of Unitarianism," Rev. W. M. Backus, Chicago.

DISAPPOINTED IN WITNESSES

City Attorney Moves to Dismiss Two Court Cases.

After two of his witnesses had failed to give the testimony expected of them, Assistant City Attorney McKeon moved to dismiss the cases against May Franklin and Ethel Dean, who were tried in municipal court this morning for being disreputable characters.

The clerk of the Clarendon hotel was placed on the witness stand and asked whether he could state if the two girls had visited the hotel in company with two men on the night of Sept. 30. He stated that he could not.

Mrs. Conroy, a boarder at the hotel, was then placed on the stand. She testified that she had seen the two girls in the hotel on the night in question, but could not state positively whether or not they were accompanied by men.

After hearing her testimony, the city attorney moved to dismiss the case, and the motion was granted by Judge Windom.

GUARDIAN SUES

Louis L. Forest's Bondsmen For Amount of His Defalcation.

Used Wards' Money to Buy Wildcat Mining Stocks.

Napoleon Grignon and Jerry C. Como, who were sureties on the guardian bond of Louis L. Forest, a juggler of finance, who is much wanted by the county authorities and others, are the defendants in an action on trial in Judge Dibell's court this afternoon, brought by A. Farrington, guardian of the minor children, Alice and Joseph Gravelle.

In his complaint, the guardian sets forth that Forest was originally appointed guardian of the children, and, in such capacity, there was turned over to him $2158, which represented the money they received on a life insurance policy taken out by the deceased father of the children. It is claimed that Forest spent only $328 on the children and still had in his possession, or had converted to his own use, the remaining $1828.

Suspicion having been raised that Forest was not dealing fairly with his wards, Probate Judge Middlecoff cited him to appear and disclose how the financial matters stood between himself and the children entrusted to his care. It was then discovered that he had used the money to purchase for himself a lot of wildcat stocks, with a value amounting practically to nothing, for they were not stocks on which a cent could be realized.

Soon after the disclosure, and before steps could be taken to detain Forest, he skipped, presumably to Canada. A new guardian was appointed for the children in the person of Mr. Farrington, and suit was started to recover from Forest's bondsmen, Messrs. Grignon and Como, the amount of his defalcation, together with interest on it at 7 per cent from September, 1903. The bonds furnished were in the amount of $2000.

The guardian is represented by Baldwin, Baldwin & Dancer, and Mr. Grignon is represented by John Norton.

Since Forest fled, other instances came to light where he had appropriated to his own use funds entrusted to his care belonging to a fraternal society. There are several indictments now pending against him, and on which he will be arrested should he ever be caught within the borders of the United States.

The case of John A. Stephenson against McCarthy Bros. and others was argued and submitted in Judge Dibell's room this morning. The action is one brought to recover on a promissory note of $5000 given by the Neilsville Farmers' Elevator association to McCarthy Bros., in July, 1903, and by them sold and assigned to John A. Stephenson. The latter claimed he had never been able to collect the money on the note and sued the parties endorsing it.

The W. T. Bailey Lumber company has begun an action against Andrew Hakkila, of Virginia, to recover $257.39, alleged to be due for material supplied to build a house or store at that place. The lumber company asks that its claim be adjudged a specific lien on the premises.

Expert testimony as to the flowage in the St. Louis, Whiteface and other rivers, volume of water, etc., is being introduced today in the condemnation proceedings now being heard before Judge Cant in the case of the Minnesota Canal and Power company against W. C. Yawkey and others.

Following is the new setting for the present term of district court, the jury cases having all been disposed of:

A UNIQUE WILL

In Which Iowa Man Has Divided Five Million Dollars.

He Gives $500 For Every Baby Named For Him.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 21.—It was not the size of the gifts of the late James Callanan, multi-millionaire, which made his will remarkable; it was the manner in which he made his bequests.

Other men with fortunes of more than $5,000,000, have made disposition of their goods with much less trouble than did Mr. Callanan. Few have disposed of their property in a manner which reflected the characteristics of the man in such a degree.

Half a century ago Mr. Callanan came to Iowa with moderate means. He obtained possession of swamp lands which were afterwards improved by legislation, thus realizing large profits on his investments.

He immediately invested in mines, eventually purchasing Durango Mountain, Mexico, a mound which contains rich iron ore, and which, it is said by heirs, was bought for $800,000. The remainder of his money was invested in farms and government bonds, and was used in establishing banks.

All of this had been accomplished when Mr. Callanan was less than 60 years of age. It was at this time that, while continuing to devote much time to business, Mr. Callanan took up charitable work as a business.

He gave sparingly but often. He made no donation without a thorough investigation. If the project seemed plausible, he at once took charge of the matter as one of his personal affairs, seeing it to the finish. He established the Iowa Humane Society, and was practically its lone financial supporter. He took charge of the Associated Charities. He established colleges for negroes, and homes for the friendless.

When he died two weeks ago the public expected something unusual in his will, and they were not disappointed.

Not an heir, other individual or organization receives a cent which is not conditioned. He demands observance of the principles which he followed.

More peculiar, however, are some of the bequests themselves. Just before his death Mr. Callanan lamented the fact, that not a boy in his family, although he had many relatives, possessed the name James. He guarded against future oversights of this nature in the drawing up of his will. He provided that all babies born in the Callanan family within a year (however distant the blood) who receives the name James shall simultaneously receive $500 each.

The old man loved birds and flowers. So he sat aside $300 per year to be used in keeping beautiful the cemetery in which he was buried at South Bethlehem, New York.

Having already done much for the wives of drunkards, he added to his work by leaving $50,000 for the establishment of a home for them. It is said that this home may be established in St. Louis.

He was a personal friend of Booth Tucker of the Salvation Army, having entertained him in Des Moines many times; so he gave the army $20,000, the greater portion of which is to be used in work in Des Moines.

Mr. Callanan despised war; consequently he set aside $10,000 to be used in promoting international peace. This amount is to be spent by the American Peace society of Boston

In Des Moines he had established a negro church. The church was strong in enthusiasm; weak as to finances. Mr. Callanan provided for the payment of the church debt, put $5000 in the treasury and gave the pastor, Rev. Lomack, $1000.

To five other colored churches he gave $100 each.

Several nephews, who are remembered with sums exceeding $10,000 each, would forfeit their claims if they should become intemperate. Similar provisions are made in practically all of his small donations. Lorenze Kelley, his coachman, gets $100 per year for life, under the same conditions. John A. Lawless, his private secretary, receives $10,000 under the same terms, and dozens of his old employes are thus remembered.

Of the greatest importance, perhaps, was the bequest of $160,000 in favor of Booker T. Washington. Mr. Washington and Mr. Callanan were personal friends and Washington was often entertained in the Callanan home. They discussed plans for the enlargment of Tuskegee Institute, and it was well understood that the institution would be the object of a piece of good fortune at the time of the banker's death. Washington was in Des Moines not long ago. Mr. Callanan had not long to live, being 86 years of age and feeble. So he explained to the leader of the Southern movement some of his ideas. The suggestions were agreeable to Mr. Washington and, when he left Des Moines, he had the promise of the money which he will soon receive.

INDIANS IN BOGUS ART

Are Manufacturing Pottery of the Cliff Dwellers' Age.

Santa Fe, N. M., Oct. 21.—Indians have learned to make pottery in imitation of prehistoric specimens and are selling it at a large profit.

Idols and household articles, supposed to have been dug among the homes of cliff-dwellers of pre-Columbian days, are made to order by the carload in Arizona and New Mexico. Vases that connoisseurs prize as masterpieces of America's first potters, who lived before a Montezuma sat upon the Aztec throne, are fashioned in clay in half a dozen pueblos. Cracked specimens of plastic art, ascribed to aborigines before the dawn of the Christian era, are made almost daily by Pueblo Indians. Mortairs are chiseled and wrought for the white man's collection of antiquities.

Maricopa and Hualipi Indians on the desert wastes of Arizona create and sell ragged remnants of grass woven sandals, bucklers and buckskin moccasins and leggings as exhumed relics of a race that lived in walled towers throughout the Salt River valley. Grotesque effigies, in proportioned jars, crazy implements of the chase, strangely painted war clubs and urns and children's toys, in all the crudity of the primitive savages are regularly manufactured by squaws for curio dealers.

The prehistoric relic industry has come to be a thriving one in almost every Indian community in Arizona and New Mexico. The Zunis were pioneers in the prehistoric-pottery business. The news of their profits spread to Acoma, Lagona, Isleta and to the little pueblas along the Rio Grande and about Santa Fe.

As the industry has grown it has broadened in scope. The Apaches found their ancient war weapons were in good demand by buyers for curio stores. Forthwith the manufacture of old war clubs began. The Hualipis were told of the money there was in making these crude aboriginal weapons. After a while the Hualipis also had for market still older carved clubs, which were said to have been dug among the ruins of the Toltec Pompeiis of the Arizona deserts.

Indian aestheticism has progressed little since recorded history began, so it is not difficult for a modern to imitate the art of ancestors. With a little instruction from traders and curio dealers the Indians have learned how best to win the eyes of the tourist public—and make the most luring counterfeits of ancient articles.

The Pueblo Indians are especially artful in the manufacture of articles from clay that have the stamp of age and will bear scrutiny. The Pueblos have many tricks in pottery that they keep secret. With smoky fires the grime of ages is put on a vase made yesterday. Burial for a few weeks in damp soil gives a musty color to a clay effigy that some squaw moulded last week. Chipping away the rude edges of a bowl gives the appearance of use in early American homes.

INDIANS ARE PAID

To Eat to Preserve a Social Tradition.

Yankton, S. D., Oct. 21.—One of the striking customs that are preserved by the Indians of today is found among tribes on the Devil's Lake reservation. Supervisor Wright of the Indian service gives this account of the peculiar practice in his report, just made public:

"From time immemorial the Devil's Lake Sioux have adhered to an old custom in regard to the treatment of the guest. According to their etiquet it is the duty of the host to supply his guest with all the food he may desire, and as a rule the apportionment set before the visiting Indian is much in excess of the capacity of one man.

"But by the same custom the guest is obliged to eat all that is placed before him, or he insults his entertainer. It was found that this practice would work a hardship, but instead of dispensing with the custom, the Indian method of reasoning was applied, and what is known as the professional eater was brought to the front.

"While the guest is supposed to eat all that is placed before him, it serves the same purpose if his neighbor assists in devouring the repast, the main object being to have the plate clean when the meal is finished.

"It is not always practicable to depend upon a neighbor to assist in eating a large dinner, and to insure the consumption of the allotted portion, visiting Indians call upon professional eaters, whose duty it is to sit beside them through a meal and eat what the guests leave. The professional eaters are never looked upon as guests, but more as traveling companions with a duty to perform.

These eaters receive $1 to $2 and even $3 for each meal where they assist. It is stated by the agent at the Devil's Lake reservation that one of the professional eaters has been known to dispose of seventeen pounds of beef at a sitting. That they are capable of eating an almost fabulous amount I can testify."

BRYAN HAS A GOOD CHANCE

To Go to the United States Senate From Nebraska.

Norfolk, Neb., Oct. 21.—William Jennings Bryan's prospects for going to the United States senate are improving daily, and he will probably be Mr. Dietrich's successor.

Many Republicans are disposed to vote their state pride in a man who has twice been candidate for president and who, they believe, would be a credit to the state in the senate. Mr. Bryan, in short, is stronger as a candidate for senator than he ever was for president.

There is a revolt against scandals that have attended senatorial elections in this state in recent years. It is recognized that Bryan would bring nothing of this kind. Senators have been selected by one or the other of the railroad factions in the party, and the same influences have done much to shape legislation at Lincoln.

The last legislature passed a new revenue law which has made an acute state issue and is helping the Democrats. Demanding higher proportionate taxation of railroads, the people expected the new law to increase the railroad's share of public burdens; but, by the time the bill passed, after the railroad lobby had assisted in licking it into shape, it was found to reduce the proportion of taxes paid by these corporations.

Governor Mickey, the Republican candidate, was elected lieutenant governor two years ago, succeeding to the governorship when Dietrich became senator. He is weak and unpopular, though generally regarded as comparatively free from corporation influences. He is counted 10,000 votes weaker than Roosevelt in the state.

The Republicans in the state convention set a new precedent by nominating a candidate for senator. He is Congressman Elmer J. Burkett, of Lincoln. Mr. Burkett is young, clever and unobjectionable. He is independent enough to avoid the charge of being controlled by special interests yet good enough politician to keep them friendly. But his nomination has injured his party's chances in the legislature. Had no nomination been made, a half score of leaders with senatorial "bees in their bonnets' would now have been devoting themselves to special efforts to elect a Republican legislature. With these aspirants elliminated so much interest is lost and the effect is being felt.

Another unfortunate situation confronts the Republicans, in the factional fight in Omaha and Douglass county. Two years ago Editor Rosewater, of the Bee, vigorously attacked Congressman Dave Mercer, and, though unable to defeat him for renomination, assisted in the election of C. M. Hitchcock, Democrat, and editor of the World-Herald. This year Mr. Rosewater demanded the nomination of John L. Kennedy against Hitchcock, and, after a bitter fight, secured it.

The anti-Rosewater crowd has not forgiven the Rosewater bolt of two years ago, and is now disposed to knife Kennedy. Indications are that Hitchcock will be re-elected, and that the Democrats will name at least half the Douglass county legislative ticket. As Douglass county generally, with its delegation of nine, holds the balance of power at Lincoln, such an outcome would greatly improve Bryan's senatorial chances.

Mr. Bryan's successes at the St. Louis convention did much to rehabilitate him in the esteem of his fellow Nebraskans. He has had more recognition at home for the capacity which he there displayed for dominating affairs than he ever won before.

SURPRISE FOR THE MINISTER.

The remarks of the dean of Norwich on flirting in church recalls a similar protest made at a Hull chapel by a Wesleyan minister, says the London News. Toward the close of an evening service he expressed regret that he had observed a couple of young people "spooning" throughout the service, and threatened, in order to protect the sacred walls from an irreverent use, to name the offenders publicly on the following Sunday unless they saw him at the vestry afterward and promised to amend their courting ways. On going to the vestry after the service he was astonished to find not fewer than seven pairs of young people, all waiting to falter out apologies.

SKIN DISEASES

Altoona, Pa., June 20, 1903.

I was afflicted with Tetter in bad shape. It would appear in blotches as large as my hand, a yellowish color, and scale off. You can imagine how offensive it was. For twelve years I was afflicted with this trouble. At night it was a case of scratch and many times no rest at all. Seeing the good the medicine was doing a friend who was taking it for Eczema, I commenced it, and as a result the eruption began to dry up and disappear, and to-day I am practically a well man. Only two tiny spots are left on the elbow and shin, where once the whole body was affected. I have every confidence in the medicine, and feel sure that in a short time these two remaining spots will disappear. S. S. S. is certainly a great blood purifier, and has done me a world of good. I am grateful for what it has accomplished, and trust that what I have said will lead others who are similarly afflicted to take the remedy and obtain the same good results that I have.

125 East Fifth Ave. JOHN F. LEAR.

While washes, soaps, salves and powders relieve temporarily, they do not reach the real cause of the disease. The blood must be purified before the cure is permanent. S.S.S. contains no potash, arsenic or mineral of any description, but is guaranteed purely vegetable. Send for our book on the skin and its diseases, which is mailed free. Our physicians will cheerfully advise without charge any who write us about their case.

ARIZONA'S CAMELS

Hard to Capture, Says Ranchman Who Tried It Once.

He Predicts That the Kansas Expedition Will Have Trouble.

Gila City, Ariz., Oct. 21.—The report from Topeka, Kan., that an expedition may be organized to round up the wild camels of this region has aroused much interest here.

There are several droves of these camels in Arizona. They are frequently seen on the borders of the great salt desert. If it had been proved possible to capture and domesticate the animals they would have been put to practical use by the people of this section before this.

The men who have attempted to do what the members of the Topeka expedition now purpose doing met with signal failure and none of them care to go through the experience again.

"Them Eastern fellers can round up all the camels they want to. I don't want no more of it in mine," was the remark which "Clem" Miller made when told of the project. Miller has a ranch near the Mexico border between Gila City and Yuma. "I wouldn't mind being off at a safe distance when the round-up takes place, but excuse me from partic'patin' in it. It would be fun for the onlooker, but awful for the other feller. Maybe they do use camels on the 'Sahary' desert, but they must be a different breed from these 'Arizony' animals.

"When I started my ranch a few years ago I thought it would be a good idea to rope a few of these animals that roam around here an' use 'em to bring my ranch supplies over from Yuma. I also had an idea that I could establish a regular line of these 'beasts of burden,' as my school book used to call them, and do a regular freighting business with them between the towns of Arizony. I wasn't no tenderfoot when I struck this part of the country. I'd lived too long in West Texas and in the Apache region of New Mexico not to know how to hold my own on the range or in the mountains. I'd never met a wild animal that could get the best of me in a square deal. But, to tell the truth, I had never considered the camels as being wild animals. The only camels I ever had seen until I came to Arizony was them that are carried around in circuses back East. They were tame enough.

"Well, one morning, four years ago, about this time of year, I set out with three of my cowboys to round-up a bunch of camels. My cowboys were experts with the rope. Two of them were Texans and the other was a Mexican whom I picked up in Sonora. His name was Manuel. He was the only one of the party who objected to going. He hung back and repeatedly told me that the camels were 'no bueno,' and I had to give him a good 'cussin' in my best Spanish before I could get him to hunch up to the game.

"It was nigh on to noon when we first caught sight of a drove of camels. There were five of the animals feedin' on some desert plains near one of the big sand dunes about seventeen miles north of my ranch. They were probably a half mile away from us when they first saw us. They rose their heads and seemed to sniff the air a few times and then leisurely disappeared behind the sand dunes. I divided my party into two parts. Manuel and I started around the sand dune one way and the two Texans went the other way. We were to slip up on the camels and rope as many as we could. This plan worked all right as far as it went.

"Manuel and I crept around the big pile of sand on our horses so carefully that we got within a few yards of three of the camels before we saw them or they saw us. They were standing in a nook of the sand dune.

"The surprise was mutual, but I recovered from the shock before the camels and let go my coil of rope with my old-time speed and accuracy. The loop settled far down over the neck and chest of the animal before the rope became fully stretched. My cow pony settled back on his haunches, but, to my surprise, the camel walked right off with him.

"Then followed such a race as I never before witnessed. The camel didn't seem to be running, but I'll be blamed if it didn't carry my pony along at what seemed to me to be the speed of a locomotive. My poor pony sat down on his haunches for a short distance, but the dragging effect was too disagreeable and he managed to get up, and the way that camel made him run was marvelous. The pony simply had to run or be dragged to death. The rope was looped around the pommel of my saddle and was drawn so tight that it was impossible for me to loosen it. I felt in my pockets for my knife to cut the rope, but it wasn't there.

"There was only one thing for me to do, and that was to get off that cow pony and leave him to his fate. It seemed to me that he was being pulled along by that camel at the rate of a mile a minute when I dropped off into the sand. The fall shook me up considerable, but I was thankful I got out of it alive. I sat up and watched the camel and pony disappear in the far distance. I looked back and saw my three cowboys coming out toward me. None of the other camels were in sight.

"One of the Texans told me he had roped a camel and was being carried off the same way as I, when he saved the pony by cutting the rope. We rode back to the ranch without any camels, and I have never had any desire to domesticate them desert animals since then."

CAESAR AND BRUTUS

Were the Undoing of a Finnish Teacher.

Berlin, Oct. 21.—A Russian inspector of schools lately visited unexpectedly a Finnish school when the master was teaching a class in Roman history. The lesson was about Julius Cæsar's character and his ambition, and then began to tell about Brutus and his patriotism.

The inspector rose from his seat in fury and cried out:

"Let the school be closed!"

After a moment's consternation the master followed the instructions given him and dismissed the scholars.

The inspector left, saying, with a scowl, that the master would hear from him again.

That evening the master was arrested on a charge of teaching sedition. He asked for an explanation, and was told that under the guise of Julius Cæsar and Brutus he was telling the boys about Bobrikoff and his murderer, Schaumann.

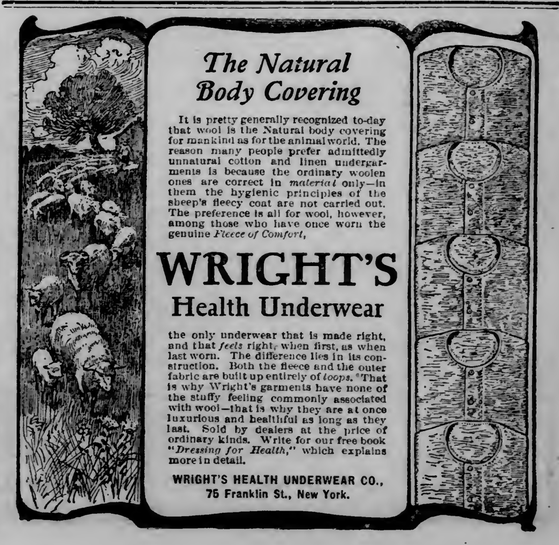

It was with the utmost difficulty that the master, after appealing to powerful friends for their support, managed to get free from the police clutches.

A Finnish daily newspaper was suppressed by the police for a month for calling Schaumann the "man who took Gen. Bobdikoff's life." Instead of "man" the newspaper should have printed "murderer."

A paper which published the story about Julius Cæsar was also suppressed for a month.

EXTERMINATION OF RATS.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, in his address to the sanitary inspectors at Bournemouth, referred in some detail to plague epidemics and affirmed, in contravention of Lord Curzon's recent remarks, that administrative energy in sanitation has greatly restricted its ravages and promises to control them in future. All sanitary work has widespread effects, but has to undergo special adaptation, says the Medical World. In the case of plague, the peculiarity is rats, and without waiting for an epidemic, a crusade against them should be undertaken. They are useless, altogether noisome, and probably promoters of other diseases besides plague. They should be exterminated, and he would enlist the sporting propensity to assist in the process. Rat catching was as exciting and quite as elevating as pigeon shooting. The sporting papers should describe the battues, report the bags, and give portraits of the record breakers, for great things might be expected when sport, fashion and sanitation joined hands.

The Natural Body Covering

It is pretty generally recognized to-day that wool is the Natural body covering for mankind as for the animal world. The reason many people prefer admittedly unnatural cotton and linen undergarments is because the ordinary woolen ones are correct in material only—in them the hygienic principles of the sheep's fleecy coat are not carried out. The preference is all for wool, however, among those who have once worn the genuine Fleece of Comfort, the only underwear that is made right, and that feels right when first, as when last worn. The difference lies in its construction. Both the fleece and the outer fabric are built up entirely of loops. That is why Wright's garments have none of the stuffy feeling commonly associated with wool—that is why they are at once luxurious and healthful as long as they last. Sold by dealers at the price of ordinary kinds. Write for our free book "Dressing for Health," which explains more in detail.

WRIGHT'S

HEIRESS IN DEMAND

The Mails Are Burdened With Proposals of Marriage.

Her Money Declared No Object, Want Only Herself.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 21.—Since the announcement that Miss Clittie Griggs, a telephone girl, employed with the Harroun Grain Commission company, in the Exchange building, had received a half-million-dollar bequest from a cousin in Alaska, she has been the recipient of letters from persons all over the Middle West.

Most of these letters have been from men proposing marriage; others asking for money, and still others begging her let them have her money to invest or to perfect inventions or schemes they have. But the women have not been far behind with letters and appeals to the young heiress. Representatives of various societies and associations have requested her to donate part of her money to them.

The letters from men who desire the young woman for a wife and, incidentally, her half million, although they all declare they love her for herself and not for the money's sake, are the most numerous and the most interesting—that is, to the disinterested reader—for Miss Griggs declares she does not like to get them and will pay no attention to them.

Miss Griggs does not deign to answer any of them and, as a result, the writers have with one exception subsided into silence after one letter. The one exception is an Iowa man. He gives his name as Butler and his address as Whittemore, Iowa. His first letter to Miss Griggs covered three large sheets and was closely written. In it he indiscriminately mixed business and sentiment by alternately declaring he wanted to love her and begging for $5000 to "put him on his feet again."

Extracts from the first letter read:

Miss Clittie Griggs, Kansas City, Mo.:

My Dear Friend—I have read of your good fortune in getting a half million dollars. It will be nice for a young and beautiful girl like you are. I am a poor man and ask you for to help me. I have been sick and have lost out so that I am about on my last ground. Won't you give me $5000 to start in the drug business with? Or, no; I don't want you to give me the money. Let me have it and I will repay you. That sum will be small to you and would be such a help to me, who needs a lift so sorely. Now, dear lady, remember the Bible says it is good to give, and you won't miss it. I have worked hard all my life and have not squandered my money, but you know we all have bad luck at times."

So on through to the end the letter ran. Miss Griggs did not answer the letter, and she received a second letter from the same Mr. Butler, enclosing a stamp for reply and pleading at great length and, in turn, for an answer, her love and $5000 of her money.

This letter ran:

My Dear Friend Clittie (if you will allow me to call such)—You must not get angry, but please read all this scribbling. It may be true that you are getting many letters, but will add that there is not one of them that needs assistance from you as I do. I know if I could have a personal interview with you, you would not turn me down. I have concluded that you are a fine girl, and nothing would give me more pleasure than to be able to call you my wife. Would it not be nice if such a thing would come to pass? I bet you will laugh and say I am crazy, but I will say I am only half-way to the quarter-mile post.

We are strangers, and you are rich and I am poor, but that is no reason why I should not say what I wish to do. I once knew a telephone operator, who is now dead. She was a fine girl, and if all the operators are like her, you cannot blame me for wanting to meet you. Well, I guess you are tired of this kind of stuff, so I will adjust myself to the financial proposition. You say you received a half million; take me as a personal friend and give me a lift with four or five thousand. For security I will write my will in your favor. If you were poor and myself rich, I would help you, and you would appreciate it, so you can see that I would. I was learning telegraphy once, and during that time gave my last cent to a beggar. I can't stand to see a poor creature go hungry, even if he is not worthy, so Miss Clittie, please consider my case.

I don't know what you are, but I am a Catholic. That is one reason why I quit railroading. A man could not be a Catholic and a railroad man.

Butler's letter continues on for several pages in the same way. His sentences fairly teem with novel declarations. He also intimates that he will come to Kansas City to see Miss Griggs. Butler closes his letter, after innumerable pleas for money, with the phrase: "Your Honest Friend," and begs in the humblest language for a reply.

A man who signs himself Lowenstein writes from Strong City, Kan.:

Miss Clittie Griggs:

My Dear Friend—I am sure you will want to invest your money in a great paying proposition. Now, that is what I have. It is a sure thing. If you will write to me, I will send you the names of some of our leading business men who have invested in my proposition. It pays 100 per cent per year. I would be willing to invest as much as you wish, and, in case my proposition proves successful, would be willing to marry you. Hoping you will consider both my propositons, I remain.

Miss Griggs was at work at the switchboard as usual. When she first received word of her good fortune, she said she would continue to live in the present home of the family, a neat, but small frame cottage at 21512 Cyprus street. Now she declare she wants a home on one of the boulevards.

LIND ASSERTS THAT IT'S TRUE

Stands By Every Statement In His Recent Speech.

St. Paul, Oct. 21.—The defense of R. C. Dunn to the exposure by Congressman John Lind in his St. Paul speech of the absurdity of Mr. Dunn's claims to credit for his participation in the Duluth & Iron Range land grant matter, brought a brief statement yesterday from Mr. Lind. He said:

"Every statement I made in my speech Monday night was accurate, and according to the facts and the records."

It is understood, however, that Mr. Lind, who is to speak Friday night at Redwood Falls, will go into the case more thoroughly, if it is possible, and will exploit the whole preceeding for which Mr. Dunn has been claiming credit.

In his defense Mr. Dunn talks at length of a supplemental decree. There was no supplemental decree issued by the United States circuit court, containing the 43,000 acres of land belonging to the state institutions fund, but this list was contained in the original decree. By some peculiarity, not explained, the fact of the inclusion of this immense tract of valuable land in the decree was not officially known to the state auditor's office for a year and two months later, according to the admissions in an artile printed in a St. Paul paper and evidently inspired by the state auditor, on Feb. 3, 1902.

The lands were included in "lands heretofore selected" and the record shows that the former state auditor accepted the decree without investigation of what it conveyed.

Mr. Dunn does not cite the reasons for the compromise, negotiations for which were at one time broken off because of his clash with the representatives of the railroad company at Duluth. He denies making any apology to the railroad people, but St. Paul men familiar with the proceedings are understood to say privately, that the apology was made in writing, and later that the article in Mr. Dunn's morning paper organ, to which reference has just been made, was written as an apology to F. B. Kellogg. The article pays Mr. Kellogg a high personal tribute and assigns much of the lands to the state to his good offices.

A friend who met Mr. Lind in a corridor of a Minneapolis office building yesterday, found him reading Mr. Dunn's defense.

"I see they go after you," the friend said:

Mr. Lind's jaw set with a snap.

"I speak at Redwood Falls Friday night and shall have something to say in rebuttal," said the Minneapolis congressman.

And his friend knew that John Lind would "make good."

THRILLING RIDE

Of Girl on the Back of a Steer.

Susquehanna, Pa., Oct. 21.—Clinging to the back of a frantic steer Miss Dora Isaacson, of Rahway, N. J., had a thrilling ride. To several friends the girl suggested that it would be fun to get on the back of a fine Jersey steer drinking at a trough. Suiting the action to the word she was soon on top of it.

The steer gave a roar and broke for the high road, heading for the Susquehanna river. After it had run a half mile a man in a red sweater appeared. This was more than the outraged feelings of the animal could stand and he gave chase. There was a race for about a mile.

Some farmers saw the girl and hastily put a fence rail across the road. The steer stopped and Miss Isaacson fell off. Then she fainted.

The farmers took her home, but it was twenty-four hours before she recovered sufficiently to return to her friends.

LONG LOST BROTHER

Was Working For Man Searching For Him.

Ashland, Ky., Oct. 21.—Pietro Gascana, a foreman on construction work, near here, came to this country in 1900 in search of a young brother, who had run away from home twelve years ago.

Last Sunday a young man who has been employed in Gascana's crew for four months, walked into the tent and asked for a razor.

In a few moments he had the long beard which he had worn during the four months removed and stood revealed to Pietro Gascana as the long-lost brother. The elder man was completely overcome with joy and fell in a fit. The men in camp are preparing a grand celebration of the reunion as soon as their celebration is sufficiently recovered.

A MURDER MYSTERY

Woman's Petrified Corpse Tells of a Crime Centuries Old.

Severed Head and Scarred Body Reveals Story of Violence.

Barre, Vt., Oct. 21.—The petrified body of a woman, who, scientists say, lived several thousand years before Indians inhabited America, has been found in Washington, this county, by Willard Clough and will soon be placed on exhibition at the state museum in Montpelier. It was found under the stump of a giant tree, about fifteen feet under the roots.

As the head had been severed and there were deep scars upon the body made by a dull instrument, there was considerable excitement, and a constable was about to hold an inquest when Dr. F. A. Warner declared that the body belonged to a prehistoric race, and that, if the woman had been murdered, the deed was committed at a time considerably antedating American law. Thereupon, the inquest was called off and Professor Charles H. Richardson, of Dartmouth college, was sent for.

After making a careful examination, Professor Richardson declared the find to be of great value to scientists. He said that the woman belonged to a race of which historians knew nothing and evidently lived scores of centuries before the Indians made their homes on the North American continent. The shape of the head he found to be entirely unlike that of any race living today and was so strange in formation that it appeared to be almost inhuman.

The cheek bones are exceptionally high and prominent and the forehead slopes back rapidly. The great oddity, however, is the distance from the eyebrow to the crown of the head. This measures seven inches. The height of the body is 5 feet 10 inches, which is believed to have been the height of the woman while in life. The chest is wel developed, and the breadth of the back between the shoulders is eighteen inches.

Where the head was cut off the vertebrae protrude and are plainly visible. The toes are plainly separated, as are the fingers, and all the features stand out in bold relief. One arm was broken off at the elbow and the hand was clenched as though to strike when death came. Otherwise the body was not dismembered below the neck.

The body weighed 350 pounds in its petrified state, and, according to the professor, the woman tipped the scales in life at about 125 pounds. The petrification occurred in quicksand and the muck and the action of the preserving qualities in the soil were so perfect that the optic nerves are plainly discernible in both eye sockets. The soil above the quicksand was marshy and supported the tree for over 100 years. The oldest inhabitant cannot remember when it was cut down, so the actual records of the case extend over two centuries.

SPEND A THOUSAND

In Lawsuit to Win One Hundred Dollars.

Temple, Tex., Oct. 21.—A celebrated lawsuit has just been amicably settled in the county court at Caldwell. The case was styled Atwood vs. Ryan, and was for the possession of a calf which both parties claimed.

The yearling which caused all the trouble strayed off the Atwood preserves and got mixed up with cattle owned by Ryan. When the state of affairs became known there was a demand for the yearling, a refusal, exchange of threats, a lawsuit in a justice court and an appeal to the county court.

Since the suit began there have been several continuances and three mistrials. No twelve men in Burleson county had been found in three attempts who could agree upon a verdict.

The expense of the litigation was considerably over $1000. The yearling which caused all the trouble was valued at $100.

CRUELTY THEN AND NOW.

The fining of an inhuman driver in municipal court yesterday will recall to mind the fact that an American school reader in general use about thirty years ago contained a story very similar to that related of Myers. The man in the reader story had a balky horse. As a last resort he hitched another horse ahead of the balky one with a chain around the neck of the latter. At the first tightening of the chain the balky beast decided to move and ever afterward all the owner was required to do in order to cure the horse of a balky fit was to rattle a chain. The story was told, no doubt, to show both the ingenuity of the driver and the intelligence of the horse. If the horse had been as obstinate as a mule, however, the chances are that he, also, would have been nearly choked to death before he decided to move.

The fact that a driver is fined these days for doing an act that the school readers taught children a generation ago shows how the world has progressed in the humane treatment of animals.

A balky horse or mule is a sore trial and an awful aggravation to any driver and the man who cannot control his temper should absolutely refuse to drive one. Any man who has had occasion to drive a balky animal will at least have some sympathy for those who loose their patience under such circumstances. But a horse that is habitually balky and incurable of the habit should be shot. He is of more damage than use in the world.

This case recalls the fact, however, that many teams in Duluth are habitually overloaded, and while this may not have been the case with the brewery mules, the chances are that it was. Every day teams may be seen toiling up the steep avenues of Duluth with loads that are heavy enough on the level. Especially is this true of coal teams, and the way that these horses are compelled to work in order to get these enormous loads up the hill is a shame to the owners and drivers and a disgrace to the community. For actual inhumanity it excels the trick performed by Myers. It is no worse to choke off a horse's wind than it is to make him pull on slippery pavements so that his front feet frequently go out from under him, while every cord and muscle in his body is strained to its utmost. It is no wonder that mules and even horses sometimes refuse to go further, even if there is nothing balky in their nature.

If drivers and owners are not possessed of sufficient humanity to stop this infernal cruelty to horses, the authorities should take a hand.

THE COLORADO ISSUE.

The people of Colorado will be called upon next month to decide an important question. The issue is just this:

Shall peace and order be maintained by lawful methods and shall the people's will as expressed at the polls be carried out, or shall the state be governed by official anarchists who insist on governing the state by illegal and unconstitutional methods?

On one side is Governor Peabody and official anarchy. On the other side stands the Democratic candidate for governor, Alva Adams, whose platform is this:

"If elected, as far as it may be within the power of the governor, there will be no discrimination in the enforcement of law. Before it all shall stand equal. Union and non-union, employer and employe, shall be subject alike to its penalties and benefits. From no citizen will be taken those rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights. There will be no deportations. Every man under charge of crime shall have a fair and legal trial. If guilty, he will be punished; if acquitted, he will be set free and protected in his rights. The impartial enforcement of all laws against all lawbreakers and the firm maintenance of every civil right of every citizen is a policy that will tranquilize labor conditions and restore general prosperity. All that Colorado needs is peace and good government. These we will try to give."

What right-minded citizen can find a single fault with this declaration? The nation is looking to the people of Colorado to redeem that state from the rule of official anarchists as well as the terrors of private mobs.

BACHELORS DIE EARLIER.

There are many reasons why married life is preferable to "single blessedness." The Herald has indicated some of them, the most important one being that it is a command of nature and those who best obey nature's laws are best rewarded.

But there is another good reason. Married life conduces to longevity. A professor with a bent for investigation of this matter has calculated that the mortality among bachelors from the age of 30 to 45 years is 27 per cent, while among married men of the same age it is 18 per cent. For 41 bachelors who attain the age of 40 years there are 78 married men who reach the same age. The difference is still more striking in persons of advanced age. At 60 years of age there remain but 22 bachelors for 48 married men out of an equal number on each side. At 70, 11 bachelors for 27 married men, and at 80, 3 bachelors for 9 married men.

It is not stated upon what statistics these calculations are based, but it is asserted that the professor's observations cover a sufficient range of time, place and occupation to establish their correctness.

Notwithstanding the loss of hair and the mental worries that are popularly attributed to the married man, the fact remains that married life has a decided tendency to hold a man closer to an observance of nature's laws. Even if his tendencies are in the direction of a fast life and dissipation the restraint that is placed upon him by his better half has a deterrent influence that is wholesome. Furthermore the knowledge that his duty toward his family requires that he shall maintain his health and strength so that he can do his best work for their maintenance leads him to a better observance of nature's decrees.

In other words, it is responsibility that brings out the best there is in a man if there is any good in him at all. The single man does not feel the same responsibility and therefore is more liable to indulgence of his personal faults and weaknesses.

It was recently asserted that a large majority of the men found in poor-houses were single men, either widowers without family or men who had never been married. This is undoubtedly a fact, which goes to prove the truth of this professor's statistics.

There are exceptions, of course, to every rule, but it is by the rule that we must base our calculations. And it is for these reasons that The Herald believes that early marriages are preferable to late ones. For the earlier a man assumes the obligations of maintaining a home the better it will be for his health, his intellect and his purse.

A VICIOUS WASTE.

There is a wide discrepancy in the estimates of two prominent gentlemen as to the cost of the Philippines to the American people. The men who disagree are both judges and good ones. One is Judge Parker, who asserts that the Philippines to date have cost this nation $670,000,000. The other is Judge Taft, who says they cost us only $169,000,000 up to May, 1902.

This, of course, worries the Republican organs. They assert that Judge Taft is a better judge and that he has the government figures to back up his assertion. They charge Judge Parker with being a sensationalist and an exaggerator.

But the fact is that Judge Parker's figures are nearer correct. In the six years preceding the Spanish war our war and navy departments spent $483,609,692. In the five years and ten months from Sept. 1, 1898, when the fighting with Spain was all over and the Philippine troubles were beginning, to July 1, 1904, those departments cost us $1,214,100,339—an increase of $730,490,647.

It is only fair to say that this large increase in expenditures on the army since the close of the Spanish war was a direct result of our taking over the Philippines and the adoption of an imperial policy by the Republican party. Otherwise these expenditures would not have been necessary. So, then, it is also reasonable and just to charge up to the Philippines a large portion of this additional expense.

But whatever the cause, the expenses for purposes of war have been greatly increased and if this nation had pursued a just and proper course in its dealings with the world they would have been entirely unnecessary.

So whichever horn of the dilemma the Republican organs choose to seize they are placed in the position of defending a vicious waste of the people's wealth. If the amount that has been expended is only as much as estimated by Judge Taft it is an enormous sum practically thrown away.

THE FIELD SURVEY

On a salary of $1300 a year Labor Grafter Weinseimer, of New York, piled up a bank account of $80,000. A large portion of that $80,000 the workingmen might have had if they had attended to their own business instead of trusting implicitly to Weinseimer. The employer who could afford to pay him that amount in order to keep his men at work could have paid it to the workmen just as well.

A New York woman who had quarreled with her husband went to a neighbor across the hall for gossip and consolation. The two women drank beer. Finally they got to feeling so forgiving that they began telling of the many virtues of their respective husbands. The beer worked harder and they disagreed. The beer labored again and then they quarreled. Inspired by beer, the visitor insulted her host. Propelled by beer, the host hurled a lighted lamp at her visitor. The lamp broke and the woman was burned to death. Of course beer is an evil thing, but don't you sometimes think it is really innate, inborn cussedness, instead of drink, that is responsible for many of these things?

Which is better, eccentricities of grammar and spelling in something worth reading, or faultless language and orthography with no originality of thought or expression? It is a fortunate thing for the individual when all these talents are combined in one person, but it is an exceedingly rare combination.

Chicago police made a raid on a fake home for epileptics the other day and arrested twelve of the solicitors, who have been collecting from $15 to $200 per day. The "charity" fake is a great graft which will be done away with when all charities are placed under government control.

A special dispatch from Washington relates that Mrs. Roosevelt has organized her "social cabinet" with a view to controlling society affairs in Washington. As the president has his Cortelyou it is presumed that a prominent personage in Mrs. Roosevelt's cabinet will be a Mrs. "I'll-tell-you."

The government deficit for October up to the 20th amounted to $1,869,696. It will soon be time for more bonds or higher taxation.

The disgrace that certain former police officers have brought upon themselves as a result of violating the laws they were supposed to enforce, will have accomplished some good for the community if it will result in a closer watch being kept on the doings of all policemen. The man who is charged with enforcement of the law should be above suspicion of law violation, and the mayor and chief of police are to be commended for their prompt action in dispensing with the services of such officers. Are there others? The mayor and chief should make it a point to find out, and not wait for exposure to come from other sources.

By harping on and criticising Judge Parker's stand on the Philippines question, which is the only fair, just and reasonable position for any real American to assume, the Brooklyn Eagle is putting itself in a position, in case of Democratic defeat, to exclaim: "We told you so" and "We told you the reason." But if Judge Parker is defeated the actual reason will be because he has received the alleged support of such papers as the Eagle and such individuals as hold views in common with that paper. There is no genuine Democracy in its utterances on the Philippine question or any other question vitally affecting the welfare of the American people. It is too bad that it did not follow the New York Sun into the Roosevelt camp.

Hotel Gossip.

Guests at one of the local hotels were startled not so long ago by the terrific reverberations of a vocal organ which apparently, to those who could not see the manipulator, belonged to a modern Atlas. This voice was one to terrorize multitudes in one realm, to appall great masses of people.

The voice made itself heard at the dining hour and dishes rattled, serving girls shivered with fear and guests knocked their knees together in their apprehension. The elevator boy forsook his accustomed station outside the door of his life and sought refuge in the cage.

Chandeliers looked downward lest they might be suddenly chosen for some unknown and horrible fate and the sky appeared pale. The flowers in the frescoes wilted and the floor stood motionless.

This voice continued to expend itself in large hunks without doing the expected damage. After a matter of a minute or two continuous work by the voice there were no chandeliers broken, and the dishes in the dining room would call for no insurance adjustment. The floor, sky, dining room guests and waitresses, continued well and intact and some of the more venturesome ones decided to have a look around and see just where the voice originated. It was found to belong to a human being—no more, no less.

The owner of the voice was a man and a big man at that. He was using the telephone and he was utterly oblivious to the fact that there were other people in the world, much less in the same hotel. He thought the hotel was kept for his sole and especial benefit, and there were others who had a faint remembrance that they had rights in the world which they thought might have some consideration—to-wit, protection from the voice at the telephone.

But no one took a direct hand until some traveling men cooked up a dish of "get-even," which was to be served in the evening, but not in the dining room. A committee was appointed to distribute itself about town at different telephone stations. The big man would be in the hotel during the evening and they would call unto him from various places throughout the city, and keep him busy at the telephone and in other ways until they might develop a well defined case of paralysis of the vocal chords and locomotor ataxia in the gentleman, so that he might be laid away for a couple of days until bruised ears and feelings of other guests might heal.

The scheme was well worked out. One man called the owner of the voice on the 'phone and summoned him to the fourth floor of an office building, not far away, on what was supposed to be important business. The voice was carried around to the building and the owner found the front door open. The elevator was not running and the place was not particularly pleasant to contemplate. There was lots of darkness but no one to meet him.

He was pretty well blown with his three flights of stairs and whether he let out the voice in his disappointment is not known. But he wandered back to the hotel to rest him and soon was summoned again to the telephone, where an alleged reporter wished to get an interview over the wire. This gave ample opportunity of giving the voice more exercise and it was not long until the people in the hotel and from outside clustered near the telephone to find out particulars of the murder. But there had been none.

The man was talking in regard to ordinary matters, but the voice was sufficiently attractive to hold the crowd. After the interview was over the audience dispersed and the voice was allowed to subside. There were more vocal stunts offered the possessor of the thunderous organ, however, and by the time the evening had thoroughly waned the voice and the owner thereof were both tired, so retired.

Early the next morning he again had cause to use the telephone. But there was a difference in the morning. Listened that the vocal had down about 90 degrees and the talking could not be heard outside the telephone room.

S. M. Weller, business manager of the Kyrle Bellew company, who was at the Spalding yesterday, is a Texan, although he makes his home in the East now, since he is in the theatrical business.

"Texas will without doubt roll up her accustomed majority for the Democratic ticket," said Mr. Weller. "She is as far Democratic, ordinarily, as Minnesota is Republican, I guess. Usually the Democrats turn out about 150,000 to the good. The Republicans never have more than half that number of votes. Sometimes the Democrats turn out with 200,000 depends on circumstances, however, and how busy the farmers are, I suppose. If they have too much work on hand, they don't vote, but if circumstances are particularly interesting to them, they make more effort to get to the polls."

Request for Lock of Clergyman's Hair.

London World: An aged clergyman with silvery hair was the recipient of several simultaneous requests from young ladies for a lock of his hair.

The requests were complied with, the clergyman being pleased to fulfil wishes which seemed founded on a sentiment of respect; and all went well until his wife received this note: "Dear Mrs. ——: Won't you please ask your husband to send me a little lock of his hair? We have all been taking lessons in making hair flowers. So many of the other girls asked him, and he sent it to them, that I thought I would rather ask you to get it for me? It is so hard to get white hair for lilies of the valley."

Pointers By Pease.

Anoka Union: The Pioneer Press is scared out.

Twenty days more and then election, and no enthusiasm.

A lead pipe cinch has given away to distrust and discouragement.

A vote for John A. Lovely for supreme judge would be a decent one.

The Union knows them both, and John A. Johnson is head and shoulders the best.

Republicans should stand for decency in politics, just as much as they do in business.

"I know how to get them when I want them," don't seem to be very successful this campaign.

John A. Johnson makes votes wherever he goes. His opponent loses them. 'Tisn't strange.

Undoubtedly the new state capitol is the most elegant structure in the state. But look at the cost.

Lots of men will vote as they please this year and that will make trouble for the head of the Republican state ticket.

St. Paul give any money for land for the new state capitol? Not on your life. Wait until the legislature meets and watch the St. Paul delegation work it for an appropriation for this purpose.

Just as well elect a Democratic governor as not. It will do no harm to the masses, but will be the means of preventing the most daring, unscrupulous and dirtiest ring being formed in Minnesota. The people will be wise to knock it out at the first stages.

What has struck J. Adam Bede? He is sending out over his own frank the speech of William B. Cockran, of New York, in which appears on the front page this quotation "Every vicious perversion of government can be traced to the foundation of all corruption—the protective tariff." Mr. Bede is informed that his constituents in this way do not believe in such pernicious doctrine and can not understand why he circulates it.

The Mexican Navy.

Washington Star: Mexico recently added two modern gunboats to its small naval fleet, and two similar vessels are now in process of construction at Genoa, Italy. In recent years Mexico has devoted some attention to fortifying her coasts, but has not increased her navy until now.

The two vessels building in Italy will be named Bravo and the Morelos. Exclusive of these Italian built ships the Mexican navy consists of four gunboats in the Gulf of Mexico and two on the Pacific coast, besides several small patrol boats in southern waters. The two vessels recently built in the United States are the most formidable ships in the Mexican navy. There is a naval school at Vera Cruz, also an arsenal and a small floting dock as well as a small wooden dock at Guaymas, in the Gulf of California.

A Safe Offer.

Boston Record: Advertising plays such a great part in business today that originality counts for more than extensiveness. A shopkeeper announced that he would give $600 to any one who was perfectly contented with his lot. Of course, many people applied for the place, and each one met with the reply:

"You are not content, for if you were you would not wish the $600."

The Bravest Lover.

How brave that brave lover is
Who loves all things beneath the sun,
Then finds all women in just one,
And finds all fortunes in one kiss!
How wisely born, how more than wise
How wisely learned must be that soul
Who loves all erath, all paradise,
All peoples, places, pole to pole,
Yet in one kiss includes the whole.
—JOAQUIN MILLER in Smart Set.

Duped By Fancy.

Bulwer: A man who cannot explain his ideas is usually the dupe of his imagination in thinking he has any.

Slander.

The Talmud: The slanderer injures three persons: himself, him that receives the slander and the slandered person.

American Promoter Needed.

Baltimore American. Port Arthur is badly in need of water. The czar ought to get some of our up-to-date organizers to take stock in it. They could get water into anything.

Self Respect.

The Talmud: He who is bashful before others, but not before himself, is wanting in self-respect.

Early Marriage and Success.

Metropolitan Magazine: We are used to look grave when a young man takes a wife unto himself with what seems to us to be undue precipitation, and if presently we see a young family growing punctually up around him, maybe we wag our heads a bit and say it was a pity that young Buxton did not wait until he had got a round or two further up the ladder. We say we don't like to see a likely young fellow overweighed at the start, and we know of men of promise who incurred domestic blessings so early in life and in such numbers that all their lives they never did better than to stagger in under their load. We say they never had a chance to get where they belonged, and we fear it is going to be so with that young Buxton.

But if Buxton has got his start and seems to be the right sort, and if that demure young Lucy seems to have some hard sense and the constancy, in whatever disguise, under her ribbons and muslin, lets' not croak unduly nor forecast a lot of bogy troubles that are not actually in sight. Keeping body and soul together is not quite so desperately complicated a task as some of us have grown to think it. Lots of people don't starve to death.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN DULUTH

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1884.

About 100 persons assembled at the opera house this afternoon to put in nomination an independent county ticket. Lon Merritt called the convention to order. W. W. Spalding was elected chairman and Lon Merritt secretary. F. W. Collins introduced a set of resolutions, stating that several of the candidates of the Republican machine were unworthy of support. Lon Merritt nominated James A. Smith for county auditor and the nomination was unanimously endorsed. Joseph Sharpe nominated Joseph Mannheim for register of deeds and the nomination was concurred in. E. S. Hammond nominated S. J. Thompson for sheriff and the proposition was voted down. Lon Merritt nominated S. C. McQuade and that was defeated. Finally James Farrell received the nomination. James Dunphy was nominated for judge of probate. Charles d'Autremont was nominated for county attorney and the nomination was seconded by F. W. Collins, who stated that he would withdraw from the field. The nomination was endorsed. F. W. Collins made an address and the mass meeting adjourned.

Policeman Charles Stock's infant son died this morning.

The present disagreeable weather will retard the improvement of Second street.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Baltimore American: Stern Parent—Now, George, I'd like to put in a whole day without once scolding or punishing you.

George—Well, you have my consent.

New Yorker: "How's the earth divided?" asked a pompous examiner who had already worn out the patience of his class.

"By earthquakes," replied one boy; after which the examiner found that he had had enough of that class.

Chicago Journal: She—Papa is preaching a sermon tonight on "Love One Another."

He—And we are staying at home practising what he preaches, aren't we?

Yonkers Statesman: He—I hope you don't make a fool of your husband?

She—No, I don't have to.

Philadelphia Press: "It seems Woodby has discovered that he has a family tree.

"Yes; it's an outgrowth of his successful business plant."

Atlanta Constitution: "What would you give for a novel of 50,000 words?"

"Well," replied the editor, "if I had the authority I'd give six months."

Puck: The Leading Lady—Every time I walk along the Rialto I meet half a dozen managers who owe me money.

The Ingenue—Back salary or alimony?

Yonkers Statesman: Bill—Don't you think this tipping business is all wrong?

Jill—Well, if you refer to the tips a fellow gets on the races, I think they always are.

ROOSEVELT'S GOOD POINTS.

New York World (Dem.): President Roosevelt has acted wisely, justly and vigorously in the Slocum case. In his dismissal of the guilty government officials, in his denunciation of the manufacturers of defective life-saving appliances and in his demand for measures that will prevent such sacrifices in the future the president has done the right thing in his characteristically strong way.

In spite of his many glaring temperamental defects Mr. Roosevelt often delights in doing the right thing because it is the right thing. Even when the front page benefits force themselves upon him in consequence, they are incidents in virtue's self-reward.

To Mr. Roosevelt's better impulses the country owes many good deeds that shine like Portia's candles through the murky atmosphere of his campaign.

Such was his hint of ultimate independence for the Filipinos—vague, to be sure, and made only after he had been sharply criticised for avoiding the subject in his platform. Perhaps he does not now believe the Filipinos should ever be independent, but in the midst of a campaign he will not close the door of hope to them while holding it open to the negro.

Mr. Roosevelt is the embodiment of American jingoism and militarism, but he stirred the hearts of peace-loving folk by granting immediately the petition of the international delegates to call another peace conference at The Hague.

Although he allowed the news to be sent from the White House that he intended to make Mr. Cortelyou postmaster general to succeed Mr. Payne, he appointed Mr. Wynne—after his attention had been called publicly to the impropriety of transforming the man who was collecting campaign funds from the railroads into a postmaster general.

All these things will undoubtedly make votes for Mr. Roosevelt, just as the Slocum letter will make votes for him. But we need not charge him on that account with playing practical politics.

Let us believe rather that the Roosevelt of an earlier and better day sometimes gains the mastery over the present Roosevelt. The former Roosevelt was an idealist. He had no patience with unconstitutional methods and imperialistic tendencies. He despised practical politicians of the later Roosevelt type and loved to do battle with them. He would have been the first to denounce an administration's surrender to the corporations, to brand the new imperialism and to excoriate a president responsible for the Cortelyou scandal.

When we see what an effective vote-getter the former Roosevelt still is in spite of the barriers placed around him, we wonder that the later Roosevelt does not listen to him more frequently and more respectfully.

Practiced Under Difficulties.

Buffalo Enquirer: "Don't try to make musicians out of all children indiscriminately, and thus you will avoid such household conversations as one I overheard the other day," said Baron Kaneko of Japan, who has been spending the summer in the Maine woods.

"I was on a train, and a father and his young son sat near me. The father said:

"'John, do you practice regularly on the piano while I am away at business?'

"'Yes, father,' replied the boy.

"'Every day?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'How long did you practice today?'

"'Three hours.'

"'And how long yesterday?'

"'Two hours and a half.'

"'Well, I'm glad to hear that you are so regular.'

"'Yes, father.'

"'And the next time you practice be sure to unlock the piano. Here is the key. I locked the instrument last week and I have been carrying the key in my pocket ever since.'"

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man has to be terribly wicked to live up to the reputation he gets in politics.

A girl acts bashful when she is only wondering what impression it makes on you.

A man educates himself to get the better of men, and a woman can do it without any education.

When a woman goes into a raffle she hates the one who is going to win even before she does it.

Just when a man begins to congratulate himself that his ice bills are coming down a few cents, his coal bills run up several dollars.

Lincoln's Response.

Buffalo Courier: An enthusiastic supporter from Buffalo made the trip to Washington during the civil war to see President Lincoln. The visitor, whose name was Johnson, had prepared this polite speech of address to the president, as he reached hi mat the public reception: "The people of Buffalo, sir, believe in Almighty God and in Abraham Lincoln."

The president gave an extra warm grasp of his visitor's hand, whispering in his ear: "You tell them that they are more than half right."

FREEDOM OF SPEECH A SAFETY VALVE.

Detroit Tribune: A Grand Rapids judge has rushed to the defense of the Union. His purpose was laudable but we believe he was mistaken in deeming the nation to be in any peril whatever from seditious utterances of a curb-stone agitator, utterances which bore no threats but were apparently an honest declaration of opinion. A Socialist orator, Thomas Selby, was arested on a charge of speaking on the streets without a permit, but the examination and the sentence took the form of a reproof for uttering seditious references to our flag and government." What Orator Selby had to say he said again in open court and it sounded mighty like the selected words of some better known men. "The American flag no longer stands for liberty," was his refrain. Didn't "Dave" Hill say something like that, also Edward Atkinson of Boston? "Marse" Henry Watterson, Senator Hoar and a thousand other orators have taken occasion to inspect the stars and stripes for flaws and rents.

There is nothing quite so harmless as the agitator who has had his say. If Orator Selby had anything like that in him, instead of being arrested for getting it out he should be congratulated. Besides, some of it might be true—but that is a secondary matter. The Tribune has no patience with those who would be lenient with a man who counseled violence or who sought to lay hands upon society, but the expression of an opinion is no violence. Free speech is a safety valve and one not lightly to be tied down. Judge Holcomb, with due respect to his interpretation of the law, has done nothing to remove from the prisoner's mind the opinion that "the American flag no longer stands for liberty," and the agitator will have a new grievance to nurse under less wholesome circumstances than the curb-stone forum afforded.

No Use for an Old Man.

New York Sun: A white-haired old man, who had complained to people in the neighborhood of being lonely and unhappy, was found lying in Hoffman's lumber yard, at Fiftieth street and Twelfth avenue, early yesterday morning. He had swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid. He was taken to the Roosevelt hospital, where he died shortly afterward. The evening before a number of persons had gone into the lumber yard to cool off after the day's work, and the old man wandered in at that time.

He said to several men who approached him:

"Nobody has any use for an old man, and he is in everybody's way. I came from up the state, and I'm a stranger in the city."

He died in the hospital without having regained consciousness, and nothing was found about him by which he could be identified.

Wrong Registration Office.

St. James' Gazette: The monotony of revising the voters' lists of Chorlton-cum-Hardy, a suburb of Manchester, was relieved by a very amusing incident yesterday.

A smart looking nurse, attired in the regulation costume, entered the court and walked up to the barristers' table.

"For whom do you appear?" asked the barrister.

The Nurse—"Mrs. ——" (mentioning the name of a lady living in the district).

The Barrister—"Why didn't she come herself?"

The nurse, with evident surprise, replied: "She can't very well."

"What is it you want then?"

"To register."

"That's all very well, but we have not yet got women on the parliamentary register. You know ladies have no votes, don't you?"

"Votes! Votes!" exclaimed the nurse. "I don't want any votes; I want to register the birth of a child."

Exit of the blushing nurse escorted by a policeman to the office of the register of births, which happens to be in the same building.

Didn't Want to Poke.

Philadelphia Record: A Cincinnati man recently returning from the East was about to get into his berth on a sleeping car, when he heard the voice of a huge Kentuckian, who was holding up a pillow between his thumb and finger while he roared out to the porter:

"I say, you boy, come back and take this away!"

"What for, sah?"

"Because I'm afraid the derned thing will get into my ear!"

THE SIXTH GENERATION

Thomas Jefferson's Daughter Appearing With Him This Year.

In connection with the tour of Thomas Jefferson this season, a matter that is of much interest is the appearance in the cast of Mr. Jefferson's daughter, Miss Lauretta Jefferson. She is the sixth generation of the Jeffersons to be represented on the stage and the first woman of the six. She made her debut Sept. 6 and has been receiving much praise from the critics.

Mr. Jefferson will this year fill all of the dates made by his illustrious father and by him abandoned when he made his determination to forsake the stage forever. This will necessitate Mr. Jefferson's appearance at Boston in April and in other large cities of the country.

Banquet For Creditmen.

The Minneapolis Association of Credit Men are to have with them at a banquet tomorrow night the national president, F. W. Standart, and probably two of the national directors. They have invited the members of the Duluth-Superior Credit Men's association to attend, and among those who have signified their intention of going are B. W. How, of the Kelley-How-Thomson company, C. J. McBride, of the Zenith Paper company, Daniel Waite, of the Blake & Waite company, Oscar Lonegren, of the L. W. Leithhead Drug company, of Duluth, and J. C. Donnelly, of the Twohy-Elmon Mercantile company, of Superior.

ANOTHER STORM.

Northwest Storm Signals Displayed Along Upper Lakes.

A severe northwest storm is predicted for tonight and tomorrow along the upper lakes by Forecaster Richardson and the Chicago weather bureau. Storm signals to this effect are displayed at all the stations through the district affected. It is expected that the winds will be brisk and high, coming from the northwest, accompanied by showers. The forecast has it that fair weather will follow the showers, so that, from present indications, Sunday will probably be a pleasant day.

The season is now about at hand when some of the worst storms of the year will be coming in from off the lake. During November lake captains are always on the lookout for bad northeasters.

BISHOPS TO BE ELECTED

Boston, Oct. 21.—The election of several missionary bishops was the principal business before the Episcopal house of deputies assembled today. The vacant districts are those of Salt Lake and Hankow, China. A bishop will also be sent to Cuba and one to Mexico. In a sermon today to the national council of the clerical union for the maintenance and defence of the Catholic principles, Right Rev. Reginald H. Weller, D.D., bishop coadjutor of Fond du Lac, Wis., made a plea for contributions towards the work in the West.

SEVEN TO FIVE FOR ACQUITTAL

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Former Mayor Ames, his attorney and a crowd of curious, gathered in Judge Harrison's courtroom, Minneapolis, today to witness the closing scenes of the defendant's third trial.

The jurors had sent positive word that they could not agree, and they were called in at 11 o'clock and discharged.

Most of the old witnesses in the case were present in the court in response to subpoenas issued upon the order of the state last night. Everything is ready to proceed with another trial. The case will be called before Judge Simpson tomorrow morning. The jury stood seven to five for acquittal.

Up to the present date but 99 licenses to hunt big game have been taken out, as compared with considerably over 100 a year ago. ALONE AMONG STRANGERS

Mother Fails to Meet Her Young Son In Duluth.

Weeping because of his fear at being left alone in a strange city, little Robert Foster, a 13-year-old boy, was picked up on the street this morning by Edward A. Carroll, of Duluth Heights, who questioned the boy as to the cause of his grief.

The lad stated that his mother had sent for him to come to Duluth from his home in Vanderbilt, Mich. He arrived in the city this morning, and through some misunderstanding, his mother, who is in Two Harbors, failed to meet him. The boy was without money, and his ticket was good only as far as Duluth.

Mr. Carroll took the boy to a restaurant and bought him his breakfast, and then turned him over to the police.

Chief Troyer telephoned to Two Harbors and requested the police authorities there to locate his mother, if possible, and notify her. Meanwhile the boy is being kept at headquarters until the monther arrives. She is expected this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

ACCURATE SHOOTING

Policemen Show Big Improvement In Target Practice.

Great improvement was shown by the members of the Duluth police department in the target practice held this afternoon on the lake front, at Third avenue east.

Detective Frank Schulte succeeded in getting into the "fifty" class, making a perfect score on ten shots, all of which lodged within six inches of the heart of the figure of a man painted on the target.

Officer Robert Johnson made eight successive "fives," and then fell down on the last two shots, scoring a total of 47.

It was the second of the fortnightly shoots held by the police department. Only six officers had taken their turns up to 3 o'clock this afternoon, but the others will shoot before night.

KILLED AN ENGLISHMAN.

Glendive, Mont., Oct. 21.—Charles Comment has confessed to killing J. C. Farrants, an Englishman, in a lonely camp. The murderer says that Farrants beat him with his fists for a personal grievance and that afterwards, when Farrants was stooping over to make his bed he struck him with a neck yoke, crushing his skull. The position of the body indicated that Farrants was killed while asleep in his bed.

POULTRY ALSO

Duluth Fanciers Going After Chicken Prizes at the Fair.

Fifteen Birds Will Leave Duluth Tomorrow For St. Louis.

Duluth chicken fanciers will be represented at the poultry exhibit at the St. Louis exhibition by twelve or fifteen birds, which will be shipped tomorrow afternoon to St. Louis.

There will be five Duluth exhibitors in all. Judge W. L. Windom will ship a pen of Rhode Island Reds from his Fond du Lac farm. H. A. Nelson will exhibit some Buff Leghorns, Edmunds & Anderson some White Wyandottes, George H. Thompson, silver grey Dorkings, and Mrs. Edmunds, of West Duluth, some black Ortingtons.

Leslie Parlin, of St. Paul, will be the state representative at the exhibition, and will take charge of the birds from this state. George D. Holden, who will be one of the judges at the Duluth show in January, will also act in St. Louis.

The St. Louis show will last ten days and will probably be the greatest exhibition of poultry ever collected. Nearly every state in the Union will be represented in addition to Canada and many European countries. The total number of entries will be over 10,000. Missouri leads the list with over 1500 birds, with Canada, Illinois and New York a close second.

Wyandottes will lead all other varieties at the show with over 1600 entries. There will be about 1300 Plymouth Rocks and about 1000 Leghorns.

Readers Will Undoubtedly Note With Interest the Many Buying Inducements That J. M. Gidding & Co. Place Before Duluth Women Tomorrow.

In the way of wearing apparel for women, girls and children—these Saturday inducements are worth noting, because it directs the buying public's attention to values that might otherwise go unnoticed. The fact that the Gidding store makes a specialty of wearing apparel of every sort for womankind, giving this end of the retail business their personal attention, should seem an inducement to women buyers, for it is a recognized fact that the ready to wear in women's clothes has reached such a high standard that the best dressed women in the land will no longer accept the worries of having things made, when they can go to a first-class store and have their needs supplied so handily. The Gidding store has certainly filled a long-felt want, and their business has grown wonderfully from month to month, even in the short time they have opened. Their store at Superior street and First avenue west is one of the most beautiful in the country, and with inducements they offer women buyers, they keep their store one of the busiest in the city.

WHEAT IS HIGHER

Another Sharp Bulge, With Northwestern Markets In Lead.

Reported Large Sale of No. 2 Northern Wheat—Flax Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 21.—The wheat market was strong again today and as usual the Northwest moved independently of other markets. The December at Duluth advanced 1⅝c and at Minneapolis 1⅜-⅞c, while at Chicago it advanced only ⅜c and at New York ¾-⅞c.

When the No. 1 northern wheat at Duluth fell to 8c under No. 1 at Duluth it was not thought that millers would long remain blind to its attractiveness as a milling wheat at a very low cost. There was not very much surprise this morning therefore, when it was reported that the Washburn-Crosby company of Minneapolis had bought 500,000 bushels of No. 1 northern to go to its Buffalo mill. The report was made on good authority. During the morning the No. 2 northern advanced 1c to 7c under.

The visible supply on Monday is expected to show a large increase. The continued wet weather is causing alarm and reports that it will seriously damage wheat not yet threshed are coming in. Liverpool closed ⅜@⅝d lower. Paris ½c lower and Antwerp unchanged.

Stocks of wheat at Duluth are expected to show little or no change this week.

The Modern Miller was rather bullish saying:

"Moisture is needed over a large portion of the winter wheat belt, and there is some complaint on this score, yet on the whole the crop is making seasonable growth. Cool weather has prevailed for the propogation of the Hessian fly and the pest has made its appearance in wheat fields of Illinois and Southern Missouri and Kansas, but not to an alarming extent as yet, although prevalent in volunteer oats. Much of the wheat in sections where the Hessian fly did most damage in previous years was planted late this year in order to avoid the pest. This accounts for the fact that many farmers are still sowing wheat."

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,076,-060 bus, last year 1,041,000 bus. Shipments 792,000 bus, last year 674,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 82,-200 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat this week aggregated 1,168,000 bus, against 752,000 bus last week and 1,040,000 bus last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d lower. In the Chicago market December corn closed ⅝-⅝c higher. December oats closed ⅝c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 239,000 bus, last year 543,000 bus. Shipments 309,000 bus, last year 474,000 bus. Clearances were 6500 bus. Argentine shipments of wheat this week were 3,022,000 bus, against 3,360,000 bus last week and 1,752,000 bus last year.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was active at times and very wild at others, and the volume on the whole being fairly large. The December option opened 3c lower at $1.16, sold up to $1.16¾ in the first fifteen minutes, reacted to $1.16⅛ five minutes later and then sold at $1.16⅝ at 10. The next reaction carried it to $1.16⅜ at 10:10 and it then jumped to $1.17⅛ at 10:55. The next hour saw a reaction of ⅛c, but it sold back to $1.17⅛ at noon. It then bulged to $1.17½ at 12:31, fell to $1.17⅛ at 12:37 and then jumped to $1.18¾ a few moments before the close. The close was at $1.18¾, an advance for the day of 1¾c. The May option advanced 1½c and closed at $1.17⅝.

Flax was dull and lower. October sold 3c higher to $1.17, and then fell off to $1.16 and closed there, a loss of 3c. December and May lost the same, while November was off 5c. Stocks of flax at Duluth are expected to show an increase of 350,000 bus this week. Argentine shipments of flax were 168,000 bus this week, against 272,000 bus last week and 136,000 bus last year.

Oats gained ½c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Sentiment In the Wheat Pit Was Weaker.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Sentiment in the wheat pit today was weak, as a result of liberal Argentine shipments and lower prices in foreign grain markets. There were no heavy individual holders, selling consisting of a lot of scattered orders. At the opening December was off ¾@⅞c to ⅞@⅞c at $1.13⅞ to $1.14⅛. May was down 1@1c to ⅞c at $1.12⅝ to $1.13⅜. On some support from pit traders, Decembers sold up to $1.14½, but reacted again to $1.14⅛. After touching $1.13⅝@⅞ May declined to $1.13. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts 1,076 cars, against 938 cars last week and 758 cars a year ago.

Bullish news from the Northwest regarding the crop movement brought out an improved demand later in the day and with small offerings the market became strong. Dec. advanced to $1.15⅜ and May to $1.14⅝. The close was strong, with Dec. up ⅜c at $1.15⅜@½. May was up ⅝@¾c, at $1.14¼@⅜.

The feature of trading in corn was continued liquidation of the December options. As a result of this selling, the market was a trifle easier. Weakness of wheat also had a bearish influence. December opened ⅝c to ¾c lower at 48c to 48⅛c, sold down to 47⅝c and then rallied to 48¾@⅞c. Local receipts were 123 cars, with ten of contract grade.

The market firmed up in sympathy with wheat, Dec. advancing to 49c. The close was strong, with Dec. up ⅜@½c, at 48¾@⅞.

In sympathy with other grains, the oats market was somewhat easier. Trading was very light. December opened down ⅛c to ¼c at 28⅛c to 28⅝c and sold at 28¾c. Local receipts were 112 cars.

Smaller receipts of hogs and higher prices at the yards caused a firm tone in provisions. The demand came largely from outside sources. January pork was up 7½c at $12.47½. Lard and ribs were each up 2½c at $7.20 and $6.50 respectively.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.14⅝; December, $1.15⅜@½. May, $1.14¼@⅜; July, 99¼c. Corn—October, 51⅞c; December, 48¾@⅞c; May, 46⅞c; July, 45⅝c. Oats—October, 29½c; December, 28¼@⅜c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It opened weak on the lower cables, but later gained strength and closed strong. The selling pressure continued unimportant. Outside markets reported a fairly good cash demand. Broomhall cables reports of disappointing reports in Australia and excessive rains in Argentine. Liverpool closing was, however, weak. It would not seem as if rains in Argentine would do much damage at this stage of the crop. The operative sentiment among professional traders continues bullish. There is no agressive selling and the stocks are not yet a sufficient load to materially handicap speculation. The visible Monday will again show a large increase. We regard the Argentine situation as quite important. Aside from that, our domestic situation does not seem to us very strong.

Corn—The movement of old corn continues light, the cash demand good and the premium well maintained. The tone of the market is steady and fairly strong. There is plenty of bearish sentiment, but it does not make much headway in getting proces down. We think May corn should be bought on the soft spots.

Oats—It seems to us to show a rather strong tone. The cash situation is certainly working better and shows more strength than the speculative options. The movement is likely to be smaller and stocks hardly likely to increase much from this point. We advise buying oats on the soft spots.

Chicago Record-Herald: B. A. Echart says: "Millers are disturbed to find that even choice wheat does not go as far in making flour on tols crop as usual. It takes from 5 bus. to 5 bus and ten pounds of good spring wheat weighing from 52½ to 54½ pounds per bushel tomake a barrel of flour instead of the 4½ bushels which the trade figures on usually. The bran is unusually thick on the kernals which are more or less shrunken and while this wheat makes a fine strong flour of the best quality, a better flour than we could make from the spring wheat crop last year, it takes more wheat to make it. This applies particularly to the spring wheat, though even in milling winter wheat a larger amount is required than usual to make a barrel of flour."

The Manitoba Grain Dealers' association estimates the wheat crop of Manitoba at sixty millions, says that 30 per cent of it No. 4 or lower. On this latter proposition, however, it should be borne in mind that the grading of wheat in Manitoba is much higher than it is in our Northwest markets.

Secretary E. J. Smiley, of the Kansas Grain Dealers' association, has received reports from 400 correspondents and estimates the Kansas corn crop at 123,000,000 bus. The government report of Oct. 1 this year made the Kansas crop 179,427,-000 bus, against last year's total of 171,683,-000 bus.

DECISIONS OF SUPREME COURT

Three Affirmations and One Reversal of Lower Courts.

St. Paul, Oct. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a decision handed down today, Justice Douglas of the supreme court reverses the order of the Hennepin county district court, in the proceedings to enforce payment of taxes against the Lakewood Cemetery association. This was an appeal by the defendant from an order denying the motion for a new trial.

The judgment of the lower court is affirmed by Justice Brown in the Wadena Cracker company, appellant, vs. Henry L. Claypool, respondent. The court holds that a change of venue in an action brought before the village justice of the peace should be made to a justice of the peace of the same or adjoining town. The town within which the village is located is an adjoining town within the meaning of the statute.

Justice Brown affirms the order of the lower court in the case of Emil Tillman, respondent, vs. the International Harvester company of America, appellant. This was an action in conversion, and grew out of the sale and exchange of a reaper and binder for a horse. The claim was made that the horse was not sound, as represented, and the verdict was for the plaintiff.

In the divorce proceeding of Joseph H. Scribner, respondent, vs. Carrie B. Scribner, appellant, Justice Douglas, in a decision handed down today, affirms the order of the lower court in refusing to set aside the judgment for plaintiff. The latter got judgment by default, and the defendant raised the point that due diligence was not shown in the service of the summons, which was by publication. Fraud and deceit were charged, but the court found no such evidence. The supreme court takes a like view.

IRREGULAR MARKET

In Stocks With Active Movement to Take Profits.

Ontario & Western the Feature of the Day's Trading.

New York, Oct. 21.—Reports of the passing of control of the Ontario & Western to the New Haven made the former stock the feature of the opening dealings today. First sales were of 15,-000 shares at 41 and 40½, compared with 40¼ last night and this was followed by a string of transactions in thousand share blocks and upwards. The other coalers were active and strong in sympathy. Five thousand shares of Reading sold at 77, and 76½ compared with 75¼ last night, and Pennsylvania rose a ½on sales of 2500 shares each. Atchison rose ¾ and Metropolitan Securities ⅞. The United States Steel stocks sagged a fraction after opening unchanged and New York Central opened down an ⅛.

Ontario & Western continued furiously active and rose 2 points before reaction. Other points of strength developed while profit-taking, side by side, made inroads at some points. The Metropolitan stocks were carried up about 1¾ each and Chicago Great Western and People's Gas were prominent with advances of 1¼ and 1⅝. Some of the Iron and Steel stocks were weak, United States Steel preferred losing ⅞ and Pressed Steel Car 2¾. Amalgamated Copper lost a point and St. Paul, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were laggards the first getting ¼ under last night. New York Central Louisville & Nashville, Kansas & Texas as preferred and United States Rubber preferred rose 1 to 2. Reading, Ontario & Western and Metropolitan Securities reacted a point but other stocks rallied. United States Steel preferred rose above 82 and Colorado Fuel gained a point.

The constant shifting of demand from one quarter to another of the market, was a feature and there was constant irregularity of price movement in the animated dealings. The Pacifics came into prominence with United States Steel preferred. Union Pacific, Atchison and Missouri Pacific rising a point. The St. Louis Southwestern stocks, Kansas City Southern, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Northwestern, Iowa Central preferred, Pacific Mail, Tennessee Coal and General Electric rose 1 to 1½. Kansas & Texas 2⅜, its preferred 2¼, Allis-Chalmers preferred 3¾ and American Telephone 3. American Express, Pressed Steel Car, Car preferred and Wheeling & Lake Erie second preferred lost about a point. Reading rose strongly again to 77½. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Distribution of immense buying orders for Pennsylvania ranging from 1000 to 5000 shares lifted it across 137 and strengthened kindred stocks. Reading moved up a fraction higher and Central Railroad of New Jersey and D. & H. gained 2 points. Western stocks which had lagged throughout the morning were taken in hand by the bulls, St. Paul and Rock Island rising a point each. In general the market ruled higher and was very animated. Metropolitan Street railway extended its advance to 3¼ and there were a number of minor railroad properties up between 1 and 2 points. Virginia-Carolina Chemical rose 2¼ and the preferred 1⅜.

There was some diminution in the volume of purchases during the early afternoon, but prices advanced steadily nevertheless. An insatiable demand appeared to prevail for C. & W. and blocks of thousands of shares were eagerly snapped up at rising prices.

Before two o'clock the stock touched 41½. Rising of the other low priced coalers resulted from its buoyancy, Erie especially being wel ltaken up to 37⅜. Elsewhere the movement was narrower than in the earlier hours except for some of the specialties. Metropolitan Street railway jumped to 130⅜, and People's Gas stiffened 2⅛. With a reaction of 1½ in Ontario & Western prices elsewhere were shaded, a fraction but Rock Island was pushed up 1¾.

The market was very irregular with an active movement to take profits, while Rock Island, Erie, the Wabashes, Louisville & Nashville, New York Central and some of the specialties were still moving upward. New Haven jumped 3¼ on one sale, Manhattan as much, New York, Chicago & St. Louis, 3½, Lake Erie & Western 2½, and Locomotive preferred 2¼. The reaction ran from 1 to 1¼ in the local tractions, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Atchison, Louisville & Nashville and Missouri Pacific and some heavy profit taking. Ontario & Western getting below 43. The closing was active and about steady.

TRANSFER MADE

E. H. Houghton, Duluth Agent of Pittsburg Fleet, Goes to Chicago.

Will Be Assistant to Chicago Manager of Same Company.

Eugene H. Houghton, who has been agent for the Pittsburgh Steamship company at the head of the lakes this season, has been transferred to the Chicago office of the company, where he will be assistant to Dennis Sullivan, who represents the Pittsburgh steamship company's pany's interests at that point.

Mr. Houghton's former duties at this point have been assumed by Herbert W. Brown, who came here several days ago, with A. F. Harvey, assistant general manager of the Pittsburgh Steamship company, of Cleveland. Between the transfer Mr. Houghton is visiting with his mother at Racine, Wis., the home of the Houghton family, and will shortly go to Chicago to take his new position. In the meantime Mr. Harvey is staying at the local headquarters of the company and assisting Mr. Brown in becoming familiar with the new position. Mr. Brown has been for some time past connected with the Cleveland office of the Pittsburgh steamship company.

Originally, Mr. Houghton was dispatcher for the company in Duluth and after the transfer of Ford Cowley, general manager, and Mr. Harvey, to Cleveland, was made agent here. Steamship men will miss Mr. Houghton, as he is well known in Duluth. The Duluth Yachting club will also lose one of its most active members by the transfer.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 21.—Chief Zequid, of the northern tribes of British Columbia Indians, has been thrown into jail here to await his trial for refusing to allow his people to tell of a young girl who was murdered, her head cut off and $50 taken from her. The murder took place at the Indian village of Narville, B. C., but no threats or hope of reward will induce the Indians to betray the murderer.

That you may fully understand and appreciate the remarkable proposition that we are about to make we propose to give a full and complete description of these instruments, that you may, in a measure, realize the wonderful value we offer.

These pianos are made up in beautiful golden oak, curly walnut, glossy mahogany, and rich and brilliant French walnut.

Fit to grace the finest home, selling regularly throughout the country for from $250 to $275, these instruments are sold under an absolute guarantee and the guarantee is backed by good, hard cash.

The workmanship in these pianos is the best that skilled labor and modern machinery can produce.

We started out to sell ten of these instruments. We have just four left, which we propose to close out tomorrow, giving you the choice of woods, for the unheard-of price of $150.00. Cash or time. If you CANNOT PAY CASH we will advance you the purchase price of the piano at a reasonable rate of interest.

Further, to show you that we have entire confidence in these pianos we will, at any time, during the next two years, accept these instruments back, (providing you are not satisfied with your bargain), at the price paid in exchange for any piano in our stock. Could you ask for a more legitimate or for a fairer proposition.

WARNING. Don't delay one minute after reading this advertisement. Call at once and secure one of the greatest bargains ever offered by any piano house in this country.

Out of town orders must be accompanied by $25.00, as we positively will not hold or reserve one of these pianos unless the request is accompanied by cash.

To residents of Duluth and Superior in good standing we will sell one of these pianos on a cash payment of $10.00 and $1.50 a week.

In closing we wish to emphasize the fact that these four pianos are BRAND NEW—just out of their boxes, and are guaranteed as long as any high-grade piano.

Take our advice and call as soon as you see this advertisement.

Remember that Life is largely made up of neglected opportunities.

RAILROAD NEWS

James C. Pond, general passenger agent of the Wisconsin Central, was here today, and denied any official connection of his visit with the supposed extension of his road to the head of the lakes. The report has had it that the new company is coming in to get a share of the Zenith City traffic was the Grand Trunk operating under the Wisconsin Central as a shield.

"I cannot tell you anything about that proposition, for the reason that I don't know anything about it," Mr. Pond asserted. "If the Grand Trunk is coming in here I don't know it. If the Wisconsin Central is building a line here I don't know it, nor do I know of any amalgamated proposition of the two lines to give either one an entry to your growing city.

"It has been talked of time and again that the Wisconsin Central is connected with this proposition, but I am unable to supply you with facts, and I suppose that is what you are after. When I was here before I asserted my ignorance of this matter and I know no bore now than then.

"My visit here is just a friendly call to meet our agent and others whom we have business relations with. Business is pretty good and we are not disposed to complain. But there is nothing significant about my coming here."

TOWNE DECLINES ENDORSEMENT OF PEOPLE'S PARTY

In His Candidacy For Congress In Fourteenth District of N. Y.

Sulzer and Laughlin Have Also Declined the Endorsement.

New York, Oct. 22.—Charles A. owne, the Democratic nominee for congress in the Fourteenth congressional district, sent a letter today to the executive committee of the People's party declining that party's endorsement of him for congress. After expressing his appreciation of the compliment shown in the endorsement, Mr. Towne says:

"I am a Democrat. I impugn no man's motives. I recognize every citizen's right to exercise his political functions according to his own conscience, but I am profoundly of the opinion that in this campaign the fundamental principles are at stake and that a vote for any national ticket other than Parker and Davis is at least half a vote for the abandonment of the doctrine of our national life. Under these circumstances I do not think myself justified in accepting a formal tender of support which applies discrimination against the balance of the Democratic ticket, in whose success lies the only hope of defeating the Republican party."

It was officially stated at Tammany hall that Representative Sulzer and Mr. Laughlin, candidates for congress, have also declined the Populist endorsement.

AMERICAN TARS ENTERTAINED BY SIR THOMAS LIPTON AT LONDON

London, Oct. 22.—Sir Thomas Lipton entertained about 300 officers and men of the United States cruiser Olympia at the Crystal palace today. After a brief reception at which Sir Thomas shook hands with his guests, the men marched into dinner. In front of each man was a presentation pipe, pouch and tobacco. Sir Thomas toasted the American navy and said he had good reason to know the merits of American seamanship "and also of American generosity, gauged by the number of lickings they have ladled out to me."

He expressed the hope, however, that at no distant date he would take a Shamrock IV to America.

ENGINEER PROSTRATED WITH TRAIN RUNNING INTO DANGER

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 22.—While a south bound special passenger train which was to meet the north bound limited at Farmersville, thirty miles south of Springfield, was dashing along at a high rate of speed today, Fireman Hammond, noticing no effort was being made to slow down approaching the meeting place, turned to remind Engineer Hill. The fireman was horrified to see the prostrate body of Engineer Hill lying on the floor of the cab. The fireman seized the throttle brought the train to a stop and then rushed the train into the siding just as the north bound train dashed past. Engineer Hill was brought to this city in an unconscious condition. He had evidently been struck by the spout of a water tank at Divernon, a few miles south of Springfield.

FOUL PLAY IS SUSPECTED

Finlander Found Mangled on Track and His Money Gone.

Brainerd, Minn., Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Coroner Osterlund was summoned yesterday to the west side of the river to hold an inquest over the body of Henry Tikkala, a Finlander who lived in Southeast Brainerd, who was supposed to have been killed by westbound train No. 53. The body was in a horribly mangled condition, one foot being completely severed from the leg and the other knee smashed to a jelly.

Mr. Tikkala came to this country several months ago and worked with the steel gang in the Northern Pacific yards under John Huseby, and was supposed to have been a man of good habits and always sober. Thursday was pay day for the Northern Pacific employes, and that night he was known to have had about $100 on his person. Foul play is suspected by some people, as it is supposed that he was in company Thursday night with a gang of Finlanders, and when found he had not a cent on him. Mr. Tikkala was about 30 years old and has a wife and two children in Finland.

PILGRIMS AND PURITANS MEET AT WORLD'S FAIR.

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—Several thousand descendants of the Pilgrims and the Puritans from various parts of the country assembled here today and appropriately celebrated "Congregational day" at the Louisiana Purchase exposition. An object of great interest and veneration to those in Festival hall, where the principal exercises were held, was a portion of Plymouth rock, on which the Pilgrims landed Dec. 21, 1620. This fragment of the famous rock is the property of the Chicago Theological seminary and was brought here for the occasion.

JEWISH WOMEN MEET.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Executive representatives of the national council of Jewish women met here today for a four-days' session in Temple Israel. A short business session was held, at which Rabbi Leon Harrison, of St. Louis, delivered the principal address, and the remainder of the day was spent by the delegates in visiting the World's fair. The organization was founded at the Columbian exposition in Chicago.

JOHNSON ADDRESSES CROWD AT BRAINERD

Largest Political Meeting of the Present Campaign.

Says That Indications Point Strongly to His Election.

Brainerd, Minn., Oct. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—John A. Johnson, the Democratic nominee for governor, F. G. Winston, candidate for lieutenant governor, and Cleve W. Vandyke, Democratic congressional nominee, arrived in Brainerd yesterday noon from Long Prairie. Upon arrival in the city the gentlemen were met by the leaders of the Democratic party of Brainerd and escorted to the National hotel. In the evening they were greeted by the largest political assembly of the campaign held so far this year at the Park Opera house. Mr Johnson spoke at length on the state political issues and was cheered time and again. By his speech here last evening he gained many votes and all present claim that he made the cleanest speech that they had heard for many years by any political speaker. It was not his aim in his speech to do any knocking, but to tell the facts as they really are. In part, he said:

"I really think that the people of the state have made up their minds what they are going to do, and that no amount of talking now by either party is going to change them much. I do not want to be too optimistic, but I do think things are looking in my favor, as everywhere I receive most hearty welcomes. Leading business men and also prominent Republicans, in a good many of the towns that I have visited have offered me their support, and I believe that they are all men of their word. I furthermore believe that I will receive a large part of the Republican votes as well as the usual amount of the Democratic. From all the assurances I firmly feel confident of election."

DECISIVE BATTLE LOOKED FOR SOON BETWEEN GREAT ARMIES NOW RECUPERATING

RENOWNED COMMANDERS OF THE RUSSIAN AND JAPANESE ARMIES

GEN. ALEXEI NICOLAIEVITCH KOUROPATKIN — FIELD MARSHAL MARQUIS OYAMA.

Field Marshal Iwawo Oyama and Gen. Alexei Nicolaievitch Kuropatkin, commanders of the opposing armies south of Mukden, are renowned military leaders. Oyama is a noble of the Kagoshima clan and fought his first battle at the age of 10 with retainers of a rival daimio. He has been minister of marine and of war, has been chief of staff to the mikado, and is said to have planned the campaign against China in 1894 and the present campaign against Russia. In the Chinese war Oyama captured Port Arthur and Wei Hai Wei. Though 63 years of age, he is sturdy and vigorous, having been a champion wrestler in his younger days. His wife is a graduate of Vassar College. Gen. Kuropatkin comes from a noble Russian family. He was minister of war when sent to the East as commander in chief in the present conflict. Middle Asia, Algeria, Turkestan, Bulgaria are countries in which he has fought, and at the storming of Geok-Teppe he was twice wounded. Kuropatkin, it is said, owes most of his military training to Skobeleff, to whom he was chief of staff in the Turkish war. He is in his fifty-seventh year.

RHODE ISLAND MAN TO BE BROUGHT BACK TO ANSWER MURDER CHARGE

Evidence That Guilmette Killed Mongeaon Grows Stronger and He Is Held at Woonsocket, R. I.

Woonsocket, R. I., Oct. 22.—Joseph Guilmette, who surrendered to the police here last night upon his arrival from the West, in connection with the alleged murder of Joseph Mongeaon, at Mentor, Minn., was arraigned in court today on the charge of being a fugitive from justice. He pleaded not guilty, and the case was continued a week, Guilmette being held without bail.

St. Paul, Oct. 22.—A special to the Dispatch from Crookston, Minn., says: Sheriff Sullivan of Polk county left for Woonsocket, R. I., today to bring back to Minnesota Joseph Guilmette, whose return to Woonsocket was announced in last night's dispatches, and who is wanted in Mentor in connection with the death of Joseph Mongeaon, who, it is now decided by the authorities, as having come from St. Pie, Quebec. Every possible clew is being followed by the sheriff and several deputies. Fontaine positively identified the body as that of the man he had seen in company at Grand Forks with his friend, Joseph Guilmette, last Saturday.

That robbery was the prime object of the murder seems conclusive, as Moneaon had money, it is claimed, and the stories of a woman being in the case are exploded, as the men had not been acquainted in the East or in Canada, but met in East Grand Forks and formed an acquaintance which led to their starting on a hunting and spruce-gathering expedition. The letters found were the belongings of Guilmette, and not Mongeaon, the dead man, as was at first supposed.

DETECTIVES ARE KILLED

Also One Robber During an Arrest at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Two city detectives are dead and another is not expected to live, while one train robber suspect is at the morgue and two other are in the city hospital, one probably fatally wounded and the other badly beaten up, as the result of a desperate battle yesterday between five officers and three men whom they tried to arrest. Harry Adams, who escaped at the time of the shooting, was captured later by Detective Lee Killiam, who fired twice in making the arrest.

The dead:
JOHN J. SHEA, detective.
THOMAS DWYER, detective.

The wounded: James McClusky, detective, critical C. C. Blair, fugitive, shot four times through the body; Harry H. Vaughn, fugitive, badly beaten about the head by detectives when he sought to aid his friends in the battle.

The fight occurred in the front room of a house on Pine street and the men whom the detectives sought to arrest are suspected of being implicated in a train robbery at Centralia, Ill., a few weeks ago.

Hardly had the detectives entered the room in which Rose and Blair were seated, when they were met with a volley of shots from heavy calibre revolvers. Shea sank to the floor on the first shot and Dwyer followed almost instantly.

By the time the detectives had drawn their revolvers and there was a deafening exchange of shots for several seconds.

About a dozen persons living in the neighborhood, who either saw the shooting or may be able to throw some light on the affair have been arrested and are held as witnesses.

Open threats of lynching were made by thousands who gathered about the house where the shooting occurred.

An attempt was made to molest Vaughan, who attempted to escape from the police, the crowd shouting "lynch him" and but for the prompt work of the police there would have been further bloodshed.

MYSTERY DEVELOPS IN THE PEORIA CASE

The Coroner's Inquest Brings Out Some Peculiar Conditions.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 22.—Did some unknown person inflict the injuries upon the person of Mrs. Lillie Thomasson now lying dead at Lacon. This is the question that is now being asked by the people of Peoria and to which as yet there is no answer forthcoming. The evidence brought out at the coroner's inquest held at Lacon yesterday afternoon was the woman walked to the train at the station in this city with but slight assistance of employes of the road, and that when she arrived at Lacon she summoned a hack and made her way to the home of her mother, several blocks away without assistance. Furthermore, she did not summon a physician until sixteen hours later. If the injuries inflicted by young Higgins were of the fatal and horrible nature charged, his friends ask how it was possible for the woman to have gone home practically unaided and to have waited so long before summoning a physician.

The name of a man with whom she was intimate and who is known to have objected to her relations with Higgins, Sr., is mentioned in this connection, but so far there has been no positive evidence against him.

His employer in this city declares that the man was at work Saturday and Sunday and that he went to Lacon Monday morning. He appeared before the state's attorney of this county on Tuesday and asked for a warrant.

When it became known that the grand jury had recommended that Higgins be held for murder, there was a remarkable demonstration on the part of his friends, who flocked to his assistance. It is said that John G. Higgins, the father, is on the way home from St. Louis.

TOTAL LOSSES OF BOTH ARMIES NOW ESTIMATED AT 80,000 MEN

Japanese Are Forced to Evacuate Village of Shakhe.

Every Indication of Resumption of Battle Very Soon.

Russians Expect Port Arthur to Hold Out Until February.

Another day has passed without development of importance in the Manchurian war zone except in official Russian reports that the Japanese on Oct. 20, evacuated the village of Shakhe. A dispatch from Mukden, however, says that there is every indication that the battle will be resumed soon. Beyond the general statement that Kuropatkin's front extends over a line about 12½ miles in length south of Mukden, supported by strong fortifications on the Hun river, little or no light is thrown by today's advices on the general position of the opposing armies. Official figures on the casualties of the ten days' battle of Shakhe river are still lacking, but a Mukden correspondent estimated the total losses on both sides at 80,000. Russian advices say that the impending battle will be decisive.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22, 4:50 p. m.—There is no news of fresh fighting today. Gen. Sakharoff reports, under this morning's date, that last night passed very quietly. The war office is not in a position to give figures of the casualties in the long battle below Mukden, but everything indicates that the Russian losses reached 40,000, the figure given by the Associated Press correspondent at Mukden. Another correspondent places the losses on both sides at 80,000. The war office is convinced that the Japanees losses, while below those of the Russians, were almost as heavy.

Mukden, Oct. 22.—Field Marshal Oyama's counter offensive was definitely checked with the loss of men, guns and munitions.

Gen. Kuropatkin's army extends along a line running over twelve and one half miles south of Mukden and is supported by strong fortifications on the Hun river. The present calm is enforced by the exhaustion of the armies on both sides, which lost in killed and wounded 80,000 men during the ten days' fighting. There is every indication that the battle will be resumed soon and that a decisive result will be achieved.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.—Gen. Sakharoff telegraphs that the night of Oct. 21-22 passed quietly.

HAD TO HURRY.

Russians Cause the Japs to Evacuate Shakhepu.

Mukden, Friday, Oct. 21.—(Delayed in Transmission.)—The Japanese hurriedly evacuated Shakhepu, three miles east of Shakhe station, on Thursday night, in order to escape being surrounded. Under the cover of Thursday's fog they had tried to surprise the advance guard of one corps on the Russian right flank. The latter repaid them in their own coin with interest by taking Shakhepu, on both flanks, and not leaving the Japanese any alternative except a hurried flight. They abandoned a quantity of arms and ammunition. Several Japanese came into the Russian lines and voluntarily surrendered.

The total losses during the ten days' fighting (the correspondent does not mention whether they were Russian or Japanese) were 40,000.

According to information from the advanced posts, the night of Oct. 20 passed quietly. No big developments are expected for several days.

The Army Messenger today announces the Russian column eastward advanced, Oct. 18, and occupied, without resistance, Wanfun pass and the valley of Huan pass, lying eastward. Wanfun pass is south of Kaouton pass and on the same parallel as Shakhepu, on the road to Fushun and Bentsiapuze.

The Army Messenger also confirms the reports that a detachment of the Twentieth rifles, under Capt. Dembosty, raided the Japanese lines during the night of Oct. 18 and brought back two Japanese guns minus their breech blocks.

UNTIL FEBRUARY

Russians Expect Port Arthur to Hold Out.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.—A telegram received by the family of Naval Architect Ksuteinikoff now at Port Arthur, dated October 14 and sent by way of Chee Foo says:

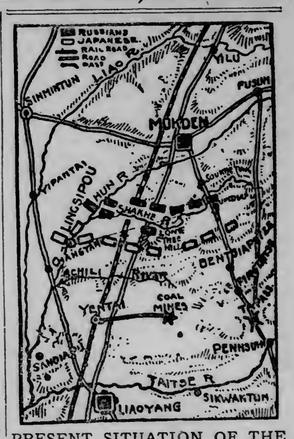

"All well. Do not be disheartened. We are working on a Sebastopol."

The Associated Press learns that the Baltic fleet will proceed to the far East at a low, economical speed. There is no intention to have the fleet arrive there until February. The admiralty expects the garrison of Port Arthur to hold out until then.

According to calculations, if the garrison can hold out another six weeks, the fierce northeast gales which then begin will sweep the Yellow sea and constitute such danger to the Japanese warships that it will compel Admiral Togo to relax his blockade, and the garrison will be able to secure a fresh supply of war munitions and food.

The mobilization of the reserves in certain districts of Moscow, Warsaw, Kieff and Vilna is largely for the purpose of filling the gaps in the ranks of the corps now at the front. It is definitely stated that Gen. Grippenberg's second army will be composed of the Second, Fourth, Sixth, Eighth and Sixteenth European corps, the Sixth Siberian corps and several brigades of rifles, totalling approximately 200,000 men of all arms.

Gen. Skugarevski has been appointed, at Grippenberg's recommendation, to command the Sixth European corps.

PRESENT SITUATION OF THE OPPOSING ARMIES ON BOTH SIDES OF THE SHAKHE RIVER.

PRECIPITATE RETREAT

Was Made By the Japs From Shakhe.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.—Gen Kuropatkin in a dispatch to Emporer Nicholas, under date of October 21, says:

"The Japanese retired from the village of Shakhe at nightfall, October 20. Thursday night passed quietly along the entire front."

Lieutenant General Sakharoff in a dispatch to the general staff says:

"The retreat of the enemy from Shakhe was precipitate. We found in the village arms, munitions and provisions which had been abandoned by the Japanese who also left behind on our field artillery position one cannon, four limbers and a wagon full of instruments, they had previously captured from us. Since the battle of October 16 we have captured altogether fourteen Japanese guns, including nine field pieces and five mountain guns, and have retaken one of our own lost guns.

There was no fighting October 21 on the front of the Manchurian army."

FORESHADOWS JAP LANDING.

Possiet Bay, Russian Manchuria, Oct. 22.—A Japanese torpedo boat has been sighted in Cashkevich bay, in the extreme northeastern part of Korea, not far from Possiet bay, and a number of Japanese spies have been arrested in this neighborhood, which is believed to foreshadow the imminence of Japanese landing near Possiet bay.

TO RELEASE ALLATON.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.—The admiralty council, sitting as a supreme court today annulled the judgment of the Vladivostok prize court in the case of the British steamer Allaton, seized by the Vladivostok fleet and her cargo. She will be released forthwith. The council, however, held that the suspicions entertained justified the steamer's arrest.

ANOTHER AUTOIST KILLED

Machine Goes Off Bridge, Falling on Occupants.

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 22.—George A. Benett, a promient citizen of Marengo, Ill., was killed in an automobile accident at Harmony yesterday. Robert Willard, his cousin, who accompanied him, was seriously injured.

Mr. Bennett, who was driving the machine, had gone into the country on business taking Mr. Willard with him. On the way they met a rural mail wagon. The mules which the carrier was driving were afraid of the automobile, and Mr. Bennett touched a lever with the intention of stopping the automobile but in his confusion caught the wrong one and turned the machine sharply to one side and over a small bridge, the drop being about ten feet. The machine toppled over on the men.

TREATY OF PEACE SIGNED.

Santiago, Chili, Oct. 22.—A definite treaty of peace between Chili and Bolivia was signed yesterday. The German emporer is appointed arbiter in case of difficulty. Bolivia renounces all rights to a port on the Pacific and Chili guarantees the construction of a railroad between La Paz, Bolivia, and the Chilian port of Africa.

HIS ONLY SPEECH

Cleveland Addresses Tremendous Crowd at Carnegie Hall.

Long Continued Applause Greets Appearance of Former President.

New York, Oct. 22.—Attracted by the presence of Grover Cleveland, thousands of people struggled to gain entrance to Carnegie hall last night, where the former president of the United States made his first and only speech of the campaign.

John G. Carlisle, secretary of the treasury, under Mr. Cleveland was also a speaker and shared with Mr. Cleveland the great burst of enthusiasm at the meeting.

Long before the doors of the hall were opened crowds surged around the outside of the building and within fifteen minutes after the doors had been thrown wide to the public every seat in the big auditorium was taken, while corridors and aisles held their scores. Still hundreds were unable to gain entrance. This great Democratic rally was under the auspices of the Business Men's Parker and Davis association, and J. Hampden Robb, president of the organization presided.

Mr. Cleveland arrived at the hall shortly after 8 o'clock and immediately upon his entrance cheers burst forth, the demonstration lasting seven minutes. It died out and began again with renewed vigor. Again and again Mr. Robb attempted to quiet the crowd, but was forced to keep his seat.

When Mr. Cleveland saw that Mr. Robb's efforts were fruitless in quieting the demonstration he arose and held up his hand for silence, but the people could not be quieted for two full minutes afterwards.

The former president was chairman of the meeting and introducing him, Mr. Robb said:

"A most eminent and distinguished citizen and Democrat is presented for your chirman. His words and deeds are known in every corner of this country. He is one of our greatest Americans, Grover Cleveland."

Mr. Cleveland then began his speech, saying in part:

"The party will be given just credit which, early or late, has endeavored to safeguard the soundness of the nation's currency, but the people will regret as savoring of presumption the insistence that only those belonging to one party organization can claim to be the protectors and defenders of our financial integrity; nor will they forget that the fight was hotly on when many of the leaders of the party now making such insistence were worse than lukewarm in the cause.

"A party may indulge in self congratulation when it has effectively defended the people in their daily life from the rapacity of trusts and combinations, which thrive as private enterprise is strangled and which grow fat, as by their control of the cost of living, they cause the homes of our land to grow lean; but the people will not fail to observe that the huge combinations which directly injure them still flourish."

Of the tariffs he said: "This item of the account will not be passed over without a reference to the platform statement that 'protection, which guards and develops our industries, is a cardinal policy of the Republican party,' nor without noting the declaration of the candidate standing on this platform, that the protective policy ought now to be considered as 'definitely established.' The question will be asked, which are the American industries that at this time are in need of the shelter of such a tariff as that now in force; and is there ever to be a time when American enterprise, American ingenuity and American opportunity will free our industries from their inspiration and American self reliance to cast away the leading strings of a 'definitely established' protective policy."

To the Republican claims—"In the Philippines we have suppressed insurrections, established order and given to life and property a security never known there before," he said: "The confession will be extorted that the insurrection suppressed was no more than the crushing out of resistance to the army of the United States while engaged in the subjugation of a people thousands of miles from our shores, whom an incident of a war undertaken by us in aid of those struggling for liberty and independence in another quarter had put within our power; and the people will ask under what sanction was this subjugation entered upon by a nation pledged to the doctrine that all just powers of government are derived from the consent of the governed; and they will deny that imperialism and our forcible rule of foreign people have any place among the purposes of our national life.

"When credit is claimed for securing a route for a long desired interoceanic waterway it will not be in a carping spirit that the people will look at the incidents accompanying this achievement. They do not undervalue the object gained, but they keenly appreciate the importance and value of our national honor, our national good name, and above all our national morality. Not even the great worth of the thing to be will close the eyes of thoughtful Americans to the fact that in reaching the results we have exhibited such international ruthlessness and such selfish international immorality as have lastingly debilitated our reputation for good faith, and established a precedent, which, in time to come, may be invoked to justify the most startling and reprehensible abandonment of civilization.

"I speak as a Democrat attached to Democratic principles and anxious for the ascendancy of my party, when I congratulate the Democracy of our country upon the clear and satisfying statements in our party platform and upon the manner in which its doctrines are personified by our candidates. We pledge to our countrymen, through our platform, rest, genuine prosperity, safety and a return to the way marked out by the constitution; and we promise, through our candidates, that if it is the people's will, our platform shall be carried out, and that under our governmental management Democratic conservatism and care shall rule the national councils to the exclusion of rash impulse and spectacular demonstration."

During his speech Mr. Cleveland was loudly applauded, at times being interrupted for several minutes. His statement that there was no necessity for him to apologize for his party in the deeds of Democracy caused tremendous cheers of approval. At his mention of the name of Alton B. Parker near the end of his speech, the audience rose as one man and the cheering lasted several minutes. At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Cleveland was greeted with cheering more spontaneous than at any time during the evening.

He then introduced John G. Carlisle. Mr. Carlisle, who was loudly cheered, said in part:

"It is a great achievement that we are once more a united Democracy. On the question of extravagance, to reduce excessive rates, on the Philippine question, on the question of Panama, on these questions and many more we have met this defiant and dictatorial party on its own chosen ground and compelled it to defend its position. Even the belligerent candidate for the presidency has been compelled to lay aside his arms for the time, even the 'big stick,' and his war cries are not heard through the land. He is now an apostle of 'peace on earth and good will toward men,' until after election. I say 'after election,' as I don't think anyone believes that his temperament has changed in the slightest."

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Reports From All Sections Grow More Encouraging Each Week.

New York, Oct. 22.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "Trade reports are more encouraging each week while the feeling of optimism regarding the future is becoming general. With its customary disposition to discount commercial prosperity, Wall street has lifted the average price of the sixty most active railway shares above par for the first time since May of last year. Manufacturing plants steadily increase output, a particularly gratifying feature of the week being the large tonnage of steel purchased by the railways and the advanced prices for pig iron suggests that the depression in that industry has run its course. Textile mills are doing more work, even the New England cotton centers reporting less procrastination among buyers, which is the most noteworthy because the new contracts were placed at a time when the raw material was declining. Shipyards are more fully engaged and structural work begins to assume normal proportions. Jobbing and wholesale trade in spring goods makes a better comparison with last year's volume, and current retail distribution of merchandise is encouraging. Payments are still somewhat irregular. Foreign trade at this port for the last week shows a gain of $2,158,275 in imports over those of the same week in 1903, but a loss of $1,148,275 in exports. A few freight blockades have occurred, and traffic is very heavy in some sections, while all railways reporting for the first half of October show an average gain of 8.6 per cent over last year's earnings.

Revival of interest in finished steel and practically all departments of the iron industry has come so suddenly as to excite comment, although it is not surprising considering the enormous tonnage under consideration for so many months, held back alone by the caution of buyers who wanted to be certain that the market would go no lower. This new business is found practically in every department, notably those pretaining to the railways.

Hides have attained a still stronger position, large sales of branded cows and calf skins giving horses the desired advance and there is a wholesome demand at leading leather markets. New England shoe shops are receiving a fair volume of orders for spring shipment.

Conditions are steadily growing more satisfactory at the woolen mills, except for the great strength of the raw material, and all sections of this industry are in good condition.

Failures this week numbered 215 in the United States, against 279 last year, and 39 in Canada, compared with 26 a year ago.

The condition of the female wage-earner in Duluth is different from that in any other city in the state, according to a report on labor conditions compiled by John O'Donnell, state labor commissioner. The report says the average wage is higher in the Zenith City than elsewhere in Minnesota, but that this is more than offset by the cost of living.

The average wage in St. Paul is from $4 to $4.50 a week, with the cost of living averaging $3.50 a week. The average salary paid women in Duluth amounts to about $5 a week, says Mr. O'Donnell, but the cost of living comes to $4 for each seven days. Continuing, the report asserts that the cost of living in this city is minimized to a great extent by the formation of clubs among the factory girls who have no homes in town. They band together and rent a flat or a house, where they can live on the co-operative plan cheaper than would be the case if they stayed at a regular boarding house.

The same scarcity of the household servant found in the larger cities exists in Duluth, where the scarcity is said to be caused by the girls forsaking the kitchens for the dining rooms of restaurants and hotels.

Mr. O'Donnell stoutly maintains that the good dinners he enjoyed while in Duluth, and the sweet smiles going with them, had nothing whatever to do with the writing of the following paragraph in the report:

"One cannot look into the faces of the young girls employed in the first-class retaurants of Duluth without knowing instantly that the grade of intelligence is higher, the character of the fiber better and more firmly knit than that of the average girl left today to run our households."

According to the labor commissioner, female wage earners receive less in the smaller cities of the state than in the Twin Cities and Duluth, but are relatively better off. It is shown that the foreign element in labor affects the average wage and the standard of living much more than in the large cities. This is most apparent in Winona, where the average wage of the woman workers was found to be about $3 a week. This is due to the predominance of foreign labor there, it is stated rather than to the fact that Winona is not prosperous.

Some of the women working in Winona receive only $1 a week, the lowest scale paid in the state. This low wage is, however, offset in a measure by the ownership of homes by the majority of the wage-earning class and the low rent paid by those who do not own their homes.

Duluth employs between 1100 and 1200 girls. Of this number 300 work in the laundries, seventy in matchmaking, a large number in the manufacture of cigars and the remainder in stores and miscellaneous factories, not forgetting the telephone exchanges.

The number of female wage earners in Minnesota amounts in the aggregate to 16,000. The report strongly recommends that stools be provided for the clerks in stores in the different cities. The repugnance the female wage-earner has towards housework is emphasized as the most distinctive feature revealed by the inspection.

Men looking for work in the woods are becoming more plentiful daily, according to National Employment agents, and it now appears that there are nearly enough in the city to fill all orders for woodsmen. It is expected that the supply will be fully equal to the demand in the very near future, and before many weeks have passed there may be a drop in the present scale of wages.

"That we are getting caught up on our orders is due entirely to the rains of the past two or three weeks," said the National agent yesterday afternoon. "The wet weather has greatly retarded work in the woods, resulting in a big let up in the demand for labor. But for these rains we would be literally swamped with orders for woodsmen at the present time. The demand would be about three times as heavy as it now it. It is plenty heavy enough now to satisfy us, and with the coming of drier weather, it will increase, but the supply will also increase as the season advances.

"Where a short time ago we were sending out only three or four woodsmen daily we now ship from thirty to forty men to the logging camps. They are arriving from outside points, many from the Twin Cities, every day, and are daily becoming more plentiful, despite the fact that so many are being shipped out as fast as they arrive.

"The prevailing wage scale is still from $26 to $30 for common woods workers. Many authorities assert that this scale will be maintained, but I am of the opinion that these predictions will prove to be mistaken ones. I believe before the season is very far advanced lower wages will be paid in the woods than at the present time, for the supply is pretty certain to exceed the demand, in spite of the scarcity of help which has prevailed so far this fall."

Lumbermen themselves are expressing great discontent at the long-continued wet spell; fears are entertained that it will seriously interfere with the season's output of logs. It is very wet in the woods just now, and if a lasting snow comes before a severe cold spell has had a chance to turn the water in the swamps to ice conditions will be bad indeed, for under these circumstances it will remain soft under foot all winter, affecting operations in the woods to a considerable extent.

PRAISE SYSTEM OF EDUCATION

Foreigners Greatly Impressed With Methods In United States.

New York, Oct. 22.—Educational methods here and in other parts of the world, particularly in Germany, have been discussed at a reception given by the society of educational research in honor of Drs. Von Seberg, Duncker and Kuypers. Dr. Von Seberg and Dr. Duncker are privy councillors of the German government and members of the German ministry of commerce, while Dr. Kuypers is superintendent of schools at Dusseldorf. In the last six weeks they have been investigating public school methods in various parts of America and will sail for home today. Dr. Duncker spoke in high praise of the American system of education as he and his colleagues found it. He had discovered, he said, that our instructors teach pupils not to depend too much upon others, but to help themselves.

"I don't find in America anything like Kleinlicheit (peetiness) as we call it in Germany," observed the doctor. "Smallness or peetiness seems to be entirely absent from your nature."

Dr. Kuypers said he was greatly impressed with the desire of American teachers to perfect themselves in their art, and especially as they would be in their profession only for a short period. He said he could not understand how so many attractive women teachers could be induced to stick to their work and thought it would be an excellent thing if they could be persuaded to marry and then to interest their husbands in educational work.

Dr. Von Seberg complimented the American teachers for their enthusiasm, and said he was glad to see that education here was regarded as a prime means of Americanizing foreigners.

Dr. Pabst, an expert in industrial training in Germany, defined education on this side of the ocean as a system of "Working through work." He had found, he said, that even the most insignificant endeavor in this country was respected and honored.

FIFTEEN EARTHQUAKES

Recorded on Siesmograph From April to October.

Baltimore, Oct. 22.—Fifteen earthquakes have been recorded on the siesmograph, or earthquake machine, at the Johns Hopkins university since April last. This is shown by the films used from April to October, which have just been developed.

Not only has the instrument exceeded its record in number, but the longest shock ever shown on the siesmograph was registered during that time. On Aug. 27 last there was recorded an earthquake that began at 4 p. m. and lasted three hours and one-half. The shock moved the register beam two-thirds of an inch.

The longest quake previously felt was the one which caused great damage in Guatemala March 18, 1902. It continued three hours.

BALLOON A SUCCESS.

New York, Oct. 22.—M. Lebaudy's dirigible balloon has had another successful ascent, making many evolutions and obeying the helm perfectly, cables the Herald's Paris correspondent. The balloon ascended from the plain of Moisson, described a figure eight and many other evolutions, in the course of which the man in charge made experiments for a new plan to raise or lower the balloon without discharging the ballast or regulating the gas.

ATENDERFOOT'S FEATS.

Prairie Watermelon Treat Given a New Yorker.

"Nothing pleases an old timer in the Middle West so much as to throw down a tenderfoot of the East," said a New York commercial traveller who was telling of a trip he recently made to Kansas City, to the Sun. "I was at the Kansas City club for luncheon when I was introduced to former Judge Bornard, a fine type of the old time judiciary. For dessert we had watermelon. I praised the lusciousness of the fruit.

"'You New Yorkers always like watermelon,' said the former judge. 'I remember how I fooled a young tenderfoot from your city many years ago.

"'I was at the time government interpreter for a tribe of Indians whose reservation was not very far from where we now sit. We were then on the border. One day a New Yorker came out here on business.

"'I trudged over some prairie with the young man until he began to limp. At the close of the day I said to him, "You sit down here, and I'll go out and see if I can get a watermelon for dinner." He laughed until you could have heard him a mile. He reckoned that I might find some bear meat, but the idea of talking about watermelon in such a God forsaken country as the Missouri border he regarded as a joke. Watermelon was not as common then as it is now. It was a luxury for gentlemen in city clubs. That was his idea.

"'I told him that the soil of Missouri was so rich and productive that watermelon grew upon it as naturally as paw paws. I made him sit down in the grass and went out to hunt for the fruit.

"'I returned in a half hour with a melon under each arm. They were the finest variety. They were yellow meat with black seeds—the most delicious species of watermelon, and one you rarely see now anywhere.

"'Well, sir, when I busted them and we sat down to eat that New Yorker's mouth looked like the entrance to the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky. When he had his fill he began to talk. He thought it was wonderful, and in his account of his trip he cracked up the soil of Missouri as being next to that on which the gods of Mount Olympus grew their choicest vintage.

"'You see, I was always fond of watermelon, and whenever I wandered in those days I carried a pocketful of watermelon seeds and scattered them on the broken prairie. I was the original watermelon man of the border. Those seeds sprouted and brought forth abundantly. I knew where they grew. I could shut my eyes and find watermelons.

"'So when this tenderfoot from New York struck the border and I told him we would have watermelon for dinner I knew what I was talking about. He never knew how I got those watermelons. For some years afterward whenever a New York tenderfoot came out here he hunted me up and asked if it was true that watermelons grew wild in Missouri. Up to the time I was elected to the bench I always said it was so. But when I got to be a judge I quit lying.'

"Then we cut another one, and when I got home I sent Judge Bornard a case of the best in our stock."

TELEPHONE GIRLS OF EUROPE.

A London correspondent who has a London-Paris-Milan wire in his room writes that in his opinion the telephone girl is not quite an angel, says the Rome Secolo. He finds the London telephone girls slow and indifferent, the French intractable and impertinent. When the Whittaker Wright trial was proceeding he found himself into with some news and rushed to the telephone. Absolute silence followed his frantic ringing, until he almost pulled the telephone from the wall. After twenty minutes or so a sweet voice said: "Number please?" "But," he protested, "I have been ringing for half an hour!" "Oh, really! I am so sorry, I was drinking my tea!"

In Paris the girls are absentminded and usually make the connections badly, but have invariably an excuse and will not hear remonstrances.

The Italian telephone girl by the side of her London and Paris sisters shines indeed. She is obliged to repeat the number wanted and so seldom makes a wrong connection, she is prompt, and not exceptionally pert, but she is lazy and will often tell you that the person you want does not reply when she has made no effort to ring him up.

BLOOD POISON CURED

A Desperate Struggle and How It Ended

Just 27 miles from the classic city of Athens, Ga., is located the thriving little town of Maxey's, the residence of Mr. Robert Ward, who has just been released from the most perilous predicament, the particulars of which he has consented to give to the public. He writes as follows:

MAXEY'S, OGLETHORPE CO., GA., July 1.

For twelve or fourteen years I have been a great sufferer with a terrible form of Blood Poison (Syphilis,) which ran into the secondary, and finally it was pronounced a tertiary form. My head, face and shoulders became almost a solid mass of corruption, and finally the disease commenced eating away my skull bones. I became so horribly repulsive that for three years I absolutely refused to let people see me. I used large quantities of the most noted blood remedies, and applied to nearly all physicians near me, but my condition continued to grow worse, and all said I must surely die. My bones became the seat of excruciating aches and pains; my nights were passed in misery; I was reduced in flesh and strength; my kidneys were terribly deranged, and life became a burden to me.

I chanced to see an advertisement of B. B. B., and I sent one dollar to W. C. Birchmore and Co., merchants of our place, and they procured one bottle for me. It was used with decided benefit. I continued its use and when eight or ten bottles has been used was pronounced sound and well.

Hundreds of scars can now be seen on me, looking like a man who had been burned and then restored. My case is well known in this county, and for the benefit of others who may be similarly affected, I think it my duty to give facts to the public, and to extend my heartfelt thanks for so valuable a remedy. I have been well over twelve months, and no return of the disease has occurred.

ROBERT WARD.
MAXEY'S, GA., July 1.

We, the undersigned, know Mr. Robert Ward, and take pleasure in stating that the facts as above stated by him are true, and that his was one of the worst cases of Blood Poison we ever knew in our county, and that he has been cured by the use of B. B. B.—Botanic Blood Balm.

COMES TO CLOSE

Interesting Platform Meeting Ends the Unitarian Conference.

"Aspects of Liberal Religion" Discussed By Four Speakers.

The annual conference of the Unitarian church of Minnesota was brought to a close last evening by a platform meeting on the topic "Aspects of Liberal Religion."

Rev. H. M. F. Ross, of Winnipeg, who was to speak on "The Simplicity of a Rational Faith," was unable to be present and his place was taken by Charles W. Ames, of St. Paul.

Mr. Ames prefaced his address by an anecdote of a Scotchman, who explained the difference between the Free Kirk and the United Free Kirk by saying: "We'll be saved, and they'll all be damned.'

"Briefly," said Mr. Ames, "we will all be saved by a rational faith and none will be damned. The one thing about our faith on which we pride ourselves is our freedom of discussion. Anyone is at liberty to entertain any thought of God and the universe that he likes. But we should remember that liberty is but a means and not an end. We glory in the emancipation of the slaves, but if that emancipation brings nothing but liberty to spend their days in idleness and vice, it were better, perhaps, if we had the slave driver's lash if it brought industry. It would be better for us if we still followed the ancient superstitions of religion, if our freedom of thought resulted in worldliness and vanity.'

Rev. E. A. Cantrell followed Mr. Ames, speaking on "The Place and Authority of the Bible Today." "Among the sacred literatures of the world," he said, "there is one that stands out pre-eminent. The Hebrew people were probably the most cosmopolitan of the ancient races. They came into contact with the ancient Egyptian civilization. Later they encountered the Babylonian and the Roman and Grecian. Then their country was the highway for the caravans to the East. On one side of them was Europe. On the other side was Asia and on the south Africa. They were the least provincial of any of the ancient peoples.

"Added to this was the fact that they probably were more intensive in their thought and lives than any of the ancient races. These two facts developed a sacred literature in the Hebrew race that was superior to that of any other people.

"What is the place of the Bible in our Western life? I believe that the Eastern thought and the Eastern ideas have saved our Western world from a slough of materialism. What is the authority of the Bible? We no longer believe that many things are true because they are in the Bible, but we believe that many things are in the Bible because they are true. Any person who knows more than I do o many subject is an authority to me on that subject. In mathematics Newton is an authority to us. So in religion, the person who has realized more than I have is an authority to me, and until we have reached a religious and moral plane equal to that attained by Jesus Christ he must be an authority to us on religion.

"The personal element of the love of Christ is brought in as an inspiration. In teaching a boy mathematics you teach him the elements of geometry, with its axioms and problems. You may perhaps bring in the story of the hardship Euclid had in studying out the problems as a personal element to inspire the boy to follow the example set. So in religion, you teach the great truths of religious thought and the great principles of morality, and bring in the qualities of Christ as an inspiration to lead us to follow these principles."

L. J. Hopkins chose for his subject, "Herbert Spencer's Contribution to Religious Thought."

"It goes without saying," said Mr. Hopkins, "that if you take the old definitions of religion, to talk of Herbert Spencer's contributions would be somewhat ridiculous. He could not have made any. To those who think it necessary to qualify the infinite with personal attributes of love and benevolence, Herbert Spencer's contributions may not seem great. But there have been many definitions of religion. Perhaps Herbert Spencer's own definition is as good a one as any. He says, 'Every religion is, or attempts to be, some theory of original causation.' Taking this definition, Spencer's contributions are certainly to be reckoned with."

With this introduction, he gave a brief but very interesting discussion of Spencer's theory of original causation and its effect on modern philosophical thought.

Rev. W. M. Backus gave a rather humorous address on "The Unique Value of Unitarianism." "When I was a boy," said Mr. Backus, "I was passionately fond of sheep, not so much from an inherited taste for roast mutton, as from a desire to be among the sheep and not among the goats when the final division came. But since that time I have become resigned to being a goat. I have found that frequently they place goats in a flock of sheep to protect the sheep and lead them to new pastures. The sheep follow the goats about, relying on them for food and protection.

"If the Unitarians can be the goats in religious thought and find new pastures on which the sheep can feed, I am satisfied."

Krigger ..... Fred Stewart
Sailor Jack ..... Harry Seldon
Rose Ellison ..... Miss Pauline Eckary

Mrs. Vincese ..... Miss Jennette Griffith

"The World" was produced at the Lyceum last night before a fair-sized audience. The performance did not appear to take very well with the house. Earl Doty made a big and hearty sailor Jack, with rough way and a good heart. His interpretation f the part was a very creditable one. In point of acting Thomas Richardson as Morris Abraham, money lender, and Joseph as Dennis Flanagan, followed close on the heels of Mr. Doty. Forrest Cunnings as Dewaux Powers, the villain, and Frederick Cantway in the part of Capt. Dixon, were rather stiff and unnatural. Much the same might be said of Miss Pauline Eckrary, as Rose Ellison, Powers ward. Miss Rose May made an excellent impression in the part of Jennie.

The play revolves about the adventures of Rose, an heiress, whose money Powers is endeavoring to gain possession of. He isn't particular whether he marries the girl or not, so long as he gets the money. He is assisted in his work by the money lender and one Krigger, a tough, a character well represented by Fred Stewart.

Campaign Becomes Quieter In Duluth As It Approaches Its Finish.

Charles G. Miller Satisfied With His Prospects For Sheriff—Itinerary For Dunn's Trip In This Section Arranged.

As the campaign gets closer to the finish the quieter it seems to get. While it is true that headquarters of both parties in the Manhattan building are now open and running in full hot blast there is nothing developing that the campaign managers have to give that saxors of real news. All the best shots of the campaign seem to have been fired, in fact, the ammunition was pretty well used up even before the state conventions.

Republicans concede that if they gain a victory in the state that it will be much easier won than it would have been had it not been a presidential year, when state issues are often lost sight of in the desire to keep on a certain side for president. With the state left high and dry to develop its own fight without any entanglement with the national ticket there would be even a prettier fight than there has been up to this time, in all likelihood.

In many of the former campaigns some of the best shots have been fired just prior to the opening of the polls, but it will be a surprise if this is done this season. If appearances count for anything and the opinions of many old campaigners may be relied on, everything in the way of charges and counter charges seems to have been promulgated.

So eleventh hour roorbacks are not looked for this year, and if they come, it will be a surprise. In the state campaign the Republicans admit that if the election had taken place a short time ago that they would have had poorer chances than now, asserting that the very Republicans who intended to vote for Johnson have become scared lest defection this year result in permanent injury to the party, and have decided to be for Dunn. This itself is an admission of Johnson's power.

The Democrats are particularly interested locally in seeing that the registration is carried out thoroughly during the coming week. The polling places will be open on Tuesday and Saturday next from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. for the benefit of all those who did not vote or register at the primary election held last month. If the entire Democratic vote can be secured to be on file before election it is considered that the result in this county will not be so overwhelmingly for Dunn as the Republicans look for it to be.

• • •

Chairman Roland Haven figures that Dunn should have a majority of 3000 to 4000 in the county of St. Louis and that Roosevelt should have about 5000. This is an admission that there is a state issue on hand of decidedly more significance to the Republicans than the national issue, which they consider will largely take care of itself.

• • •

Chairman Fred I. Ryan, of the Democratic ranks, says that the reported dissension among the Democrats is entirely in the imagination of the Republican brethren and that the reports he gets are of the most encouraging type. Traveling men are coming in from outside constantly with pleasing reviews of the situation as showng Johnson's fine impression on the outside voters.

Charles G. Miller, Democratic candidate for sheriff, is in from the range and will devote his time from now on until election to the cause of the party and his own fight for office. He is satisfied with the situation as he has found it and looks for a strong Democratic vote on Nov. 8.

At the Democratic headquarters Chairman Ryan is getting ready assistance from John Beutner, the Proctor member of the county committee and the latter will be on hand at Democratic headquarters from now on until the issue is decided.

The city members of the county Democratic committee will meet on next Saturday night at the Democratic headquarters, 401 Manhattan building. The members are Morris Thomas, First ward; Herman W. Moeller, Second ward; Harris Bennett, Third ward; Porter J. Neff, Fourth ward; Fred L. Ryan, Fifth ward; Joseph Grover, Sixth ward; Joseph L. Nylander, Seventh ward; William E. Kern, Eighth ward and the following members-at-large: Charles d'Autremont, Bert Fesler, Roger S. Powell, M. H. McMahon, Theodore Hollister, George L. Roberts, and John J. O'Brien.

Friends of John H. Norton, who was defeated for the nomination for county attorney by the incumbent John McClintock, say they are not disappointed by the showing that Mr. Norton made in the recent run. The record that Mr. McClintock has in the county attorney's office is considered as one which would be an asset exceedingly hard for any other candidate to buck against. It is admitted by many Republicans that the record of the county attorney is one which would recommend him for the place on his merits, their contention against his retention in the position being that he is not politically entitled to the place that he ought to give way to some one else who has been out hustling for the party. However, the politicial and practical side of these questions are often at decided variance.

The New York Sun says: "Senator Charles A. Towne, Democratic nominee for congress in the Fourteenth congress district, has opened headquarters at 1450 Third avenue, with Don Farnsworth, an old political friend, in charge. Though this is one of the strongest Democratic congress districts, Mr. Towne proposes to conduct an aggressive and vigorous campaign. A campaign committee has been organized to aid him. It is made up of one member from each of the Assembly districts of the congress district."

Some time ago Congressman Bourke Cockran made a speech in Washington which has been acting as a boomerang to the Republican interests in this congressional district. The speech was an out-and-out free trade argument of the hottest kind, the object of ripping the protective tariff from the borders of the United States in every section being shown very plainly as the desire of the Democratic congressman.

Congressman J. Adam Bede sent a number of copies of this speech, without comment, to constituents, and they have been wondering why Bede has been doing this. His intention was to show that the Democrats really want to abolish the protective tariff, while the unexplained sending of the speeches was considered by many of them as indicating the congressman's sentiments as of the free trade variety, despite his Republicanism. Bede is busy now trying to explain, and there are a good many stamps being used for the purpose.

Editor Pease gave space in his Anoka Union to an editorial on the matter.

Senator Clapp's seat is not in danger from Democrats, as demonstrated in the following argument made before the voters of Granite Falls in his speech there a few days since by John A. Johnson, the Democratic candidate for governor:

"There are less than forty Democrats who have filed for the legislature, and if every man who is running on the Democratic ticket is elected there would be no more than fifty Democrats in the next legislature. That one-half of them will be elected is not a probability, but, assuming that all are elected, the Republicans will have 131 on joint ballot, or a clear majority of 81. Senator Clapp's seat is not in danger from Democrats. As to the charge of the St. Paul paper, I would say that it is the only agency that is at work to create opposition to Senator Nelson. John Lind has stated that he is out of politics; that he will not accept any political position in the future, I am not and will not be a candidate for senator or any other office than governor. If Senators Nelson and Clapp are in any danger, it is from within their own party and not from the Democracy."

An itinerary has been arranged for Robert C. Dunn and party when they campaign in this section the last half of next week, which includes the use of a special train with probably two private cars. The schedule for the tour is as follows:

Next week John A. Johnson, the Democratic candidate for governor, will spend in the Ninth congressional district. Dates have been made for Hallock Wednesday, Fergus Falls Thursday and Moorhead Friday.

• • •

Friends of N. E. Hugo, the local legislator, who is running for the speakership of the house, say that he is by no means losing any ground, and that he has plenty of pledges now to practically elect him. His opponents are W. B. Anderson, of Winona; Frank Clague, of Redwood; Elmer E. Adams, of Ottertail; R. J. Wells, of Wilkin; W. A. Nolan, of Mower, and S. O. Morse, of Murray.

While Anderson and Clague have the most strength in the opposition, according to some reports, the others may prove rather interesting factors before he fight reaches a finish.

There is an added feature of interest in this fight by the fact that Julius Schmahl, candidate for chief clerk of the house, comes from the same county as Clague, Redwood, and precedent says that they cannot both be chosen for the offices they desire. Mr. Schmahl has as an opponent John T. Jones, of Hennepin, a reading clerk in the last two sessions of the house, and it is expected that Jones will be backed by the Hennepin delegation as well as by some friends outside that county.

• • •

L. A. Rosing, Democratic candidate for governor in 1902, will give his time from now till election at the state headquarters in St. Paul. From now on he will work in close touch with Mr. Day, who has been overburdened by the duties of his position. Mr. Rosing managed the three Lind campaigns and is a past master in the business.

The Carver County Journal has bolted outright and declared for Johnson and F. G. Winston. It says editorially:

"The Journal has too much faith in Mr. Heatwole to believe that he deserved such treatment at the hands of the committee. Let us ask to whom does Mr. Dunn owe his nomination? If Heatwole was not instrumental in tendering it to him we badly miss our guess. Dunn has betrayed his benefactor and the betrayal will be keenly felt, especially in the third congressional district, where Heatwole can number his followers by the score. The Journal will hereafter be a supporter of John A. Johnson, the Democratic candidate. Although differing with our views politically, we believe him to be the best man of the two for the governorship."

The Lester Prairie News, another Dunn paper, says:

"Bob Dunn may have made a good political move when he threw down the men who were his strongest supporters in the late preconvention fight in favor of the very men who moved heaven and earth to defeat him, but we doubt it. No man was ever a success in a political way who did not stand by his friends. Dunn might better have gone down to ignominious defeat retaining the friendship of the men who made him, than to turn bag and baggage into the camp of the enemy for the sake of, as he thinks, assuring his election. Many a good Republican who has heretofore had unbounded faith in his fearlessness has become disgusted and disappointed through this latest move."

Prof. T. J. Caton, of Minneapolis, who has been accompanying Robert C. Dunn, Republican candidate for governor through a part of the campaign, is quite an electioneer. He is the proprietor of a business college in Minneapolis, and considered a good speaker.

• • •

The Labor World says: W. A. Holgate has entered into his campaign for county treasurer just as if he had no opposition. That is good politics. It is like a reserve fund in a bank.

Referring to the mineral lease reports of Public Examiner Johnson the Hibbing Ore, Republican, says:

These things have been known to range people and others interested in mining matters these many years, and account for the fact that leases to valuable mining lands have not been acquired by any of the common herd. It is notorious on the ranges and in Duluth that in order to secure a lease to mining land that had a possibility of value the applicant must have a 'pull' at the state capitol. Those who have seen fortunes slip through their fingers by reason of a lack of this 'pull' will rise up and warmly thank Mr. Johnson for having probed the matter to the bottom and made public his findings. Characteristic of Mr. Dunn, he rushes into print to refute the charges and indulges in a lot of bombastic rot that does not explain. His explanations made the matter worse for the reason that there was the evidence that he was trying to hide something. Mr. Dunn claims, among other things, that the Johnson report was produced for politeal effect, and whether that be the fact or not, Mr. Johnson has done the state a great service in exposing a graft that was practiced in the state auditor's department during the Dunn administration.

The Minneapolis Journal says: Two or three weeks ago, when Martin was still 'knocking' Dunn, he made the remark that Dunn's managers ought to use the gross earnings bill hard, and try to show that Dunn could not be the railroad candidate, or he would not be for the bill. Now that Martin is in the saddle himself, that is just the line of argument he is taking. He is already claiming that the railroads are hostile to Dunn. The facts of the pre-convention campaign are so well known, however, that this argument does not have much weight.

"Martin has admitted to friends that he is up against the hardest job he ever tackled. The campaign has drifted away from control. Although there is still time to line up many workers and get an organization, the committee cannot check the trend of public sentiment. A prominent Republican from southern Minnesota, formerly a state senator, was in the Twin Cities a day or two ago, and declared that his county was almost unanimous for Johnson. Conditions in that county are typical of those in a number of other counties in southern and western Minnesota."

POPE'S ADVISERS

Not In Favor of Abolishing Decree Forbidding Voting.

Rome, Oct. 22.—The prevailing feeling among the pope's advisers regarding the attitude of the vatican at the coming elections seems to be not to abolish the decree forbidding Catholics to vote. The Osservatore Romano, the organ of the vatican, however, in unofficial articles urges that the abstention from voting be merely to mask the free hand in the matter left to the bishops and advises the faithful to vote when it is considered advantageous to do so in view of local conditions. If this decision is definite the clericals will not have a party of their own in the chamber, but will oppose the extremist and anti-religious candidates especially the socialists and will favor the conservatives.

The pope is now working on a circular to be addressed to the French clergy. It will make no reference to politics. The pontiff will merely encourage the social and religious action of the clergy.

REPORT OF OYAMA

Says the Russian Losses Are Estimated at 60,000.

Russians May Take Offensive In Renewal of Hostilities.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The Japanese legation today received the following cablegram from Tokio:

"Marshal Oyama reports that the investigation completed Oct. 22, regarding the Russian losses at Shakhe river shows that there were about 500 prisoners and 10,550 dead bodies. The trophies of the battle are thirty-five guns, 6920 shells, 5574 rifles, 78,000 rounds of ammunition, etc. The dead of the enemy were all buried with military honors. The Russian total casualties are estimated at 60,000. Further investigation isstill proceeding."

With the Russian Eastern army headquarters, by way of Mukden, Oct. 22.—Both armies practically inactive. The Russians have reoccupied Tantzuputzy. The Japanese hold a position on high ground sloping down to the Shakhe river. There is continual outpost fighting and sniping. The batteries occasionally engage in a duel to the westward. Gen. Mistchenko fought a brisk engagement, Oct. 20. He reports progress and the capture of guns.

The two armies are receiving fresh supplies of ammunition. There is an indication of an early renewal of hostilities with the Russians taking the offensive. The weather is cold.

A rough estimate of the Russian losses during the recent battle places them at 45,000, of which 10,000 were killed. The correspondent of the Associated Press, who filed this dispatch was attacked by Chinese bandits while riding to rejoin his corps.

INFLUENCE OF ONE MAN

Iron Trade Review's Comment on Recent Mining Flotation.

In an article headed "Duluth's Copper Mine Operations," the Iron Trade Review, of Oct. 20, contains the following:

"As an indication of what some man's name will do, this is told from Duluth: An old and several-times abandoned copper mine in Sonora, Magdalena, Mex., got into bad ways partly at least through the incompetency of the Mexicans in charge. Americans took hold, saved the titles, revised the company's capitalization and changed it from a copper to a gold mine, for which it was probably better fitted. A certain amount of stock was alloted for sale and in one day Duluth subscribed for and paid down $1 each on more than 100,000 shares, on which $5 is to be paid. All this because T. F. Cole, president of the Oliver Iron Mining company, and head of the Calumet & Arizona group of copper mines, had visited the property, thought well of it, and because it was rumored that he was to be associated in its control. Mr. Cole, though a considerable holder of stock in the new company, is not a director, and will have nothing to do with the management, other than possibly in an advisory capacity. This is the Black Mountain Mining company, of Chicago, which has taken over the property of the Nogales Copper Co. Mr. Cole's success in the Calumet & Arizona and associated mines and prospects in Southern Arizona, is said to have been nothing less than phenomenal, and the only mine of the group that has had time to develop into a dividend payer has been the most wonderful financial comet that has passed across the mining horizon for a generation. This is the Calumet & Arizona, which in the last twenty-two months, since its smelters have been installed, has earned $3,400,000, of which $1,300,000 has been distributed in dividends."

THE TARIFF BENEFITS ARE FOR CAPITALISTS

Judge Parker Discusses the Tariff Issues to New Yorkers.

Law Provides No Means For Giving Wage Workers a Share.

Esopus, Oct. 2.—In a speech on the tariff issue today, Judge Parker replied to remarks on that subject from men representing six distinct New York delegations, which were received at Rosemount today. The day was not pleasant for an outdoor gathering. The air was chilly and during the noon hour a cold rain began to fall.

Judge Parker spoke as follows:

Gentlemen: I thank you for the address you have made and for your generous assurances of the support of yourselves and the various clubs you represent in the campaign now being waged. My response shall be confined to the issue most prominently presented by your speeches. In order to understand our present situation in respect to the tariff it is best to glance at the past and see how we reached the position we now occupy. Our political opponents usually point to Alexander Hamilton as the founder and expounder of the protective system, and they are never weary of quoting from his report of 1791 in support of their positions. They always speak of Hamilton's report on manufactures as though it were a report on protection. Even the editor of his complete works, the present senator from Massachusetts, does so. Being a report on manufactures only, it does not justify protective duties on wool, coal, lumber, iron ore, borax and other products of the soil, mines and fisheries, in which our present tariff abounds and without which it could not last. Take out of the tariff everything that Hamilton did not include in his report and the alliances of special interest which the tariff represents would be shattered in fragments.

Hamilton said that his object was to promote such manufactures as will tend to render the United States independent of foreign nations for military and other essential supplies. Does anybody say that we have not reached that condition? Does anybody contend that the United States is still dependent on foreign nations for military and other essential supplies? Have we not frequently heard the note of alarm in Europe on the American invasion of the markets by our manufactured goods and especially those of iron and steel? Whether Hamilton's conceptions as to the way to establish manufacturing industries were right or not, the object which he sought was long since gained, but the protective tariff is now vastly higher than any that he recommended or probably conceived of.

In his report Hamilton enumerated a number of manufacturing industries as already established in the United States in his time. Among these were leather, iron and steel, copper and brass tiles, and pottery, wood, paper, hats, carriages of all kinds and most articles of personal clothing and household use. These he says, "have grown up and flourished with a rapidity which surprises, affording an encouraging assurance of success"—meaning success in other branches of manufacture. If these branches had grown up and flourished with surprising rapidity one hundred years ago, what just claim on extravagant government bounties can they advance now?

Although Hamilton is usually cited as the founder of the system it really began before him. The first tariff bill was passed in 1789. As originally reported it was a tariff for revenue only. Mr. Madison, who reported to the house, was opposed to protection on principle but he yielded in some particulars to the advocates of that doctrine, so that his bill became a tariff for revenue with some slight incidental protection, the average rate of duty being 8½ per cent ad valoren. All of our tariffs until 1816 were of this sort and the argument used to support the very moderate protective features was substantially the same as that of Hamilton, already mentioned. The war of 1812 and the embargo acts which accompanied it stopped importation for the time being, having the effect of prohibitory tariff. When the war came to an end and the protected classes were again subjected to the competition which they had before successfully met, they demanded more protection and they got it.

Mr. Clay, in the tariff debate in the senate in 1828, voiced the prevailing opinion of the country that the protected trades were no linger in a state of infancy. In fact the infant industry argument was then superceded by the pauper labor argument. It was now contended for the first time that the tariff should be used to compensate the American producer for the higher wages that he had to pay as compared with his foreign competitors. As this argument has at times done great service, although now quite threadbare, I will dwell upon it a moment. Inasmuch as the law puts the tariff be cfits exclusively in the hands of the capitalist and provides no means for giving his wage forker his share, the system virtually says:

"Let the government take care of the rich and the rich will take care of the poor." It is a short step then to say: "Let the government take care of everybody," a doctrine abhorred of all sound thingers. But it is not true that greatly enlarged profits are on that account divided among the workmen helping to produce them. The advance in wages is not due as a result to a desire on the part of the employer to share profits with his cease the world has ever known. His cures and system will go down in history as one of the most marvelous achievements of twentieth century science. His rapid rise is proof positive that he is filling a long felt demand. That his art and skill are appreciated, his enormous patronage evinces. His fame is fast spreading to the remotest parts of the earth. I have cured consumption after the patient was given up to die. I would not make these claims if every word was not true. I can prove what I say. He actually returned to his home cured in one month. This is not an exceptional case by any means. What I have done for other people I can do for you, no matter what disease you may have. TRAIN ROBBER CONFESSES

Gang Arrested and Shot In St. Louis Held Up Diamond Special.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Believing himself about to die, William Morris, alias Blair, the leader of the three suspects who killed Detectives Shea and Dwyer, in yesterday's battle and who was himself wounded in two vital organs, today confessed to having been implicated in two train robberies, after his identification by railroad men as one of the four men who robbed the Pullman passengers on the Illinois Central "Diamond special" between Harvey and Madison, Ill., Aug. 1.

The identification was made by Lawrence B. Combs, conductor of the train which was robbed; W. E. Shepherd, the baggageman and William H. Burch, flagman, at Madison.

As soon as Combs saw Morris, he said:

"Well, I've met you at last, have I?"

"So you say," replied Morris.

"The last time I saw you, you had a gun," said Combs.

Morris smiles "Yes, and I have the gun yet," he said.

"You were the big fellow in the lead?" said Combs.

"Yes," said Morris. "I'm going to die and I might as well tell the whole thing. We took a tramp and had him rifle the pockets of the passengers in that robbery.

"I held up alone the Big Four station agent at Mattoon, Ill. This was two weeks ago. I got $45 and a hammerless revolver. I used this gun in the fight yesterday afternoon.

"We held up a special World's Fair train at Columbus Junction, Iowa, the latter part of July. We got nothing in that job."

The train robbed by the men was known as the Diamond special on the Illinois Central. The robbers entered the Pullman cars and went through them with drawn revolvers, taking all the money and valuables that the passengers had, then stopped the train and disappeared in the darkness.

One or two of the pasengers who did not respond quick enough to their demand were struck over the heads with revolvers.

SNOW FLURRIES ARE PREDICTED

Brisk to High Northwest Winds Are Also Expected.

The weather man says it is well for the people not to build very high hopes on today's sunshine. Brisk to high northwest winds are predicted for tonight and Sunday, with partly cloudy weather and probable snow flurries on Lake Superior and showers on Lake Huron. Northwestern storm signals continue to be displayed at all stations along the lakes except southwest Lake Michigan, in the Milwaukee and Chicago sections. No more than a very slight drop in temperature is expected.

CHURCH BAZAAR.

Will Be One All Next Week In Axa Hall.

A fair and bazaar, to continue through all next week, opening Monday and coming to a close Saturday evening, will be conducted in Axa hall, Superior street, by the women of St. John the Baptist church. It is expected the affair will receive a liberal patronage from the general public. The proceeds will assist in defraying the expense of erecting a new church and school in the parish.

The members of the congregation fully appreciate the efforts of the Oblate fathers in purchasing a site for church purposes. Much credit is given them for their endeavors along this line. A whole block between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth avenues West has been purchased by them, and a handsome parsonage has already been erected on the ground. A magnificent structure of stone and pressed brick, to serve as a school and a church, is now being built in the block. The new building measures 136 by 60 feet. German & Lignell are the architects. The building will add much to the appearance of the West End.

THE NOVEMBER TERM.

October 26 the Last Day For Filing Cases.

October 26, will be the last day for filing cases which are to come up for trial at the November term of district court. After that date the clerk of court will compile the calendar and place it in the hands of the printer.

Not all of the cases for the September term have yet been disposed of, there still remaining enough court cases to occupy the attention of the district judges right up to the opening of the November term.

The September term of court has been one of the busiest terms ever experienced in district court, the jury trials having lasted up to within the past few days.

The plaintiff is George W. Bowder, formerly of Minneapolis, now a prominent real estate dealer of this city. Of the $18,500 sued for $3500 is claimed to be for money expended for the woman in the case.

The man appeared at a police station here Oct. 17, stating that he had embezzled $20,000 from an auction house in Montreal. He was arraigned and the case continued until Oct. 25. Meantime he was sent to the county jail, where soon after his arrival he became ill. Today he was found dead in his cot. The police are investigating the man's story of embezzlement in Canada.

Revelations Are Made to Mayor Cullum Concerning Soda Buffets.

Claim That They Are Selling Mixed Drinks to Children.

Some revelations made to the police department and Mayor Cullum during the last few days lead to the belief that some of the Superior street soda fountains are driving a trade that amounts to a little better than a regular saloon practice.

The following communication signed by Mayor Cullum was posted in police headquarters today:

"There have been a number of complaints made to me recently in regard to several of the soda water fountains which have carried on their mixed-drink business to the verge of regular saloon practice, a number of places selling whisky and wines with the addition of a slight amount of soda to take off the taste, but which in fact amounts to dealing in intoxicating liquors.

"People have informed me that they know this to be true, and very naturally object to it. I wish you would look into the matter and notify these people that they must discontinue the practice, and, if they fail to do so, obtain evidence and have them arrested."

When questioned for further information concerning the matter, Mayor Cullum stated that several prominent citizens had complained to him that their children had at times comes home in a state verging on intoxication after drinking alleged soft drinks at some of the soda water fountains.

"There are only two or three of those places which I have heard complaint," said the mayor. "The more reputable owners have come to me and stated that they were glad I had taken the matter up, and hoped I would stop all further sale of intoxicating liquors over soda water counters.

"One man came to me the other day and said that his son, a young school boy, had come home recently in a condition that might almost be described as drunk. The lad was unable to give a reason for it, but when questioned said that he had taken several mixed drinks at a soda water fountain.

"The business is done chiefly with young children, and if intoxicating drinks are allowed to be sold it amounts to a regular kindergarten for the saloon.

"The liquor is served up in such a way that it is made attractive to the taste of children, who would be nauseated with pure liquor, and would never think of touching it. They grow to like it in this form, and drinks with a touch of whisky or wine in them are becoming the most popular.

"I have heard complaints of young girls following the example of their escorts and taking these drinks. It is certainly not beneficial to their morals, to say the least."

The following list of names of so-called soft drinks is taken from the card of a soda buffet:

Scotch highball.
Rhine wine.
Bordeaux punch.
Grape punch.

Two Farmers Held Up and Robbed Near Minot.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Two men, farmers, were held up a mile east of the city, in a coulee, and robbed of $12.75 in money and a gold watch. The robbers were two in number and were armed with four revolvers. It is supposed they were lying in wait for Peter Ehr, of this city, who had about $500 in cash on his person and passed by that way a few moments after the other robberies. Mr. Ehr saw the armed men when several rods off, and reached down in his wagon as if to pull out a gun. The robbers became frightened and ran rapidly across the coulee and over the hill.

Charles Baldwin, a farm laborer, was arrested thirty miles south of Minot on the charge of stealing two horses, which were found in his possession. The horses, a driving team, were stolen at Groton, S. D. Baldwin says that while walking along the road about thirty miles from Aberdeen, S. D., he was overtaken by a man driving a team of horses and invited to ride in the buggy. He accepted and the two came on to Ward county, where both secured employment on a farm. The team was retained. The other day they came to Minot with the team and the other man disappeared. He is now being searched for.

The postmaster at Raynour came to Minot to secure a warrant for the arrest of a man on the charge of making an assault with a dangerous weapon. The postmaster says the man asked for mail and when there was none pulled a gun and pounded him over the head. State's Attorney Johnson refused to issue a warrant.

William Henderson, of St. Paul, is in the city looking after the interests of the creditors in the John C. Hoff bankruptcy matter. The creditors represented by Mr. Henderson have filed objections to the proposed discharge in bankruptcy of Mr. Hoff and will defend their objections in the federal court at Fargo when the case is called before Judge Amidon.

Fargo—A local restaurant has changed from waiters to waitresses and some of the latter have been brought from Minnapolis. Daniel Feeney, a night cook, paid but little attention to the newcomers until Friday, when in one of them he recognized his divorced wife. The two had not seen each other for six years. Feeney asked about the children and Mrs. Feeney told him she had them with her. The children were seen and there was a return of the old love and finally a reconcillation and arrangements have been completed for a remarrying.

Ex-Mayor and Mrs. J. A. Johnson have issued invitations for a 7 o'clock dinner on Oct. 29, in honor of Consul General and Mrs. A. W. Edwards. Sixty invitations have been issued to old settlers and friends, who have been in Fargo twenty years or more. Next Saturday is the twentieth anniversary of the arrival of Maj. Edwards and Mr. Johnson in Fargo. Congressman and Mrs. T. F. Marshall and friends are to give a dancing party here.

Grand Forks—Collingwood Crossman, who was agent for the Great Northern at Lawton, under the name of Ralph Bishop, was arrested here last night on a charge of embezzlement. The company alleges a shortage of $500.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre.—The indications are that Geddes will be voted on as the future county seat of Charles Mix county at the election this fall. There has been a bitter fight on all summer between Geddes and Platte, the case having been to the supreme court twice. Geddes appears to have secured the best of the situation in the legal tangle, and G. P. Harben, attorney for Platte, appeared before the supreme court, asking for a writ of prohibition to prevent the county auditor of Charles Mix county from placing the name of Geddes on the ballot to be voted at the coming election. In this move he was unsuccessful. Had he succeeded, the whole matter of county seat removal would have gone over to the next election, and nothing could have been done for two years.

The refusal of the United States supreme court to grant a rehearing in the case of the state of South Dakota vs. the state of North Carolina means that the state university will receive about $35,000, as the bonds in controversy were donated to the state for the benefit of the university. The total amount sued for, including interest, was stricken out and judgment given on the face of the bonds.

The secretary of state has received another formal withdrawal for the people's party state ticket, and will notify county officers to strike the name from the ballot, the name taken off being that of Alli Reed, of Sturgis, nominee for superintendent of public instruction.

The supreme court has admitted to practice Harrold E. Klise, of Fort on examination, and Willis Wells French, of Yankton, on certificate.

Deadwood.—Argelo Barsatti, of Galena, is in the Lawrence county jail for contempt of court. He was the combalining witness against John Perli of Galena, whom he charged with an assault with intent to kill. Barsatti alleged that Perli had fired upon him from concealment. At the preliminary hearing in justice court Barsatti became uncontrollable, attempted a vicious assault and was heavily fined. Unable to pay the fine, he was sent to jail.

The Northwestern railroad company is in need of 100 carloads of cement for concrete work, and unless it arrives in the next few days the extensive construction work of the company in this locality will have to be suspended for a time.

Aberdeen.—The members of the Presbyterian church, by a vote of fifty-one to twenty-nine, refused to acep: the tendered resignation of Rev. C. C. Todd. He, however, persists in his desire to retire and the Aberdeen presbytery has been called to meet in this city on Nov. 1, when the matter will come up for definite settlement. Rev. Mr. Todd gave as the reason for his resignation a condition of spiritual apathy and indifference existing in the church, stating that a change of pastors might result in an improvement.

MURDER DONE IN MONTANA

An Englishman Probably Slain as He Slept In Bed.

Glendive, Mont., Oct. 22.—Undersheriffs and Coroner W. D. Foster and County Physician R. E. Hathaway returned yesterday from Jordan, where they were called by a telegram announcing a murder there. They had in their custody Charles Comment, who must answer to the crime of having taken the life of George C. Farrants.

Farrants is an Englishman and had been in the employ of Charles Gurnett & Co. as a sheepherder. He quit work on the 13th, saying that he was going to Miles City on business. He had a wagon and team and camping outfit and in the afternoon drove out about seven miles from Jordan, where he met Comment, who had also camped to spend the night.

Comment told him that his wife was in Jordan, that he was sick, and asked him to return and bring her to the camp. Farrant complied with the request, but when he reached Jordan he found that Comment had been around Jordan for some time, and that he and his wife, who was employed at a boarding house, had quarreled and she had refused to have anything more to do with him.

Farrant believed he had been goldbricked, so he did not go to see the woman, stating that he would return to the camp and make Comment pay him for his trip to town or give him a whipping.

The next morning Charles Gurnett, on his way to Jordan, passed the camp and noticed a man lying in the brush. He thought nothing of the circumstance at the time, but on his return, as the man was still lying there, he and a herder in his employ went to the camp and found Farrants' body lying dead in bed with his skull crushed.

He went back to Jordan, and as suspicion at once fell on Comment, Tom Berry, a stock detective, organized a posse and started in pursuit, overtaking Comment at Sheep mountain, where he admitted the crime.

He stated that when Farrants returned to the camp they quarreled, and Farrants gave him a whipping. Afterward, when Farrants was stopping over making his bed, he struck him over the head with a neckyoke. As the blow proved fatal, he took Farrants' gun and started on foot to Glendive, 100 miles distant, to give himself up to the authorities. His face when arrested was bruised and blackened, showing that he had received a beating.

A large sum of money found on Farrants' body indicated that revenge must have been the motive for Comment's deed. However, the position of the body when discovered led those who viewed it to believe that Farrants was killed while asleep in bed. The coroner's jury fixed the crime on Comment.

Two Kinds of Sleep.

The Use of Artificial Means of Inducing Sleep Stuns the Intellect and Deranges the Entire System, but by another and Simpler Means You Easily Procure the Simple Slumber of Childhood.

To make a nervous, excited individual oblivious to his surroundings by the use of opium or morphine is not sleep, but a cruel blow, aimed at the brain and reasoning powers and its after effects leave many men and women physical wrecks.

Sleeplessness often accompanies Indigestion, Vertigo, Sour Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Waterbrash, Flatulence, Sick Headache, Shortness of Breath, Spasms Around the Heart, Loss of Appetite, Liver Troubles and Female Ailments. When such is the case, a Beecham's Pill, taken in a glass of hot water, half an hour before bedtime, will induce restful slumber and have a soothing effect on the stomach and bowels.

Beecham's Pills are not a sedative nor a narcotic. They do not put people to sleep. They merely remove the poison from the system, and let nature do the rest. As a laxative they are without an equal.

LIBRARIANS END ANNUAL MEETING.

St. Louis, Oct. 2.—The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the American Library association, which has been in session during the past week on the World's fair grounds closed today. Short addresses were made by the several foreign librarians in attendance, the theme being favorable criticism of library practice and legislation in America. Papers were read by W. D. Johnston, of Washington, D. C., and Clement W. Andrews, of Chicago. The newly-elected officers were installed and business incidental to final adjournment was transacted.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but 25 cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

CANAL COMPANY HAS MONEY

Minnesota Canal and Power Company Claims Ample Funds.

Attempts were made by W. C. Yawkey and the other defendants in the condemnation proceedings started by the Minnesota Canal and Power company to make the latter company disclose the source of its finances. Under ruling of the court, however, the canal and power company had to disclose nothing further than that it has a written agreement with an outside concern to furnish the capital necessary to put the project through.

Counsel for Mr. Yawkey and others claimed the right to know whether the canal and power company will be able to carry out its proposed undertaking, also that the court should be fully informed before a condemnation order is issued which shall tie up indefinitely a large amount of land.

O. H. Simonds, for the company, asserted on the witness stand that the company has all the money that it will need in carrying out the enterprise. He said that it had already expended from $40,000 to $50,000 and has no obligations outstanding against it.

REPUBLICANS AT LAKE PARK

Join Democrats In Forming a Strong Johnson-Winston Club.

Frazee, Minn., Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—A Johnson and Winston club has been organized at Lake Park, in Becker county. For several weeks rumors have been heard of the dissatisfaction of Republicans with the nomination of Dunn, and at last Lake Park has come out with the first Johson-Winston club. The club was formed at a meeting in the Lake Park hotel this week, when forty voters assembled and passed resolutions, which have been signed by about seventy-two voters at or near Lake Park. The signers say they sign irrespective of party, and a goodly number of them are Republicans, according to the Lake Park Journal, a strong Republican paper, which publishes the resolutions and the names of the signers.

Following is part of the resolution:

"Resolved, that we consider R. C. Dunn and Ray W. Jones, the Republican nominees for governor and lieutenant governor respectively, entirely unfit for the high offices to which they have been nominated. We hold that neither of their public records, nor their private life entitle them to the support of honest and intelligent voters. We also unhesitatingly condemn the unfair and unscrupulous methods used by R. C. Dunn in securing the nomination."

The signers are chiefly Republicans and men of influence.

CONDITION IS CRITICAL

Two More May Die as Result of St. Louis Shooting.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Physicians at the city hospital stated today that the condition of Detective James McClusky and William Morris, alias Blair, one of the suspected train robbers, is very critical.

McClusky was shot in the abdomen and Morris was wounded four times, two being in vital organs, during thea fight between five detectives and three men suspected of being train robbers, in which Detectives Shea and Dwyer were killed and Alfred Rose, one of the suspects, received wounds from which he died instantly.

It developed today that the battle was the culmination of a chase that has lasted four months, the detectives having information that led them to believe that the suspects were implicated in the robbery of an Illinois Central train at Centralia, Ill., in addition to other crimes committed previous to and since the hold-up.

Harry Vaughan, the only suspect who escaped the hail of bullets, and who was severely injured by the detectives when he attempted to aid his companions after having been placed under arrest, is held at the Four Courts. Five patrolmen have been detailed to guard Morris at the hospital.

ROWED 400 MILES TO SCHOOL.

Walter Stewart, 17 years old, came 400 miles down the Arkansas river in a rowboat to attend school at Indian university, three miles north of this place. He had a rough experience, says the Muskogee correspondent of the Kansas City School. He had practically no money, and when he was almost here his boat capsized in deep water and he lost all the extra clothing he had, even his shoes.

According to his own narrative, he swam out of the river and followed the boat as it drifted down. It finally landed on a sandbar and he swam out again and got in. What clothes he had on were badly torn as he ran through the thick undergrowth along the river bank. When he arrived at Indian university he was out of money and had precious few clothes. He came from Wichita and announced his intention of working his way through school.

WELL KNOWN SCENIC ARTIST

Joseph Harrington of New York City Saved From Pneumonia By Father John's Medicine.

Some time ago, I was attacked with a severe cold and cough which nothing seemed to relieve. It grew steadily worse until I was told that my trouble was likely to develop into pneumonia. A neighbor who had used Father John's Medicine with very satisfactory results brought me part of a bottle and advised me to try it. I did so and within a short time I could see that it was helping me. I continued to use it until I was entirely cured. My wife has used the medicine for throat and lung troubles with excellent results and so have many of our friends to whom we have recommended it. (Signed) Joe Harrington, 202 West 23d St., New York. A WARNING FOR PARENTS.

During the past week three young Duluth girls have been apprehended by the authorities, two for street walking and the third for violating the conditions of her parole from the state industrial school.

The two arrested for street walking forfeited their bail, which is a fair indication of their guilt, while the other was taken back to the state school to serve out her previous sentence.

All three of these girls came of good families, with law-abiding and industrious parents, whose heartaches and grief over the waywardness of their daughters can be well imagined.

A little investigation reveals the fact that all these young women began their downward careers through keeping late hours, attending public dances without proper attendance and visiting restaurants where liquors are served. Later they commenced the visiting of saloon winerooms and the other details followed as a matter of course.

It is a matter of moment, also, that at least one of these girls was assisted on her criminal career by police officers, who were charged with the duty of protecting just such young women against the consequences of their own folly and who are also charged with the suppression of winerooms and assignation houses.

But the principal blame, after all, lies with parents who permit their daughters of tender years to wander at will on the streets at night and to attend public dances without proper escort and protection. Of course, it is not possible for parents to effectually guard their daughters against every form of evil that assails them, but in the great majority of cases it is possible for them to guard against these common evils and prevent their children from being led astray.

It is the duty of every parent to know that his daughters are either at home at night or properly guarded wherever they may be. Every big city, Duluth included, has many snares laid to trap the thoughtless and the unwary and it should be the efforts of both parents and police to guide their steps away from these snares and pitfalls.

WHAT IS THE ISSUE?

It appears difficult for prominent politicians and newspapers to define the dominant issue now before the American people.

The New York World says it is the Cortelyou scandal.

The Brooklyn Eagle says it is the union labor issue.

The New York Sun ditto.

Judge Parker says it is imperialism and official extravagance.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says it is Roosevelt and the race question.

William J. Bryan says it is found in the candidates for president. Parker objectionable but preferable to Roosevelt.

New York Life says it is the tariff.

Thomas E. Watson says it is the initiative and referendum.

Candidate Swallow says it is the liquor traffic.

Eugene V. Debs says it is the industrial system.

Roosevelt says it is Democratic incapacity.

A horde of public men and newspapers, big and little, disagree, one saying one thing and one another, but—

The people say it is the Trusts!

Shall the trusts or the people control the government? That is the vital issue. And the people will vote into office the man they think is most likely to—

Smash the criminal trusts!

Rooseveltism, the "big stick," imperialism, extravagance, militarism, the industrial question, the labor question, the liquor question, direct voting, the tariff, reciprocity—all these are important issues but, great and important as they are, all combined pale into insignificance when compared with that one great issue:

The rule of criminal trusts.

MORE MALE TEACHERS NEEDED.

The public school management in Superior has adopted the plan of employing men as principals, and has found it to work well. The Duluth school board has made a start in that direction and it is to be hoped that it will continue progress along that line.

Those women who excell as teachers should be rewarded and encouraged by better salaries and better positions as their merits deserve, but there is reason to believe that no matter how competent a woman may be as a teacher, better results can be attained by employing male principals as a rule, for the reason that they are better fitted to maintain order and discipline. It is not because women are better principals than men that the latter have been almost universally displaced, but because they consent to work for less wages. And it is for this very reason that the men should not have been supplanted.

In the opinion of The Herald, it is of even greater importance than the employment of male principals that there should be at least an equal division of teachers among the two sexes. Men have been driven out of these occupations, too, because of the fact that women are willing to accept less pay. And there is no doubt that the schools have been injured and their efficiency has deteriorated as a result.

There should be a male teacher at the very first primary grade. There correct or incorrect habits are formed. There authority and order and discipline are established or overridden. There a right start is made or the pupil practically spoiled for all time.

The demand for male principals is not more insistent nor more reasonable than this demand for male authority at the beginning of school life. There is good ground for belief that the present woeful incapacity of the average grade pupil is less the result of a lack of teaching talent than a failure to establish discipline, order and authority at the outset.

WAKING UP.

It is evident that the managers of the Democratic campaign in the East are beginning to realize the importance of the trust issue. It is now apparent to unprejudiced minds that the Republicans are again monopolizing the campaign support of the predatory trusts and Wall street money sharps, and if the Parker managers had any hopes of assistance from that source they have been blasted.

It is especially notable that the Democratic campaigners in New York are now dealing almost entirely with the trust question, as these remarks by Edward M. Shepard in a recent address at a Broadway meeting would indicate:

"What good does it do me that the country is prosperous if I do not share in it? The money paid in salaries and wages has not increased in proportion to the wealth of this country, as represented by our great capitalists and millionaires, although this wealth has been the result of the work and brains of the whole people of the country. The distribution has not been fair. The cause of these conditions is the iniquitous robbery of the so-called trusts. Thus the real issue in this campaign is whether or not the partnership between these great monopolistic corporations and the government as now supported by President Roosevelt and Chairman Cortelyou, with his great store of corporation secrets, shall continue."

Mr. Shepard's remarks are well put. But there is one thing lacking. He does not inform the people what specific action the Democratic administration would take to draw the fangs of criminal trusts. And the people want to know. They want a definite promise from the Democratic nominee for president that he will enforce the criminal clause of the Sherman law. They want him to promise that he will effectively enforce the laws against railroad extortion through secret contracts with criminal combines.

The Republican party was in partnership with illegal trusts before Mr. Cortelyou became its collector of campaign funds. He is but continuing the same system adopted by that party in the campaigns of 1896 and 1900. Thoughtful people are now convinced that while President Roosevelt may be personally opposed to the rule of trusts, he has been compelled, through his ambition to be elected president, to relinquish his personal opinions and substitute therefor the trust program of the party leaders, who are nearly all closely associated with these criminal conspiracies.

But the independent voters of the nation, while they know these things, want to hear from Judge Parker's own lips just what he proposes to do to end the rule of this trust monster in national affairs. And the sooner he speaks the better it will be for his chances of election.

LET US HAVE PEACE.

The one fact that stands out most prominent in the recent nine days' battle at Shakhe between the Russian and Japanese forces is the awful loss of human life. Thousands of men drained off their heart's blood and more thousands maimed and crippled for life.

And to what purpose?

Simply that the ambitions of those who lust for power and those who have greed for gain may be satisfied at whatever cost.

Pile all the riches of the entire world in one heap and they are not actually worth one human life. And yet it is the greed for wealth and power that is responsible for nearly every battle that ever was fought.

In "A Primer of the Peace Movement," prepared for the American Peace society by Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, is found the following list of the causes of war:

"A military class ambitious for activity and promotion."

"Contempt for peoples who have not white skins."

"Lack of power to put one's self in another's place, and of will to do justice."

"Ignorant and perverse interpretation of the Bible, judging God's will by ancient Israel's barbaric deeds instead of by Christ's spirit."

"Greed for high interest, which war loans provide. Rich investors have much political power, and are made richer by war, while the masses are impoverished. Most wars would end quickly were war loans impossible."

True—every sentence and every word. There is only one legitimate excuse for a nation going to war and that it self defense. There is only one reason why a man should give up his life—that others may live.

In the present war in the far East, while Japan opened hostilities she is really on the defensive—defending her homes and people from the encroachments and spoilation of an arrogant and vicious foreign power. That is the reason she has the sympathy of every man who understands the traits of the two nations and whose heart beats in sympathy with righteousness and justice.

Every one of the reasons given by Mrs. Mead has impelled the Russian empire on her career of aggression, greed and conquest, and but for the greed and ambition of the few the war of the United States with Spain might have been avoided and the people of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines liberated from their thralldom at one-tenth of the cost of the war and its attendant extravagance.

But over and above all this, the most potent argument against warfare is the fact that after all the shedding of human blood and after all the waste of treasure the just cause does not always triumph but victory usually is won by the nation possessing the greater number of men and the greater resources. What a ghastly farce it is for allegedly civilized and Christianized nations to uphold the principle that might makes right and at the same time compel its own citizens to submit to the rule of law and the arbitrament of courts.

War is anarchy. War is barbarism. War is hell. War is a culmination of national idiocy. Let us have peace.

GOOD AUTHORITY.

Judge Parker has been criticised by his political opponents for his estimate of the cost of the Philippines to this country. A leader in this criticism is Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, who, in a recent speech at Worcester, in his own state, said:

"It is well enough for a careless stump orator or a careless writer of a passing paragraph in a newspaper to talk glibly of a few hundred millions, but that is not the way a responsible public man should discuss accounts of that kind."

But Judge Parker has good authority outside of his own party for his estimate. Senator Lodge would hardly dare to designate his late colleague, Senator Hoar, as a careless stump speaker or anything but a responsible public man, yet this is what Senator Hoar said while speaking in the United States senate on May 22, 1902:

"The conflict in the Philippines has cost you $600,000,000, thousands of American soldiers—the flower of your youth; the health and sanity of thousands more, and hundreds of thousands of Filipinos slain."

Whatever his critics may say, the American people know that Judge Parker was right and that Senator Hoar was right. It is not the money actually spent in warfare that constitutes the sole cost of imperialism, and the lives lost in actual war are not the only lives sacrificed in the greed for conquest.

And the cost in lives and money as a result of American conquest in the Philippines is not yet complete. It will go on in increasing ratio for many years if President Roosevelt is returned to power.

THE FIELD SURVEY

It does one good to read over the bequests in the will of James Callahan, a multi-millionaire of Des Moines, Ia., who recently died. Among the many other creditable bequests he left $10,000 to be used in promoting international peace. His charitableness did not begin with his death, either, for he gave large sums while he was yet alive. Although he died rich he did not die disgraced. It is hoped that many men of wealth will pattern after him.

Real estate in Duluth's business district continues active. The town has not done growing yet. In fact it has only commenced.

Says the Springfield Republican: "Judge Parker's little speech of two or three days ago has done more to put life and spirit into his campaign than all his previous utterances, including the gold telegram, put together. There should be a few more short and straight-from-the-shoulder addresses coming from him." And one of them should deal with the leading issue of this campaign—the predatory trusts.

The Dunn organs are making labored efforts to show that Dunn could have been nominated without the vote of the Hennepin county delegation. Then why was the regularly elected delegation thrown out of the convention? They might answer this question, if they can.

Andrew Carnegie expressed a truth when he said that it was absurd for the United States and Canada to be disunited. But people in both countries are worrying more over the absurdity of a tariff wall between the two countries than they are over an imaginary boundary line. First establish free trade and a political union will follow as a matter of course. But we cannot even have reduced tariffs as long as the trusts and combines control the government of the United States.

Things have now reached such a pass in the Dunn camp that whenever a prominent citizen has the courage to say that he is for Dunn, his picture is immediately published by the Dunn organ.

If Duluth's representatives who are to go to Chicago to confer with the underwriters' governing board, could carry with them assurance that in case insurance rates are not reduced to a reasonable basis the state of Minnesota would open an insurance department there is little doubt that their mission would be successful. It would seem that they ought to be backed, at least, by such a demand on the part of the Commercial club and other public bodies.

TALKS WITH THE STATE PRESS

The Mankato Free Press, always progressive, has added to its equipment a new Duplex press, such as was used by The Herald before it installed its present machine. The Free Press celebrates the event by issuing a special industrial number of large proportions. It is a very creditable production in every particular and reflects credit upon the enterprising publisher.

* * *

Says the Virginia Enterprise: "The Duluth Herald has the right idea of the partridge law, believing the open season should begin on September 1st. The birds are certainly ripe at that time, and most of them are killed before the law, as it now stands, gives hunters the right to seek them."

J. E. Therrien, of the Floodwood News, is going to open a real estate office in an effort to make his newspaper pay.

Says the Mankato Free Press:

> During all this flurry over the discovery that Chinese have been debauching young girls in Minneapolis, but little is said by the newspapers of the number of white men in this Christian country who have been doing likewise, and many of these moral lepers are to be found in what is called "good society."

But that is different, you know. It is so much better for a young girl to be debauched by a white man than it is by a man of some other race. Her chances to rise to her former high estate are so much better, and she generally does rise—not.

Hotel Gossip.

When he landed in Duluth Thursday evening Myron R. Stowell, of Pittsburg, walked from the Union depot up Fifth avenue to the corner of Superior street, and looking across the street at the entrance to the Lyceum saw signs indicating the performance inside of "The Irish Pawnbrokers," with Mazie Trumbull and others in the cast.

"Wonder what's become of Ollie Mack, and if he is still with that company?" he queried. "It used to be Murray and Mack, I think, at any rate Ollie Mack is no more Ollie Mack than I am, and never was. He's Ollie Trumbull by rights and a brother of Mazie and we used to attend the old Third ward school in Indianapolis together.

"The Trumbulls lived only half a block from the school and were the constant object of envy of us kids who lived at least three or four blocks away, which some of us considered a terrible task. Ollie was always anxious to go on the stage and has apparently made good.

"It was quite a few years ago that Trumbull—or Mack as his stage name is—was one of our bunch of playfellows and we used to have good times together. One of the principal sources of our fun was the perusal of novels, frequently called the yellow backs. I never understood this term thoroughly for the reason that most of the backs weren't yellow, but white with black print. But the term probably was correct originally and then used to cover all sorts of exciting border tales issued in the five-cent editions.

"We had a sort of circulating library, with every fellow contributing to the same such novels as he might have had the good fortune to be able to buy—or lay. We had an old deserted house on the lot back of the residence of one of the lads, and one corner of the roof was down close to the fence. This corner had originally held a chimney, which had been finally worn away by assaults of storm and malice of the boys, and where this chimney was—or had been—was our enerance to the library, which was in the garret of the house.

"It was necessary to keep our plans regarding the literary culture rather in the dark, and we did not care to have the whole town know just what we were after. It was especially desirous that our families be kept from knowledge of our libbary in order that the yellow-backs be permitted to circulate freely and that we be protected from becoming yellow backs ourselves in a literal sense. "Many's the hour we spent lying hidden in that garret with our faces to the light streaming through the chimney hole, reading those productions of a whole lot of very imaginative men. But if my recollection serves me right we finally got tired of the occupation. There wasn't much excitement about it as we were too well protected. We turned the whole library over to Ollie Trumbull for disposal and what he did with it I do not know. If he managed to read all those stories he did exceedingly well."

There is a druggist in a fashionable part of town who keeps a dog of the feminine persuasion which is not particularly friendly to either strangers or rats. She keeps the store freed from rats and cats, but of course does not keep it free of custom, for this would never do. But she repulses friendly advances with threatening growls. But that has nothing to do with the story, being merely by way of preface—as the great authors say.

In the city of Duluth the licenses for dogs of the feminine gender is somewhat in excess of that assessed for canines of the bolder sex. It was decided by the owner that a good way to rid himself of part of the license tax expense would be to indicate that the dog was of a different sex from the real one, so when applying for a license he was asked the name of the brute, in order that the clerk might determine its sex. It is considered a very pertinent way of getting at this information to ask the dog's name, as most people are prone to be primed and ready for the sex question—if they wish to equivocate in regard to the same.

But to ask the name of the dog usually throws their plans all askew and reveals the actual status of the canine as regards the license classification. However, the owner of this dog was primed against this contingency and called the dog by a masculine cognomen. The result was that the first few times he took out the license he got off for the price of the gentleman dog. Later somebody tipped it off to the clerk that said dog was no gentleman and he asked the sex. The druggist was truthful—as he had always been about the dog—and admitted the dog's true sex. So he now pays according to the city's intention. But the dog is still called Sam.

CONFESSION OF WEAKNESS.

Minneapolis Journal (Rep.): Efforts to make Senator Nelson an issue in the present campaign point unmistakably to one fact—the weakness of the head of the Republican state ticket. The Journal showed yesterday the absurdity of the argument that Senator Nelson's election is endangered by the result this year. That argument is nothing more nor less than a dodge, and not even a good dodge. The danger of a Democratic senator from Minnesota as the result of the defeat of Dunn is so remote as to be ridiculous.

When Mr. Dunn's managers employ this line of reasoning, they confess that they are not able to meet the issue of the state campaign squarely. To do so means inevitable defeat, for the voters of the state are thoroughly aroused on the subject, and on the merits of the proposition have already decided against Dunn. The campaign in his behalf has been one of defense and apology from the first. It is bad enough that the Republican party should apologize for its candidate. It would be worse for the people of Minnesota to be compelled to apologize for their governor. This fact has sunk deep into the public mind.

So we see the sorry spectacle of the managers of Mr. Dunn's campaign avoiding the verdict as between himself and Mr. Johnson, and compelled to manufacture a scare in order to pull their candidate through.

The orators who are apologizing for Mr. Dunn are now acting under instructions, and are sounding a concerted alarm to Republicans everywhere. "If you permit a Democratic governor to be elected," they say, "the gobbleuns'll get Knute Nelson and Moses E. Clapp. You may not want Dunn, but you must vote for him to save the senators."

The senators are safe already. Senator Clapp has pledged to him a majority of the Republicans in the next legislature, and the party cannot have less than a two to one majority next winter, with the worst possible luck.

As to Senator Nelson, his re-election to the senate two years from next January is as sure as anything can be in politics. The legislature which re-elects him will be a new legislature, elected in 1906, and it will be elected on a Nelson issue. The senior senator is the strongest man in politics within the borders of Minnesota, and his name attached to candidates for the legislature will assure the normal Republican majority.

It is idle to fight the 1906 campaign before the 1904 campaign is ended, and voters who are caught by the senatorial scare are easily frightened. Senator Nelson will very properly be an issue two years hence. He is not an issue now.

As already remarked, this violent attempt to borrow trouble from a future campaign to add to the assets of the present one, is in itself an eloquent confession of the weakness of Mr. Dunn's case before the people.

An Unconventional Pope.

London Chronicle: The unconventional habits of the pope are still troubling the traditions of the Vatican. Visitors found that His Holiness has a great objection to the practice of kneeling in his presence. He takes care to settle them promptly and comfortably in chairs, and then, to their amazement, he remains standing. There may have been old times when Pontiffs showed undue favor to their kindred. There is no such thing now. Discussing with his chamberlain the details of some ceremony, Pius X. was reminded that his two sisters, who live in Rome, would like to be present. What seats should be assigned to them? "Seats!" said the Pope, with a smile. "Oh, dear, no! Send tickets of admission, and let them take their chance."

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

A Word to the Unsuccessful.

Until one stops to reflect upon it he does not realize how many persons fail in their professional or business career. It has been borne home upon me the last few months as I have tarried in a number of places East and West. This or that man has been pointed out with the coment: "He used to be a successful merchant in New York or Chicago, but the tide turned against him and he retired to that plain little dwelling where you see him living now, and there he gets along the best he can." Or the remarks has been: "See that elderly man yonder; he used to be quite a figure in political circles, but he lost his grip and his influence."

Our cities and towns are full of men who were once active and measurably successful in business or in law, or the ministry, or medicine, or teaching, but who have taken their places at the rear of the procession and resigned themselves with more or less grace to their fate. Some of these people failed because of the hostility or treachery of others; some because of the adverse working of circumstances over which they had no control; some of them trusted too much to roseate hopes and expectations; some of them were made light-headed by their successes and indulged in all manner of display and extravagance.

Even sadder, aparently, is the lot of those who have been failures all their lives long, who have not in the midst of their misfortunes the comforting memory of one brief but glorious period of real success. The world is full of such persons, too. Bill Nye's facetious classification of the people of the South—"those who have seen better days and those who have not" is hardly exhaustive, but when you add to the formerly successful but now embarrassed contingent in any community those who seem never to have amounted to much, you get a pretty large percentage of the population. And do not trustworthy statistics declare that about 90 per cent of the men who undertake an independent business career come eventually to disaster?

What are we to say, then, in view of the human failures op all sides of us? Simply that a man may make a failure of his business or his profession, and at the same time succeed splendidly with his life. Even if the fortune which he has amassed vanishes in a night, even if others may outstrip him at the bar or in the pulpit, he may preserve his own honor, may keep his own spirit serene and sweet, may fulfill as nobly as anyone else his obligations as father, as brother, as husband, as son, as citizen. Not every man who succeeds in business succeeds in these other relationships; on the contrary, successful men often grow wharsh and imperious. The finer side of their lives is sacrificed. But many a man who fails gets out of his failures something that forever ennobles him.

And this leads up to our second point that outward success is not by any means the test to apply to a man's life. Our age is given to exploiting the man who "gets there." Magazines are started to register notable business successes, and we are glutted with articles telling "How President Bellerope of the Interplanetary Railway System Rose to His Present Position," or "What Multimillionaire Coinhandler of the Boulevard National Bank Eats, Drinks and is Merry With." There are many wholesome lessons for penniless but ambitious youth in such careers, but the worship of success is being overdone today. Prudence, thrift, industry, are admirable things in their way, and no one ought to allow himself to fail because he has not developed these qualities to their utmost capacity, but if even then failure comes, believe that there is a place in the universe for the man who has honorably failed, that he may still in the midst of his reverses and privations maintain his dignity, composure and usefulness. A great many human failures are doing this today, and several of them have told me recently that in their comparative retirement and obscurity they are happier than when they were in the heat and strain of active and successful careers.

About Sovereign Ladies.

Londo Truth: The French professor of Prince Henry of Prussia one day read to him the following exercise for translation: "Sovereign ladies have not merely an air of majesty, but a gracious deportment peculiar to them." The Prince laid down his pen and raised his hand. "Have you any remark to make?" asked the teacher. "Only this: Do you or do you not wish to teach me to be truthful?" "Certainly. I wish to teach you truthfulness." "Let me tell you, then, that I have known sovereign ladies all my life, and never noticed in them any majesty or peculiar grace of deportment. Quite the contrary. Ought we not, therefore, to omit the phrase you have just read?"

Cured
To Stay
Cured

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

What the afflicted man wants is not a temporary relief, but a permanent cure.

The beneficial effects of my treatment are as lasting as life—I cure to stay cured.

When once a patient is rescued by me from the ravages of disease or weakness peculiar to his sex, he is never again bothered with his former trouble.

I do not treat all diseases, but I treat men —MEN ONLY— and cure them to stay cured.

Varicocele.

Under my treatment, which includes no cutting or pain, this insidious disease rapidly disappears.

Pain disappears almost instantly.

The pools of stagnant blood are driven from the dilated veins and all soreness and swelling quickly subside.

Every indication of Varicocele soon vanishes and in its stead come the pride, the power and the pleasure of perfect health and restored manhood.

Stricture.

My cure for Stricture is safe, painless and bloodless, and, therefore, free from surgery in any form.

It is the only cure that should ever be used, and the only one recommended by the legions of men who have been restored by it.

It dissolves the Stricture completely and removes every obstruction from the urinary passage, allays all inflammation, stops every discharge, reduces the prostate gland when enlarged, cleanses and heals the bladder and kidneys when irritated or congested, invigorates the organs and restores health and soundness to every part of the body affected by the disease.

Contagious Blood Poison.

My special form of treatment for specific or contagious blood poison is practically the result of my life work, and is endorsed by the best physicians of this and foreign countries.

It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicine of any kind.

It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity

Soon every sign and symptom disappear completely and forever.

The blood, the tissue, the flesh, the bones and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life.

Nervo-Sexual Debility.

My cure for weak men does not stimulate temporarily, but restores permanently.

It soon drives away all those distressing symptoms which so constantly remind one of his former folly.

It stops every drain of vigor and builds up the muscular and nervous system, purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses and heals the bladder and kidneys and invigorates the liver, revives the spirits, brightens the intellect, and, above and beyond all, restores the wasted power of manhood.

Reflex Diseases.

Many ailments are reflex, originating from other diseases.

For instance, manly weakness sometimes comes from Varicocele or Stricture, innumerable blood and bone diseases often result from blood poison taint in the system or physical or mental decline frequently follow loss of manhood.

In treating diseases of any kind I always cure the effect as well as the cause.

We charge nothing for private counsel, and give to each patient a LEGAL CONTRACT to hold for our promises. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes of men?

If you cannot call at our offices, write your symptoms fully. Our home treatment by correspondence is always successful.

SERVICES FOR SUNDAY IN DULUTH CHURCHES

Rev. J. H. Stenberg to Be Installed as Pastor of the First Norwegian Lutheran Church—Dr. R. N. Adams of St. Paul to Preach at First Presbyterian Church.

Rev. J. H. Stenberg, who will be installed by Rev. I. Simm, of Superior, as the new pastor of the First Norgewian Lutheran church of Duluth at tomorrow morning's service, comes here from Leland, Ill., where he served a Norwegian English church for a period of ten years.

This organization had three churches, one of which was built during his pastorate and is valued at about ten thousand dollars. Another of the churches became too small and had to be enlarged and several hundred dollars were expended on the parsonage. During the last years about $900 was raised for the benefit of Pleasant View Lutheran college, at Ottawa, Ill., of which Rev. Stenberg was a trustee and secretary of the association and board of trustees.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Washington Post: A religious sect in Florida claims that the inside of the earth is inhabited. This may serve to spoil the pessimist's claim that this is a hollow world.

Baltimore American: The archbishop of Canterbury is a remarkable touristst. He frankly acknowledges that he has come to this country to learn and not to teach. For an Englishman he is strangely indifferent about establishing a precedent.

Springfield Republican: Bishop Hartzell has come home to tell us that he wants the United States to have a part of Africa. Doesn't he know that our share of Africa is with us already? And isn't it all we can assimilate comfortably in the next 200 years?

Boston Globe: President Harper of Chicago university says that in the last fifty years not a single religious problem has been solved by the theological seminaries of the United States. Why doesn't that apply to the theological schools of all times and all climes? The great religious leaders have usually found their "books in the running brooks, sermons in stones, and good in everything."

Chicago Post: The dream of church unity probably never can be realized. No Episcopalian, no Methodist, no Presbyterian, and no follower of any other Protestant faith cares for church unity if its securing means the acknowledging of the supremacy of Rome. This would be to set back the clock of the world. It is possible, however, to bring about a better understanding between the churches, and to this end Bishop Doane spoke.

Washington Post: We all know that evangelists are honest, well-meaning people, and we respect them accordingly. They seriously believe that they serve the Savior by invading the ancient civilizations of Asia and endeavoring to persuade them of their error. The notorious fact that they have never yet "converted" a single Buddhist or Mohammedan or Confucian of fair intelligence and respectable position means much to the philosophical observer, but does not disturb the unconquerable enthusiasm of the missionaries. The fact remains, nevertheless, that neither in India, nor Asia, nor China, nor Japan has our theology made the slightest genuine progress since th first launching of the propaganda.

GUILMETTE ARRESTED

Suspected Murderer of Mongeaon In Hands of Wonsocket Police.

Woonsocket, R. I., Oct. 22.—Joseph Guilmette, wanted by the police of Crookston, Minn., in connection with the death of Joseph Mongeaon, at Mentor, Minn., reached his home in this city yesterday and later surrendered to the local police. He was held pending instructions from Minnesota officers.

Guilmette went from the train to his home and after learning from his wife that he was wanted by the police, proceeded to headquarters and gave himself up.

He denied any knowledge of the crime and that he did not know of his friend's death until told of it by his wife. In response to questions by Chief Dodge as to his movements last Monday, the day of the murder, he said:

"Mongeaon and I worked together in the wheat fields of North Dakota and were the best of friends. On Saturday night last we went together to East Grand Forks to visit Fontaine.

"We left Fontaine Sunday and spent that night at a farm house. Monday morning we started out in search of work. We were unsuccessful and I decided to come home. I sold my gun to Mongeaon and after saying farewell, went across the country to Red Lake Falls, where I boarded a train for the East."

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 22.—Sheriff Sullivan left for Woonsocket, R. I., last night, on receipt of a telegram from Chief of Police Dodge, announcing the arrest of Joseph Guilmette, wanted here on suspicion of being the murderer of Joseph Mongeaon. Guilmette will be brought here for trial.

CAPTAIN OF MILITIA REMOVED FROM OFFICE.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 22.—By the verdict of the Statesboro court martial, which was signed by Governor Joseph M. Terrell, Capt. Robert M. Hitch, who was in command of the troops when the negroes Reed and Cato were burned at the stake was dismissed from the service of the Georgia state troops.

Lieut. L. A. Mell, who was in command at the camp while Capt. Hitch was at the court house, was suspended for a year and will be publicly reprimanded.

Lieut. Grines, who was in command of the reserves, will be publicly reprimanded.

Lieut. Cone and Lieut. Morrison were acquitted of the charges lodged against them.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

A stranger, giving his name as Thomas Kennedy, was arrested at Harrisonville, Monroe county, Ill., late Friday on suspicion of being the assailant and murderer of Nora Woodcock, the 12-year-old girl, whose burned and bruised body was found yesterday near the home of her brother.

One trainman was killed and two others severely injured at White House, N. J., Friday night, when a coal train going at a high speed crashed into a passenger train standing at the station. Failure of the air brakes on the colliding train is given as the cause of the accident. No passengers were hurt.

A telegram from Hon. J. W. Britt, mayor of Gordon, Ala., to Mayor Chappel, of Columbus, says that the entire town has been destroyed by fire and asks for assistance. Gordon is a small town of about 400 people on the Chattahoochee river, near Alaga, Ala.

Mrs. Magee and her 12-year-old daughter were killed at Athens, La., Friday, by some unknown, who cut their throats. A posse is making a search of the country and have arrested Andrew Craig, a half-breed, who they suspect of the murder.

Fierce fires are sweeping the mountains and canyons in the vicinity of Escondido, Cal., and are approaching the town from two sides. Great volumes of smoke rising from the hills south of Bernardo and the direction of Valley Center indicate a terrific conflagration and causes much apprehension. It seems certain that Alizo canyon has been swept by the flames.

Alice Klingenberg, aged 14 years, who caused the death of her six-weeks-old niece, whom she was attending at the home of her sister, in Mont Clair, N. J., was held without bail to await the action of the grand jury. She has acknowledged that she gave the baby a spoonful of cresolene, but maintains that it was in mistake for paregoric.

Her Daughter a Wonder.

There is a woman living on Park Point, in this city, whose vocabulary is something wonderful and sometimes startling.

She recently engaged a man to set up the coal stove in her parlor, and was extremely anxious that the board underneath should be perfectly straight, and endeavored to impress upon the man's mind the fact that the fastidiousness of her daughter would not permit it being any other way. She explained:

"The slightest deviation from the exact straightness would be immediately perceptible to the perspicacity of my daughter's optics."

The man took a good look at the woman to assure himself that there was no immediate danger, and went on with his work.

KILLED BY BLAST

In Shaft of Spruce Mine at Eveleth.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 22.—Andrew Olson was killed by a blast at the bottom level of No. 2 shaft of the Spruce mine yesterday. He and his partner, an Austrain, were drilling for a blast. It is supposed that Olson returned to see why all of the dynamite had not exploded. His mangled body was found at the entrance to the small drift where he had been working. His partner was unhurt. Olson was 35 years of age and unmarried. He had been employed at the mine on contract work for the past two years.

Andrew Sullivan, bookkeeper at the Malta mine, fell headlong through a twenty foot ore chute Thursday afternoon. He was picked up in an unconscious condition but was not seriously injured and is now recovering.

CATON AT CHISHOLM.

Addresses Large Audience In Favor of Dunn.

Chisholm, Minn., Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Professor T. J. Caton addressed a large gathering of voters here last evening and without slandering any other party or candidate endeavored to convince his audience that R. C. Dunn should be our next governor.

We often refer to the doctors. Why?

Because we make medicines for them. We give them the formula for Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and they prescribe it for coughs, colds, bronchitis, consumption. We trust them; they trust us. Ask your own doctor about taking this medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

West Duluth

The old building at the corner of Twentieth avenue west and Third street, formerly occupied by the Swedish Bethany congregation, has been secured by members of the Immanuel Lutheran church in West Duluth, and their services will hereafter be conducted in the West End building, which will be dedicated by the Lutherans tomorrow morning, at 10:30 o'clock. The structure has been entirely remodeled and thoroughly renovated for church use.

There will be special services on the occasion of the dedication. They will be conducted by Professor E. Hove, president of the synod theological seminary at Hamlin, Minn., and his assistants will be Rev. Christian Anderson, of Minneapolis, who will lead the altar services; Rev. J. E. Ingebrighton, of Grand Forks, N. D.; Rev. H. M. Normann, of Superior, and Rev. E. Wulfsberg, Jr., pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran church. The services will be in the English language.

The pastor has been in charge of the church for a month past. A year ago he graduated from the Hamline university, and has also taken post graduate work in the University of Minnesota. He is a young man of great promise and a favorite with his congregation.

BRIDGES COMPLETED.

Grand Avenue Structures Are Strengthened.

Work of strengthening and rebuilding the Grand avenue bridges at Sixty-first and Sixty-sixth avenues west has just been completed by Sang & Preston, who secured the contract from the city to put the structures in question in such condition that they would safely bear the weight of the large double-truck street cars. The total cost of the work came to something over $5000.

With the completion of the contract there is now nothing to prevent the Traction company laying the promised extension of the street car track out Grand avenue to Seventy-first avenue west. The company said that as soon as the bridges were strengthened sufficiently the extension would be constructed. Now, however, the officials strongly object to having the work done this year, and it is considered very likely that it will be postponed.

Dar F. Reese, the speaker of the evening, has the reputation of being an able and eloquent talker on political subjects, and at a former appearance in this part of the city made a very favorable impression. She formerly resided in St. Paul, the present home of her parents. The young physician comes to the head of the lakes well recommended.

At the residence of A. Fitger last night the semi-centennial of the well known brewer's birth was celebrated by him and a number of his friends, who made merry in his home at First street and Seventh avenue east. Mr. Fitger was the recipient of a number of presents, including a hunting dog, a diamond, an antique book, some musical instruments and a piece of statuary. There was a fine musical program informally rendered by some of the talented friends who were fortunate enough to be present at the event.

A GOOD INVESTMENT...

Those who earn only a moderate salary can make no better investment than the purchase of a good Piano.

There is no article manufactured that will give more substantial returns and at the same time add pleasure and culture to the home than a Piano.

As an article you only buy once in a life time, it must have a strong singing quality of tone, nice, attractive case design, and by far a most important fact it must be built to stand years of use.

The Emerson Piano

fulfills all these conditions, and while it would grace the grandest home, the price at which it sells brings it within reach of persons of even moderate means. Over 80,000 purchasers are ready to sing its praises and proclaim its popularity to the most prudent buyer.

CUPID IS KING

Romance of a Newly Appointed Member of Police Force.

Becomes Patrolman and Benedict Within Twenty-Four Hours.

Yesterday he was Patrick Malone and an ordinary citizen in plain clothes, without a wife or family.

Today he is Patrolman Malone and a happy Benedict.

The change all took place within twenty-four hours, and one event followed the other so rapidly that the other police officers fairly gasped for breath.

Mr. Malone was on the list of eligibles for vacancies on the police department. When the resignations of Officers Bailey, Schulte and Kennell took effect he was one of the three new members of the force. It took him about thirteen seconds to decide what to do. He was assured of a salary sufficient to keep himself and wife in comfort, if not in luxury. The young lady was willing, and nothing stood in the way. Just as soon as he was off duty for the first time he made tracks for the court house.

Cupid has never had to complain of the tardiness of the sons of the Emerald Isle in the matter of love, but the little gentleman with the bow and quiver was about ready to admit that the drinks were on him when Duluth's new police officer got through with him.

The license was secured before noon today. Whether or not the ceremony has yet been performed is not known, but if his haste in securing the license is any standard from which to judge, the sun will not go down behind the horizon tonight before Officer Malone is tied up as firmly as the law can secure him.

Consequently, if a police officer is seen walking his beat tomorrow and swinging his club to the accompaniment of a merry whistle, that's Patrick Malone. The lucky young woman is Miss Ruth Craig.

Officer Malone, benedict, is a West Duluth man, and well known and popular in that part of the city.

The other two newly appointed officers are James L. Bradley, who was formerly employed as a street car conductor, and August J. Thede, of 206 Lake avenue south.

The mounted officers have not yet been selected. It is likely, however, that two of the old officers will be appointed to fill the vacancies left by Officers Kennell and Schulte, and that all three of the new men will walk beats.

IS CAUGHT UNDER TIMBER

David Lane, Foreman of Aerial Bridge Construction, Injured.

David Lane, the foreman on the erection work of the new aerial bridge, was caught under a heavy boom this morning, and suffered some minor internal injuries.

The boom was lying on the ground, with one end propped up by some blocks. Mr. Lane in attempting to move the boom knocked out the blocks from under the timber which fell on him and crushed him to the ground. His companions hastily removed the timber and calling an ambulance had the injured man conveyed to St. Mary's hospital.

Mr. Lane is the brother of Joseph Lane of the firm of Lane & Conant, the engineers in charge of the work of construction.

At the hospital this afternoon it was not expected that any serious results would ensue. No bones were broken by the accident. He was bruised about the back however, and complained of some internal pain.

Mr. Lane's home is in Minneapolis, where his family resides.

CAMPS ARE ACTIVE

J. P. Johnson Notices Much Logging In Northern Minnesota.

Operations on Large Scale By Swallow & Hopkins Company.

"Unless a person has made a trip up through the country toward the northern boundary which is so well supplied with a chain of lakes, he can form little idea of the immense lumber industry in that section of the state," said J. P. Johnson, clerk of district court, who returned yesterday from a several days' trip through the northern part of the state up to a point near Hunter's Island, where the Merritts have started a camp.

"The operations which we saw are carried on by Swallow & Hopkins, whose logs are being sawed at Winton, on the lower end of Fall lake. The logs are dumped into the upper end of the lake after being hauled by rail over the portage from Basswood lake. At the last named lake there is a hoisting works at the landing where the logs are taken out of the water and loaded on cars.

"The firm have a large number of camps scattered along in the timber contiguous to the various lakes, including Basswood, Carp and Birch lakes. The company has a number of small steamers that it has put in the various bodies of water to tow the logs and most of these are capable of towing a raft of at least a million feet. The rapids from Carp ake into Basswood lake have been straightened out by a sluiceway and, with a dam at the head of it, the company is able to sluice through a million feet at a time from one lake to another.

"The farther north you go the clearer the water seems to be. The water in Basswood lake seemed as clear as Lake Superior water.

"The continued wet weather has made things pretty wet up in that country, but after it freezes up there should be excellent hunting. Moose, deer and caribou were reported in numbers at several points that we visited."

The Genuine "Vassar" Coats and "Barnard" Suits for Girls, and made by Bamberger Bros., of 3 and 5 Waverly Place, New York, direct from the Makers, can be Found HERE ONLY!

Some One Said To Us the Other Day:

"What can you do—or what redress have you if another store in your city should advertise for sale goods that the makers sell to you only in that city, and which have a wide reputation, which they have purchased perhaps at retail from a store in some other city, merely to use as a 'bait' to the public—by showing them how much 'cheaper' they can sell than you?"

Nothing.

"But is there not honor among business houses? And would a firm who values its reputation, stoop to such an act?"

There are instances where all honor is lost sight of in the mad rush after business.

"But how can a house consistently pose before the public as being 'legitimate,' who would do business in such an underhanded manner?"

Well, you know that old saying "Consistency, thou art a jewel," don't you?

"Yes. But how could they hope to hold the public's confidence if such a thing were found out?"

Well, that's a matter we prefer not to discuss.

"But, tell me this: Do you suppose for one moment that the public wouldn't catch onto such business methods?"

Oh, yes, they do. And they have already.

"And what is the result?"

That remains to be seen.

The fact that we're selling these goods almost as fast as we can get them here, is proof enough that the public can't be fooled!

"Lots of spice in business, isn't there?"

Lots of it, indeed.

"Well, I must be going now—Good-day."

Good-day—call again!

Our proposition, made in last Thursday's issue of The Herald, still holds good and is as follows:

We have this day deposited with the City National Bank of Duluth, our certified check for one hundred dollars, which will be paid over to St. Luke's and St. Mary's Hospitals and the Children's Home, pro rata, if this other house can or will produce one invoice from Bamberger Brothers for "Vassar" Girls' Coats or Barnard Girls' Suits, or goods of any kind purchased from them.

We will pay all expenses of having any bill or bills—if they have them — reproduced in The Herald, so that the public may see for themselves—if this other house has bought as much as one dollar's worth of goods from the only house that makes "Vassar" Coats and "Barnard" Suits for Girls—Bamberger Bros., of 3 and 5 Waverly Place, New York. We stand ready to pay over the One Hundred Dollars now held in trust at the City National Bank, if they have the genuine "Vassar" Coats and "Barnard" Suits as they claim. It should be easy enough to produce bills or invoices of such, if only to satisfy the public that their claims are genuine.

FACTS cannot be disputed—let us have them! And here is one fact!

CALUMET AND SONORA.

Stockholders Have Received Further Encouragement.

The subjoined was copied in the Bisbee, Arizona, Daily Review, Oct. 13, from the Cananea Herald:

In the south drift at the Calumet and Sonora mining property, stringers and pockets of ore were encountered last week which give much promise. Assays made show the ore to carry not only good values in copper, but also fair values in silver and gold. The formation in the south drift is the most favorable that has been encountered. The ore came in at an angle of about 60 degrees and dips toward shaft No. 3, which is now down 120 feet. An average sample taken from the bottom shows the ore to have values in gold, silver and copper aggregating $18 to the ton.

There is also good ore in shaft No. 4, which is about 500 feet from shaft No. 3 and the formation is decidedly encouraging on all sides.

Should the Calumet and Sonora Mining company uncover a large body of ore, it would be of great importance to the district at large and means much of import to the several properties surrounding it.

Among those first in benefit would be the South Cananea property, which adjoins it.

It is understood that new pumps have been ordered for the Calumet and Sonora company and that a new hoist will be installed at the mine in the near future.

FIRE IN LAUNCH.

George A. Burns Has Narrow Escape—Burned Somewhat.

George A. Burns, of 418 Second avenue west, was severely burned early last evening as the result of a fire in his gasoline launch, which was in the Lake avenue slip boat house at the time. His face and hands suffered severe injury, and his hair and eyebrows were badly singed. Burns extinguished the blaze by jumping into the bay.

The young man, in company with a friend, John P. Burnett, was preparing for a hunting trip up the St. Louis river today, packing their clothing and hunting paraphernalia in the launch. This was after dark, about 7:30 o'clock. Burns carried a lighted lantern, which came in too close contact with a quantity of gasoline which had leaked into the bottom of the boat. The oil became ignited and in an instant the man was enveloped in flames. He dropped the lantern, leaped over the burning boat and plunged into the cold waters of the bay. He was able to walk home without assistance, but the services of a physician were necessary to assist in dressing the burns.

The fire in the boat house was extinguished by the fire department, which was soon on the scene. The launch was badly burned, although it is still in a floating condition. Its contents were also greatly injured. The estimated loss is $300.

ATTEMPTED BLACKMAIL

Young Man Arrested For Threatening Prominent Chicago Men.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Roger McDonald, 22 years old, is under arrest on the charge of attempting to blackmail H. N. Higginbotham and Milton Kirk, wealthy Chicago business men. McDonald is charged with having written a letter to Mr. Higginbotham demanding $5000 and a similar one to Kirk demanding $500. The letter to Mr. Higginbotham instructed that the money be deposited in a hole in an unfrequented portion of the city. Detectives went to the spot indicated, placed a decoy package in the hole and arrested McDonald when he appeared. Mr. Kirk said the letter received by him stated that the factory of the company he is interested in would be blown into the lake unless a package containing the money demanded was left where stated. Mr. Higginbotham said he had received a score or more of letters making various threats, but had ignored all of them until one was received saying that the writer intended to blow up his house and kill his family if that letter was ignored.

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Started Firm, Sold Up But Had Sharp Reaction.

Flax Trading Was Dull and the Market Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 22.—The wheat market had a reaction today, the December option in Duluth losing ⅝c, in Minneapolis 1⅜c, in Chicago ⅜c and in New York ⅝c higher, the last named market closing an hour earlier than others and at the strong moment of the day. The Eastern demand in the Duluth market, while not keen, was strong enough to permit the working of about 50,000 bus of wheat. The wheat wanted in the East is the No. 1 northern, and thus is not easy to get. The Liverpool market closed ½d higher and Paris ¼c higher.

Car receipts at Duluth were 203, against 186 last year, and at Minneapolis 480, against 525 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 683, against 711 last year. Chicago received 44 cars. Winnipeg received 350 cars, against 250 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were: 1,345,970 bus., last year 1,057,300 bus. Shipments 513,226 bus., last year 1,808,628 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 159,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅝d higher. In the Chicago market December corn closed ½c lower. December oats closed ½c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 253,340 bus., last year 560,800 bus. Shipments 234,353 bus., last year 658,431 bus. Clearances were nothing.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was fairly active. The December option opened ⅛c higher at $1.15⅜, advanced to $1.18⅝ the first five minutes, fell to $1.18¾ at 9:50 and then jumped to $1.19 at 10:30. It reacted from that point until the close, which was at $1.17⅛. This was ⅝c lower than yesterday. May was weaker, closing 1c lower.

Cash wheat continued on the same basis, 3c over December price for No. 1 northern and 2c under for No. 2.

Flax was dull. October advanced ¼c to $1.16¼, and fell to $1.15½ closing at that price, a loss of ½c. December also fell ½c. November ¾c and May ¼c.

Oats fell 3c.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Liberal Demand Contributed to Strong Wheat Prices.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—A strong cash market and a liberal demand from outside buyers contributed to a strong wheat market here today. The December option opened 1⅛@1¼c lower to a shade higher at $1.15¼ to $1.15⅝. May opened 1⅛@1⅜c lower to a shade higher at $1.14 to $1.14⅜. A demand from the outside, particularly Milwaukee, and a rush of the shorts to cover sent both options up. December went to $1.16⅝ and May touched $1.15⅞. One of the leading local traders checked the advance by selling on the rally. December sold off to $1.15⅝ and May to $1.14⅝.

As the session advanced selling became general, houses with Northwestern connections being prominent on that side of the market. A decline at Minneapolis was followed by similar action here. December selling off to $1.15. May declined until the close, final figures being at the lowest point for May, the net loss being ⅝@1⅛c. December closed with loss of ⅞c at $1.15@1⅛.

Corn also was strong. A liberal demand from scattered sources and firm foreign markets were the governing influences. December opened a shade to ⅛@¼c higher at 48⅞c to 49c. A lull in the buying sent it down to 48¾c, but the market rallied with wheat to 48⅞c.

The market weakened in sympathy with wheat and closed at the lowest point of the day. Final quotations on December were down ½c at 48¼@48⅝c.

There was little demand for oats, but a scarcity of offerings held the market steady. December opened ⅛c lower to unchanged at 29⅛c to 29¼c, and held to those figures.

Actual demand from western buyers was the feature of the provision market. January pork was 5c to 7½c higher at $12.62 to $12.62½. January lard was up 2½@5c to 5@7½c at $7.27½ to $7.30 and sold off to $7.27½. Ribs were up 5@7½c at $6.00 and sold off to $6.57½.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was a continuation of strength on bullish sentiment early in the day. Efforts at profit-taking at the advance and large sales by the Armour interests, which is, we think, working on the short side, and which is the only aggressive bear interest in the market, lost the advance, and it closed weak. Liverpool continues indifferent. The edge was off the cash markets generally. There has been some talk of increased deliveries in the Northwest. The visible supply Monday will show another liberal accumulation of stocks. We hardly share in the prevailing bullish sentiment.

Corn—Fine weather through the West and the weakness in wheat contributed to the decline. There is no active bull element working in corn, but the cash situation is strong, with sales and receipts of old corn light. There is some movement of Southern corn to the Southern ports, but from the great corn belt it is so far unimportant. The husking returns are still to come in. It looks a pretty strong percentage in favor of the buyer.

Oats—The weakness in wheat and corn contributed but bullish confidence still faint, and after the advancing tendency of the past few days the reaction was natural. We are inclined to feel, however, that the cash situation is improving.

Provisions—Pork is a little easier, lard and ribs a little firmer. There is not a large trade and no great pressure now from liquidation. While the packing interests are not actively devoting their efforts toward scoring higher prices, we think they are, as a rule, gradually accumulating holdings on the weak spots.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—A very active market for wheat and bears succeeded in taking prices down a fraction. Best prices were shaded considerably from realizing that is generally met with at the end of the week. Big holders, however, did not part with their holdings. The Northwest is beginning to show the falling off in movement. This was expected. Elevators have been steady shippers for two weeks, with nothing coming from the farms to fill up empty bins. The big movement is regarded as being over. Millers have anticipated this and because receipts since August show 41.6 per cent unfit for milling, they have made heavy purchases of Manitoba wheat and will bring it in bond. The forecast is for more favorable weather. This with the usual receipts and statistics on Monday and the fact that the advance has been rapid may permit prices to sell off a little more, but dips, like we have experienced before, from new figures will be only temporary. We have already seen what large consumption can do without any export demands worth mentioning and the bulk of the new crop marketed we will have reasons enough for more than maintaining this level. We are very strong on the ultimate outcome and would not be long without a some wheat, especially on the recessions.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: Statistics now estimate the wheat crop at 554,713,000 bushels, including 327,489,000 bushels winter and 227,224,000 bushels spring wheat. The oats crop is 973,135,000 bushels. The wheat crop is nearly 4,000,000 bushels more than the government estimate and the oats show an excess of 85,000,000 bushels.

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: It must be an eye opener to the trade to see that the Pillsbury Milling company has bought the entire line of lowgrade wheat held on the whole Peavey line of elevators in the Northwest, and that this line was the largest line of wheat held in the Northwestern elevators. We keep repeating that this is the record year on strange things in our trade.

* * *

Bruce McBean, of Winnipeg, wires C. E. Lewis, of Minneapolis: "Would strongly advise buying our December wheat. Cheapest thing on earth."

Chicago Record-Herald: The apparently unlimited demand for May wheat at $1.13 through houses with Wall street connections has revived the theory that John W. Gates and his friends are operating in the market on the long side and have accumulated big holdings of December and May. There are others in the trade who believe the bull side of wheat should be attractive to the biggest financial interests in the country and are confident the Standard Oil crowd are in the market in a large way. It is certain some big orders have been coming from the East.

THE STOCK MARKET

Has Broadened Out Greater Than For Over Three Years.

Easy Money Rates and Evidence of Effective Industrial Revival.

New York, Oct. 22.—The stock market broadened out this week to a volume and scope not attained before in over three years. Ease of money rates unequalled in October for many years, and evidence of an effective industrial revival are the underlying forces in speculation. The appearance of the public as a buyer figured largely in the animation of the week. The absorptive power of the market has proved equal to the enormous profit-taking from either buyers and prices have rallied from all directions moving forward to new high levels on a growing volume of business.

New York, Oct. 22.—There was a strong and active opening in stocks today at fractional advances thruout. Fifty shares were 7000 shares each of Rock Island and Erie taken on running sales, first prices of the former running from 32 to 32½ compared with 31¾ last night and of the latter from 37⅞ to 38¼ compared with 37½ last night. Amalgamated Copper, Manhattan and People's Gas rose a point and Erie first preferred and Cotton Oil 1¼. Large fractional gains were shown by Atchison, Pennsylvania, Chicago Great Western, Ontario & Western and United States Steel preferred. Metropolitan Street Railway sagged a fraction, but this was the only exception to the strength of the market.

The profit-taking on the opening rise made the animated market of the first hour irregular. The Pacifics, Pennsylvania, Reading and Ontario & Western were backward, the last named reacting 1⅛ from the top. The local tractions, except Manhattan were heavy. Rock Island made headway through the realizing, rising 1⅞. Amalgamated Copper rose buoyantly 3⅝ and Smelting and Chicago Great Western 2. There were gains of 1 to 1½ for Chesapeake & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, Denver & Rio Grande preferred, Kansas City Southern and Minneapolis & St. Louis.

After a further rise in Erie and an upward spurt of 1¼ in United States Steel preferred prices were inclined to run off. Atlantic Coast line rose 1¼, Delaware & Hudson 2¾ and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie preferred 2, but high-priced standard railroad shares generally were held back. Ontario & Western got more than a point under last night. Rock Island preferred 1, Consolidated Gas 2¼, Metropolitan Street Railway 1½ and Metropolitan securities 1⅞. After the bank statement was reported Erie ran up again to 2¾ above last night, Amalgamated Copper 4⅛, Smelting 2⅜ and Pennsylvania about a point. Realizing was renewed and some Western stocks dropped below last night. St. Paul fell suddenly 1¼ under last night. The closing was active and irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is active and strong. A good many specialties are sharply higher. The bank statement was favorable and shows expansion in every item. Money is very cheap for this time of the year and the tendency is toward even cheaper money. The waiting list of investors, to which we have been calling attention al the summer, is beginning to come in. There is a good deal scattered profit taking but the important holders are not letting go to any extent. They can use their money at present prices. As big a market as we have now is of course, liable to scalping reactions. We see nothing to make more tha nscalping re-actions.

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been excited and wild today. A few stocks showed heaviness, but most of them were buoyant and numerous sensational advances were scored. The heavy stocks were Union Pacific, St. Paul, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Atchison and Southern Pacific. There was very little news. The bank statement was moderately favorable. The close was irregular. Sentiment was quite bullish and the general expectation is for higher prices next week.

Harrington to Paine Webber & Co.: We look for considerably higher prices regarding the Union Pacific report, which shows 11.60 earned on the stock. We draw attention to the fact that with its equities in Southern Pacific and Northern Securities the stock earned last year over 20 per cent, which is not a bad showing in what is generally considered an off-year.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Oct. 22.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 2@4 points. This was rather better than expected on the cables and good weather. There was a fair demand from covering of week end shorts rather than as a result of revived bull speculation and immediately following the call, prices rallied pretty steady, fluctuating close to the initial figures. New Orleans and Philadelphia seemed to be selling here, while lower Wall street and some professional bear interests seemed to be covering. Toward the end of the first hour the market was less active and pretty steady in tone with prices at practically the opening figures.

Cotton futures closed barely steady. Oct., $9.47; Nov., $9.47; Dec., $9.62; Jan., $9.70; Feb., $9.75; Mar., $9.78; April, $9.81; May, $9.86; June, $9.88; July, $9.82. Spot closed quiet, 10 points decline; mid ups, $9.95; do gulf, $10.20. Sales none.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The coper market today was the best we have had yet this fall. All stocks were strong and active in good demand. Range was the special favorite, selling up three points, closing at the top. To tell the truth there were no weak spots, every copper stock participating in the rise. All the financial papers here are very bullish and predicting higher prices for the metal and all stocks. We believe firmly in the strength of the metal situation and that copper stocks are a far better buy at the present time than the New York.

A SPUNKY WOMAN.

A gang of men in the employ of the New York and New Jersey Telephone compnay a few days ago undertook to erect poles along tghe wayside of Pleasant avenue, Rockaway Beach, Long Island. After teams had hauled eight large poles to the ground the men began to dig a large hole in front of the bank. Long Island says the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The bank building belongs to Charles Crabbe. He protested strongly, but the men paid no attention to his protest and moved on to the next hole. They moved on and dug a hole in front of Mr. Crabbe's house. Mr. Crabbe protested even more strongly and equally in vain. Then, like a man, he turned to the law for protection and left to attempt to secure an injunction.

Next the telephone men attacked the sidewalk in front of the house of C. F. Winslow. The report does not speak of Mr. Winslow or mention his whereabouts. Perhaps, he too, had departed in search of an injunction.

But Mrs. Winslow was at home. She did nothing until the hole was about three feet deep. Did she then protest or hurry off for an injunction? Hardly. That was a man's way.

Mrs. Winslow took a woman's way. Watching her chance, she jumped into the hole. The telephone men ordered her out, and she laughed at them. They tried every expedient that mere man's wits could suggest to get her out of that hole, save that of actual violence. But there Mrs. Winslow stuck. In the end the telephone men gave it up and moved on to the next hole.

This hole was in front of another piece of property belonging to Mr. Crabbe. Inspired by the example of Mrs. Winslow, still victoriously occupying the third hole, the foreman of the Crabbe sawmill shut down the plant and the hands prepared to give battle in defense of their employer's property. The police were summoned.

The sawmill hands got the fire hose, attached it to hydrants, and were preparing to turn a stream on the telephone men, when one of Crabbe's employees jumped into hole No. 4. The telephone men did not dare to use force, and the police refused to act.

Then, with two poles up and two holes occupied, the telephone men set about digging the fifth hole, forming a close circle about it in order to keep out everybody and everything except the pole. Just as the men were about to set the pole a superintendent arrived in hot haste and ordered the work stopped. The telephone company had declared a temporary cessation of hostilities.

Thereupon Mrs. Winslow calmly climbed out of her hole, brushed the soil from her skirts, and resumed her household duties, followed by the plaudits of the many spectators, who declared her "a spunky little woman."

When scientists—mere men—are preparing treatises to prove the superiority of man's intellect over that of woman, they should recall such little incidents as this of Mrs. Winslow and the telephone pole hole—and hesitate.

PIERCED BY 12,000 ARROWS.

Srimat Murugasa Swamigal, a pious Hindu devotee, has conducted the Kavady ceremony with 12,000 silver arrows pierced in his body, says the Penang Gazette.

There was a fair demand from covering of week end shorts rather than as a result of revived bull speculation and immediately following the call, prices rallied pretty steady, fluctuating close to the initial figures. New Orleans and Philadelphia seemed to be selling here, while lower Wall street and some professional bear interests seemed to be covering. ACTIVE MOVEMENT IN DULUTH REALTY

Transactions This Week Indicate Marked Revival In Movement of Duluth Dirt—Several Large Properties Change Hands—Architects Report Considerable Activity In Building Projects.

The local realty market during the past week has shown unusual activity as compared with the run of business for the preceding several weeks. The sales made will aggregate quite a large amount, taking into consideration only those which have thus far been made public. A number of other fair-sized sales are practically closed, but the parties concerned prefer not to give them publicity for another week.

The lively movement of real estate has been viewed with favor by the dealers, who profess to see in it signs of a continued activity during the rest of the fall and for the winter. It is taken to mean that outside parties owning city property are looking more closely than ever to their investments here, and the fact that some, as soon as they dispose of one piece of Duluth property immediately turn around and reinvest in other city property here, indicates conclusively that local realty is still viewed with favor from the outside investment point of view.

The largest sales of realty reported this week were those of the Foote building, at 19 West Superior street, from L. M. Thomas, of Pennsylvania, to William Pattison, of Superior, for $32,000, and of the 50-feet on the south side of West First street, adjoining the Mendenhall building on the west, from local parties to Mr. Thomas, for $20,000.

Although he still resides in Superior, Mr. Pattison has been steadily acquiring Duluth property, and his holdings amount now to no inconsiderable amount, principally business properties.

In his sale and purchase Mr. Thomas was represented by Stryker, Manley & Buck, and Mr. Pattison was represented by William Prindle & Co.

West First street property owners who have been following closely the large improvements being made on the street this year, including such buildings as the Duncan Brewer store building and the big brick structure going up at Fourth avenue west for the Davis Realty company, are more confident than ever of ultimate strong prices on that street. Mr. Thomas's purchase of the fifty feet, already occupied by a lodging house and two dwelling houses, is regarded as a matter of foresight, for the reason that the site will be valuable for business purposes a little later.

M. Zalk has purchased the DeWitt house, at the corner of Superior street and Twelfth avenue east, and will reside there permanently. The consideration is said to have been $5500. The property has been on the market for some time and there have been a number of rumors that it was to have other owners. The sale to Mr. Zalk was closed this past week.

* * *

M. N. McBean has sold two lots in block 77, Portland division, one to J. E. Gray, for $2200, and the other to C. G. Copp for $2650.

* * *

Mrs. W. W. Butchart is having plans prepared by J. J. Wangenstein for a $7000 brick flat building at the corner of Fourth avenue East and Fifth street. Mr. Wangenstein has also plans for a frame residence for H. L. Winter on Woodland avenue, a frame residence to cost about $3500 for Mrs. D. E. Holsten, at Hunter's Park, a two story brick store and hotel building at First avenue East and Superior street for W. R. Wright, to cost $15,000; a hotel building for the Duluth Brewing & Malting company at Virginia, to cost $12,000; a two story brick building at Aitkin for the same interests, to cost $5000.

* * *

W. T. Bray, architect, reports the contract for the new high school at Eveleth awarded to Theodore Nauffts, of this city, for $38,000. The new building will occupy a ground space 70 by 130 feet, three stories high and built of brick and sandstone. Work on the building is to commence immediately.

* * *

A Terrybery, architect, reports plans for a new residence at Barnum, for H. S. Lord. He has plans out for a $4000 two-flat building for Edward Downie near Twentieth avenue West and Second street.

* * *

F. L. Young & Company, who has just opened a new suite at 201 Palladio building, has plans nearly ready for a $40,000 high school building at Ely. The building will be of brick and stone and will have twelve rooms outside of the library, board room, etc. The plans will be out for bids in about two weeks

* * *

The First Baptist church society of this city is raising funds for a new $25,000 church building at Ninth avenue East and First street.

* * *

Anthony W. Puck, who for several years has been connected with local architects' offices, has started business for himself, with offices in the Lyceum building. Mr. Puck has plans for a brick store and apartment building to be erected at Brainerd for A. Fitger & Company, of this city.

* * *

The Duluth Corrugating & Roofing company has closed contracts for the roofing, cornice, gutters and conductors for the new Omaha freight sheds. The roof will be 1000 by 84 feet and the covering will be of four-ply pitch and gravel. This same company will do the roofing and heavy cornice work for the Massachusetts Real Estate company's new houses and for the Davis Realty company's business block.

* * *

Harry Pearson has the contract for the S. H. Bruen flats, at $3,695. The flats will be of brick, with all modern improvements. C. E. Nystrom was the architect.

* * *

The contract for the construction of the new county poor house, to cost $33,890, was awarded last Saturday to J. W. Hilliard. Ground for the expected to be finished this year. The building is to be ready for occupancy by Sept 1, next.

Calumet Theater Proprietor Will Resist Sunday Closing Movement.

Calumet—As a result of a meeting of ministers Sheriff Wills has notified Col. Somers, proprietor of the Bijou theater, that he must not give public entertainments on Sundays. Col. Somers says he will keep his theater open Sundays as before. If he is compelled to close, he says he will see that not a drug, candy or any other kind of a store is open in the city on that day.

Menominee—Hubert LaCourt, a Menominee man, was killed near Nathan while hunting. He was standing on a log at the time and it is thought the gun was discharged by the log rolling from under his feet. The charge of shot entered his breast and death resulted almost immediately.

Manistique—With the exception of that of the prosecuting attorney, the Schoolcraft county salaries will remain the same the ensuing year. The prosecutor was given an increase of $200, bringing the amount up to $1200 per annum. The same action has been taken by the Delta county board of supervisors.

Ontonagon—A concern known as the Wyoming Cattle company has purchased a section of land in Matchwood township of Ontanogon county and has commenced the erection of buildings. The company recently lost a horse in an unusual manner. The stock farm is situated about two miles out from the Matchwood postoffice. Mr. Ross, the manager, while riding horseback from the postoffice to the ranch heard a shot which was followed by a plunge by the horse. He dismounted and found that the bullet had pierced one of the legs of the animal, breaking the bone. He had to kill the animal to end its sufferings. It is not known who fired the shot, but it is supposed that it was somebody who was out hunting with a long range gun.

Sault Ste. Marie—Adolph Laramie, a lad about 16 years of age, shot Viola Filiatrault, a 10-year-old school girl, while she was standing in the yard near the schoolhouse in district No. 4, Sugar Island. She was taken to the Sault Ste. Marie hospital, where she lies in a dangerous condition. Whether the shot was fired with intent to kill is not known. Laramie left home early in the morning with a shotgun with the intention of hunting partridges. During the forenoon he emerged from the bushes near the school house, and, raising the gun, fired at the girl, the shot taking effect in her breast. As soon as he saw what he had done he dropped the gun and rushed into the woods. He has not been seen since, but is supposed to be somewhere on the island. Mr. Filiatrault is of the opinion that the young man's mind is affected, as he had no cause to shoot the girl. It is alleged that the young man ran away from home recently and was caught by his father as he was about to leave the Soo on a boat.

D. C. ANDERSON'S 120-ACRE FARM—TWENTY ACRES UNDERPLOW—FINE ROAD WORK DONE IN MEADOWLANDS IS LARGELY DUE TO MR. ANDERSON.

HOME ESTABLISHED BY MRS. MARY MILLER, OF STEWART, IOWA, ON 160-ACRE TRACT IN MEADOWLANDS.

Among the Northern Minnesota counties that have already begun to make a good showing among agricultural communities in districts where for years the logger and the timber interests have held sway, is St. Louis county. Already there is scattered over this territory, which may favorably be compared in size to some states, many prosperous farms, and more are being established right along, especially within the last few years. In some places a very commendable start has made toward clearing, but in most instances the large amount of timber, causing expensive clearing and grubbing, has held the farmer back. That, coupled with a lack of capital on the part of many of the new settlers in this county, has resulted in farms of the smaller order, with a few acres of clearing, gradually being extended from year to year. In no district are there farms in an advanced stage of cultivation. Bad roads have been an additional hamper to the new settler, and road building has seemed, of necessity, to progress slowly, for the same reasons that the small farmer has not made more rapid progress.

A step in the right direction has just been taken by one of the large corporations of Minnesota, and probably the largest landholder in St. Louis county, the Duluth & Iron Range Railway company. Two years ago this company adopted a policy of colonization and improvement which, if adopted by all railroad companies holding land grants, would have resulted in the rapid settlement of Northern Minnesota. The Duluth & Iron Range company discontinued all sales of land at wholesale or to speculators, and began reaching out for the actual settlers only.

First it selected the locality which seemed best suited in the county for rapid improvement, and which could be most easily subdued and put under cultivation. After selecting this district, which is now known as the Meadowlands township, and located in township 53, ranges 18 and 19, it set about opening up the country thoroughly by building wagon roads. The district already had a number of homestead settlers who were struggling along, packing their supplies on their backs and hoping for a road. After a careful investigation, the county agreed to join with the railroad company, each appropriating equal amounts, and road building was commenced in July, 1903. A wagon bridge was projected across the Whiteface river, for which an appropriation of $1000 was received from the state, and $1000 was donated jointly by the county and the Duluth & Iron Range Railway company.

The township of Meadowlands bought an Austin-Western road grader, similar to the machine recently purchased by the city of Duluth, and of the largest and strongest make of graders. Road work was commenced in earnest. The settlers themselves donated several hundred dollars in labor and money, clearing the right-of-way and digging ditches where necessary. The main part of the work, however, was done after the clearing and grubbing, by the new road grader.

In one and a half years about fifteen miles of graded turnpike road has been built in Meadowlands township, consisting of a main road, a little over eight miles long, extending from Payne station, on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company's line, situated in the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 10-53-18, through 53-18 and 53-19, westward, crossing the Whiteface river to a point within one and a quarter miles of the St. Louis river. From this main road town roads have been extended, both north and south on both the east and the west sides of the river, and, further, a road a mile long has been built by the Duluth & Iron Range company between sections 15 and 16-53-19, for the purpose of opening up an experimental farm, which is being cleared and placed under cultivation by L. E. Arnold, assistant land commissioner of the Duluth & Iron Range company.

A number of German settlers from the high priced land districts in Nebraska have bought farms and are preparing to move on them in the spring. Contracts for houses and barns, for clearing and breaking have been let and the work of improvemnt is being pushed as rapidly as labor can be secured to do the work. Mr. Arnold has at present a crew of nearly twenty men at work clearing his farm, preparatory to breaking the ground and putting in crops next spring.

The settlers who are already located on their farms have raised very successful crops of patatoes, mangelwurzels, currots, cabbages, artichokes and all sorts of vegetables, including tomatoes and cucumbers during the past year. They have also been successful with some trial crops of spring wheat and macaroni wheat, beardless barley and millet which they raised for seed purposes for next year.

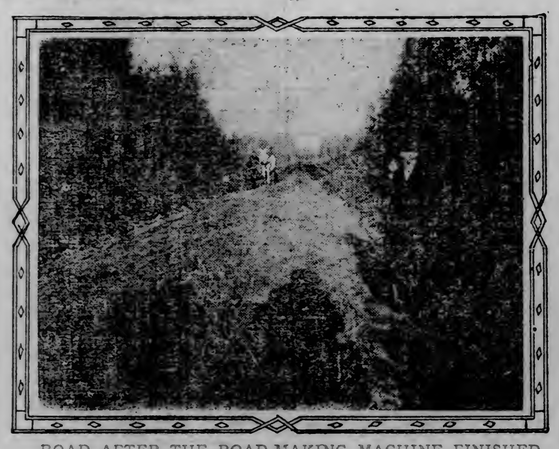

The feature of this district which appeals most directly to the progressive farmer from Illinois, Iowa, or Nebraska is that portion which is known as "The Big Prairie." County commissioners Berg and McInnis, in a trip made a few weeks ago to this settlement, in coming out from the timber on to the big prairie exclaimed in surprise "a North Dakota prairie." The same impression of the district was given County Commissioners Patterson and Kaupp and County Auditor Halden in a more recent visit.

Stretching off for three or four miles between the Whiteface and the St. Louis rivers, is a prairie which resem-

THE ANGELL STIFTELSE.

Home For Old People In Norway That Is Luxurious — The World Renowned Cathedral At Trondjhem. . . . . .

Trondjhem, Norway, Oct. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Poor people and old people who succeed in getting quarters in the Thomas Angell Stiftelse, of this place, need have no more worry about what to eat and what to drink. When Angell died, about 150 years ago, he left all his property to the public with certain instructions as to the use to which it should be put. Among these was to build a home for old people, who had seen better days, the so-called pauvre horteaux. This was done. The building has just been remodeled and enlarged, and fitted with all modern improvements, so it looks a veritable palace.

Each inmate has two rooms, a kitchen and an entry, and is given 25 crowns a month for pin-money besides. There is electric light and a combination of steam and hot water heating. In each kitchen is a gas range. This is luxury, especially as compared with the ordinary mode of living up here. Altogether there are fifty innabitants, besides the superintendents' family, and three or four servants, to keep things going.

In the basement are separate divisions for storage, common laundries, ironing and dry rooms. On the main floor is a very pretty little chapel, and on the second floor a general reception and reading room. Bath rooms, with enameled tubs and hot and cold water, and a modern system of plumbing complete the arrangements.

The building is planned around a large court, with an open passage running all around it connecting the different rooms and stories. These passages are enlarged every 100 feet or so, to make little rooms, with settees, and decorated with potted plants, making a very pretty picture.

But all this has cost money. Exclusive of the ground, the building cost very nearly $1700 for each inhabitant. The original property bequeathed by Mr. Angell has grown in value, and is now reckoned about 5,000,000 crowns, a great deal of which is in forest lands. Naturally people are anxious to get into such a haven. Relatives of the donor have the first right, and then as many as can be provided for in the order as they apply.

A curious requirement is, that after entering they cannot give away any of their belongings. What remains when some one has passed away is auctioned off and the profits go to the institution. The result is, I was told, that they enter with as little as possible, giving away to friends and relations what they may have saved from former days and can spare.

This is not the only good thing Thomas Angell did for the city. When he erected an orphan's home he hit upon a better use for his money. For it is certainly much better for the race to take care of the growing generation, and make it self-supporting, and to give it a chance to develop than it is to provide for the passing generation. True, this latter is more sentimental, and sems to be a popular way of dispersing with superfluous funds. Thus, I saw a similar equally elaborate institution in Malmo, and in the Lubeck I saw one for old maids.

This city of Trondjhem has another building, much grander, much older and far more interesting—its world-renowned cathedral. Come hither whichever way you please, by rail from the South or from the East over Sweden, or by water from the West or North, and you will be mightily surprised to find such a structure in this Northland. How could they ever build it and where did they get the money? For this is certainly the finest church that ever pointed its spires upward in all Scandinavia. And the country in which it is built is certainly not wealthy. The traveler sees hardly anything but hay being raised, for miles in every direction. And even the curing of this hay is no easy matter, as it must be hung on wire or on poles for weeks, so as to dry, the constant rain gives the agriculturist a very poor chance.

But one must remember that though so far North, Trondjhem has an ice-free harbor, and has for hundreds of years enjoyed a rich trade. And then, too, when Christianity was introduced by the sword in the beginning of the eleventh century, this was made the main center, and here, somewhat later, Olof the Holy, an early Christian king of Norway, was buried. For 400 years, beginning with the year 1000, Norway was at the very height of her power, and wealth flowed into the coffers of the archbishop of this most northerly see.

The building has had a most checkered history. Erected and torn down again and re-erected still larger, enlarged and added to, it was at last completed about the year 1299. If it could only have thus remained how happy all travelers would be. Soon after Norway's wealth and power began to decline. The church was struck by lightning two times and in the course of the centuries suffered from fire fires. After these it was only partly restored and in 1860 it presented a sorry spectacle. The entire west half lay in ruins. The other parts were so disfigured with inappropriate additions, changes and restorations as to be anything but a good piece of church architecture.

Then the Norwegians decided to restore it. For more than thirty years this work has been in the hands of the skillful and painstaking architect Herr Christie. He has two assistants and about 100 men employed the year around. The work is somewhat more than half completed and reflects a great deal of credit on all concerned. It was highly interesting to see the loving care with which they have undertaken ever last bit of work. How conscientiously they have picked up every piece of carved stone so that at last they are now quite sure of the original appearance of the church. There is in a neighboring building a veritable museum of fragments which are labelled and arranged in a systematic manner. Thus the old church is being slowly resurrected in new materials and will, in the course of twenty yetrs stand forth as a grand monument of the past as well as of the present, to which all Norwegians point with pride!

The work is costing about 100,000 crowns a year. Some of this is contributed by tourists. The German kaiser, who is very fond of Norway, gives 1000 crowns yearly. It is thought that about twenty years more will be required before it is entirely completed.

The stone is a beautiful soft blueish-gray, remarkably well suited for the sombre interior of the church. It is mostly a soap-stone, but partly a sandstone, which is so similar that a first glance does not detect the difference, even after the attention is called to it.

* * *

From Sweden I came down awheel into Norway through the beautiful Mesaker valley. It was a pleasant ride, down the gentle incline, following the winding stream between the mountains on all sides. The roadway was perfect and the surrounding country almost park like. When I came to a little place called Hegre, the best part was behind me and as there was a freight train standing, I asked for permission to ride. Now that is against the rules, except from one station to another. Try as I would I could buy a ticket only to the next station. This I did and curiously enough the place is called Hell. Here I had to wait for a train from a side line to get to Trondjhem. I was told that Englishmen often buy a return ticket to this place and have the conductor punch it. Then they keep the ticket to show where they have been.

MILLIONAIRE PAUPERS

Paris Poor Have An Income of More Than Seven Million Dollars.

Paris, Oct. 12.—Rich indeed are the Paris poor! They possess in their own right real estate bringing in about $300,000, and stocks and bonds bringing $250,000 per annum; they enjoy from various sources a clear income of over $7,000,000; they have at their disposal hospitals, sanatoria, asylums, schools, lecture rooms and private physicians, pensions for old age or illness or disability, and all this not, as in other cities, to be solicited as a favor, but coming to them as their due after the simple formality of proving themselves paupers.

The truth is that no Parisian need be a pauper unless he wants to be. And the fact that from the total population of 2,714,068 inhabitants, 500,000, or nearly one-fifth, are largely dependent upon the general revenues and institutions of the administration for the poor, would seem sufficient evidence that whatever the number of beggars one may meet in the streets, few really require help.

While the Paris poor came by their wealth honestly through donations, legacies and state and city subventions, the care of vast property thus represented could naturally not be left to the poor collectively or to any individuals among them. So an organization known as the Assistance Publique, with officers appointed by the government to look after the paupers' wealth and invest it and distribute its revenues in the fairest possible way, was devised. That was nearly a century and a quarter ago, and through subsequent revolutions, republics and monarchies, it has continued to the present day with few modifications in its line of conduct, save that the sums to be handled have quadrupled in recent years. Under the revolution in 1793, a law made it obligatory for the poor to receive each his share of the general income. But the directorate decided that forcing money upon people was a little too radical, and the rule was established, still in force, that the money and privileges belonged to the poor, but they must apply for it and prove their property.

The real estate owned by the Paris poor and controlled for them by the Assistance Publique represents an area of nearly 3,000,000 square feet. Thirty years ago the area was almost double this figure. In view of the increased land values, the administration judiciously sold here and there and invested in proceeds otherwise. The property includes seventy-seven large houses in Paris and numerous farms in the suburbs, as well as 346 gardens and grounds in Paris. The houses are rented for $200,000 as schools, factories or apartments, whereas the grounds are leased at $82,000 for all possible purposes. By the ingenious leasing of privileges such as passage alowed through certain grounds, windows allowed in the walls of adjacent houses, etc., an additional $5000 a year is netted.

Ingeniousness in gathering money in order that more may be spent, is a notable trait of the Assistance Publique administration. The hospitals, asylums, home schools and other establishments run for the benefit of the poor from their own funds, necessitate numerous incidental expenses such as printing, sewing, the manufacture of shoes and brushes, market gardening and produce. The Assistance Publique found that it cost practically no more to slightly increase the output, and by selling the surplus, $60,000 per year is now realized. Even the leavings of bones, grease, peelings and bread from the various establishments are preserved and sold, netting $15,000 annually.

Although the Assistance Publique has, generaly speaking, a free hand in managing the rich estate of the Paris poor, some testators have specified precisely what use is to be made of their money, while others have imposed conditions, failing the fulfillment of which the sum would be forfeited. Hospital beds and scholarships are the uses most frequently ordered. But others are of more unexpected natures. One worthy woman, who died an old maid, left an income of $40 to be given each year as a dowry to some deserving girl. Numbers have since followed this example, leaving sums varying between $40 and $200 to be given as dowries for marriage or learning trades. A sentimental widow bequeathed $134 per year to be spent in buying sugar plums for the poor More practical, a man named Moreau

CLUBS AND MUSICAL

"Jack and the Beanstalk," which has been dramatized by Miss McClaren, will be presented next Saturday by a number of children, and the interest of many of the little folks of the city has already been enlisted. It is hoped that the idea of this matinee by children, and for children, may become a permanent feature of the work of the school. The idea has long been carried out with the greatest success in the East. The play for next Saturday is one popular with all children, and a crowded house is expected. Between the acts a Japanese song and dance will be presented by Bernice Page, and Emily Smith will sing a selected solo. A fancy dance will also be given by two sisters. An orchestra, composed of twenty children, under the direction of Gustav Flaaten, will furnish the music. The cast is as follows:

The Duluth-Superior branch of the International Kindergarten union have engaged Miss Bertha Payne, of the School of Education, one of the schools of the University of Chicago, to give give a series of lectures on educational topics next Friday and Saturday, Oct. 28 and 29, in Duluth and Superior.

Feeling that Miss Payne's talks will be strong, and very suggestive to all teachers and parents, the kindergartners have decided to throw open the evening lectures to the public, and extend a cordial invitation to all persons who are interested in educational work to attend them.

Miss Payne is fully qualified to speak of school work, for she has devoted years to the study and practice of pedagogical principles under such leaders as Mrs. Alice H. Putnam, Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Col. Francis H. Parker, William L. Tomlins and others, and has also been a student at the Universities of Chicago and Leipsic. She has taught in public, private, social, settlement and training schools, the Chicago public schools, Chicago institute, Hull house, Cooke county normal, Chicago Froebell association, and the School of Education, being among the number of those who have had the benefit of her earnest effort and tireless energy.

Her varied experience has served the purpose of giving a broad and fundamental character to her present work, and added to this are clear insight, good judgment and force of character, all of which unite in a most pleasing personality.

The first lecture will be given in the High School Assembly hall, Friday evening, Oct. 28, promptly at 8 o'clock, the subject being "Present Day Tendencies in Education."

The following evening the lecture will be given in the Blaine high school Assembly hall, in West Superior, at the same hour, the subject being "What Makes a Kindergarten?"

THE INITIATION

By Belle Maniates.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Helen White, most becomingly gowned, came into the music room after dinner, shaded the lights, turned on the gas logs and arranged the music on the piano.

"Nell, I see you are making elaborate preparations to receive callers," said her brother Fred, banteringly. "I am sorry to convey to you the disappointing intelligence that there is no prospect of your receiving a call tonight—that is, from a man. All the men you know are otherwise engaged."

Helen's face fell perceptibly.

"Oh, Fred, what is going on?"

"Can't tell you."

"Stag?"

"Nell," he laughed, putting on his outer coat and taking a cap from his pocket, "you always ask too many questions. Would it give you a ray of comfort if I told you it was purely stag?"

Very comfortable indeed, but Fred had suddenly refused all her entreaties to bring him to the house.

"He doesn't care for girls—sensible fellow—and besides you've turned down hard two or three of my friends whom I have introduced to you."

"I wonder what's on tonight!" she thought, going to the library window and flattening her face against the pane. Through the dusky gloom she discerned Fred's vanishing figure faintly outlined. He wasn't going toward the street, but across the lawn.

"To the stable!" she thought. "And the cap! He only wears that when he drives or goes on 'expeditions.' Perhaps he is only going for a drive with some other man and said that about no one's calling to tease me."

She hoped devoutely that some one would call. The time was so propitious. Her father and mother were away on a journey and now Fred out for the evening. She did everything she could think of to pass away the time of that awful interval from seven to eight—the hour of suspense. She read the evening paper, played the piano abstractedly with her foot on the soft pedal that she might hear the doorbell. Finally she went upstairs to see what her little brother Tom was doing. She found him putting on his coat and hat.

"Why, Tom, where are you going?"

"Out with some fellows. Mother said I might have one night out, you know."

"Yes. Everyone is having a 'night out' but me," said the sister, with a mirthless laugh.

"Well, I guess Fred'll be back soon," said Tom, consolingly.

"What makes you think so?" she asked, curiously.

"You just look in the den and you'll see," he replied, with a chuckle.

Helen quickly sought Fred's den and gazed in consternation at the preparations and supplies for a spread that she encountered.

"The plot thickens!" she thought, following Tom down stairs. He went out the front door and from the window she saw him, too, cross the lawn and go in the direction of the barn.

"Well," she exclaimed to herself, "the whole White family seem to be drawn barnward. I think I best follow suit."

She sat down for a few minutes to plot and ponder. Fred had evidently planned a sub rosa feast, else he'd have asked her to help in the preparations. He probably counted on returning after her retiring hour, which was early when there were no callers. It occurred to her that he was going to drive first. Well, she could prove or disprove that suspicion right away.

She stole out across the lawn, down the graveled walk, around the curve and out to the stable which was at considerable distance from the house. It was entirely deserted. She had a key with her and easily found a lantern in the carriage-room. Investigation showed her that the team of dapple grays were quietly resting, as was Fred's own horse.

She locked the door and extinguished the lantern. When she came out she was startled to see three or four men come out of the old root cellar. She drew back into the shadows with palpitating heart and felt quite faint from fear until, as the men passed, she recognized Fred's voice. Then her fear was superseded by curiosity and excitement. She felt that she was on the track of the mystery.

As soon as the figures had disappeared from sight she relighted the lantern and sought the cellar. The door was partially open and a faint streak of light shone out. She looked in. Lying on a pile of lumber was a man, bound hand and foot, gagged and blindfolded.

Again terror seized her and she was about to flee when she recognized the form as that of Wendell Lane. In an instant she had removed the gag from his mouth and the bandage from his eyes.

"Isn't this Miss White?" he asked. "You'll pardon me not rising, I am—"

"Mr. Lane," she replied. "But how can I cut these cords. I cannot untie them."

"There's a knife in my pocket."

Helen soon severed the stout cords the bound him and he was on his feet.

"Quick!" he exclaimed. "Let's get away before they come back!"

Leaving the lantern they sped away in the darkness, not pausing until out of range of the cellar.

"Do tell me why you were in there and bound so cruelly."

He laughed.

"I have recently joined the club of which your brother is a member, and they were initiating mo tonight. They took me in that place, telling me it was the vault of the cemetery, and I almost believed them. This was only the preliminary to several pleasant things they had in store for me."

"Oh, what a good one on them!" cried Helen, ecstatically. "Fred thinks he is so 'foxy.' He has a banquet spread out in his den for you all. Won't you come up to the house. We'll make way with the 'eats.'"

"Indeed I will!" was his hearty rejoinder. When they reached the house and enjoyed a friendly chat, he suddenly exclaimed.

"When they come back and find me missing they'll get out a search warrant. Won't they come here?"

"Oh, no! Fred will never look for you here!" declared Helen, confidently.

"Why not?"

She blushed a little but frankly told him how she had tried in vain to prevail upon her brother to bring him to the house. Presently they adjourned to the den and Wendel made caviar sandwiches and opened olives while Helen made the coffee.

As they were enjoying a cozy little meal they heard the outer door open.

"Fred!" cried Wendell, in consternation.

"No," said Helen, listening, "it's Tom!"

"Come up here, dear!" she called. "This is Mr. Lane, Tom. You can sit down and have luncheon with us, if you like."

"Oh, Helen!" cried the lad in a tone of wild excitement. "I've got more to tell you. You see I belong to a secret society and we were going to meet at the root cellar. I got there first and I saw some men carrying another man in there and he was tied and gagged. The men went away and left him and I ran and got our fellows all together, and we thought it was a murder, so we went and told the men in the grocery and they got a policeman and all went to the root cellar, but the man wasn't there. They found the rope and the gags, though. They are going to find out all about it."

Wendell and Helen listened to this recital with delighted interest and at its close gave vent to laughter.

"Well, 'taint no laughing matter," said Tom, indignantly.

"You'll think it is when we tell you," assured Helen. "Tom never tells anything," she explained to Wendell.

"I'd never tell anything Helen told me not to; she's a brick," declared Tom.

"I think so, too," agreed Wendell, and he proceeded to relate the circumstances of the initiation to Tom, who highly appreciated the situation.

"I really think you had better go, now," advised Helen to Wendell. "Fred may be coming any minute now."

"And may I come soon—tomorrow night?" he asked, earnestly, as he was taking leave.

Later, Helen, locked in her room, laughed sofetly to hear her brother and his companions go into the den and give exclamation of regret and consternation.

"Fred," she said languidly, at breakfast the next morning. "Tom and I got hungry last night and we found such lots of delicacies in your den!"

But Fred was cross and irresponsive. That evening when he came home he was dumbfounded to find Wendell there chatting away and on friendly terms with Helen.

"Where did you two meet?" he asked bluntly.

"Oh, Mr. Lane introduced himself to me one time when we were thrown into each others society," she said, demurely, and Tom didn't even smile.

WORLD'S BEST TIMEKEEPER.

The best timekeeper in the world is said to be the electric clock in the basement of the Berlin Observatory, which was installed by Professor Forester in 1865, says the Electrical World and Engineer.

It is enclosed in an airtight glass cylinder, and has frequently run for periods of two and three months with an average daily deviation of only fifteen one-thousandths of a second.

Astronomers are making efforts to improve even this and to secure ideal conditions for the clock by keeping it not only in an airtight case, but in an underground vault, where neither changes of temperature nor of barometric pressure shall ever affect it.

MILKY WAY ONLY EARTH'S SHADOW.

A novel theory as to the Milky Way has been evolved by S. L. Adams, an amateur astronomer of Sydney, N. S. W. This luminous phenomenon, it appears, is really a shadow, says the London Mail.

"The Milky Way," says Mr. Adams, "is constantly being seen at many different angles and in many parts of the sky, but it always preserves the same luminous front arising from the telescopic stars in its background.

"Now, as this background is constantly changing, and the luminous effect is only seen wherever the foreground happens to be the Milky Way, it is evident that it is not the telescopic stars themselves which produce the effect, but something projected on the foreground of the sky. That something is the earth's shadow.

"The supposed nebulus," continues Mr. Adams, "are all shadows, and this explains their contempt for the laws of gravitation and their refusal to conform to the globular shapes assumed by celestial objects generally. They are spots of shadow representing mountains or mountain ranges on the earth."

Those Fashionable Pile Fabrics

RECEPTION TOILETTE IN VELVET AND LACE.

WITH FULL RIPPLE BASQUE.

A DRESSY CREATION IN VELVETEEN.

STREET COSTUME IN BROWN CORDUROY

With the coming of winter all of the pile fabrics, and especially the velvets and the velveteens, resume the all-triumphant career that was theirs when the warm weather arrived. Dame Fashion declares that those costumes that are not altogether and entirely of velvet must be trimmed with this exquisitely soft and becoming weave. If not velvet, then the touch of velvet is the dictum; and any woman who has any regard at all to her appearance and possibilities—and her name is femininity at large—hastens to comply.

And velvets and velveteens are so intrinsically beautiful that it really is a temptation to have every frock in one's wardrobe of this smart and really flattering material. And in the new weaves that were possible, too, without at all transgressing the bounds of suitability or good taste.

And right here let us say a word anent the velveteens. Time was when velveteen was considered a shabby genteel substitute for velvet—a sort of poor relation, in fact—and smart folk considered it all of a piece with cotton gloves, cotton-back satin and other like vain subterfuges of probable and possible poverty. But this is another instance where nous avons change tout cela, and changed it assuredly for the better. The new velveteens are just as soft, sheer, thickly piled as are their cousins of the silk loom; and there is not that aggravating tendency for the black or blue to come off on one's best gloves or pet possessions in the way of jabots and ruffles. Indeed, the exclusive dressmaking houses, as well as the tailors, are using it largely for all sorts of costumes, and to be gowned in velveteen, or English velvet as they call it upon the Continent, is to be right in the front rank of fashion today.

For morning wear there re delightfully mannish-looking corduroys that the tailor-made girl will welcome with glee, and have made up in the mannish cutaway coat, the fronts opening to display the mannish-looking double-breasted waistcoat right off the same piece as her brother's. The new plaid velvets, too, are in high favor, chiefly in the broken and unobtrusive clan tartans, and there are crushed velvets with a close-sheared furry look that makes them peculiarly acceptable for cold weather wear.

For all outdoor use, for the smart costume trotteuse, or pedestrienne, as we call it over here, to the elaborate and elegant carriage and evening toilette, the velvets are especially good style. The three-piece suit, consisting of coat, blouse and skirt, remains high in fashionable favor, and the newest fancy makes the blouse of the same velvet, covering it with incrustations of lace and embroideries.

All of the Louis styles, Louis Quatorze, Quinze and Seize, or to express them in numerals, the XIV., XV. and XVI., are really exquisite in velvet, chiefly, one imagines, because velvet was the material par excellence of those days, while the dashing Directoire styles have the characteristic coat bodice in velvet over a skirt of contrasting material and often of contrasting color. Of course, it is quite understood that when one says velvet nowadays the very same remarks will apply to the velveteens, for one is just as prominent and just as highly considered as the other.

And the way in which the fashionables are trimming the velvet costumes! Velvet and furs and real laces have ever been a trinity to conjure with where magnificent toilettes are concerned, and nowadays the velvet is cut away from beneath the rare and real laces and a spangled chiffon is inserted beneath, the soft, sheer chiffon to throw up the design of the lace into high relief and the spangles to give that little Frenchy touch of lightness so essential to the velvet costume when worn by youthful beauty.

Ribbons are largely used for trimming, the favored fashion being to shirr both edges—they are usually provided with a draw thread that can be pulled taut—and make the resulting bouillonne band follow intricate fancy designs. Jet is very much to the fore as a trimming, both in passementeries and fringes, and appliques of chiffon cloth in delicate tints, fancy braids that are so fine as almost to rank with laces, and bandings of fur, all are called upon to add to the attractions of the velvet gown that is worn with so much grace by Madame La Mode.

TAILOR-MADE FASHIONS.

Tailor-made bodices are coming into fashion again, but the majority of them are made with one side piece instead of two, and they fasten at the back. The bodice should be mounted on a tight-fitting foundation. There are three side pieces to the lining, and the extra number of pieces is absolutely necessary now that straight-fronted corsets are fashionable, as the old style of foundation with only one side piece is not in accordance with the prevalent style of giving prominence to the fulness of the figure. Before cutting out the material the lining should be properly adjusted and corrected, as the material side piece has to be cut exactly the same size as the next to front foundation.

The skirt is comfortable shape for ordinary wear, as it is only about two inches longer at the back than the front, and there is plenty of fulness over the hips. The upper part of the skirt is extra wide, and instead of taking all the fulness to the back it has to be gathered to the waistband. Crossway bands of the material can be arranged around the hem of the garment as suggested, or braid trimming might be sewn on in the same way. The underskirt is in five pieces, and is a popular shape for making up glace silk, and as each piece is narrower at the hem than silk width goods, small gores do not have to be sewn on. The side seams and the next to back seams are straight, and the full circumference is only about two and a half yards. If the foundation is to be worn beneath a thin fabric, a deep circular-shape frill could be tacked on and then decorated with lace or narrow flounces.

Tailor-Made Gowns Still Popular.

Despite the strong tendency toward fluffiness and sheerness in dress materials for evening gowns, the tailor-made suit is still holding its own for those special functions which this class of dress has made peculiarly its own. The bolero and the skirt in these gowns may be made of different materials, but fashion demands that they be perfect matches as to color.

Short-waisted jackets and boleros are still very popular, and so long as blouses are made of such thin fabrics an outer garment of some kind will have to be worn. A heather mixture Scotch tweed skirt would look well, for instance, with a bolero of velveteen in a darker shade, or a complete costume of white linen with a deep collar of rose pink or corn flower and skirt straps to match would be unfailingly attractive. The skirt is a very elegant shape, as the side piece helps to display the fulness of the figure to advantage, and the back pieces being very much broader at the top than usual, the wearer is able to move about with perfect freedom. Four and a half yards of double-width serge for a full-size skirt, and six yards of velveteen for the bolero. A blouse of taffeta silk should be worn beneath the belted bolero, and, if preferred, a bought vest or a fulness of mousseline chiffon could be gathered on to the tight-fitting camisole, which is generally worn over the corset.

THE MODE VOLUMINOUS.

Some Little Nubs of Fashion News.

In fashions as in no other thing of the daily life do the little things count. The set of a collar, the twist of a sleeve, the hooking of waist and skirt together, the style of a button or the shade of the trimming, any one of these if not just exactly so may ruin the most costly gown. And all for the want of a little know-how.

Collars, by the way, are tending toward the two extremes. Either they are very high or the gown is marked by the absence of any collar whatever. Where the collar is dispensed with altogether a necklace or one of the old-time velvet neckbands takes its place. Of course, the presence or absence of the collar will depend entirely upon the effect it has on one's general appearance, the more youthful gladly electing to follow the St. Cecilia style, while their elders will don the now abbreviated band.

The vogue of girdles and sashes may be really said to be rampant. The costume that does not show this feature in some one form or another is rare. Quite a fad it is for the simple house frocks and velling to have several sets consisting of cravat and girdle to match, these fashioned upon featherbone foundations, and eligible for wear with almost any costume. Indeed, such a craze has the girdle reached that one might truthfully describe some of the evening bodices as a belt and bertha, for the belt or girdle part ofttimes reaches almost to the sleeve seam, and the bertha is so frilly and fluffy and so wide extending that one loses sight of the fact that there is a boned and fitted waist lining beneath. Long and broad sash ends are a dressy feature of many frocks, and lace and mallnes are used to frill the edges and fringes are liberally applied on the ends.

In sleeves, those beacon lights of current and passing styles, there is a very decided liking evinced for the half or three-quarter length. Of course, the girl who follows the fashions already knows that all the fulness is pushed above the elbow in the new frocks. She knows, too, that the sloping shoulder has been declared passe, and that the new gowns that are daily arriving at the custom-house as models for the American trade are all of them built out on the shoulder, little whalebones or featherbones being sprung on the sleeve lining, or else a fluffy bit of princess haircloth, light as a feather, is deftly draped on the forearm, between lining and outer sleeve.

With the incoming of the Directoire styles there comes that fascinating lace jabot and wrist ruffles. These are among the luxuries that command a large and often disproportionate price in the shops and which the girl with nimble fingers can fashion for herself for a fraction of that price. The best shops have always odds and ends of fine lace that they are glad to close out for next to nothing, and here is the needleworker's opportunity. Facings for the revers that are making such a furore abroad are another home production that can be made dainty and artistic at little cost, and the girl who paints can have handpainted silk that royalties command in their state garments and apply it to her smart velvet costume with the most exquisite effect.

Vests with cuffs en suite are very smart worked in kid or suede of delicate tint. The oldfashioned nailheads in all sorts of colors are often used with spangles between, and every known kind of embroidery from the finest filo to the ribbon encrusted embroideries of the Marie Antoinette period are in the highest kind of vogue.

The thinnest and sheerest of handkerchief linen or batiste is used for the chemisettes, and cuff bands often accompany the design. Little floral sprigs and sprays are done in the finest of white linen thread, all the tucking is hemstitched, and the old-time vellings add to the fairylike appearance of the finished article.

Beaded bags maintain all of their vogue, this largely, one suspects, because they are intrinsically expensive productions, and the machine-made imitation can be told at a glance. The old-time patterns that are determined by the sequence of the beads in stringing are still favored, and very gracefully, indeed, do they accord with the revival of the other old-time features in dress. Some of them are shown with exquisite hand-wrought silver mountings, veritable copies of antique. The lining is usually of white kid or heavy white satin. A recent bride in New York gave her train of eight bridesmaids each a beautiful specimen with their monograms interwoven in the design, and mounted on the new double frames, which gives really two bags in one.

A clever use is made in an imported costume of the crossed bands spoken of before in this column. The material is the new chiffon faille francaise; the bands are on the bias and folded into the armholes about level with the bust. Crossed in front, they are carried down under the arms, and cross again in the back, the long ends falling sash fashion to the hem of the skirt. Anything simpler, at the same time smarter, could not be imagined, and especially so as the remainder of the bodice continues from the bust to a sharp point below the waist in the extreme of the straight-front styles.

Tucker Blouse and Flounce Skirt.

This design is suitable for making up liberty fabrics, such as silk crepolines or any kind of soft woolen material. The material of the blouse is cut all in one piece, and can be either knife-pleated or gathered on to the back and front yoke foundation. Pleated chiffon or embroidered silk lisse could be stretched on to the upper part of the foundation, but it must be arranged over the shoulders without seams. In order to obtain the necessary slope the sleeves have to be gathered on below the tops of the tight-fitting lining, the tendency of fashion being to make the shoulders deeper. The skirt is shaped out all in one, and a deep flounce measuring four and a half yards in circumference at the hem has to be sown on to the hem of the upper part. Six and a half yards of double width materials is enough for a full size skirt, and three yards for the blouse.

Unique Way of Serving Ices.

A somewhat extravagant, but pretty, way of serving ice-cream at a girls' luncheon was recently inaugurated at Washington. At the due time the waiters brought to each fair guest a pretty plate on which was lying a pink rose with abbreviated stem, cut off short so as not to drag the rose with its freight off the platter. The fresh heart of the rose had been pinched out by the stern fingers of the presiding genius, and the space gained was used as a receptacle for ice-cream. The roses were so large that they really contained a good helping of ice-cream. The cream was frozen very stiff. The roses all matched.

Velvets and Velveteens Now in the Lead.

RECEPTION TOILETTE IN VELVET AND LACE.

The favored transparent yoke is seen in this gown of rich violet velvet, accomplished in a heavy Italian guipure, with chiffon beneath. The bertha of the same lace is defined with a band of sable, and little knots of the same fur accentuate the pattern of the lace. The fitted ceinture is of alternate lilac and violet velvet, and the full puff sleeve has an unturned cuff of lace and a wrist ruffle. The skirt is closely fitted around the hips, and the fulness at the foot is increased by the full circular flounce that is applied beneath a heading of the furred lace.

WITH FULL RIPPLE BASQUE.

There is a dainty grace to this costume of velveteen in the rich mulberry red that is reminiscent of the far-off days from which the design is drawn. The coat shows the new built-out shoulder, the sleeve boldly pleated to the shoulder seam and puffed out well above the elbow, and the full-draped cuff falling gracefully over the hand. The coat is shirred to the shoulder seams, the fulness gently caught at the waist line, and very full shirred basques fall almost to the knee. A shaped flat emplecement is laid front and back over the shoulders, this decorated with fancy braids, and the same braids appear in graceful design above the hem of the extremely full-pleated skirt. A 10-inch insertion of princess haircloth in the drop skirt, which incidentally is of a plaid taffeta, gives just the correct flottant effect to the full masses of the velvet skirt.

THE MODE VOLUMINOUS.

The voluminous modes of the moment seem especially built for the tall and slender girl, the one upon whom Dame Fashion models all of her caprices. Here the blouse coat appears above a fitted girdle, the lace jabot adding a grateful touch of daintiness. The sleeve is a full puff to the elbow, and another smaller puff surmounts the trimmed cuff. The skirt is laid in side pleats stitched down with a double row of stitching, and three rows of this simple but smart machine work appear on the hem.

COSTUME IN VELVET, SABLES AND REAL LACE.

The conjunction of velvet, fur and real lace has from time immemorial been one of the most favored of fashion, expressing, as it does, a combination of richness and beauty such as few others offer. The exquisite costume of the picture shows the new fitted corsage, with the broad, square shoulder, this entirely in the thread Chantilly lace over white chiffon, this in turn over a boned and fitted lining of white taffetas. The fronts open over a vest of white embroidered suede, and the girdle is covered with a spray in Russian guipure. Smart little postillons, edged with the sable, appear below the waistline. The skirt is cut en circle, with paneled inserts of Chantilly over chiffon, the medallion pattern being defined with spangle appliques. The sable appears above the hem and enframes the large lace inset on the sides, a bow knot serving to emphasize this dainty feature.

A DRESSY CREATION IN VELVETEEN.

The velveteens really may be said to share favor with their cousins of the all-silk weave, and in the new fast colorings that will not rub or stain they are delightfully smart and at the same time economical. The bodice is disposed with a vest of braided cloth, the velveteen draped bolerowise on either side, and the vest brought down in a straight front point below the waistline. The sleeve is a full, draped puff affair, a large puff to the elbow and a smaller one below. The skirt is arranged in gores, each alternate one being shirred to the semblance of a yoke on the hip, a broad double-box pleat appearing in the back. Covered buttons are disposed gracefully, and a tabbed and braided band of the cloth appears above the hem.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE LYCEUM

Arthur Dunn In "The Runaways" on Monday Night and Ben Hendricks In "Ole Olson" on Friday and Saturday.

'The Runaways," the musical extravaganza, which will be the attraction at the Lyceum on Monday evening, is said to be the most elaborate of all the great Casino successes. The claim is made that Messrs. Shubert, Nixon & Zimmerman expended $75,000 on the production before it began its career of over six months at the New York Casino. The plot of "The Runaways" concerns an American army officer, who was a waiter in his early days, and is now a plunger at the race track. He is a confirmed dyspeptic and therefore it is quite reasonable to find him the guardian of a pretty army nurse. The general's horse wins the suburban, the horse being ridden for the occasion by the general's son, who is the black sheep of the family. This annoys a tall patent medicine man, and a short detective who wanted to see another horse win. Therefore, they all leave for an island in the Pacific ocean—facetiously called the Island of Table D'Hote.

As soon as the general steps ashore, he is made the king of the island and is expected to marry the Princess Angelcake, but she prefers the general's protege, Bob Gray. The general, thereupon, is requested to marry the six widows of the late king, all young and pretty, but he does not, and is sentenced to death instead, which is, perhaps preferable. The medicine man, who is tall, and his confederate, who is short, are also doomed to die, but at the critical moment, an American warship arrives. Then, of course, nobody is killed, but all are united to the guns of their choice.

The music by Raymond Hubbell is said to be exceedingly good, some of the twenty little song hits being catchy enough to set the audience humming and whistling. In addition to Arthur Dunn, the well-known comedian, who heads the company, the cast contains many metropolitan favorites, including Charles Dox, Clarence Harvey, W. E. Meehan, Thomas Whitbread, Misses Erminie Earle, Blanche Wayne, Sallie Randall, the Althea sisters and nearly 100 others. In the chorus, which is said to be the prettiest of all recent New York successes, are three distinct groups of beautiful girls—the six widows, the daisies and comic opera queens.

BEN HENDRICKS.

Clever Comedian to Be Here In "Ole Olson."

The Northland singer, Ben Hendricks, in his favorite play "Ole Olson," is coming to Duluth this week. "Ole Olson" is a great play. It has scored a hit in every place it has been produced. It is a play that leaves a pleasant flavor behind it, a flavor of rustic romance and brings deeds of goodness and simplicity sufferiag through three acts to rise triumphant over frustrated villainy and irritating misconception. Mr. Hendricks is an actor of ability, has a voice of singular pathos and power and his singing has the peculiar quality which suddenly clarifies the imagination and for the moment lifts the hearers quite out of themselves. With al this he is an actor of uncommon grace and spirit, has a fine presence and willing face, and a good Swedish accent that is equal to any linguistic emergency. During the performance Mr. Hendricks will sing six new songs "Fair Land of Sweden," "Philopene," "Northland Lullaby," "Pass It On" and "That's My Friend." Mr. Hendricks brings a large company and specia scenery.

The Lyceum dates are Friday and Saturday evenings of next week.

"THE PRINCESS CHIC."

Comic Opera to Be Here Early In November.

"The Princess Chic" is to be seen in Duluth Tuesday and Wednesday, and Wednesday matinee, Nov. 1 and 2. The company presenting this delightful opera is said to be stronger and better than ever this season. George Calahan has returned to play the role of Brevet, the soldier of fortune, in the piece. Mr. Callahan created this role originally. "The Princess Chic" deals with the closing splendor of feudal days, and with the attempt of Louis XI of France to subjugate, through strategy, Charles the Bold of Burgundy. These are the only historical personages introduced, the character of the Princess herself being purely a fiction of Kirke La Shelle's fancy, but none the less a logical product of the age. One of the chief charms of "The Princess Chic" is that the story allows Sophie Brandt opportunity for the display of her many charms in several becoming disguises. She appears first as her own envoy, afterwards in the picturesque dress of the Norman peasant girls, and at last in the royal robes of the Princess herself. The excellent scenic and sartorial investure used in this opera has not been equaled by any comic opera production easily recalled at this time.

KYRLE BELLEW.

Great Actor to Bring Rapples to Duluth.

Odd in title, and fully as unique in character and as intense in interest, is "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," the play that will bring the famous English actor, Kyrle Bellew, to the Lyceum Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Saturday, Nov. 4 and 5.

No play in New York last season attracted more attention than this one. It was given at the Princess and Savoy theaters 200 times, and was the only drama of the year to pass the double century mark in the metropolis. Duluth will see it just as it was presented there, the same splendid cast being employed. The support included no less famous and capable an actor than E. M. Holland. Himself a star of the first magnitude, it is unusual for Mr. Holland to enter the company of another star. "Raffles," as now is generally known, is a fascinating study in criminology, based upon E. W. Hornung's exciting series of sketches published in two volumes, under the titles of "Raffles" and "The Amateur Cracksman." The play is the antithesis of Sherlock Holmes, the central figure being a gentleman-burglar, a sort of social highwayman, who terrorizes, in a thoroughly urbane and courteous manner, upper English society. To stimulate interest, a detective is made one of the leading characters, and this is the role assumed by Mr. Holland. In the part of the debonair, cool and triumphant Raffles, the dashing Bellew has one of the most congenial roles of his career. Clara Blandick, one of the handsomest and most talented actresses, is Mr. Bellew's leading woman, playing Gwendolyn Conron, the girl who loves the irresistable Raffles in spite of the little irregularities concerning Lady Melrose's $100,000 diamond necklace. Hattie Russell, Beverley Sitgreaves, Olive Wyndham, Mignon Berenger, Stanton Elliott, Frank McCormack, Frank Connor and Starling Gates round out the excellent cast.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

This evening Thomas Jefferson will appear at the Lyceum in his portrayal of the loveable old vagabond, "Rip Van Winkle." Mr. Jefferson gives excellent satisfaction wherever he appears. His supporting company this season is said to be an excellent one, and Washington Irving's fascinating play will be given in true Jeffersonian style.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

Blanche Ring in "Vivian's Papas" is coming to Duluth and Superior soon for two performances.

"Whose Brown," one of the cleverest comedies on the road, and playing the large city theaters, is coming to Duluth and Superior soon.

Ralph Stewart, in the Russian play, "By Right of Sword," is underlined for the Lyceum.

"The Wizard of Oz" is coming to the Lyceum soon. It is captivating the Pacific coast cities at the present time.

THE BILL AT THE METROPOLITAN

"Her First False Step" on Thursday, Friday and Saturday Nights, With Saturday Matinee.

"Her First False Step," a new sensational drama by Joseph Le Brandt, which is to be presented at the Metropolitan theater three nights and a Saturday matinee, commencing Thursday, contains one of the most startling scenes ever introduced in a melodrama. A den of savage lions is the feature of the fourth act and a little child is thrown into the cage by her brutal father. The scene is thrilling to the exereme.

The play opens on a farm in New Hampshire. The kitchen of a country home is shown, and during this scene the village quartet and a rollicking country dance furnish excellent entertainment.

The second act takes place in New York. The stage is a novel one and shows the interior and exterior of a bank. A realistic bank robbery is introduced and the act closes with a strong climax. The third act is the interior of a wretched tenement, the home of the unhappy woman, whose first false step in marrying a man unworthy of her comes so near to wrecking her life. The first scene of the fourth act is a dock scene showing Brooklyn bridge in the distance. Two large steamboats are used in this scene and the scene ends with an exciting rescue of the heroine from the East river.

It is in the last secene of this act, however, that the author introduces his strongest thrill. This act is a wonderfully life-like representation of the interior of the menagerie tent. The cages of wild beasts are shown, a den of lions in the center. Into this den the villain throws his own daughter, but the hero of the play rushes into the cage, beats back the lions and rescues the child.

An entertaining vein of comedy runs through the play and the company includes such well-known names as James Norval, Garrett Campbell, William F. Granger, John A. Dale, Albert Dale, E. C. Strickland, Willie Barrows, Genevieve Blinn, Ella Fountainbleau, Josie Barrows and Mae Barnard.

Little Dorothy, the child who appears in the play, will hold a reception after the matinee Saturday afternoon and will at that time feed the lions.

BILLY CLIFFORD TO COME.

C. F. Whitaker, who presents "Her First False Step," at the Metropolitan next week, will bring Billy Clifford in a melodramatic farce comedy entitled "Who Won Her," to the Metroplitan later in the season.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Cheridah Simpson Has Secured a Divorce —Eugenia Blair To Star In "Iris"—Lillian Russell Has a New Musical Comedy.

New York, Oct. 22.—Cheridah Simpson, the handsome prima donna of "Woodland" was last week granted a divorce from her husband, Jose Van den Berg, the first oboe player of the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra. Miss Simpson, after her marriage to the widely known musician, discovered that he had a wife and child in London, and upon her representation that he had not been legally separated from them the annulment of her marriage was granted.

Eugenia Blair has secured the American rights to "Iris," the Pinero drama that Virginia Harned introduced to this country. Miss Blairy is organizing her company and will soon start out on a tour of the territory that has not yet been covered with this play.

• • •

Lillian Russell is reported to have under advisement a new musical comedy in which she may become the star under the management of the Shuberts. The piece is called "My Lady Teazle," and is based upon the Sheridan comedy, "The School for Scandal." The book is by John Kendrick Banks and Robert Penfield, with music by A. Baldwin Sloane. The success of adapting the old English comedies to comic operas has proved successful in the cases of Lulu Glaser and Fritzi Scheff's present vehicles, and it is thought that Lillian Russell can succeed equally as well in the same undertaking. A decision from the prima donna is expected shortly, and if she consents to return to the stage she will be surrounded by one of the biggest companies organized in recent years.

• • •

Marguerita Sylva has still under consideration a flattering offer to become the prima donna of the Lew Fields company, now being organized by Managers Hamlin, Mitchell and Fields. The offer has been open to Miss Sylva for a long time, and she is seriously contemplating its acceptance. So far the only thing in the road is that the beautiful singer is anxious to take up further musical studies in Europe this year and had made all arrangements to that end when Mr. Fields began negotiations with her. It is now quite likely that she will defer her European trip for some time and become one of the stars in the clever company this popular player is gathering for his New York theater. If Miss Sylva goes with Fields it wil be in the same capacity that Lillian Russell so long occupied with the old Weber and Fields companies.

• • •

It develops that George Alexander will not be able to do "Raffles" in London after all. It seems that the English actor manager's announcement that he would produce that play in the British metropolis was all right until George Tyler heard of it. Then the cables got busy, and after a good deal of flashing back and forth, it dawned upon Mr. Alexander that in the expensive but not overly polite American colloquialism he has purchased a gold brick. The play is by Eugene Presbrey and the world's acting rights to it are held by Tyler for Liebler & Co. He has already given a copyright performance of the drama in London, and at the end of his present tour in this country, Kyrle Bellew is to be sent over to London, to produce "Raffles" at one of Charles Frohman's theaters in that city. Mr. Alexander had made his negotiations with an English play-broker, who had secured the rights to dramatize the story from E. W. Hornung, the author of the book. It is said, however, that Presbrey, in his dramatization, has used so little of the original story that his play is almost entirely independent of ever making a second play out of the book without infringin puon the rights of the American dramatist.

• • •

That Richard Mansfield intends to take out this season an unusually large number of plays was proved last week when a contract was let by the eminent actor for the fire-proofing of ten sets of scenery for as many plays which are to be included in his repertoire this year.

• • •

David Belasco and Maurice Campbell, managers for Henrietta Crossman in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," are having trouble booking that star. Last week, in Trenton, N. J., they brought suit against Manager Mishler, of the State theater there, to compel him to permit the performance of the comedy in his State Street theater and also in theaters under his control in Altoona and Johnstown, Pa. It turned out during the action that Mishler was a resident of the state of New Jersey, and the action brought there was thrown out of court. Belasco now claims that he will demand that the Trenton house be opened to him on a contract calling for a performance there, for which he was to receive 75 per cent of the gross receipts. He will sue the management for damages, he threatens, unless Miss Crossman is given the dates originally booked for her in all the Meshler theaters.

• • •

That an actress or actor is sometimes the life of a play is proved in the case of the farce, "Vivian's Papas," which is to close its season in the West next week. This merry farce was tried in New York and found wanting. It was subsequently sent on the road with Blanche Ring in the title role, and it became a big winner. In Chicago the past summer it had a prosperous stay at Power's theater and subsequently did well on the road. It is to be closed in the midst of its prosperity because Blanche Ring, whose presence in the cast made the farce a go, is to retire in order to take up rehearsals of her new part in the musical comedy, "The Enchanted Isle," by Frank Pixley, with music by Victor Herbert. It is in this field that Miss Ring has been most successful, and she is looking forward to a return to musical comedy with anxiety.

Charles Warner, the English actor, who made a strong impression in this country in his remarkable play, "Drink," is listed as the latest possible addition to the American vaudeville ranks. It is said that Mr. Warner is not satisfied with his new play, recently produced in London, and will likely come over here in January to take up a series of vaudeville dates. He has four one-act plays which he contemplates giving in the vaudeville theaters.

• • •

Harrison Gray Fiske, manager of his wife, Minnie Maddern Fiske, and the Manhattan theater in New York, is recovering from a long siege of typhoid fever and hopes to be able to resume his theatrical work next week. Mr. Fiske was quite low for a time and has been slowly recovering from the attack of the disease which for a time threatened to end his career.

• • •

Arthur Wing Pinero, in his latest piece, "A Wife Without a Smile," has departed from the run of problem plays he has been writting in recent years and turned back to the old French farces for his inspiration. The play was presented for the first time in London last week, and apparently the older style of entertainment as handled by England's foremost dramatist is not as well liked as the other plays. It was only fairly received and is hardly destined to meet with any extended success. Marie Illington and Dion Boucicault play the principal roles and are praised by the critics for their individual efforts in a rather listless opportunity.

• • •

James Carew, an actor hitherto unknown, has been engaged for Maxine Elliott's company in "Her Own Way." He makes the fifth for one part since Arthur Byron left it.

• • •

Madge Lessing, who played with De Wolf Hopper in "Wang," left recently to take the leading feminine role in a new London production, "Sergeant Brue."

• • •

Nat M. Wills, who has always played either vaudeville or popular-priced houses, expects to follow the Cohens' lead and try the high-priced houses next year. George Broadhurst has a new comedy for him. It is not stated whether or not he will continue in tramp roles.

• • •

Oscar Asche, the English actor who did well with Virginia Harned in "Iris," has gone back to London to start a play of his own called "The Prayer of the Sword." It is described as a gloomy affair, which his fine acting redeems.

• • •

A new advertising means was employed in Philadelphia recently by Florence Bindley, who is playing "The Street Singer." In this she operates one of the old-fashioned grind organs, and this she took and stood on a street corner. She incidentally collected $11.63 from the charitably disposed people of the sleepy-city before they caught the trick.

• • •

Fritzi Scheff did not find another "Babette" in "The Two Roses," her new play, if all accounts be true. Gustave Kerker has been called to Washington to bolster up the Englander music, which is declared to be weak, and reports have it that only the star's personality saved the opera from flat failure. Several new numbers have been grafted into the thing, and it is now hoped to make it a go.

• • •

Fred C. Whitney has refused to let any of his numerous chorus girls wed millionaires while "on duty." He says the girls who become famous in a day by this means grate on his nerves. The "broilers" and "show girls" will have to seek new methods of advertising or resign. This won't take any out of his choruses, it is supposed, as actualities of this sort are too few to be counted.

• • •

The New York managers have cut out all lithographing and window work, and there is a wail from the army of deadheads who fattened on this sort of thing. The managers find that the newspapers give them all needed publicity and that the deadheads, who are their severest critics, have only been a nuisance, anyhow.

• • •

"Way Down East" has been played nearly 15,000 times in the United States and is still playing as popular as ever. That is almost a record for a "b'gosh" play.

• • •

Ednea Wallace Hopper, so rumor hath it, will desert tights and the lyric stage for comedy. "A Country House" is to be her vehicle. One will miss Edna in trousers wonderfully.

• • •

Lionel Barrymore will probably be starred next year. Augustus Thomas is to write the play.

• • •

Clara Wieland, a new "Peggy" for the Savage show of that name, claims quite a cosmopolitan career. She has sung in London, Paris, Egypt and South Africa. She was born in England.

• • •

While Otis Skinner is presenting "The Harvester," his new play from the French in one New York theater, Jean Dulac, who created the corresponding role in the first French production, will be playing it in that language just across the street from Skinner. Jean Richepin wrote "The Harvester," and Otis Skinner's brother Charles, made the English adaption.

• • •

Leslie Leigh, the prima donna of "The Isle of Spice," has written a march and will direct the orchestra between acts while it is played, in a Boston theater. She is quite a composer, as well as singer.

• • •

Mrs. James Brown Potter's new play, "The Golden Light," has failed enormously in London, after a three nights' run, and, as she has nothing else in hand, she has closed her season. And this, after a series of gowns designed to show her emotions during the play. What a waste of press agent material.

• • •

Richard Harding Davis is bringing a new play back with him from Japan, where he was marooned while the fighting was going on with a lot more "war" correspondents. If he based it on what he thought of his own experiences there it would be immense.

• • •

A "No 2" company is to be sent out to play "The Pit," the dramatization of the book of that name, while interest in both is hot. The "No. 2" people will play the "smaller cities," it is announced.

• • •

Robert Edeson's new play is to be called "Strongheart." It relates to a college educated Indian who goes back to the wilds.

• • •

Some of the London theaters have adopted a new style theater ticket, which bears the name o fthe house, the attraction, the price of the ticket, date and seat number, and even the hour of beginning. Something like that over on this side would be acceptable.

• • •

Dorothy Tennant, who is playing the title role in "The College Widow," the new Ade play, is a cousin of Mrs. Henry M. Stanley. She is from the West and is making a great hit

• • •

The manager of a play with scenes laid in California has made a proposition to the San Jose chamber of commerce to give away a pound of prunes with each ticket, San Jose to furnish the prunes. "Prune matinees," with prunes put up as bon-bons for the women in his idea. Isn't that almost the limit?

• • •

The ending of "Taps," the new Kelcey-Shannon play from the German was too tragic for milk-and-water New York and had to be made happy, instead of logical. Instead of killing his daughter, the old soldier, now shoots her betrayer, and thus destroys the very import of the play, which deals with the iron bound caste in the German army. But New York wanted it that way, and the money grabbing "skindicate" was willing, for the dollars' sake. Too bad.

• • •

Harry Beresford's new play, "Our New Man," is making a hit. He is attracting deserved attention in it, and the company back of him is said to be excellent.

• • •

There is a story out that the management of "Louisiana," the big music hall exposition spectacle in St. Louis is trying to get Lillian Russell for the pricipal role, and to send it on tour. Both reports are declared to be "spooks."

• • •

Nettie Black, for long a "boy" in extravaganza, has gone into vaudeville. She will probably continue to wear tights; at least, let us hope so.

• • •

Vernona Jarbeau has joined Charles Hawtrey, the eminent English actor, and they will continue in a vaudeville stunt. Hawtrey seem to have deserted the "legit" entirely.

LONDON LIKES THE AMERICAN SHOW GIRLS

How They Win Social Success There, and Why—They Need No Chaperons and They Are Never Dull.

New York, Oct. 22.—The news that another graduate from the chorus is soon to be married to a wealthy English nobleman will doubtless send another cargo of show girls from the Rialto to the Strand in the spring. Ever since one conspicuous instance which sent a girl playing an inconspicuous role to the first rank and later to stardom in musical comedy the tendency of the chorus maiden has been Londonward.

For some reason the American chorus girl is marvelously popular in the British capital. While all do not achieve stellar fame, they are nevertheless the objects of a great deal of attention of a different sort from that offered to them here.

The refining effect of London upon the chorus girl is one of the things most wonderful to contemplate. She no sooner wins any sort of success abroad than she sets up a small establishment of her own with two or three servants, all of which is as possible as a flat with one colored maid in New York, and no show girl worth a thought is content with anything less in the way of a home once her name appears in print on the program.

The first noticeable change in the American chorus girl in London is the English accent and style she immediately adopts. She no longer chews gum and wears rings on her thumbs. She ceases to wear make-up in the street and becomes the most demure of young women.

Her ankle-length skirt and her French heels disappear. She puts on a long trailing dress and a frilly hat. She drives about in a hansom and scorns to walk in the Strand as she would on Broadway. Her glance is downcast and discreet. By and by she ties her hat under her chin and carries a little dog or cat with her when she goes out.

She drinks tea ostentatiously at the hotels, and after the play you will see her supping in the dining rooms of the Savoy, the Carlton or the Cecil grill room.

The reason for the social success of the American chorus girl is not so much her superiority over the English girl, but the fact that her training and position allow her to go about escorted by a man and without a chaperon. Then the usual London chorus girl is not so interesting as the New York variety.

It is rumored that if you wander behind the scenes at a Drury Lane show you may see the native chorus girl frying bacon over a gas stove, perhaps darning stockings or quieting a crying baby while she waits to go on with her glittering associates.

The London chorus maiden is wretchedly paid and usually badly fed. She has none of the joyous and debonair quality usually in evidence wherever a gathering of these young women is encountered in upper Broadway even when they are looking for places and have little in the way of cash or clothing to make them happy.

So when the American type of show girl appears in London with her joyous manner, her slang, her good appetite and her usually generous share of good looks, she is popular at once. No prejudice forbids her accepting an invitation to supper or luncheon alone with an escort, yet her monner on such occasions is quite correct, so far as the essentials are concerned. She is a new type to the Londoner, and so she becomes popular.

One reason for the refining influence of London on the New York chorus maiden is that women do not go about alone there as in New York. The spectacle of women dining unescorted is rarely seen, except in one or two restaurants where no woman of reputation ventures. Once in a while two or three American women will storm the citadel of some famous restaurant, but they will be at once put down as Americans by the English men and women present.

Another cause for the social success of the chorus girl abroad is that actors of both sexes stand higher in England than in America. The singers and actors who are asked to sing and recite at the most exclusive London houses are not only well pair, but are frequently introduced as distinguished guests. This is in direct contradiction of the fashion set by a Newport hostess, who had the supper for the members of a theatrical company who performed for her guests served in the servants' hall.

NEW YORK THEATERS

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, George Ade, Victorien Sardou, Henry Miller and Otis Skinner Posted On the Theatrical Billboards For New Shows.

New York, Oct. 22.—The beautiful face of Mrs. Patrick Campbell and the comic one of Lew Dockstader mark the extremes of portraiture on our theatrical posters of new entertainments, and between them Henry Miller and Otis Skinner are pictured, and the names of George Ade and Victorian Sardou appear in tall letters "Charles Frohman presents 'The Sorceress,' by Victorian Sardou, with Mrs. Patrick Campbell," so the announcement reads, and the arrangement of words means that the actress is "featured," but not "starved." The public may not care anything about that, nor be particularly interested in the fact that it is Manager C. F. who presents the latest work of Author V. S. with Actress P. C. in it, but it is of consequence to that actress, because that manager is the only one who could put her into a role which that author wrote for Sarah Bernhardt. Hitherto Mrs. Campbell has portrayed enigmatic characters in curious modern plays of social problems. Now we have her as a woman whose agonies are analogical in a mediaeval romance that is lurid while it is lurid.

They met by chance in a forest, by moonlight at midnight. The Spanish Captain Enriquez and the Moorish Zoraya, and his love ignited at the first glance of her enflaming eyes. We have heard from Paris how entrancing Mme. Sarah was in that encounter, and I don't doubt it, for a rare old grandmother for girlishness is the French actress, but I am willing to swear by Mrs. Pat for superior loveliness. She is out to gather flowers for scents and herbs for medicines, for she is a Lady Dainty, who likes to smell nice perfumes, and a Lady Bountiful who likes to send cuisines to the sick. Why does she go posy and plant hunting at night? Oh! ask Sardou. It is reason enough for Enriquez and me that she is superlatively beautiful in the moonshine. Mrs. Pat has hown herself in low-cut modern gowns that may make you put your opera glases to your eyes, but they were staid and shy by contrast with the role of this Sarah-ne perfecto. When she throws off an enveloping gauze and stands forth uncovered—absolutely bare—above a breast and back level of several inches below her armpits, without so much as a tape over her shoulders or a bit of lace on her arms, the audience is amazed. Can the nudity be real? Isn't sh covered with some delicate, flesh-tinted fabric? No. Those surfaces of brunette skin are Mrs. Pat's own, in all their smooth shapeliness, and the spectators don't care whether or not a Moorish fashion plate of the sixteenth century, if one could be found, would give historic authority to that toilet.

Zoraya is one more of those creatures of passion whom Sardou has created in a long succession of entrancing sinners in the Barnhardt melodramas. She lures Enriquez from the woods to her palace, and the maiden between a Christian and a Moslem gets them before the Inquisition, for such a mix of religion is a capital offense. The witcheries she has practiced on her lover are those common to women since Adam was undone by Eve, but she does practice medicine in ways ignorantly deemed occult, and she has a hypnotic power which to the superstitious seems diabolical. So her condemnation to the stake is inevitable. She denounces her judges and declares her innocence in an eloquent tirade; but when told that she can save her lover's life by a confession that she has bewitched him by sorcery, she falsely accuses herself, although he doesn't deserve it, for he has married a Christian maiden while consorting with the Moslem creature. One of the peculiarly Sardou incidents is Zoraya's jealous intrusion at the wedding, and her putting of the bride into a hypnotic trance, so that she can't be awakened during the nuptial night. When brought to the stake Zoraya consents to arouse the bride as the price of her own release; but when she is set free the mob seizes her, and would burn her along with Enriquez for defending her, whereupon he and she commit suicide with one of her mysteriously deadly poisons.

Mrs. Campbell distinguishes herself by a Bernhardt performance, with an uncommonly good company and a production said to be finer than the one in Paris.

George Ade is understood to have written "The She-Gun" under protest, to have pleaded with Mr. Savage that he did not want to write any more comic opera librettos, but desired to devote himself to legitimate dramas. But Mr. Savage had an idea, insisted on his contract and made the first effort with his American Gilbert and Sullivan combination, as he is said to have termed the collaboration of Ade and Luders. The remark about leading a horse to the water but not being able to force him to drink has its theatrical significance. Mr. Savage probably realizes that Ade isn't another Gilbert nor Luders a second Sullivan. But why did he allow them to undertake their emulation of the masters of comic opera by choosing a Japanese subject? Not in the whole range of drama and opera has any one subject been more masterfully treated, or so thoroughly exhausted, as have the comic possibilities of Japanese superstitions and customs in "The Mikado." The point of view in "The Geisha" is so different that comparison is hardly damaging, but "The She-Gun" at every turn and tune suffers in contrast almost as a new musical setting of "Carmen" would to what Bizet has left us. Popularly this may have little effect; artistically it hurts Ade and Luders.

Don't understand me as saying that "The She-Gun" is a failure. It is a success, and superior to most of the American-made librettos; but the choice of subject and its treatment are less happy than Ade made with politics for his comedy of "The Country Chairman," or more especially with football in "The College Widow." However, "The She-Gun" is a show that deserves to run on its merits, some of which are finely spectacular. For example, the inevitable American warriors don't march in as spick-and-span marines, but as a company of soldiers, grimed and tattered from the hardships of a campaign; and their entrance is exceedingly picturesque with a realistic dust and breaking through a wall. That is a rousing sight.

As surely as Ade hit it hard with that dramatic effect, so surely did he miss it with another. But in that instance the failure left the fall of the first curtain a good finale of a stereotyped kind, where expert stage management might have created a weird effect, lastingly vivid in the public mind. The widow of the She-Gun has been cast out of the city gates to be devoured by wild beasts. It is sunset. Alone among all the inhabitants the American traveler volunteers to shield her. A few random shots from his revolver seem to accomplish this. But they arouse the populace, who peer over the city wall and swarm above the great gates. Each holds a lantern above his head. Discovering the vicinity to be free from wild animals, and that the eloping ward of the She-Gun is also outside the town, they swing open the gates and arrest the unfortunates. Nothing is odd about their capture, pictorially enacted and musically proclaimed, nor about their disappearance into the town. But when all is again still and night has settled, a single watchman peers above the wall, a search lantern in his hand, and the curtain descends in silence.

Henry Arthur Jones's "Joseph Entangled," brought to Broadway by Henry Miller, begins with the fun of a bachelor and a wife, once sweethearts, sleeping one night by mishance and unwittingly in her husband's house during his absence. Mrs. Mayne comes home in the evening and is put to bed by the housekeeper. Sir Joseph Laey loses his baggage on a journey, finds his club shut for repairs, and is invited to occupy Mr. Mayne's chamber by the butler, who doesn't know his mistress is under the same roof. After so much as that has happened the curtain drops momentarily to signify the passing of the night, and then comes the morning encounter of the astonished hostess and guest. They breakfast merrily together, and talk of their former attachment, he with a polite inclination to be fond, she repulsing his advances amiably, and neither guilty of any indiscretion.

Thus far "Joseph Entangled" is like a clean French farce—if there ever was such a thing—the predicament having comic aspects only. The singularity of Jones's composition is the merging of its fun gradually, yet steadily and reasonably, into a serious case of a jealous husband, an accused wife and a disgracingly involved bachelor. It is in vain that Joseph reiterates his truthful account of his lodging dnawares in the house with his friend's wife. Even his relatives and cronies think he is "lying like a gentleman." His assertions of the woman's purity "upon his honor as a man" are unconvincing, for isn't it the usage among honorable men to swear to the stainlessness of their paramours? The second act is filled with his protestations and the incredulity of all the listeners. It is in this section of the piece that Jones gets away from farce and into satirical comedy of a quality comparable with "The School for Scandal," the characters and their conversation being the best of writing in the Sheridan manner modernized with London types and deportment of today. A third act has no laughter at all, but is tearful with the husband's heart-broken jealousy, the wife's undeserved suffering and the bachelor's useless self-sacrifice to save her. The weak point in the play is the solution of the problem by the easy expedient of having Mr. Mayne eavesdrop at an exculpatory interview between Mrs. Mayne and Joseph. In every other respect this is an original and altogether remarkable comedy.

By a coincidence Richepin's "The Harvesters" is like Sardou's "The Sorceress," right across the street, in having the central character accused of witchcraft. But in the harvester's case the belief is placed to his credit. He is cherished as a mascot, bringing good luck to the farm that he comes to and not known for the evil that he really does to a work girl over whom he throws a spell of love. This fellow is a wayfarer, an idealized tramp, the blithest of workers and the most shiftless of wanderers. Beerholm Tree made him an English gypsy in a version caled "Ragged Robin."

Otis Skinner transports him to Canada without changing the French spirit of the man or the play. He ought to marry the girl Toinette upon his first visit to the neighborhood, but roams away without doing it. His second visit is 20 years later. Toinette is the mother of a grown son, of whom he is the father, and she has a husband who doesn't know the secret of the parentage. Out of that complication comes the portion of the drama that is admirable. Ill fortune has settled down upon the place. The harvester is besought to bring again the prosperity that attended his former presence. His only sorcery has been good humor and buoyant vim, and he applies them to the satisfaction of the neighborhood os before, but now he sets himself also to the task of righting some of his wrong to Toinette by rescuing their son from drunkenness and marrying him to a girl who has been kept from him. Having accomplished that job in necromancy he goes on his way again. The pure diction of Richepin and Skinner combine well in "The Harvester," the wording and the speaking being alike satisfying. A scene in which the father, without revealing his ryelationship, lovingly gains control of his wayward son is effectual with natural pathos in both matter and delivery.

PROSPEROUS FARMS IN ST. LOUIS COUNTY.

bles nothing more than the prairies of North Dakota.

Another feature that appeals strongly to the settlers is the fact that in the last six miles of the main road one is unable to find but four stones and but one stone was located in a clearing of some thirty acres on the experimental farm. The country, therefore, may be said to be absolutely free from stone.

Plenty of good stone for building purposes, however, is to be found in the rapids of the Whiteface river. Both the Whiteface and the St. Louis rivers are bordered by heavy timber, principally oak, elm, maple and basswood. A small sawmill is operated in section 14-53-19 by Messrs. Nilson & Anderson. This plant has, up to the present time, furnished sufficient timber or lumber for the new settlers. The demand has outgrown the capacity of the mill, however, and a new sawmill is contemplated at Payne station by Superior parties. This will have a sawing capacity of 25,000 feet per day and will be equipped with a planer, shingle mill and re-saw for box lumber.

The Duluth, Missabe & Northern company has placed a good depot at Payne station and has stationed there a day and a night operator, also a freight depot. Prominent Duluth parties are now negotiating for the purchase of the townsite of Payne and, as soon as this is settled, lots will be placed on the market and numerous applications for store sites, and locations for other lines of business will receive consideration.

While the lands in the Meadowlands settlement are sold by the railway company at good prices, terms are made easy and purchasers are required to move on the lands and commence improvements at once.

Arrangements are being made to locate warchouses at Payne to take care of all sorts of crops and produce offered for sale by the settlers.

This colony once thoroughly established, it is said to be the intention of the Duluth & Iron Range company to select another locality and start another colony and so, eventually, to do a great work towards settling the agricultural portions of St. Louis county.

A further line of wagon road is contemplated this fall from Payne station to the Miller trunk road via Lake Nichols, provided the settlers are willing to do their share toward clearing up the right of way and starting the road work.

As stated recently by one of the officers, one of the policies of the Iron Range Land department is to help those who will help themselves and to spend its energy and money benefiting those who are willing to put their shoulder to the wheel and do their share in opening up the agricultural lands of this county.

MILLIONAIRE PAUPERS.

left $16 per year for buying flannel shirts. Another man, whose name, Thibaud de Waxheim, proclaims him a foreigner to France and suggests, perhaps, a sad life of adventures before he died in Paris, bequeathed all he had, representing an income of $6.60 to be given each year to a boy orphan.

The records of bequests made to the poor give a singular insight into human nature. Piety and remorse seem to have governed many. Hundreds of testators, leaving their fortunes to the poor, have asked only that an annual mass be said for their souls, and the Assistance Publique, faithfully observing this part of its trust, keeps several churches busy in this way. One benefactor asked that his family tomb be torn down and replaced by another of more graceful model, a sketch of which was appended to the will with a request that it be executed in granite. Gen. Fabvier, a hero of the Napoleonic wars, made the Paris poor his residuary legatees on the condition that the following epitaph be placed as an eternal reproach on his tomb: "To the unhappiest of mothers." One testator founded three perpetual hospital beds on condition that at the head of each should stand statues of four saints, Damien, Cosmo Martin and Margaret. Another left enough money for three scholarships with the stipulation that each new beneficiary should, as soon as chosen, sing the "De Proundis" in memory of him. The Baroness de Montaigne willed that each year twelve children should be taught a trade from the interests on her estates, the children being chosen by drawing lots on which was written: "God has been gracious to me."

Some seek an atonement. One suicide writes: "If I have resolved to leave this world, it is because extreme weakness no longer allows me to bear bravely the load of my slow and painful existence. My remorse at committing an act contrary to religious law leads me to hope that God will forgive me."

FERNS

As the summer days draw to a close and the out-of-door flowers are gone, we naturally turn to the ferns for winter decoration. There is nothing more beautiful than a well-grown specimen, and a few words regarding their care will be gladly welcomed by the readers of The Herald.

The most important thing in their culture is uniformity of moisture at the root, not too wet, nor too dry. The old notion of drying them out once in a while, a thought that must have originated in the bad place, will not do for ferns. Keep them always moist. A jardiniere for the large ones, with an inverted saucer in the bottom of it to keep the pot out of the water, is all right, or a pretty paper wrapped around the pot to prevent a too rapid drying out is good. A very small pot put in a larger one with a little moss in the bottom is also good.

In the summer time they need a shady place, but from now until May 1 there will be no sunshine in Duluth to hurt them; they will be benefited by it.

A few drops of ammonia in the water once or twice a week will help them, or, better still, some of the plant food sold in the stores, but don't overfeed; indigestion is just as bad as starvation, and some kinds will bear more feed than others. The new Pierson or ostrich plume will rejoice in rich food, and it well repays for the care. I do not feed them at all, for should I do so, and the customer not, the plant might go back on itself and I should catch everlasting fits, but even under my culture I measured a frond of this variety in the greenhouse and it was nine inches across, and beautiful beyond words. The Pierson, however, will, being a sport, revert back to the original type of Boston, from whence it sprung, not wholly, but now and then a Boston leaf will show itself, and this leaf can be cut out, if objected to. But why not leave them on? They are pretty. By and by the type will be fixed by good selection of mother plants and then it will be always true.

The Boston is too well known to need a word here, but we have another type of dwarf Boston, now sent out under the name of Scottia, and it is a beauty. The plant is always full and bushy with drooping fronds about two feet long, and small plants make excellent table plants. But the same treatment suits them all.

Reports From the Various Properties Are Good.

Colorado Springs, Col., Oct. 22.—The Gold King company is at the present time making a good tonnage of ore from the bottom level, where an ore body was recently opened. The lessees are able to obtain assays of any value wanted from their recent find.

W. Snape, who recently secured a lease on a block of the Anchoria-Leland, located on Gold Hill, is now saving ore from a depth of twelve feet from surface, on what is known as the Barbee claim. Assays run anywhere from $20 to $60 to the ton. Their initial shipment will be sent out the first part of next week.

Lessee Bilbert and associates, who are cooperating blocks of the Longfellow claim, belonging to the Stratton estate and located on Bull Hill, are sending out regular shipments of $50 ore.

The ore is being mined from a four-foot vein, a short distance from the shaft, in the 250-foot level. The lessees are now considering sinking the shaft another 100 feet for the purpose of obtaining additional stoping ground.

An entirely new body of ore has been encountered between the seventh and eighth levels of the Dillon mine, on Battle Mountain, which will add materially to the value of this territory. The ore body is now measuring about two feet in width, which will give average values of $100 to the ton.

The property, which is under lease to the present lessees, has a remarkable bright future, and while there are only working one shaft, all are sending out regular shipments, which return very handsome sums of money to the company from the royalties received.

Lessee Nelson and associates, who have secured a lease on the tailings of the old Brodie mill which was destroyed by fire some two years ago, and are now making much better than wages by treating this cast off rock, and are receiving gross values of $22 to the ton. The lessees are now trying a new experiment. When the great fire occurred the rock was roasted to a certain degree, and from repeated tests made in the last few weeks they are of the opinion that it can all be treated successfully by the cyanide process, and are now getting out a small shipment which will be sent to one of the mills in the district to test their theories. If successful, the balance of the rock will be hauled to a nearby mill.

Lessee Jones and associates, who are operating under lease the Jeff Davis claim on the Lexington company, are pushing the work in following an ore shoot that was opened by the grader when grading a roadbed to this mine, and which has already produced several thousand dollars' worth of ore.

The lessees have very bright prospects and expect to clean up a small fortune before their lease expires, two years hence.

Asthma Can Be Cured

The statement of Mr. J. F. Homan, 20 E. Adams St., Chicago, proves that the worst cases of Asthma in the world are not only relieved, but are readily cured by Dr. Schiffmann's Asthma Cure. He says: "Asthma kept me in terrible misery for ten years until I used your Asthma Cure. After the first trial I was a changed man. I went to sleep that night and awoke next day much relieved and I have gotten entirely over the Asthma. It is now nine years since I was cured."

Sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00. Send 2c stamp to Dr. R. Schiffmann, Box 894 St. Paul, Minn., for a free trial package.

A New Baby.

A New Baby! What magic, what mystery, what charm these words have for us. Yet, how infinitely more they mean to the mother. A new life; short, to be sure, but full of possibilities. Some one must be patient, hopeful, watchful, proud and never discouraged. That "some one" is the mother. She has heard her baby's first cry, and whether it be her first or tenth, the feeling is the same. Her feeble arms are out-stretched; those arms that will never desert it as long as the mother shall live. And that hand which supports the head of the new-born babe, the mother's hand, supports the civilization of the world.

Is it any wonder, we ask you, mothers, that with all these responsibilities resting upon your all too weak shoulders, we urge upon you the necessity of selecting the babe's medicine with utmost care; the necessity of protecting your babe from worthless, unknown and narcotic drugs as you would protect it from the fire?

THE APRIL GRANDMOTHER

Leader of Society Tells How She Became Younger After Her First Grandchild Came—The Methods of Transformation She Employed.

In English society there is a very beautiful American woman. She is Consuelo, duchess of Manchester.

Before her marriage she was Miss Yznaga, of New Orleans. She was considered the prettiest girl in the South twenty-five years ago. After her marriage to the duke of Manchester she went abroad and immediately became queen of England's smart set.

Today the dowager duchess, as she has become, is one of the handsomest women in England. They call her "the April Grandmother." Her complexion is young and beautiful and her figure very fine. When she attended the christening of her grandchild, some months ago, she was the most attractive woman in the great church. Her daughter-in-law, the present duchess of Manchester, looked scarcely more youthful than she.

The world has many April grandmothers, but not as many as it should have. In these days of youthful marriages, the third generation puts in an appearance early, and the woman who, but a few years before, was a young woman, now finds herself in the background—hopelessly shelved as a grandmother!

Society has several grandmothers of 40 and one at 35. There are numerous pretty women of 45 and 50 with married sons and daughters who have cradles to rock. And, so, the woman who was young just a short time ago suddenly finds herself old. She is a grandmother.

"I may be a grandmother, but I am going to be an April grandmother," said the beautiful Mrs. Cornwallis West when her daughter Sheila married the duke of Westminster. And, when someone smilingly asked Mrs. Langtry what kind of a grandmother she would be to the children of her daughter Jean, she said: "I shall be a young grandmother. You may be sure of that."

Mrs. James Brown Potter, slender as a girl, charmingly chic, beautiful in coloring and delightful in manner, is a grandmother. Her daughter married Mr. Stillman, the New York banker. And Bernhardt—the wonderful and incomparable—is also a grandmother and has been one these many years.

Of April grandmothers there is a great supply in society. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, though she has a son still in school, is a grandmother several times over. Her daughter, the duchess of Marlborough, has given her two fine grandsons, and her son, W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has a raphy growing nursery.

Mrs. Secretary Hay, young and alert, is another April grandmother, while Mrs. William Astor, New York's active society leader, is not only a grandmother, but a great-grandmother. One of her granddaughters is married to Robert Collier, a popular publisher, and her grandson, J. J. Van Alen, Jr., is married and has a family. So neither grandchildren nor great-grandchildren make a woman old.

A woman need not be old as soon as she is a grandmother. Yet there is a something in the term, a certain ageing, a certain passing into history which makes a woman feel as though it were time to lay herself away upon the shelf—time for her to creep into the background.

Too often this feeling of age begins to manifest itself in the appearance. A woman grows neglectful of her looks. She does not carry herself with the same smart air. Her chin droops, and she is like an old horse let out to pasture to die. She soon realizes her position, and then, partly in shame and partly because she does not care, she grows slouchy in her looks and careless in her manner.

A certain woman told the writer that after her first grandchild came she stopped curling her hair. It was gray upon the temples, and she let it gradually whiten instead of keeping it restored to its old pretty black luster. She said that her complexion, which was once very pretty and pink, soon grew yellow, and as for her dress, it became shamefully slack. In five years everybody spoke of her as "Old Mrs. Smith."

Now, if you are a grandmother, take warning by this woman. At 55 she looks as though she might be 65, and when she gets to be 65 she will surely look 70. She has lost pride, and when you lose pride you come very near losing all.

A woman who is prominent in New York and Chicago society, but who does not want her name mentioned, though she is one of the best-known women in the United States, declares that the day she became a grandmother that same day she started in to make herself younger.

"I realized," said she, "that I belonged to the third generation, and I resolved to look as pretty as I could.

"So I went to a hairdresser and had my hair done up a new way. I had its color restored. It was a little streaked and I had it massaged and made all of one color, which was a glossy brown. Then I had it dressed in the new pompadour, which rolls back from the face in the most fetching manner.

"Two days later, after my family had duly admired me, I sought out a wrinkle specialist and had him smooth out my wrinkles. I had him work on my forehead until my frown was gone. I found I had been scowling wickedly, and as soon as he touched the wrinkles I saw that they could be removed—that they were not necessary wrinkles. Three days of massage took them out. But, of course, I realized that they would return unless I kept them massaged away.

"But the greatest improvement was wrought in my teeth. They were full of gold, and I saw, every time I looked in the glass, how ugly they looked. By gaslight they had the appearance of being decayed. So I visited a dentist and had the gold taken out. The dentist was what is known as a cosmetic dentist. He bleached my teeth and restored them so that they looked like new.

"If middle-aged women—grandmothers—only knew how much it would add to their appearance to have nice teeth they would not neglect them so. I find that with nice teeth you can do anything in the world if you will only smile and show them.

"I had all my spaces filled, using bridge and crown work and other artifices. And when the dentist had finished with me my mouth was as fair and pretty as could be. When I smiled there were dimples, and the wrinkles around my mouth seemed to have disappeared somehow.

"Teeth are very important. But, unfortunately, it is painful to have dental work done, and for that reason women stay away from the dentist's, but if they only knew how much their teeth added to their good looks they would have their teeth kept nice, even though it took an hour's pain now and then.

"In these days of anaesthetics dental work is not so very painful and, all considered, there is little excuse for a mouthful of yawning chasms. Crooked mouths and twisted lips can usually be traced to missing teeth.

"Then," continued this woman, "I went still further in my work of improvement. I had read that there were such things as April grandmothers and I determined to be one.

"I made a critical study of my daughter-in-law and myself. Even from a back view—not showing my face—I looked older then she. And I realized that the difference lay in our weights. My shoulders were wide and fat and my neck was heavy, and my waist large, while her figure was slight. She looked 20 and I looked 60, seen from my view.

"So I began to diet. You may talk about exercise. It is all right. But you must diet, also. I limited my coffee to one cup for breakfast and my tea to one cup. I drank nothing between meals. When I felt thirsty I took a mouthful of fruit. I kept a peach, a pear or an orange near at hand, and when my mouth felt parched I took a bite of fruit. You see I had been a great water drinker before my reformation.

"Then as I did not decrease in weight fast enough, I asked the advice of a friend. She was a popular actress and she gained considerable fame by reducing her weight nearly sixty pounds in a season. 'I walked instead of riding,' said she, 'and, of course, I dieted.'

"Well, I followed her advice. I left the horses in the stable and I walked. Each morning, at the first tinkle of my alarm clock, I arose and dressed hastily, then went out for a walk. I would walk an hour, come back and make a leisurely toilet and be ready for the day.

"Of candy, nuts and pastry I ate very little. Just a mouthful now and then, as the old craving for sweets came over me. I took no after-dinner coffee and ate nothing distinctly fattening, such as macaroni, cheese and ice cream. But I did eat corn, potatoes and other vegetables of this nature.

"But I found that I was still a long way behind, when it came to a comparison with my daughter-in-law, so I consulted her as to the cause.

"'I want to be young,' I said, making a clean breast of it. 'And I want to be attractive. Can you tell me the secret of youth?'

"'Dress more youthfully,' said she. And then, being a good-hearted girl, she advised me. And her advice was good.

"'Stop wearing costumes,' said she, 'and put on shirt waists. Choose pretty, well-fitting waists and a bit of lace around your throat or a soft stock. But let your neck be trim and youthful. Try a linen collar or a stiff stock, or something smart and young. Elderly ladies look so very mature with their lace stocks.

"Then, continued she, 'while on the subject of dress, let me advise you about your boots. You are wearing old-fashioned low flat heels. Why do you not try to wear the fashionable Cuban or military heel? It is all a matter of practice.'

"She then added a few more words of good advice on the dress question. And I followed her hints. Within a week I was wearing the dip belt, the semihigh heel, the neat little shirt waist with linen collar and a pretty skirt of sweep length. I wore a natty Eton and I wore my hair low with a ribbon bow. The metamorphosis was complete. I had grown ten years younger.

"But I was still far from being an April grandmother. My hands were old. The veins had come up on the backs of them and my nails were brittle and my skin was yellow. So I treated my hands.

"I had a good nail emollient and rubbed it into my nails every night until they were no longer brittle. I bleached the backs of my hands, taking all the yellowness out of my skin. And I massaged them until the veins went down. Inside of two weeks my hands looked like different hands. They were the hands of a young girl.

"I am now what you would call an April grandmother. I look almost as young as I did twenty-five years ago, and am considered attractive. In my position as one of the leaders of society I am not ashamed to pose as a society leader and a grandmother, too.

"If I were giving the grandmother a few words of advice I would say:

"Be an April grandmother.

"Keep your hands young; observant people soon notice them.

"Have your teeth put in order and keep them so.

"Don't let your waist spread.

"Don't let your hair get out of style.

"Don't think just because you are a grandmother that you can be careless in your eating and drinking—and grow fat.

"Diet and exercise.

"Keep your voice young by modulating it a little.

"Don't croak. Don't complain. Be fresh.

"And don't forget that an April grandmother is as young as she looks."

"The Happy Average," By Brand Whitlock.

"The Truants," By Alfred E. W. Mason.

"The Common Way," By Margaret Deland.

"The Law of the Land," By Emerson Hough.

"The Brethren," By Rider Haggard.

"Leonora, a Tale of the Great Smokies," By Laura Burnett Lawson.

Possibly the majority of people are inclined at times to regard their lives as commonplace, conventional and even a bit stupid. Yet no one else thinks so, and Brand Whitlock's latest book "The Happy Average," just published by the Bobbs-Merrill company, Indianapolis, will show all such how far wrong they have gone. Mr. Whitlock takes what you call two "average people" in an average country, and, without distorting reality, surrounds them with the glamour of romance. Glenn Marley, son of a Methodist minister and graduate from a small Methodist college, comes to Macochee, O., to study law. No sooner has he obtained an unprofitable position with a local attorney than he falls in love with Lavinia Blair, the daughter of a well-to-do judge. The Blairs oppose the match because the young man has neither fortune nor prospects of immediate success. Marley tries to make his way in the little town; then, discouraged, he goes to Chicago. His futile efforts to read law with some prominent firm are followed by more humble pursuits: a job as freight handler which he loses because he does not belong to the union, then employment as a billing clerk. At last, he obtains a place on the local staff of a Chicago newspaper. And eventually from this pinnacle of success he stoops to wed Lavinia, Macochee is the home of several good characters. Wade Powell, the blunt, bright, profane lawyer, who has shocked the prim citizens for years and years, is a realistic portrayal; and various young people who rejoice in banal wit are as entertaining as their prototpyes in real life. Mr. Whitelock has presented a simple and realistic picture of plain people.

The Neale Publishing company, New York, has brought out "Leonora, a tale of the Great Smokies," by Laura Burnett Lawson. In "Leonora" we breathe the pure atmosphere of the great Smoky mountains of North Carolina, and during the reading of this book, and for some time after, one experiences the same exhilaration that he would feel if standing on the tallest peak of this wild and romantic country. Here we have a charming romance of a quaint and interesting people, and we live with the author in their midst. The moonshiner, old Abe Hobson, is of a type that is rapidly disappearing, and who has seldom been given true place in either fiction or history. In this picture of the people of the mountains of North Carolina Mrs. Lawson develops much of the strength of Bert Harte's writings of the early West.

"The Truants," which has been in course of serial publication in Harper's Weekly and is now issued in book form by Harper & Brothers is the work of Alfred Edward Woodley Mason, F. R. G. S., who in addition to his political activities, is the author of ten novels, among them "The Four Feathers." He was born at Dulwich, England, in 1865, was educated at Dulwich college, and took his bachelor's degree at Trinity college, Oxford. A few years ago he was secretary of the archbishop of Canterbury's special committee for amalgamating the Central church committee and the church defense institution. In politics he is a Liberal, and, as such, is now standing for Coventry, one of the largest boroughs in the United Kingdom. Coventry is the center of the cycle trade, and is an industrial city of watchmakers and ribbon-weavers. Mr. Mason is now in the United States studying American conditions with much interest.

When there were no newspapers to express public opinion, questions which agitated the public mind were dealt with by pamphleteers, and the story of the development of the modern newspaper from the eighteenth century pamphlet would be a most interesting chapter in the history of journalism. The power of the pamphlet as first demonstrated by Wycliff, who opened that new literary vein towards the end of the fourteenth century, has been vigorously wielded by many writers since his time, notably by Daniel Defoe, who began in 1687. The great Dean Swift took up the weapon a few years later. The story of his work in this connection, and the powerful influence of his pamphlets, especially "The Drapier Letters," is told at length in Iris literature, the new anthology in ten volumes, which has been prepared by Justin McCarthy, editor-in-chief, associated with Dr. Douglas Hyde, Lady Gregory, James Jeffrey Roche and Professor Maurice Francis Egan—with Charles Welsh as managing editor, just published by John D. Morris & Co., of Philadelphia. In the ninth volume of this interesting monument to Irish genius is printrepresents the very infancy of the Irish newspaper. It contains an account of the Irish convention; it has news from England, but no advertisements. It was published in 1659 in Dublin, and represents the very infancy of the Irish press for it was a journal of local affairs with English news, and it is most interesting as showing how the newspaper deleveped from the pamphlet. Here it is in the state of transition. The form is that of a pamphlet, the subject matter is new treated in the style of the pamphleteer.

Mrs. Margaret Deland's new volume of essays was published by Harper & Bros. on Oct. 20 under the title "The Common Way." Mr. Deland's subjects are those of practical every-day living, and her book addresses itself as directly and satisfyingly to the heart and mind of the reader as her stories about Dr. Lavendar do. "The Common Way" is in a manner a new exposition of that marked common sense and love of justice which found such clear expression in "Dr. Lavendar's People" and "Old Chester Tales." The trenchant essay on "Glass Houses," which made a marked impression upon its appearance in Harper's Bazar, is included in the new volume.

"The Law of the Land," by Emerson Hough, author of "The Mississippi Bubble," contains some interesting and well-drawn pictures of Southern life. John Eddring, the hero, is the claim agent of a Southern railroad which taps the vast plantation of Cunnel Calvin Blount, master of the Big House. A winsome young woman called "Miss Lady" lives in that citadel with a Mrs. Ellison. Henry Decherd is a guest there. Both Decherd and the cunnel woo Miss Lady, but they are inspired by different motives. Miss Lady is the rightful heir to mineral lands in Missouri; she is the descendant of Comte Loisson, who explored the Northwest in the Lewis and Clark days. She does not know this until Mr. Hough sees fit to inform her, but Decherd knows it and he wants to wed her. The story tells how Eddring, who loves her, and Cunnel Blount, who gives up hope of winning her, manage to save the fair heroine from Decherd's clutches. It is a clever story that attempts to show, through a representation of characters in action, the esential principles of Anglo-Saxon law applying to the race question in the South. Published by the Bobbs-Morrill company, Indianapolis.

A new book by Rider Haggard is always a promise of exciting reading. The far off and unusual is Mr. Haggard's favorite theme. His new book, "The Brethren," (McClure Phillips') is quite in line with his old ones in this regard. It is a story of the crusades, in which a young English girl, related to Saladin, is captured by his emissaries, carried to Palestine, and rescued by two noble knights who are both in love with her. Mr. Haggard has sprinkled his pages thickly with the kind of adventure, mystery and romance which has brought him his tremendous following. He gives very good pictures of the days of chivalry in England and the pomp and pageantry of the Oriental camp.

It has been a question ever since the appearance of the first historical novel how great liberties it is right to take with a character who has existed in real life. One reviewer of Elinor Macartney Lane's new book, 'Nancy Stair," which the Appletons have just published, protests at the author's treatment of Burns.

"It is difficult for a Scot to forgive the harsh and passionately selfish delineation of the Scottish poet," says the critic, "the unnecessary and merciless flaying of the poet's besetting sin."

Others, too, have joined in the protest, while a few uphold the author in her attitude.

"We know what the man was," cry the latter.

"De mortuis," reply the first.

Those who have read the book content themselves with saying that Burns was a genius, analyze him as you will, and that Nancy Stair, whether she ever lived or not, was (is?) a most delightful creature.

The author of "The Confessions of a Club Woman" has chosen to remain a mystery even to her publishers, Doubleday, Page & Co., even after the assured success of the unusual novel. The lively discussion in the circles of society with which she frankly and knowingly deals has lead to many speculations as to her identity, which are stimulated by the relation in the book of some real occurrences in the life of certain women's clubs, particularly as the book appears at a time when the club life of women has been under animated discussion, owing to its extensive growth.

The new book by Dr. Davidson, the archbishop of Canterbury, will be published in November by the Macmillan company. Its full title is, "The Christian Opportunity: Being Sermons and Speeches Delivered in America."

"Rebels of the New South" is the title of a novel by Walter Marion Raymond, which will shortly be issued by Charles H. Kerr & Co., of Chicago. Those who have received their impressions of socialist views of the marriage question from caricatures like that of the Rev. Mr. Dixon will be surprised at the absolutely clean atmosphere of Mr. Raymond's book. Yet there is nothing conventional nor hypocritical about it. Neither is there any preaching; the author is no novice in fiction-writing, and he understands his trade too well to let any sermons interfere with the movement of his story. The scene of the novel is in Virginia, and the people in it are not imaginary products of a future civilization, but live men and women of today. It is well worth reading, merely as a story, and it gives a fairly adequate idea of what some actual American socialists are like.

Dr. Hamilton Wright Mabie writes in his introduction to Mr. Jenks' "In the Days of Chaucer:" "Mr. Jenks has made us see Chaucer's England, understand its habits, overhear its speech and comprehend its spirit. He has freshened our sense of the humanity of the poet and he has so recovered the form and dress of a past age, that he has freshened our delight in his work." Mr. Jenks' "In the Days of Chaucer" is just coming from the press of A. S. Barnes & Co.

The fortieth thousand of "The Foolish Dictionary" has just been issued by John W. Luce & Co., of Boston, and a London edition has been sold to Dean & Sons. Charles W. Towne, who wrote this clever volume of humor under the pseudonym of Gideon Wurdz, has taken a camp in the wilds of New Hampshire, where he is dividing his time between hunting and preparing another "Foolish" book.

A gentleman from Kansas, having sent to McClure-Phillips for a copy of Wagner's "The Simple Life," wrote back that he was not pleased with it because the book was not finished, the pages not having been cut. He went on to argue: "Would you like to have your shoemaker send you a pair of shoes with nails sticking up in them, or your tailor send you a coat without sleeves. Let us try to practice a little Christianity, The MacMillan Publishing company has played me the same trick, and hereafter I will have to specify that I want a finished book, or I don't want it at all." Though this comes from Kansas, it is ripe with suggestion, and this voice from the plains of the West is heard with pleasure on the question of the machine-made closely cropped book vs. the uncut book, with its pleasantly irregular edges.

Some very remarkable and vital chapters of American history are contained in "My Lady Laughter"—in preparation by the C. M. Clark Publishing company, Boston, Mass. The author, Dwight Tilton, who has also written the novels, "Miss Petticoats" and "On Satan's Mount," has taken for a background "thathotbed of rebellion" Boston in revolutionary times. Thrown into sharp contrast with the uncertainty and gloom of the time is the amusing, yet sometimes grave, adventures of a laughter-loving girl. The spirit of Constance Drake lives in the pages, as did that of Agatha Renier in "Miss Petticoats." It is a book that is certainly entitled to a large hearing, and as an example of up-to-date book-making, reaches a satisfying crisis.

"Two In a 200," by Curtis Dunham and Oliver Herford, is one of the Bobbs-Merrill company's recent publications. Between the Menial World of animals in a zoological park and the Master World of men stands a little limping boy, named Toots. The iron on his leg makes him kindred to the menial people, who have to wear irons, too, and this sympathy enables him to interpret their sayings to his rich little girl friend, the "Princess." Each chapter centers in some incident of importance in the animals' lives and memories as they impart it to the eager ear of Toots—the conspiracy to give the jungle roar in the Zoo, arranged by Pwit-Pwit, the Sparrow, newsgatherer and gossip-in-chief; the humiliation of the monkey, who claimed relationship and equality with men; the giant elephant's encounter with a red hot stove, and so on. There is a rich humor everywhere—not the smart wit that is so often dished up to children, and which they can never digest, but their own playful and imaginative humor, with its counterpart in occasional pathos. To this comedy effect the inimitable illustrations of Mr. Herford contribute much. He is working here in his best vein, and it would be difficult to figure out just how much of the fun is due to his delicious pencil and how much to Mr. Dunham's delightful pen.

Helen Leah Reed, the author of the popular "Brenda" books for older girls, has written a story for younger girls, entitled "Irma and Nap," dealing with home and school life in a suburban town. The book will probably form the first of a new series. Miss Reed's four "Brenda" books are this fall brought out in uniform style, boxed.

Lovers of wise and witty essays find unfailing diversion in Miss Repplier's books. They belong to the literature of entertainment. Her latest book "Compromises," which Houghton, Mifflin & Co. publish, has all the charm of gayety, bantering humor, felicitous quotation, and flashing jeur d'esprit which have made her essays a stimulus and a delight. The title of her first essay she takes from DeQuincey's phase "The Luxury of Conversation," and she defends in her incomparably clever fashion the earlier essayist's dictum that " it does not depend upon one or two able talkers." The title of other chapters will give some hint of the wide range of subjects that she sweeps and the manner in which she touches them: The Gayety of Life, Marriage in Fiction, Our Belief in Books, The Spinster, The Tourist, Allegra.

The J. S. Ogilvie Publishing company, of New York, announces for immediate publication a cheap edition of the book "The Simple Life," by Charles Wagner, of which President Roosevelt said to the author: "I am preaching your book to my countrymen." This book in cheap form should sell a million copies, as its whole teaching is to uplift and make better every one that reads it.

True and genuine fiction founded on the life of the stage, though plentiful in French, is rare in English literture. Miss Viola Roseboro's short stories of the stage, soon to be issued by the Macmillan company under the title of "Players and Vagabonds," are tales of muman beings who happen to be actors and actresses, not studies of the stage. They are sincere, of emotional interest, and more than anything else, human.

For boys and girls who like to follow their heroes and heroines into unfamiliar lands, A. C. McClurg & Co. have brought out a capital story of the adventures of two children in Labrador, under the title of "The Wandering Twins." It is intended for older children and manages to happily combine suggestive glimpses of the country itself with plenty of exciting incidents to keep the youthful reader's interest going. "The Wandering Twins" is from the pen of Mary Bourchier Sanford and contains a number of illustrations by H. C. Ireland.

Children who enjoy the pretty stage spectacle of "Babes in Toyland" may add to their pleasure this year in the book of the same title, prepared by Glen MacDonough from his play, in collaboration with Miss Anna Alice Chapin. Mr. MacDonough, a son-in-law of Joseph Jefferson, has many dramatic successes to his credit, but in the book now published by Fox, Duffield & Co., New York, makes his first bow, it is understood, as an author. Miss Ethel Franklin Betts, who contributes some delightful pictures to the volume, is a pupil of Howard Pyle.

Maud Howe (Elliott), who, with her husband, John Elliott, the artist, as been summering at Plainfield, N. H., has just put into book form a number of her recent Italian sketches and stories, which Little, Brown & Co. will shortly publish with the title, "Roma Beata." The inspiration of the book was a series of letters written to her sister, Laura E. Richards, while Mrs. Elliott was in Rome with her husband, Mr. Elliott then being engaged in painting his mural work for the Boston Public library. "Roma Beata" will be illustrated from drawings by Mr. Elliott and from photographs.

E. B. Lent, author of "Being Done Good," has gone to Arizona to try the curative properties of the dry air of that state. He humorously told an interviewer that having tried all the "hot air" treatments of the East for rheumatism, he had decided to give the West a trial. Mr. Lent's book has become immensely popular.

Harper's Bazar says in its current number, "It is somewhat disconcerting that the easiest and most indulged in of all forms of hospitality—'teas' and 'days'—have became a part of ancient history as teas and days pure and simple. It is still correct to ask one's friends to come in on an afternoon for a cup of tea; but the extras now necessary to the quaffing of that tea are extraordinary. The difference is not so much in the menu—fortunately we still cling to modest afternoon fare—but in the entertainment provided. One must have music—not only good music, but unique; colored banjo players, carols and songs of different lands sung by children in costume, Hungarian music or gypsy music played by gypsies in fete dress. Failing this, one must have palmistry, fortune-telling, or the like. In other words, one must, this setson, over novel attractions to one's friends."

It is said that ex-Minister Andrew D. White's article in the November Century, "A Diplomat's Recollections of Russia," is a terrific arraignment of the Russian oligarchy and the present czar. Mr. White is quoted as saying, touching Russia's treatment of Finland: "It is the saddest spectacle of time. Former emperors, however much they have wished to do so, have not dared break their oaths to Finland; but the present weakling sovereign, in his indifference, carelessness, and absolute unfitness to rule, has allowed the dominant reactionary clique about him to accomplish its own good pleasure. I put on record here the prophecy that his dynasty, if not himself, will be punished for it. All history shows that no such crime has been committed without receiving punishment." This was written, of course, before the Russian war with Japan and the assassination of Bobrikoff and Plehve.

Any one who has visited an American battleship has been, first of all, impressed and delighted by the absolute neatness and cleanliness which everywhere prevail, and the sailors do all the work themselves. Leslie's Weekly in its current issue, in a double-page of illustrations, shows how this process of painting and scouring, after an exciting target practice and fast run, are done. The frontispiece is a spirited drawing of society's vigorous autumn recreation, fox-hunting. Other interesting illustrations refer to the automobile race for the Vanderbilt international cup; the Episcopal convention at Boston; the exhilcrating outdoor life of Scotland; Japanese processions in honor of their heroic dead; a page of dramatic illustrations, and the illuminations of the world's fair at St. Louis at night.

"Business is Business" is the moral of a diverting story entitled "Days and Dollars," contributed to The Youth's Companion for October 20 by Carroll Watson Rankin. The New England Magazine for October presents an unusually interesting and attractive array of contents. The town article for the month treats of "South Natick in Fact and Fiction,"—a fertile subject, well handled by Edith A. Sawyer, and finely illustrated. Among other illustrated articles of note are a graphic description of "Child Life in the Philippines," by Miana Irving, and a fine account of that splendid charity, "The Boston Floating Hospital," by Amy Woods. R. L. Pilsbury tells of a "Visit to Laundy"—the rugged, lonely island off the Cornwall coast, which has been immortalized by Charles Kingsley.

George Harvey's political comment is, as usual, the leading feature of the current Harper's Weekly. In addition to the comment, two pages of photographs picturing the recent international automobile race on Long Island form a timely and striking feature. Richard Barthoidt, president of the American group for arbitration in congress, and president-elect of the interparliamentary union, contributes an authoritative article telling of the purposes and plans of "The World's Peace Conference;" Sydney Brooks writes entertainingly of Lord Rosebery, the most puzzling statesman in English public life; Robert W. Chambers has an interesting article on fishing for trout and grayling; Samuel P. Verner, special commissioner to Central Africa from the St. Louis exposition, tells how he induced the Batwa Pygmies from Central Africa to come to the fair; and these are only a few of the pictorial and new features of current interest. The fiction of the number is the concluding instalment of A. E. W. Mason's new novel, "The Truants," which was recently issued in book form by Harper & Bros.

Commander R. E. Peary will contribute a very entertaining story called "Koodluktoo and the White Owl," to the November number of the Holiday Monthly Magazine for Children. This number will in another respect be a notable one, inasmuch as the publishers will make in the November and December numbers comprehensive mention and review of the best new books for children. At the busy Christmas season when the market is flooded with juvenile books, every parent, every bookseller, every librarian, will welcome such a carefully-prepared list, indicating the style of the book and the age of the child who will enjoy it.

The leading chapters of the Architectural Record Magazine for October are devoted to descriptions and illustrations of the various rooms in a modern American house. The October number is, therefore, called "The Household Number." The general subject is treated under the head of "American Residences of Today," and, first, the dwellings of the Middle West are considered, and a very appreciative and competent chapter is assigned to them. Next, the hall and stairs are discussed. There are chapters also on the living room, dining room and the bedroom, with particular and valuable suggestions and examples in each case. The planning of the kitchen in the "modern residence" might, as a subject of discussion, seem at first of little value, but after reading this chapter every reader will conclude that we should not allow, in the fitting-up of our kitchen, anything to go into it that is not thoroughly first-class and up-to-date.

The anonymous author of "The Martyrdom of an Empress" has written another volume, "Imperator et Rex," which is a eulogy of the emperor and empress of Germany. The author claims to have been intimate with them, and counts the emperor little short of a demigod. The book is reviewed in the Argonaut of Oct. 17, and interesting extracts from it are given.

Harbor Line Change Makes Submerged Lots Again Valuable.

Inquiry which has been made at the office of the government engineer in charge of this district, Major Charles L. Potter, within the last few days, by persons who formerly owned submerged lots along Minnesota Point and which were cut off by the harbor line established by the government in 1896 or 1897, brings to light the fact that many of the lots which were rendered practically useless to the owners, because they were outside the harbor line, are again valuable for dock property, having been brought within the new harbor line recently established by the government in connection with its improvements on Minnesota Point.

The new harbor line, which almost parallels the old harbor line is from sixty to eighty feet farther out in the bay and gives frontage on the harbor line again, to a large number of lots on Minnesota and St. Louis avenues.

The same change also takes away from other lots their dock frontage for the reason that lots owned by other people now lie between them and the harbor line.

The following lots which were wholly or in part without the old line are now brought inside the new line, and can be used for dock purposes: Lots 226, 228, 220, 222, 224 and 226 on Minnesota avenue, between the slip canal and Marvin street; lots 221, 223, 225, 227 and 229, on St. Louis avenue between the canal and Marvin street; lots 214, 216, 218 and 220 on St. Louis avenue between Marvin and Olive streets.

While the government does not, by establishing a harbor line, take away from individuals their title to submerged lots lying outside the line, they render the lots useless to all practical purposes, for no property outside the harbor line can be improved with a dock or anything else that might hinder navigation.

COMPROMISE CANON

On Divorce Not Liked By Many Bishops.

Boston, Oct. 22.—The divorce question again was considered by the Episcopal house of bishops today. Many of the bishops do not regard with favor the compromise resolution adopted by the house of deputies permitting the innocent person in a divorce for infidelity to marry after a year has elapsed which was the issue before the committee today. This forenoon a solemn high mass of requiem under the auspices of the Guild of All Souls was celebrated at the church of the advent for deceased members of the last Episcopal general conference. The celebrant was Rev. E. A. Larrabee, rector of the church of the Ascension, Chicago, and some of the deputies from the diocese. The preacher was Rev. Talbot Rodgers, of Fond du Lac, Wis.

MANY FAKE WAGERS

In Wall Street on Result of Presidential Election.

Bettors In Former Campaigns Were Fooled to the Last.

New York, Oct. 22.—The Republicans point to the betting in Wall street and to the boom in the stock market as certain indications of coming victory for their party, but history teaches us that these are slender reeds upon which to lean. In 1892 the stock market was bullish preceding the election, and on the 5th of November, three days before election, Thomas H. Carter, then chairman of the Republican national committee, issued a statement which was sent out by the Associated Press, in which he congratulated the country upon its evident decision to stand by the "grand old Republican party" and to rebuke once more "the enemies of American progress and prosperity." In concluding his brief congratulation to the "remarkable buoyancy of the cereals and stock market," which, he remarked, "is plainly due to the absolute certainty of a coming triumph for the Republican party and its wise policies." Three days later the cty of New York (including the five boroughs now constituting the municipality) gave Cleveland 109,000 plurality, the state of New York gave him nearly 50,000, and he swept the country, carrying the "Solid South," New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana, and getting electoral votes in half a dozen other states, including Illinois, Michigan, California and Ohio. The Wall street betting had favored Harrison throughout the campaign, and the odds were on Harrison until the closing weeks of the contest, when they veered to Cleveland. On the eve of the election professional betting was even on the general result, but Republican politicians continued to bluster and "claim everything."

The New York Evening Post and the New York World have made a careful investigation within the last few days and each of them reports that it is impossible to verify the large volume of betting alleged to have taken place in the Wall street district, with heavy odds on Roosevelt. The Post asserts that not more than $20,000 has actually been wagered on the general result of this election, while the World puts the figures at "not to exceed $25,000." If one is to credit the announcements made "on the curb" from day to day, several hundred thousand dollars have been bet on Roosevelt at odds of from 10 to 5 to 10 to 3. Both the Post and the World state that most of the alleged betting at these odds is fictitious; neither the parties nor the money are in evidence. The fact is that an examination of the files of the New York newspapers shows that betting on the presidency before the final week of a campaign has seldom proved reliable as an indicator of what was coming, and in one notable instance the final betting was utterly discredited by the result of the election. Cleveland was the favorite at odds of 100 to 80 on the eve of the election in 1888, but Harrison defeated him, even carrying New York. In 1876 odds of 100 to 75 were given on Hayes at the beginning of the campaign, and those odds were maintained until the closing week of the contest, when they were hammered to "evens" by the Tilden men, who, in many cases gave odds on their favorite. In 1880 Garfield had the betting odds right along. In 1884 Blaine was a 2 to 1 favorite for weeks after the nominations had been made, and slight odds were given on him right down to the eve of election. Yet Tilden beat Hayes and Cleveland defeated Blaine.

In 1888, as already said, the final betting was strongly in Cleveland's favor, yet Harrison won the election. In 1892 Harrison started out in the lead, and was neck and neck with Cleveland when betting ceased. David Martin and John L. Hill representing the Republican national committee, tried to keep up the Harrison bluff to the last, pretending to offer 100,000 on the Republican candidate at midnight of the seventh of November, a few hours before the polls were to be opened. It is impossible to predict at this time what may happen between now and Nov. 8 tending to improve or weaken the Democratic prospect, but friends of the Democratic ticket should not allow themselves to be influenced by fake betting or by extravagant claims put forth either in Wall street or by the Republican managers. When registration shall have been completed in New York, and the Democratic national committee shall have made its final summing up, the real betting on the election will begin. Even then it may prove a false guide, as it did in 1888 and other years, but the one fact that stands out prominently now is that there is nothing in the situation to warrant odds on Roosevelt, for the managers of the respective campaigns are in the dark; they do not know what is to happen; they are not yet in a position to make positive claims as to the outcome of the election. Wherever an offer of heavy odds on Roosevelt has been made it was either fictitious, was inspired by the Republican managers or was made by reckless enthusiasts who have no better basis for their judgment than the preposterous claims of those managers.

STATE Y. W. C. A.

Work of Different Branches Is Reported.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 22.—The delegates to the state Y. W. C. A. convention arrived yesterday and were met at incoming trains and escorted to places of entertainment. The convention sessions opened in the afternoon at the Central Methodist church, which had been specially decorated by young ladies from the Winona Normal association.

Some music under the direction of Miss Caroline V. Smith and Marc D. Lombard was given in the afternoon and is to be a feature of all convention sessions. The program yesterday consisted of a presentation of the different branches of the Y. W. C. A. work in which Misses Taylor, Erickson, Kyle and Paddock participated.

The Y. M. C. A. in Minnesota is made up of two city associations at Minneapolis and Duluth and eleven student associations in university, colleges and normal schools. The total membership is 3467, and the general direction of the work is by an executive committee of twenty-one members, representing the different parts of the state. A feature of the convention will be a banquet this evening.

BROKE HER LEG.

Heavy Pennsylvania Woman Had Sudden Collapse.

Pittsburg, Oct. 22.—The heaviest woman in Alleghany, if not in western Pennsylvania, is lying at St. John's general hospital at Lower Alleghany with a broken leg. What caused the fracture is not known, even the woman herself being unable to give definite information. Her avoirdupois is said to have been greater than the thigh bone was able to withstand, with the result that it gave way while the woman was crossing the kitchen of her home.

Mrs. Richard Lloyd lives at 99 Shady avenue, and is the wife of a thrifty puddler. Late Saturday evening, while in the kitchen, she felt a sharp pain in her right leg, and in an instant she fell to the floor in agony.

A physician who was called declared the woman had sustained a fracture of the right leg. Mrs. Lloyd weighs nearly 350 pounds and, as it was impossible to get her up the narrow stairway of the family residence, it was decided to remove her to St. John's general hospital.

When the ambulance arrived six of the strongest men in the neighborhood gathered around and after much tugging managed to place Mrs. Lloyd in the vehicle. Her weight was so great that the surgeon, who usually rides with the patient, had to walk, and even then the box of the vehicle struck upon the axles at every rough place.

GAME NOT PLENTIFUL.

Bowstring Harty Has Rather Hard Luck.

Four of the Bowstring club's party which has been having an outing at Squaw lake, in the Big Fork country, returned this morning after a good time, but bringing little game. Those coming in were Ed Windom, E. B. Hawkins, Postmaster E. L. Fisher, C. S. Carpenter and George Tallman, the last named being an attorney of Janesville, Wis.

They report the ducks as flying much less profusely than they expected. At first there was a good movement of the birds and the party bagged 259 or 300 the first thing, all of which they sent in. After that the ducks failed to appear, and the rest of the time, the members of the party say, they had barely enough to eat.

Mr. Windom came to town accompanied by the music of a tomtom, which he obtained from Chief Azbo and the chief's better half, Dirty Face.

All the members had a fine time, so it is said, despite the lack of game and threatened shortage of rations.

INSURANCE RATES.

B. Silberstein and Oscar Mitchell Will Confer at Chicago.

On Thursday next Oscar Mitchell and B. Silberstein, representing the Commercial club in the matter of the raised insurance rates, will leave this city for Chicago to confer with the insurance managers there, at the suggestion of the latter.

It is possible that the local gentlemen will, while in the Windy City, confer with representatives of some of the expert organizations who make a business of ascertaining the reliability of policies and the fairness of rates, to see whether the contentions from this end of the line are not well founded.

GENUINE BLIZZARD IN UPPER PENINSULA.

Milwaukee, Oct. 22.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Negaunee, Mich., says: A genuine blizzard has been prevailing throughout this section for several hours. The ground is covered with snow to the depth of two inches. Specials also report considerable snow at Calumet, Mich., and Fond du Lac, Plymouth and Marshfield, Wis.

Plans Improvements.

The Baltimore& Ohio Railroad company has let a contract to Patrick Farrell, Cincinnati, Ohio, for the construction of a 10-stall roundhouse at Grafton, W. Va., at an estimated cost of $40,000.

A large new freight house is to be erected this fall at Columbus, Ohio, and new team tracks put in for the better accommodation of business at that point. The contract for building the freight house was awarded to James A. Stewart & Co., of Pittsburg, at an estimated cost of $100,000.

The railroad company has also let a contract for a new station at Uniontown, Pa., to T. E. Hill & Co., of Chicago, the structure to cost about $10,000.

At Youngstown a new station is to be built in connection with the rebuilding of the New Castle division. It will cost about $50,000, and the contract has been awarded to Niedermeier & Restle, of Youngstown, Ohio.

An extension is to be built to the freight shed and platform at Morgantown, which will cost between $800 and $10,000. This work will be done by Holbert & Spedden, of Fairmount, W. Va.

CLOSE THE ROOM

One of Grades In Longfellow School to Be Fumigated.

All Diphtheria Cases In West Duluth Traced to It.

Owing to the large number of diphtheria caseswhich have occurred among the pupils of the B second grade in the Longfellow school, the room has been closed by order of the health department and will remain closed until further orders.

The room will be thoroughly fumigated and a special officer detailed to the work of looking after the cases which have occurred among the pupils and guarding against any further spread of the disease.

Nine cases in all have been reported among the pupils of this grade, and the health department claims to be able to trace all of them to the cases in the Wright family, which were not brought to the notice of the department until the disease had an opportunity to be communicated to the playmates of the children.

Dr. Murray urged the West End people in general, and particularly those who have children in the Longfellow school to promptly report all cases of sore throat to their family physician in order to prevent any further spread of the disease. The diphtheria cases are, for the most part, very mild ones, and in many instances the children are feeling no worse effects than from an ordinary sore throat.

The nine cases in the Longfellow school are practically all of the cases of contagious diseases existing in West Duluth and the health officials believe that if they can guard against any further contagion from this source, they will be able to stamp out the epidemic.

AMONG THE RAILROADS

Rate From Buffalo to Seaboard Is to Be Advanced.

New York, Oct. 22.—Trunk lines east of Buffalo have agreed upon another advance in grain rates to the Atlantic seaboard. It will go into effect Nov. 1 and amounts to half a cent per bushel on wheat, flax, corn, rye and barley. These new rates will be operative for fifteen days only, and on Nov. 16 a further advance of half a cent per bushel will be made in wheat and flour, corn and rye, but only one-quarter of a cent advance in barley.

ROCK ISLAND CHANGE.

Duluth railroad men have been given a quiet tip to the effect that the true reason for L. F. Loree's decapitation from the presidency of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific holdings company, was not simply to "Eastern methods," which were alleged to be out of harmony with the policy of the big system of which he had assumed the presidency.

When he went to Chicago as president of the Rock Island, leaving the Baltimore & Ohio, Mr. Loree started to inaugurate a wholesale reformation of the official family of the company. It is claimed that the directorate bore with these changes until the new president asked for the relief of Benjamin F. Winchell from the presidency of the Rock Island junior company, which the directorate refused to accede to. It is said that Mr. Loree's attitude toward the change was an insistent one, which led to a rupture between himself and the directorate, the decision on the part of those gentlemen to pay him his bonus and his five years' csalary, and to select a new president for the holdings company.

In this connection it is claimed that Mr. Loree desired to place his brother, W. C. Loree, now general superintendent of the Baltimore & Ohio, from which road Mr. Loree left the presidency to take service with the Rock Island.

Judging from the wholesale transfer of Baltimore & Ohio and other Eastern railroad men to positions with the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, which followed Mr. Loree's assumption of the presidency, this report looks rather logical.

It has been a much motted story that Mr. Loree's rise in railroad prominence has been the most noteworthy of that of any railroad expert of the last score years. From a modest position on the Indianapolis & Vicennes he became division superintendent of the Cleveland division of the Pennsylvania lines, from which position he was given, in a single promotion, the position of general manager of the entire system. Next he became president of the Baltimore & Ohio, from which he was taken to the Rock island as its president.

* * *

The rise of Benjamin F. Winchell, president of the junior Rock Island company, has been little less noteworthy, for only ten years ago he was general passenger agent of a comparatively small road in Colorado.

Already Chasing It.

Railroad solicitors are getting busy in an endeavor to cinch the passenger movement which will follow the close of navigation. It is only a month hence until this traffic will begin, and the various transportation lines will be sending their boat crews down East and to various lower lake ports.

Scores of men belonging to crews who are laid off for the winter are shipped back to lower lake ports by their employers who may happen to lay their boats up here for the winter. In case the boats are laid up below the transportation is in the other direction.

GRIDIRON SPORTS

Many Games of Football Played Throughout the Country.

The Contests Among Devotees of the Sport.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Because upon the issue of the meeting between the elevens of Chicago and Northwestern universities, on Marshall field today, the supporters of each had placed their hopes of ultimately winning the Western football championship for 1904, unusual preparation was made by the contesting players. No game on the Western schedule for today attracted more general interest. It is admitted that the loser has little prospect for championship honors. The champions of the rival universities tried conclusions seventeen times previous to today. Chicago won nine, Northwestern five, and three games resulted in ties. In 1902 Chicago won, and in 1903 neither eleven scored. There was a difference of about nine pounds in the average weight of the teams today, the advantage being with Chicago. The lineup:

Chicago.	Position.	Northwestern.
Kennedy	right end	Weinberger
Boone	right tackle	Allen (Capt.)
Badenoch	right guard	Byers
Gale	center	Carlson
Tobin	left guard	Ward
Eckersall	quarter back	Johnson
Catlin	right half back	Simpson
De Tray	left half back	Colton
Bezdek	full back	Reuber

Referee—Starbuck, Cornell.
Umpire—Walbridge, Cornell.
Head linesman and timekeeper—Holbrook, Michigan.
Time of halves, 35 minutes.

2:40 p. m.—Both teams on the field. About 15,000 spectators present. Chicago won the toss and chose the north goal.

Reuber kicked off to Chicago's 20-yard line. Chicago returned ball 15 yards in the first three scrimmages.

Eckersall punted to the 40-yard line behind Northwestern goal, where Johnson got the ball. He was taken to the 20-yard line and Colton kicked to the 50-yard line. Eckersall returned ball to the 25-yard line and fumbled. Chicago regained the ball and started down the field with it by a series of line smashes. The ball had been continuously in Northwestern territory since the game started. On the 20-yard line Eckersall tried a goal from field and failed.

3 p. m.—Chicago punted to Northwestern's 5-yard line. By consistent line work Northwestern returned the ball to the 45-yard line, where they lost it on a fumble.

3:03 p. m.—On the first down Chicago lost one yard. On the second Eckersall tried a quarter back run but fell and lost three yards more. With nine yards to gain Eckersall punted to Johnson on the 15-yard line. Johnson was downed, where he caught the ball. Reuber punted to Eckersall on the 40-yard line.

Eckersall punted the ball, struck the goal post and rebounded to the 5-yard line. Johnson fell on it. Northwestern's ball on its own five-yard line. Colton punted from behind the goal line to Eckersall in the center of the field. Eckersall punted to Johnson on the five-yard line. He returned the ball to the twenty-yard line and was downed.

PURDUE VS. ILLINOIS.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 22.—Purdue is scheduled to meet the strong Illinois football team on Stuart field this afternoon in what promises to be the most fiercely contested game of the season for both teams engaged. Five hundred Illinois rooters accompanied the eleven to the city, arriving today on a special train. Purdue has had secret practice all week in preparation for the game, but will go on the field in a badly crippled condition. Johnson, quarter back, is on crutches, and Capt. Allen, Thomas and Long are lame and may not finish the game. The odds in betting favor Illinois, but the Purdue men are confident. Illinois outweighs the boilermakers and has more veterans in the game this year. Last year the champion team defeated Purdue 24 to nothing.

NEBRASKA VS. KNOX.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 22.—The football teams of Nebraska university and Knox college were cheduled to try conclusions here today. The chances seemed largely in favor of a victory for Nebraska.

HARVARD VS. CARLISLE.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 22.—Beautiful weather conditions prevailed for the annual football contest here today between Harvard and Carlisle. No games save that with Pennsylvania, outside of the Yale contest, arouses such interest here as that with the Indians does, chiefly because the contest is sure to be hard fought and because the Carlisle men are famous here for their new plays. The recollection of the trick of last year, by which a Carlisle player made a touchdown by running with the ball tucked up under his jersey, gave zest to the anticipation of those who went to see the game today.

First half: Harvard, 0; Carlistle, 0.

AT ITHACA.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 22.—First half: Cornell, 18; Franklin and Marshall, 0.

Minneapolis, Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another trial of Dr. A. A. Ames, formerly mayor of Minneapolis, on the charge of accepting a bribe of $20 from Bessie Lee for protection was ordered in Judge Simpson's court this morning. On motion of defendant's attorney, a continuance until 11 o'clock was granted that Dr. Ames and his counsel might confer. This is the same case in which the jury reported a disagreement Friday.

BUILD A HOME.

Should Be Chief Ambition of Every Student.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Acting President Thomas F. Holgate, of Northwestern university, advised the students in chapel meeting yesterday afternoon to make as the main ambition in life the building of a happy home.

The advice was given to the girl students as well as the men and was received with hearty applause.

"The principal thing to look ahead to in life," said Dean Holgate, "is a home. I would advise students to consider seriously the advisability of marrying.

"Especialy do I want to compliment last year's class in this regard. It is with pleasure that the faculty has heard of the many marriages made by its different members.

"Last year a series of questions was asked the students of the university concerning the objects to which they were looking forward most ardently.

"One young man said that work was the aim of his life. Another appropriately said he was looking forward to a perfect home. I would commend this ambition to more students.

"It is not advisable to marry while still a student. There is one thing, however, which can be done in this regard, and that is the selecting of your future mate."

EGAN THE FAVORITE.

Hamilton, Mass., Oct. 22.—H. Chandler Egan, the amateur golf champion, and A. L. Egan was the favorite.

Useful Electrical Inventions Used In Many Duluth Homes.

THE ELECTRIC HEATING PAD.

The Electrotherm or heating pad, an article of unusual merit for the sick room and general household use, takes the place of all hot-water bags or applications, poultices, etc. Light in weight and flexible, warms up gradually to any desired temperature, thus making it possible to use higher temperatures than is possible when applied suddenly. It maintains an even heat, and is subject to regulation without disturbing the patient. It is provided with a sensitive thermostat, which acts automatically to limit the temperature from exceeding a desired and safe degree. Requires no attention.

Made for ordinary domestic use, to replace hot-water bottles, etc., felt covered with washable muslin slip cover, weighs about eleven ounces.

Also a special style for moist heat in cases where the effect of a poultice is desired, rubber cloth cover, weight about eleven ounces.

The size of the Electrotherm for general use is 11x15 inches, one-fourth inch thick. It is provided with regulating switch, connecting plug, and fifteen feet of flexible conducting cord, with coverings suited to various purposes.

The pads require no more current than a sixteen candlepower incandescent lamp. They can be connected to any electric-light fixture.

THE CHAFING DISH.

No article in the household can be put to more combinations of uses than the chafing-dish, and the usefulness is multiplied when operated by electricity. The simplicity of operation of the electric chafing-dish increases its usefulness, removes the unpleasant preparation, the necessity of filling alcohol heater each time used, is cleaner, quicker in results, and always safe; portable, and can be attached to regular lamp socket without any special preparation other than inserting plug into socket.

The chafing-dish of ordinary style requires the alcohol, requires cleaning and care, and that part of alcohol not used is evaporated. Substitute the electrical chafing-dish and all anxiety is removed, quicker results are obtained with less fuss and preparation, and what is the result? The dish is so handy, so much quicker, so novel, that it is used ten times against the alcohol dish once. The bill for current comes in at the end of the month and is fifty cents higher. Stop and think how much additional pleasure was obtained, how much annoyance was eliminated, how much saved—then pay the bill.

A point of far greater importance is safety—a puff of wind, the flame of the alcohol burner blows against the curtain, table linen, or operator's sleeve or dress, usually of light material—then damage.

Minnesota Coaches Training the Indians to Meet Harvard.

The Gopher quarter-backs will be depended upon largely by the team to do the ground-gaining work during the big games of the season, according to the reports that come from the secret practices being held on Northrop field.

Dr. Williams believes that the direct pass is the most effective play he has, and with the interference of the other three men, Henry O'Brien and Hunter will be depended upon to gain the most ground during the remainder of the season.

Both of the quarters are in fine shape and, barring accident, will be at their best for the first big game of the year, which is scheduled to take place a week from today, when the Nebraska Cornhuskers will journey up to Minneapolis to line-up against the Gophers.

The squad has been out at regular practice during the week, in spite of the fact that Northrop field resembles a fish-pond.

"Big Case" is back in the line, and shows no ill effects from the turning of his ankle, two weeks ago. Burgan is also back and appears to be in good shape. Thorpe is into the game in earnest and is rapidly recovering his old form.

A pretty fight is in progress for the position of left end on the team. Burdick is back in the game, and finds that Earl Luce, the Minneapolis boy, is a strong candidate for his place on the eleven. Luce went to Waconia with the team and has never missed a practice. He has set his heart on making the eleven, and it will be a case of his preliminary work and long training against Burdick's experience. The other members of the team are watching the fight with close interest.

Little is heard from the Grinnell camp concerning the game this afternoon. Since the defeat at the hands of Nebraska by the score of 40 to 0, Grinnell has been working with the hope of making a better showing against the Gophers. Dr. Williams' men do not expect to have much difficulty this afternoon, although Grinnell always has one or two men in the backfield who are dangerous.

While comparative scores are looked upon as unreliable, still the Grinnell game should give some indication of Minnesota's chances against Nebraska. The Cornhuskers defeated Grinnell 46 to 6. It is not likely that Dr. Williams will allow his men to over-exert themselves in an attempt to roll up any big score, but they will do their best to keep Grinnell from crossing the Gopher line.

Probably the most interesting game in the West today is being played on Marshall field between the old-time rivals, Chicago and Northwestern. The Maroons have been making a splendid showing up to the present time, having defeated Lawrence, Indiana, Purdue and Iowa by large scores. Northwestern, on the other hand, has been playing the smaller colleges, and little is known concerning the strength of the Evanston men. The game, at any rate, will be a fiercely-contested one.

The schedule for the Western teams this afternoon is as follows:

Grinnell at Minnesota.
Northwestern at Chicago.
West Virginia at Ann Arbor.
Drake at Madison.
Illinois at Purdue.
Knox at Nebraska.

The interest of Minnesota followers of the game, as far as the Eastern games are concerned, centers largely in the Carlisle team. The Indians are being coached this year by two graduates of the Minnesota gridiron, in the persons of Ed Rogers and "Punk" Webster. The two Minnesota men are putting their heads together and teaching the Indians how they play football up in the Bread and Butter state. Minnesota followers of the game are hopneseting to see the Indians drag Harvard's colors in the dust. If such a thing should happen it will be a great victory for the style of football played at the "U," and it is far from being beyond the bounds of possibility.

BIG LEAGUE MAGNATES

In Favor of Shorter Season For Baseball.

Shortening the major leagues' schedules to the old number—140—for next season, is being advocated by baseball officials, and in all probability will be adopted by the American and National League schedule makers when they get together to figure out the playing calendar of 1905. Trial of the longer schedule of 154 games this season has convinced most of the magnates that more than 140 games are both undesirable and unprofitable.

Besides costing the men behind the clubs something in the way of money, the fourteen extra games tacked on this year are dragging the playing season out to an uninteresting end. Instead of ending about Sept. 15, the 1904 schedule did not close until Oct. 9, and this means nearly a whole month of play in fall weather that kills interest and patronage and makes the players feel like letting things go to the dogs.

President Ban Johnson of the American league has all along been an advocate of the 140-game schedule, and will be on anything calling for a longer period of play when the schedule-makers consider plans.

"Opening about April 15 and closing about Sept. 15 will be found a far better arrangement, both from the viewpoint of the public and players and magnates," says Johnson. "We should not think of anything else for 1905.

"The experiment with a longer schedule this year will prove costly in the end, especially to those clubs which have not been making a great deal of money and must keep up heavy expenses during this end of the season, a period that does not bring fat receipts in at the gate.

"I am strictly in favor of the shorter season for the regular championship schedule for that reason and because of the fact that it will give time for extra games both before the opening and after the close."

NEW YORK'S PENNANT-WINNING NATIONAL LEAGUE TEAM.

The victory of the New York National league team in the pennant race just closed was one of the most sensational in the history of the league. When the season commenced New York was given but an outside chance against Pittsburg, but under the management of Johnny McGraw the club showed surprising strength, and before the end it was only a question of whether New York would establish a new record for the number of games won. This the team did, and then let up, and, as a consequence, made a disappointing finish. The victory of the team was a tribute to the brilliant generalship of McGraw, and without him it would have been lucky to have landed as good as second.

Tomorrow afternoon Company A football team will journey to Cloquet for a game with the fast Cloquet eleven. The militia men will line up as follows:

BIG GAME OF YEAR

St. Paul and Duluth Centrals Meet This Afternoon.

Company A Football Team Will Play Cloquet Sunday.

The big game of the football year in Duluth is being played this afternoon at Athletic park, where the Duluth and St. Paul Central high school teams are lined up against each other.

The gridiron is far from being dry, but the Duluth men have been playing in the mud for two weeks past and are used to it. The boys are in good shape and are determined to make the best showing possible against the heavy Saints.

The victory over Ironwood in last Saturday's close game restored the confidence of the members of the team, after the crushing defeat at the hands of Superior, and they are now showing the best form of the season.

The St. Paul men arrived in the city last night and put up at the St. Louis hotel. The visitors are heavier than the local men, their two guards averaging 180 pounds. They made a good showing against the heavy Eau Claire team last week, holding the Wisconsin men down to 16 points. The Eau Claire team has a back field averaging 185 pounds and a line averaging 175.

Eight of the members of the visiting team are veterans, having played with the eleven last season and they know the game thoroughly. Considering the extra weight and longer experience of the St. Paul men the chances appear to be altogether in favor of their victory.

This evening the senior class will give a reception for the visitors at the high school. The line-up this afternoon is as follows:

Duluth.		St. Paul.
Graham	Center	John Sheehan
Dinham	Right guard	Ellison
St. Clair	Left guard	Knoche
Montgomery	Right tackle	W. Clark
Pineo or Furni	Left tackle	(captain) A. McCree
Michaud or Maginnis	Right end	Pettijohn
Sarvela	Right halfback	Horwitz or Backus
Crassweller	Quarterback	Clayton
McDevitt (Capt.)	Fullback	Owen

E. H. HOUGHTON'S FAST YACHT SCOOTIE

THE SCOOTIE, E. H. HOUGHTON'S NEW YACHT, WHICH SHOWS HER HEELS TO ALL OTHER SAILING CRAFT IN THE HARBOR.

Duluth yachtmen will regret the removal from this city of E. H. Houghton, of the local yacht club, who has been transferred to the Chicago office of the Pittsburg Steamship company. With Mr. Houghton will go his fast sailing boat, Invader, and still faster new boat, the Scootie. The latter boat, although not yet rigged out as her owner intendes to have her, has demonstrated her ability to show a clean pair of heels to the other fast yachts in the local harbor and the yachtmen were looking forward to some interesting races between the Scootie and the White Bear boats this coming season.

The Scootie is what is termed the "sidewalk" style of boat. She was built at the shipyards in Superior being launched one Saturday morning, a few weeks ago and winning her first race the afternoon of the same day, although carrying the spars and sails of another boat and rather leaky, having just come off the ways.

Her present name is merely temporary, Mr. Houghton intending to re-christen her next season when he has his new spars and sails.

The spars will be hollow, combining strength and lightness and silk sails will be used.

It is the opinion of the local yachtmen that the Scootie will stir matters down in Lake Michigan waters, next season, if Mr. Houghton has occasion to devote any of his time to yachting in his new field.

BADGERS FEAR WOLVERINES

Work on Madison Gridiron Has Been Open This Week.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 22.—The trouble over the appointment of men to fill vacancies on the athletic board threatened utterly to disrupt the team early last week, but with the appointment of Remp and Vanderboom on the board and the election of Bertke as president, the football men became pacified and peace and harmony were restored. The result or settlement of the controversy was a complete victory for the football men.

The coaches certainly have their work cut out for them during the next week. The first big game of the season for Wisconsin is that with Michigan on Oct. 29, and the badgers are anything but nearly fit for it. The hardest kind of work will be required to get the team into such shape as would justify hope of winning the game. The coaches will continue their policy of calling back former football stars to help them get the team into the best possible form. During the present week, half a dozen old "grads" have been here helping the coaches. They are Rev. H. H. Jacobs, of Milwaukee, Professor Walter Alexander, of Columbia, Mo.; Dr. S. H. Sheldon, Dr. Joseph Dean, John Gregg and Arne Lerum, all of Madison. The advice and co-operation of the old men have done much toward correcting the defects of the players as individuals and as a team.

The work this week has been interfered with considerably by the fact that several of the regulars were on the hospital list and could not take part in the scrimmages.

The coaches devoted much time to drilling the linemen in offense and defense work. Some of the men in the line play too high, and are not fast enough in charging. Captain Bush and Findley at the ends, are playing finely, as also are Bertke and Kinney at tackles, though the last named is somewhat slow. Donovan and Stromquist, at guards, are the weakest points in the line. Donovan has been under weight and out of physical condition almost since the beginning of the season, but he is getting better, having taken on ten pounds in weight in five weeks. Kinney has a painfully injured hand, and for that reason has not been doing very well in defense. In offense, especially when he is carrying the ball, Kinney has been doing very effective. Remp, at center, is putting up a star game.

Behind the line George Jones has been at quarterback and has developed into quite a heady player. He is very fast, and has been doing some good work in tackling and breaking up plays. In drop kicking he is also doing splendidly. Vanderboom, the veteran half, is the bright particular star of the backfield. He is playing much better than ever before. Sanford has displaced Grogan at right half and is putting up a good game. Clark, at full, has a game leg, and Schneider, a youngster from Northwestern academy, Evanston, Ill., has been holding down the position most of the time lately. The backs are fairly good, being speedy, strong and consistent.

Besides Schneider and Sanford, another new man, Fleischer, captain of last year's freshman team, showed up well during the week, and the coaches hope he will keep on developing. He is a little too heavy and fat for his height, and will have to train down a good deal before he can make good. He weighs 200. Frenzke, O'Brien and Edge have been doing good work lately. Wrabetz, who played halfback in some of the big games last season, had one of his shoulders severely hurt several weeks ago, and is just getting back into practice.

The coaches have passed the students and townspeople by holding open practice. The students are showing a great deal more interest in the sport than previously, when the practice was secret.

COAST GAME IS DESIRED

Michigan Team May Go to California This Season.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 22.—A midwinter football game for Michigan with Leland Stanford or the University of California is more than probable. Not one step has been taken toward such a game yet, because Michigan must win the western championship first.

Nevertheless, since the Columbia game was cancelled, strong reasons for a far western game have developed. Michigan needs $50,000 yet to complete her athletic field. The only source of earning this money is football gate receipts. The loss of the Columbia game reduced Michigan's annual revenue by fully one-third, and some attempt to recoup is certain.

Last year Michigan would have played in the far west but for two objections. The coaches thought such a game would make the training season dangerously long, and the faculty board of control was unwilling to sacrifice so much of the men's study time. The loss of the Thanksgiving game with Columbia, and the premature ending of Michigan's 1904 season have removed both of these bars to the midwinter game.

The California teams are furthermore looking for a game in the middle-west. Michigan has the "call" on such a game for three reasons, her championships, the fact that Yost once coached Leland Stanford, and that Michigan has once already played such a game, namely on New Year's day, 1901.

The agitation over a Minnesota game is not only useless, but would be hopeless even if Minnesota did not have its Thanksgiving date already filled. Said Manager Baird on the Minnesota question:

"Michigan could have had a game with Minnesota scheduled early last winter had we not gone after the Columbia game. A Thanksgiving game with Minnesota would have been probably the finest money-making proposition we could have desired. But not only my department, but Mr. Fitzpatrick, Michigan's board of control, football captain, and players were opposed to such a game, at present."

What this "at present" means was explained by another Michigan official, who said:

"We play football primarily for the fun there is in it. A Minnesota game this year would mean nothing but a fight. Whether justly or not, our old players who met Minnesota last year felt that they were not treated right by Minnesota. Now undoubtedly, if we played with the great Gophers tomorrow, they would extend to Michigan the most perfect courtesy and gentlemanly treatment. Yet in the unavoidable hard knocks of a game some of our old men would fancy that they were getting misused."

LIST OF INJURED

In Big College Elevens Large This Year.

The list of injured football players of the big college squads is larger at present than at any similar date within the past few seasons. There is hardly a college trainer who has not at least three or four candidates on his hands who are suffering from more than the average bruises received during the practice and games played to date. At Pennsylvania, Corson, Zeigler and W. Hollenbach are all suffering from the severe pounding in the game with Lehigh. Capt. Torrey, Lamson and J. Hollenbach, Sheble and Reynolds are all badly bruised, and several other Quakers area lso on the injured list. W. J. MacMahon and Charles Lawrence are on the absentee list, and it is doubtful if any one of the trio will play again this season.

Capt. Hurley of the Harvard squad is just recovering from a severe injury to his leg, and other members of the Crimson group are much the worse for the battering they have received in stopping the plays of the substitute backfield. Cornell is minus the services of Birmingham, the right half back, and other Ithaca gridiron warriors are also under the weather. The list could be lengthened considerably by the addition of the minor college players, who are also wearing splints, plasters and other medical appliances.

The best opinion is that the increased weight of the line is to blame for the growth of the hospital list. This is not the day of the light player, no matter how speedy he may be.

PRETTY POLLY A BETTER RACER THAN THE YANKEE CHAMPION

A comparison between Pretty Polly and Beldame, the queens of the English and American turf, is interesting. With her St. Leger victory, Pretty Polly has now won fifteen races without a defeat, this being two more wins than stand to the credit of the mighty Ormonde, the greatest unbeaten horse of modern times. Her record to date follows:

1903.

Won the British Dominion stakes	$ 4,486
Won the National Breeders' Produce stakes	22,795
Won the Mersey stakes	3,395
Won the Champagne stakes	9,794

Won the Cheverly Park stakes	4,195
Won the Middle Park plate	12,149
Won the Criterion stakes	4,541
Won the Moulton stakes	2,167

1904.

Won as a 3-year-old in 1904	90,549

Beldame's record in races won now equals Pretty Polly's high mark, but the daughter of Octagon has been twice defeated this season, and she was also beaten in four of her seven starts as a 2-year-old in 1903. In money winnings, the English filly is far ahead of Beldame. Beldame's record on the turf follows:

1903.

Second in Clover stakes	$ 200
Won the Vernal stakes	4,375
Unplaced in purses at Saratoga	....
Third in the filly Marton stakes	693
Fourth in the Nursery stakes	....
Won a handicap sweepstakes at Aqueduct	690

1904.

NERVE WON PENNANT

For Boston In the Great American League Contest.

Tim Murnane Reviews the Baseball Season Just Closed.

T. H. Murnane's letter from Boston says: Nerve told, as it always will with an even break of luck and skill, and I hope my readers will not think me egotistical when I remind them of the fact that early in the game I predicted the Boston champions would hold their nerve to the last. I think it was John Foster, of the New York Herald, who wrote a paragraph saying that if the race came down to New York and Boston that Griffith's boys would win out by the more nerve. Mr. Foster was at the last meeting of these clubs in New York and had the satisfaction of witnessing the world's champions go from start to finish without a slip. In fact, they played perfect ball in the last three games when the test came for staying powers.

Last year Boston had it on the Pittsburg champions and repeated this season on the Highlanders, and the same man (Dineen) was in the box for Boston.

Ted Sullivan was present at the New York finish, and remarked as Dineen put the kibosh on Pat Dougherty's ambition: "There is a lad that was raised on his mother's milk and a champion of champions." With the exception of Al Selbach in left field Boston presented the same team which closed the great series last year with the Pittsburg club. During the summer the champions fell off in play at times until at several stages of the race it looked as if they had slowed up and might falter before the end, but no, they struck their best work at St. Louis on the last trip, and came down the line like a bunch of thoroughbreds, winning eight of the last nine games and three straight from their most formidable opponents—New York.

Jesse Tannehill, who was very effective against the Cleveland and New York clubs, was missing. I never heard the left-handed pitcher's name mentioned after he departed for home. When the nerve-racking finish came the two old reliables, Bill Dineen and Cy Young, were selected by Captain Collins for the work. As the first game of the double-header went to Dineen, Cy Young was not called on, but the old war horse was there ready for business.

I have seen many teams pull off championships, but never was there a crowd of ball players as happy as those Boston players after the victory this season. This was caused by the long strain of a four months neck-and-neck race. The members of both teams were about all in, and a meeting with the New York giants might have resulted in disaster under the circumstances. Honestly, I think that the league club lost a splendid opportunity to catch their opponents napping.

But that was not to be, as long ago the New York team decided it would not play these games. I heard a great many old league sympathizers find fault with the stand taken by McGraw, saying they were anxious to see some good sport. Many of the New York players spent the evening at the Marlborough hotel mixing up with the Boston players expressing disappointment at their hard luck at not having a chance to get the big money sure to come with a post series with Boston. The proper way is to have the two leagues arrange the series as they do the schedules, and play the games off under proper jurisdiction. There is no good reason why the players should receive all the gate money. In fact the club that goes to the expense of putting together a winning team is entitled to some consideration, for its not often one can pick up a pennant winner and may lose a good pot of money before the big season comes. In the meantime the players will always get theirs. The two leagues should settle the matter in the spring, in this way giving the baseball public plenty of time to get ready for the great event each fall. This would bring together an army of baseball people and boom the game and cut all personalitics that is sure sooner or later to injure the sport. Few baseball men there are who can hold their temper when speaking of a rival organization.

The Boston club will retain nearly all of the regular team for another season. Fully a dozen young players will be taken South in the spring and given a trying out, with the hope of adding a couple of good pitchers to the already clever string. It will not be easy to replace any of the regular men, who have shown good points under trying circumstances. The New York team fought a game battle, but I think they made a mistake in playing Chesboro too often. Then, too, Griffith mixed up with the game too much from the bench, and spent too much of his time in making enemies of his opponents' pitchers.

Grif did altogether too much boasting, and can now see his mistake. It was proven beyond a doubt that Capt. Collins made a winning move when he discarded P. Dougherty for insubordination, for after he left the team, all went smoothly and the players pulled as one man.

The wise men from Pittsburg and a few other cities who informed their friends that all was fixed to let New York win must make another guess next season. No Boston club was ever fixed, and the man or boy who gives out any such unfounded information is a pretty good one to keep an eye on when dealing the cards, for such people usually play with marked papers and have no regard for honesty. Funny how some people can tell you with great satisfaction of some mean thing some one said about you, but are shy on handing up the compliments straying around.

Boston was a prime favorite in the great race just closed, just as she was when the great Baltimore aggregation was downed in 1897. I found nine-tenths of the baseball public outside of New York were with the champions. In fact, I have found that a ball club is hard to beat the second season if she can make any kind of a fight for the honors. The fraternity would rather see the champions repeat than allow the honors to go with a brand-new crowd of players.

The next big gathering of baseball people will be at New York Oct. 25, 26 and 27, when the representatives of twenty-six minor leagues will hold their annual convention.

There is sure to be some warm arguments at this gathering, for the National commission representing the two major leagues have planned to break up the organization unless they are allowed to run the baseball universe as they see fit.

"Surrender or we declare war," was the last words sent to the minors by Garry Herrmann and Ban Johnson.

The minors simply want to settle their own disputes, but the commission says "No, we are the rulers of baseball from one end of the land to the other, and we must decide all your troubles. Although you are 21 and well able to look out for yourself, we don't care for independence among the poor people. You have thrived for three years without our advice, but hail us the great and only song-and-dance artists of the land or we will carve you to the bone."

"Those little lambs who are afraid can come individually and we will take them in. They can pay tribute to Mr. Bruce, of Cincinnati, a man who started in baseball as the lawyer of the Players' league in '90."

And the minors will meet and talk it over.

Garry Hermann knows absolutely nothing about minor league affairs, and Mr. Pulliam knows less. Ban Johnson has gone through the minor end on his way to the highest position of a great league. Some one is steering the commission, and it might be well for the major leagues to pay a little attention to the coming storm.

BELLE MEADE FARM NO MORE

Famous Breeding Establishment Will Probably Never Be Rehabilitated

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 22.—When Walter O. Palmer and his associates of the Highland Park Jockey club bought The Commoner and the brood mares and weanlings at Belle Meade this week, the once famous thoroughbred nursery went into eclipse, from which, except under extraordinary circumstances, it will never emerge. There is a bare possibility that if the farm of nearly 3000 acres is not cut up and sold off in smaller tracts in the next few months, Mr. Palmer and his associates, or some one else, may endeavor to buy the place. In fact, Mr. Palmer has made repeated offers for the old home and a large block of the land, but he and the administrator could never agree as to terms. Other parties have also looked over the property, but the price at which it has been held stopped all would-be purchasers.

The chances are, however, that it will never again be used for the breeding of the thoroughbred horse, although it is beyond question one of the best equipped nurseries in the United States. It has excellent barns and paddocks, abundant pasturage, miles of stone and rail fencing and a fine stream of water running through most of it. There is a dairy plant also of the most modern appointments.

Belle Meade farm was established by one of the pioneers, John Harding, over a century ago. He owned 5000 or 6000 acres in this tract, besides many other pieces of property. His son, William G. Harding, born in a log cabin on the place in 1808, inherited the vast estate, and it was he who centered upon the breeding of thoroughbred horses nearly seventy years ago. Gen. Harding was a great admirer of fast horses, and early in life he developed a fondness for the race horse that was not satisfied until he was the owner of a vast nursery. A contemporary of Andrew Jackson, and having the old statesmen's love of horse flesh, he determined to make Belle Meade one of the most famous farms in the country. But the civil war interfered with his small establishment, for Gen. Harding was an ardent Southerner, and when war came he sacrificed time and means to aid the Southern cause. He equipped a company of confederate soldiers, and aided, financially and otherwise, the confederacy in every way he could.

But after the war Belle Meade began to grow as a thoroughbred nursery. Imp. Bonnie Scotland was the ground work upon which the superstructure was built. He got some great horses, Bramble, the hero of the cup course, among others, and soon made the name and fame of Belle Meade known throughout the length and breadth of the land. There were other stallions at Belle Meade, but the imported horse laid the foundation of Belle Meade's fame. His progeny were noted for their stout hearts and their great ability to travel in the mud. For years men pinned their faith to Bonnie Scotland because of their ability on heavy tracks.

But before the days of Bonnie Scotland famous horses graced the paddocks of the old nursery. The mighty Priam, winner of the English derby as far back as 1829, once reigned supreme in its harem. Here, too, the great Vandal held his court and is buried, as are Jack Malone, Sir Richard, Highlander, Childe Harold and John Morgan. Of the more recent celebrites that occupied its beautiful paddocks were Imp. Great Tom, Enquirer, Iroquois, the only American-bred horse to ever win the English derby; Longstreet, Imp. Tremont, Luke Blackburn, Inspector B., Imp. Tithonus, Huron and The Commoner.

Around the courts of these noted sires were many of the best matrons the breeding world has ever known. Here were Yorkville Belle, sold at public auction in New York Tuesday for $10,000; Nellie Van, dam of Advance Guard; Pretence, dam of The Parader; Tulla Blackburn Lyche, Gossip, Rosa Buckden, Carlotta, Majestic, Duchess, mother of the renowned Clifford; Tambourine, Tullahoma, Trade Wind, dam of Hugh Penny, and many others from whom sprang some of the turf's greatest performers.

At Belle Meade was foaled Gamma, the mighty gray mare who dominated the turf fifty years ago. But more familiar to the present generation of racing men are Bramble, undoubtedly the best performer ever sent from its paddocks; Tammany, Proctor Knott, G. W. Johnson, Red Banner, Helen Nicholas, Clifford, Endurance-by-Right, Uncle Bob, Boulevard, Inspector B., Huron, Maid Marion and many others too numerous to mention.

Belle Meade has furnished horses that have captured almost every classic event decided in this country. In Proctor Knot the first Futurity winner was developed, while others have triumphed in an American derby, a Brooklyn handicap, Lawrence Realization, Annual Champion, etc.

During the seventy years of the existence of Belle Meade over fifty different consignments of yearlings have been sent to the sales mart, for which over $2,500,000 was realized. From 1875 to 1892 695 colts and fillies brought about $535,125. The best sale ever realized was in 1892, when fifty-two head brought a total of $110,050. These horses in after years won millions of dollars in stakes and purses. Iroquois alone produced winners of over $1,000,000, while Bonnie Scotland's get earned close on to these figures. In numbers of race winners bred at the nursery the figures are well into the thousands; in fact, these horses won upward of 3000 races during the past forty years, a record probably unequaled by any other nursery.

Oil Steamer Fails to Reach Siberian Port.

New York, Oct. 22.—The steamer Canton, chartered to take oil, etc., to Nicholaivsk, at the mouth of the Amur river, has been unable to reach her destination owing to ice, says a Times dispatch from London. In consequence of the failure of the Canton to deliver her cargo, the unfortunate inhabitants of Nicholaivsk will, the correspondent adds, be without light during the Siberian winter.

STALWART MAY ENTER CHARMED CIRCLE OF $100,000 WINNERS

Ort Welles and Beldame Are Best Money-Makers of the Other Three-Year-Olds.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 22.—Stalwace's handsome earning at the end of the season in the annual Champion, Century and Hindoo stakes adds him to the list of turf winners with chances of reaching the $100,00 line before his career ends, according to statistics compiled here, as his money winnings this year, with the son Imp. Meddler's earning in 1903 as a 2-year-old, foot up the handsome sum of $67,183. Delhi leads Stalwart on the two seasons' winnings by a long margin, and only now lacks $450 of being $100,000 winner, his two years' winning footing up $99,400, making him the largest money winner yet bred and sired at Castleton stud of J. R. & F. P. Keene. In the two years 1903 and 1904 Ort Welles has won over $70,000, and Beldame shows a total of $76,935 won; Broomstick, $63,310; English Lad, $45,235; Dolly Spanker, $25,150; Lady Amelia, $24,460; Audience, $16,081; Proceeds, $16,060; and Prince Silverwings, $10,520. There was never before a season when so many good winning 2-year-olds of one preceding year made good as 3-year-olds, and even Highball, the largest winning 2-year-old among the colts in 1902, before he died last summer won the American Derby and swelled his two seasons' winnings to the rich amount of $72,215.

T. H. Stevens, Walnut Hill stock farm, will sell sixty head of brood mares, horses in training and yearlings in one of the fall sales of thoroughbreds. Stevens has had no public sale for a number of years, and, as a result, there has been a big accumulation of horses, and his farm has finally become overstocked. Some of the mares he will sell are old turf favorites, but he is only disposing of them because he has fillies out of them that, on account of their advantage in age, are more desirable for him to keep.

It is not generally known that the land dimensions of J. R. & F. P. Keene's famous Castleton stud farm has been greatly increased in acreage in the last year. The original tract, 615 acres, was secured from A. J. Ford, Richmond, Va., and since has been added the Vance farm, known as Cabel Dale, 232 acres, and ninety acres bought of J. P. Kelser, making a total of 1077 acres now in the home of Kingston and Ben Brush. The acquisition of imp. Meddler to Castleton now makes that farm the only breeding estate in Kentucky which ever housed two horses with leading winning stallion records, with the exception of Eimendorf, when owned by D. Swigert.

The noted 4-year-old bay filly, Flying Ship, by Flying Dutchman, dam Phalia, by Hindoo, has been shipped home from the East by her owner, Woodford Clay, and will be retired to the stud. In her last race at Gravesend early in the month she pulled up lame, and Clay decided to retire her before she entirely broke down. Last year she won the Englewood stakes, running the mile in 1:39 4-5, and other high-class races, and this season she has won four times in high-class company. Clay has booked her to be bred in the spring to imp. Star Shoot.

Turney Bros. may race a string in California the coming winter. The entire stable is now at Kansas City, and at the conclusion of the meeting there what horses that need a rest will be sent back to Kentucky and the ohter members shipped to California in charge of Amos Turney. The string will do most of its racing in that part of the country at Los Angeles.

Frank Respess, of Cincinnati, Ohio, has purchased of W. H. McCorkle, the 3-year-old gelding, Sir Mars, by imp. Sir Modfred, which has a very high private reputation, for a reported price of $1500. Respess is a brother of R. B. Respess, the owner of Dick Welles.

TURF PLUNGER ENDS SEASON

"Pittsburg Phil" Will Take Vacation After Strenuous Year.

New York, Oct. 22.—"Pittsburg Phil," George E. Smith, has decided to quit the turf for the season, and in a few days he will leave for an extended trip to the health resorts in the West and South. The noted plunger has been in poor health for several months, the nervous strain of the betting ring, under which he has labored for years, having been too much for him, and today he is a wreck physically of his former self.

For fifteen years Smith has fought a financial battle with the bookmakers, and, unlike most plungers, he has more than held his own in the struggle. When he first began his career on the turf he had little else beside that most essential qualification of a speculator—nerve.

The trouble that Smith had with the stewards of the Eastern Jockey club last year had much to do with bringing on his illness. First his jockey, Shaw, was deprived of his license. Then the stewards ordered that the entries of his horses be refused. This action in depriving him the privilege to race horses here worried him greatly and caused him many sleepless nights. When the ban was lifted off his horses this year he showed his great joy on receipt of the news by rushing up the stairs at the grandstand two steps at a time, and shouting to his mother, "The horses have been reinstated, mother." This was the greatest exhibition of feeling that he has ever shown in public.

Unlike most plungers of long standing, Phil is wealthy. He has a large amount of real estate and is estimated to be worth $500,000 in cash and bonds.

RECORDS BROKEN.

New Time In Pacing and Trotting Doubles.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 22—Two world's records were broken yesterday at the Memphis Driving park. C. K. G. Billings, of Chicago, was the driver in each event. Prince Direct and Morning Star, driven to pole, lowered the pacing record to pole for half a mile of 1:01¾, by stepping the distance in 1:00¾. The Monk and Equity, to pole, were sent against the trotting record to pole of 2:08, held by them, and rounded the course in 2:07¾. A high wind was blowing up the stretch, which prevented Dan Patch, Major Delmar and Charlie Mac from being sent against time as scheduled. After finishing the half in their attempt against the record, Prince Direct and Morning Star were continued around the course, rounding out the mile in 2:05½, unofficial, which equals the pole record for that distance, held by Prince Direct and Direct Hal.

Sweet Marie easily won the 2:06 trot in straight heats.

YANGER AND SAYERS DRAW.

Milwaukee, Oct. 22.—Benny Yanger, of Chicago, and Maurice Sayers, of this city, went six rounds to adraw before the Milwaukee Boxing club last night. The bout was fast and furious from start to finish.

SEASON IS OPENED

Company A and Naval Reserves Play Indoor Baseball.

Good Attendance at First Game In New League Series.

The indoor baseball season in Duluth opened last evening at the Armory, when the Company A and Second Division Naval Reserve teams came together in the first game of the Army and Navy league schedule.

The success of the opening game was a source of much gratification to the management of the league and the members of the two teams. The hall was crowded with enthusiastic supporters of the two nines, and a close game kept up the interest throughout the nine innings.

Following the game an informal dance was held. Flaaten's orchestra was in attendance and played until nearly midnight.

One of the pleasant features about the dance was the absence of any undesirable element. The officers of the company are determined that the dances shall be either run in an orderly manner or abolished.

The game itself was a close one, the Company A team finally winning out by the score of 8 to 6. Jones and Melby were the opposing pitchers, and the former had a little the better of the argument. It was anybody's game until the ninth inning, however, when Company A, with one run to the good, succeeded in getting another man across the plate. Considering the fact that it was the first appearance of the Reserves they made a surprisingly good showing. Bockman and Baker did especially good work. For the soldiers, King at left short, played his usual good game, and all of the members of the team were strong at the bat.

The official score is as follows:

RACE COURSES

To Blame For the Lack of Stable Room.

Cincinnati, Oct. 22.—At Latonia the cry goes up, "no stable room," and this same cry has gone up at nearly every race course in the Middle West this year, and the race courses are to blame for it. Not that they do not build enough stalls, but that the stable room is free. The result is that horsemen never think of ridding themselves of any of the useless sort of nags, as they fondly hope to get them to win a race some time at somewhere. Such horses are dragged from pillar to post—from New Orleans up the line, and when the stables go into winter quarters or continue in the winter racing game, the nags are still in evidence—just eating their heads off, and no account for anything else, still the owner clings with the forlorn hope that the horse may round to. If there was a fixed charge for stable room at each race track no doubt many a worthless nag would be got rid of. The owner carries one along for he fills the car, which would cost just as much if one were missing. His feed is the only thing that costs anything, for worthless horses are, as a rule, not given to the ailments that overtake their speedy brethren. Now, if stable rent stared the owner in the face, and the figures showed that the nag would have to win more than once race for him to break even for the season the chances are he would rid himself of such excess baggage in a hurry. As nearly every fairly large stable carries one or more of these $100 selling platers, a good deal of stable room would be obtained if they were dropped out, which could be utilized by horses that are able to win something better than the cheapest sort of a race.

NEED OF CHANGE

There is a pratical unanimity among baseball men of all leagues and conditions on one point, whatever their differences on everything else that concerns the game. All agree that there is need of some change in the rules or the play to handicap the pitcher before he becomes an absolute czar, says the Chicago Tribune. The only dissenting voice heard belong to the pitchers, and they are willing to have anything done to handicap the opposing pitchers, so long as it does not affect themselves. Before another season, therefore, there is certain to be some kind of legislation to decrease the power the pitcher has over the batter and increase the action of the game. Many different suggestions have been made. The American league favors removing the foul strike rule and checking up some of the preliminary motions allowed a pitcher before delivering the ball. It is argued that the foul strike rule is not needed to shorten the games if players are kept hustling between innings by umpires and managers, and that rule has been responsible for a great decrease in the batting beyond question. The National league favors retaining the foul strike and substituting some other form of handicap, such as reducing the number of "balls" allowing a batter his base to three instead of four. This it is argued would compel the pitchers to use fewer puzzling curves and put more balls over the plate. The suggestion has also been made to move the pitcher back another five feet, but this does not meet with general aprroval. Manager McAleer of the St. Louis Americans has the most novel suggestion of all, and that is to revive an old rule, which has been forgotten by all except the veterans of the game, whereby a batter could designate on going to bat whether he wanted a high or a low ball, and the pitcher was compelled to deliver such a ball in order to have a strike called. This used to be the rule and the high ball had to be pitched over the plate between the line of the shoulder and waist, while the low ball had to be between the line of waist and knee. That rule was abolished, giving the pitcher the right to pitch the ball anywhere between shoulder and knee, and have a strike called if the ball went over the plate. This was the first legislation on record in favor of the pitcher and the only other instance was the foul strike rule. All other rules governing the pitching have been designed to handicap the man who is constantly becoming master of the situation in spite of all handicaps.

PERMIT IS NEEDED

Before the Britts-Gans Contest at 'Frisco Can Be Settled.

No Assurances That They Will Be Allowed to Clash.

San Francisco, Oct. 22.—To be or not to be. That is the question, and until it is decided all other questions growing out of the matching of Jimmy Britt and Joe Gans must remain unput.

There is little use drawing comparisons between Gans' short right and Britt's body thump or arguing that Britt's grit overlaps Gans' smiting capacity until we are reasonably certain the dogs of war are to be slipped. That is the way all senesible sports feel about the thing, and it is why the customary fight talk has been abandoned and discussions are confined to the Shasta club prospects of securing a permit that will enable it to handle the contest for the world's lightweight championship on the last night of October.

In a few days something definite will be known. If the permit is granted there may, in view of all that has been written and said, be a momentary hush of surprise, but it will be followed by noise a-plenty. With the contest an assured fact tongues will loosen and lost time will be made up. The match is one that the patrons of pugilism are particularly anxious to see, and while I do not share the belief that it will attract as big a crowd as the Jeffries-Corbett go, I am satisfied it will arouse more interest than any other event that this city has had to do with apart from the heavyweight championship referred to.

At the outset it looked as though a damper would be cast on the affair by Britt's seemingly inordinate demands in connection with the purse money. Britt's covetousness appeared to many to be a sign of weakness. It was thought that he recognized in Gans his master at the boxing game, and that with sure defeat looking thead, he wanted big money as consolation for the hilding that was inevitable.

This idea has been dissipated. A little reflection showed that in asking for the lion's share of the prize money, Britt simply followed the lead of the champions that were older and wiser than he. There are fashions in matchmaking as in everything else, apparently, and those who berate Britt for hoggishness are now commending him for business sagacity. They go still further and give free expression to the belief that Britt will forget all about the purse apportionment and fight like a Turk when the time comes.

It seems as htough the fact of being jilted by Britt had flurried Young Corbett. He announced that he would box Terry McGovern at Philadelphia and immediately afterward determined to hook up with "Battling" Nelson and Jabel White. Under the circumstances we feel like waiting until the wheel stops and the arrow denotes conclusively which will be the Denver boy's next opponent.

If Corbett decides on Nelson, and the contest comes to San Francisco, it will draw a big crowd to the ringside. There are some pugilists the fans of this city never tire of seeing in action, and Corbett and Nelson are among them. Irrespective of what the Nelson go holds for him, it might be a good business move on Corbett's part to accept the Hayes Valley club's offer, as it will land him right on the ground to challenge his rival, Jimmy Britt, and enable him to keep up a little agitation in regard to his match with the native son.

No one here supposes for an instant that Britt intends to chisel Corbett out of his return date. In taking on Gans first, Britt reasons in a logical, though perhaps mercenary way, that he has mapped out a scheme which will assure him two matches while if he gave Corbett the precedence he might have to content himself with one. So far as Corbett is concerned, it seems to be a condition of affairs when "the least said is soonest mended." If he is wise, he will grab the Nelson match and like himself to San Francisco. If he does this, about the only thing that could keep him out of the match with Britt would be the fact of the latter being so roughly handled by Gans as to necessitate retirement from the game, and this is a rather remote possibility.

Everything, of course, depends upon the pulling off of the Gans-Britt mill. If there is no Gans-Britt contest, there will be no Corbett-Nelson affair, or, for that matter, anything else in the line of a Queensberry fracas until after the boy bells ring in the new year, for the supervisors withhold the permit for Britt and Gans, they are not likely to extend favors to any one in the promoting line until the dawning of 1905.

"Oldtimer," writing to me from the orange belt, rebels at the criticism that it would be foolish to rematch "Kid" McCoy and "Twin" Sullivan. He says that the conclusion of the recent contest wronged Sullivan, and that there would have been a big rumpus over the award only that the sports were afraid of hurting the boxing game, which has just received a fresh impetus in Los Angeles.

According to "Oldtimer" Sullivan was in hot pursuit of "the petered out Hoosier" in the last three rounds, but only succeeded in striking him a few times on the back.

Says he: "Sullivan was never in real danger during the fight, although suffering from a bloody nose and black eye. McCoy, however, was nearly gone in one round from a wicked left hook in the stomach."

"Oldtimer" declares the decision was the rankest he had heard from a referee since the Jeffries-Sharkey twenty-round go in San Francisco. He says it was received with groans and hisses, and that "the bulk of the Los Angeles fight-going public would prefer to see Sullivan and McCoy clash again to seeing McCoy fight another man."

As I was among those who decried the idea of a return match I think it but right to allow "Oldtimer" to air his views. If there are many of his way of thinking the Los Angeles promoters will certainly be justified in sending McCoy and Sullivan together a second time.

WISCONSIN WAR

Caused By Ire of Deposed Faction, Says Walter Wellman.

La Follette Appealed to the Plain People and Won.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—A special by Walter Wellman to the Record-Herald from Milwaukee says: "What is the war in Wisconsin all about, anyway? Why has the Republican party there split in twain?" These are questions often heard in other states, for the battle among the Badgers has attracted attention throughout the country.

In the answer to the queries we have an interesting story of persons and politics. When La Follette first aspired to the governorship, ten years ago, there was one man who fought him bitterly. That man was Philetus Sawyer, senator, boss—an illiterate, rough and ready, vulgar, morally obtuse, money-loving man, with a big heart and many good qualities. Sawyer had a peculiar reason for opposing La Follette and he went the limit in efforts to block the young man's way. He called on his friends for help. As boss he set the machine in motion. Men who had nothing against La Follette, who, to the contrary, rather liked him, felt compelled to obey the old man's wishes. It was the old crowd against the new crowd. Men who disliked the machine, who had not been able to get in, or wouldn't get in if they could, rallied around La Follette. For the most part the old organization stood pat.

The new leader, poor, fighting wealth and power early realized he must have much more than his personality, more than the widespread prejudice against the old system. He must have issues. So he declared in favor of making the railways pay a proper share of the taxes. He showed how they were paying $700,000 a year less than they ought to pay. That ranged the railways against him. The railroads joined the machine; they were, in fact, already copartners, and long had been. La Follette went farther. He said it would do no good to make the railways pay their just taxes if this were not followed up by state control of the rates, because the roads would turn round and compel the people to pay the increased taxes by raising freight rates. So he began an agitation for a rate commission.

As for the machine, he would destroy it, too. To put it out of business forever he would have a primary election law. All candidates, United States senators, congressmen, governor, county officers, members of the assembly — everything — should be named directly by the people without the instructions, the intrigues and the huckstertings of the politicians.

* * *

For ten years the battle has raged La Follette was thrice defeated for the nomination. He was twice elected governor. This year the war came on fiercer than ever, and resulted in the open rupture of the party which had long been threatened. There may be 50,000 or 60,000 Republicans who intend voting either for Scofield or Peck.

Why? What is there in this man and his methods that should thus break up the party? What has he done that should cause such a revolt?

Diligent inquiry brings out the following statements from his foes:

1. "We object to him because he is a tyrant. For the old machine he has substituted one-man power, and he is the man. No one else can have anything to say. He is the whole thing.

2. "We can't live with him. There is no such thing as consultation. We can't get along with this man, and have got just as far as our self-respect will permit.

3. "He has built up the most perfect political machine the state ever saw. It is a machine which uses the state government as its arsenal. He has prostituted the government to his personal ambition. No man can get an appointment unless he bows the knee to the little boss. He has created offices to reward his retainers. He has filled the public with all sorts of game wardens and inspectors. His vassals are quartered on the treasury.

4. "His primary election scheme is absurd. It will not work. It is a visionary experiment.

5. "He bulldozes and browbeats everyone that dares stand up against him. Members of the legislature who try to retain their personal independence he sends for and tells them that unless they obey his orders he will smash them, wipe them off the face of the earth politically.

6. "He is inordinately vain and ambitious. He is not sincere. All these so-called issues are mere tricks to catch votes. He is a demagogue. He is not a Republican, anyway, but a Populist or Socialist.

7. "We do not want a government of frenzy and isms in this state. We want conservative government, and that is why we are against La Follette."

* * *

Such is the indictment of La Follette and La Folletteism one may get from any group of stalwarts. It is all you can get. You can find nothing that is more specific. Vague as it is, many Republicans believe they are doing a patriotic duty when they permit this arraignment to stir their passion to the point where they are determined to stick in a vote for Peck.

In a spirit of fair play I turned the foregoing list of Caesar's crimes over to one of Caesar's friends for reply. He commented:

"Number one—In other words the wrong fellow is on top.

"Number two—They don't try to live with him; they are trying to kill him. His friends do not complain of his methods. He could not be expected to consult with his enemies.

"Number three—Yes, he has an organiaztion; he puts his friends in office, not his foes. True, he has played the game of politics; he has fought fire with fire. If he hadn't done so he would have been destroyed.

"Number four—Wait and see. Besides, when it was in the Republican platform why did not men who profess to be Republicans stand for it?

"Number five—He is a leader, responsible to the people for results. As such he has tried to whip into line legislators who were going back on the party and the principles at stake.

"Number six—Stuff. The same thing is said about every man that goes ahead and does something for reform in the government.

"Number seven—In other words, go back to the old combination between the Republican machine, the railroads and the special privilege seekers."

* * *

To me it seems the truth is something like this: When La Follette's power in the state began to assume importance he was forced to call to his side a lot of new men. The old coteries, accustomed to run things in their counties and districts, were largely displeased. Power slipped out of their hands and into the hands of men who had never before been their peers in influence or standing. Naturally, the men who were shoved into the background did not like it. For the upheaval they naturally and rightly blamed La Follette. He was the head devil. Their anger and pique were all the greater because of the well-known fact that a great majority of La Follette's lieutenants were farmers, or men who had not figured much in affairs. It is said to be true, and probably is true, that, broadly speaking, the half-breeds are the scrub politicians of the state, while the stalwarts are the silk stockings; that the wealth and brains of the state, the business men and professional men, lean to the stalwart side, and that the La Follette ranks were recruited from another stratum. I suppose one may say this without giving offense. It is a situation easy to understand. La Follette led a revolution in politics; it was an upheaval from below against the top, like most revolutions. The new crop of active and influential men came largely from what in Europe they would call the proletariat. But in our blessed land we have no such thing, and we may phrase it differently with perfect accuracy.

La Follette appealed to the plain people, the farmers, the wage-workers, the small tradesmen—the bone and sinew of our American public—and won them.

There is no disputing La Follette's popularity among the people. He is almost an idol. Everywhere you go you hear him spoken of affectionately as "The Little Governor," or "Bob." Democrats, as well as Republicans, pin their faith to him, especially in the country districts and small towns. The people of this country like a man who fights for something definite and understandable for the common good. That is the secret of Mr. Roosevelt's great popularity, a popularity which today makes him stronger than his party. It is the secret of Mr. Bryan's hold upon the masses—and today, with all respect to Mr. Parker, Mr. Bryan is the foremost Democrat in the hearts of the millions of that party. And as for La Follette, surely he has fought hard enough and pluckily enough for the things he believes to be right. His battle against odds during the last ten years is almost without parallel in our recent political history.

But the men who were pushed to the rear in the new regime did not like it. They set out to be unhappy over the triumph of the little Frenchman, and they made a good job of it. They fomented and fermented in their discontent. One man helped another to feel badly. The railroad politicians were not idle. Many of the newspapers of the state, for one reason or another, easily comprehended when you remember that most of the wealthy men are in the stalwart ranks, joined in the hue and cry. It became a sort of fad to damn this upstart, this Huguenot-Scotch-Irish adventurer. There was no good in him. Everything he did was wrong. And La Follette, living night and day on a battlefield, surrouded by his foe, was forced to defend himself, to build a machine, to throw up intrenchments, to put heavy charges in his guns, to fight back. He became a little imperious, a little theatrical, perhaps a little irascible, and this added fuel to the fire. He made new enemies, and they joined in the hunt. The more friction, the more heat.

And finally La Folletteism on one side and anti-La Folletteism on the other, became a sort of fever in the blood of the people. To this day the combatants are puzzled to give you an adequate and coherent explanation of what it is all about. A year or two hence, when the fever shall have run its course and cool normality returns, most of them will wonder what on earth it was they got so much excited over in 1904.

* * *

That La Follette is a demagogue is difficult to believe. To me he seems a man very much in earnest. His primary election scheme is an experiment. If adopted, as it probably will be, it may not be the success which he hopes for. All political action in the selection of candidates is to be in voting booths, like on election day; there are to be no caucuses or conventions, no touching of elbows. Besides, it looks a little absurd to have the successful candidates, chosen at the primaries, meet at the state capital on a fixed day and adopt a platform for themselves to run on. The people should make platforms, not the candidates. One can understand how many Republicans may conscientiously oppose this somewhat radical experiment, and how even some of the governor's friends think he may have gone too far.

* * *

But the rate commission is another sort of proposition. No one, save the railway managers themselves, contends that the state should not have a fair degree of power to regulate rates. On this issue Governor La Follette is wholly sound and rational. He knows what he is talking about. He has studied the subject. He has inquired carefully into the experience of other states. In a series of conversations with him you will find him coming back to this topic, again and again. His manner is that of the enthusiast, of the man in earnest, of the man who believes in his cause and is determined it shall triumph because it ought to triumph.

* * *

Nor does he make the mistake of going too far. He is not radical. He is not a wild-eyed reformer, fighting railways simply because they are railways. He realizes that to meet the tests in the United States supreme court any rate fixed by the state must be a reasonable rate. It must give the railroad a chance to earn a fair profit. It must be a rate which holds out justice to both corporation and public; not one which confiscates and ruins. On the practical side, he appreciates the difference of the task, knows the rate commission should be composed of able and experienced men. He does not talk like the agitator, the adventurer, his enemies say he is.

Is he sincere? Has he brought forward these reform issues because he really wants to reform, or because he simply wants to help himself? These are not pratcial questions. If such inquiry is permissible in his case it is permissible to question the sincerity of every man in the world engaged in a good cause. By their works you shall know them.

Park Rapids, Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Renfrew, one of the oldest settlers near Park Rapids, who has been living with his son near Harvey, N. D., since the death of his wife a few years ago, has passed away, and his remains were brought here Tuesday for interment. He was about 70 years of age, a native of Scotland, and one of the most respected citizens.

The job of laying the water main to the court house has been completed. Contractor Knapp was behind on account of a serious delay in the arrival of his material, but finished the work rapidly when he got at it.

NO MIDDLE AGED OR OLD WOMAN

NEED LONGER SUFFER FROM CONSTITUTIONAL AILMENTS!

The New HY-ZON Treatment is More Wonderful Than the Wonder-Working Philosopher's Stone.

The health of middle aged and old women should be safeguarded as much as those of younger years. The ailments of old age will ravage the body, but HY-ZON, with nature's aid, acts as a youthful invigorator, being the greatest medical discovery of any age for all diseases of womankind. HY-ZON invigorates the nerves, enriches the blood and rejuvenates the whole system, a modern health builder, that reaches all ailments, the result of decline of years. A few doses of HY-ZON taken now and again, will revive those well nigh worn out inner nerves, restoring fading memory, inviting sleep to come to tired eyes. This is what HY-ZON, the marvelous tonic elixir does for middle aged and old women. In that trying period, the change of life, there is no remedy that equals HY-ZON. It has saved thousands from early graves and more thousands from insane asylums. New York, Oct. 22.—It became known at Tammany hall yesterday that Chas. F. Murphy had purchased an extensive estate at Good Ground, L. I., where, beginning next season, he will spend the summer.

The estate purchased by the Tammany leader was owned by John Layton, of Manhattan, and is considered one of the best appointed and handsomest estates on Long Island. It consists of 110 acres, and has a shore front three-quarters of a mile long. The house on the property was built in 1881 and the grounds were laid out by the landscape gardener who had charge of laying out Central park.

Murphy's immediate neighbors are James C. Carter, Justice Morgan J. O'Brien and Mr. Banks, of the law publishing firm of Banks Bros. It is reported that $60,000 has been paid for the estate, Murphy said this was not correct, but he declined to state what the price was.

THE ROOSEVELT SCHOOL AT VIRGINIA

NEW $60,000 SCHOOL BUILDING AT VIRGINIA.

The newly completed Roosevelt school building in Virginia, is probably one of the finest school buildings in the state, outside of Duluth and the Twin Cities. It was erected at a cost of $60,000 exclusive of the grounds on which it is located. The school board is planning to purchase a large new campus adjoining the building, giving the pupils an entire block for a baseball and football park. The cost of the campus will be about $6000 in addition to the cost of the school building and site, and will involve a total expenditure of nearly $75,000.

The adjoining city of Eveleth is also erecting a new school building this year. There is great rivalry between the two high schools, and the Virginia people are determined that the pupils of their school shall not be handicapped the matter of athletic contests by the lack of proper grounds for practice.

When the Circus Came to Maysville

BY LEONIE COLLISTER.

All Maysville was in a bustle of excitement when it awoke one summer morning to see the town being made bright with circus posters and handbills.

Maysville was a very small village on the far western boundary of Kansas, and a circus was the greatest excitement since a branch line of the L. and R. Railroad had been built through there, some six months before.

A circus!

When Robert Whiting, aged 10, and familiarly known as Bob-White, saw the posters, as he went on a "before-breakfast" errand to the grocery, he was filled with admiration for the wonderful pictures of animals and curiously clad humans. He wondered if his aunt would permit him to go—mother would, if she were there; but as his eyes rested on the awful sign, "Admission 50 cents," his heart fell. He doubted if even mother could gratify his longing at that expenditure of money. Bobby's mother was not well, and when his father had found it necessary to go East on business, the doctor had said that if Mrs. Whiting could accompany him it would do much toward restoring her to health. Therefore all the small surplus left over from the living expenses of the household had been put away with that end in view, and it was a very lonesome boy, who waved his hand bravely until the L. and R. branch was only a bit of smoke in the distance.

In all the 10 years of his life he had never been separated from his mother before. She had now been gone three weeks and the first bitter pang of separation was over; still, his greatest happiness consisted in anticipation of the day when she would be home again.

On this morning, however, the circus posters served to occupy his whole attention. In three days it would be there! Three days is a long time to a boy of 10, and Bobby began to cast about in his mind for a possible means of earning some money. Yes, three days was a very, very long time; but also 50 cents was a very, very large sum, and though three whole days remained before the great event ,only a portion of that time was his own. Each morning he trundled about a little cart filled with fresh vegetables from his aunt's garden and sold them to the townspeople.

Thrifty Aunt Margaret never thought to give Bobby a few pennies now and then—it was a child's place to be useful—and though she was not unkind to him, she considered that the care of Bobby, and the extra expense of keeping him, was deserving of some return.

Bobby had always trundled the little wagon willingly without thought of greed for the collection of small coins in his pocket; but on this day, as the nickels and dimes began to jingle, how he did long for enough—just enough—to take him to the circus.

He would tell his aunt of the glowing wonders depicted on the circus bills when he went home, and perhaps—perhaps! A faint hope tingled in his breast—a very faint one—that she might succumb to the desire to go and take him with her. Once there had been a magic-lantern show at the schoolhouse, and she had taken Bobby; but that was long ago, and the admission had been 10 cents instead of 50.

He had gathered the freshest vegetables on this morning, traversed the town thoroughly, and as a result had sold everything he carried, even down to the last bunch of radishes.

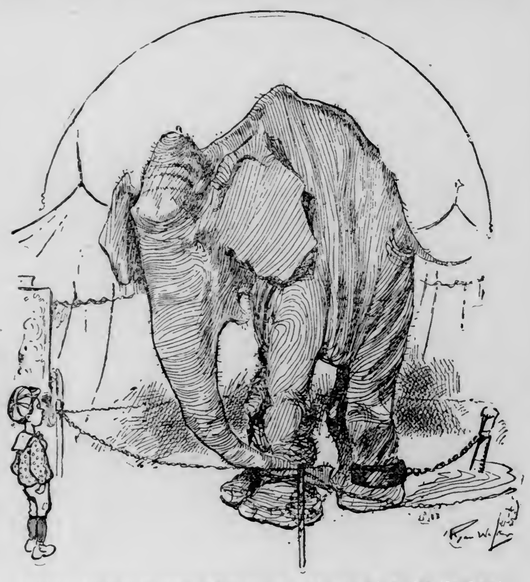

With an eager face he emptied the contents of his pockets into Aunt Margaret's lap. One dollar and ninety-five cents there was. That would buy two tickets to the circus and still leave the amount of someday's profits. But he had reckoned without reason, for not only did Aunt Margaret show not the faintest weakness for the circus, but she advised Bobby not to loiter in front of "them no-'count showbills."

At last the evening before circus day arrived, and with it the white caravans of such great interest. Nine-tenths of Maysville gathered at the grounds to watch "the greatest show on earth" unload. Bobby was there, to be sure, with eyes round as saucers, watching the one elephant of which the show boasted throwing his great trunk into the air.

The three days had elapsed, and Bobby had but one coin in his pocket. It was a nickel, given him by old Gran'ma Smithers for weeding her garden.

Well, the only thing left for him was to see as much as possible of the sights on this one evening and view the "grand parade" the next morning. As the supper hour arrived Maysville went home to eat, and reluctant children were dragged away, with the promise of the parade the following day, and many even with the big show itself in the afternoon. Oh, the joy of it!

Finally, no one remained but Bobby, who stood enraptured, feasting his eyes, for the animals—not many, to be sure, but to Bobby a mammoth aggregation—were being fed. At last, their hunger satisfied, the preparation of food for the human part of the show began, and the air was soon filled with the aroma of cooking meat and vegetables.

Bobby, with eyes round as saucers, was watching the elephant.

"They ain't no water 'round here fit to drink," growled a man coming up with an empty pail in his hands, "and they ain't no house within a quarter of a mile."

The small show carried no one to do the menial work, each one performing his or her part, but tonight all were tired from the long, dusty overland trip they had made that day, and no one volunteered to go for the water necessary before coffee could be made.

Bobby hesitated a moment, then he stepped forward into the circle of the firelight.

"Please, sir," he said to the man who had been giving what few orders he had heard, "I'll bring you some water if you'll give me the pail. I'll go in a jiffy."

"All right, youngster. Here, Reddy, give him the bucket." This Reddy did willingly enough, and threw himself down upon the ground to await supper.

In a very short time Bobby, panting with haste, returned carrying the huge bucket brimming with water. His shoulders ached and his hands were almost numb.

The big man fumbled in his pocket and took out a dime, hesitated a moment, then replaced it, and from an inner pocket drew forth a piece of yellow pasteboard and handed it to Bobby.

"Here, Kid, is a ticket to the show," he said.

Bobby felt his head reel for a moment. He looked at the ticket with unseeing eyes. Then, with the glow of the firelight upon the black letters printed across its face, they resolved themselves into the words "Admit One," and the full tide of his happiness burst upon him.

When he reached home that night it was late; but something in the child's eager face must have touched Aunt Margaret, for she set his supper without complaint, and listened with a smile to his description of the animals, with every now and then a question.

Then slowly he drew out the ticket, which radiated a warmth through his little body, and, holding it up for her to examine, told her how it had been obtained. "Kin I go?" he added, breathlessly.

"W'y, I don't see no reason why you can't, if you git up early and peddle your vegetables before parade time. I s'pose everyone'll be a-goin' to the parade."

The last fleeting doubt had been removed, and that night in Bobby's dreams wonderful ladies in gayly colored costumes performed impossible feats, in which all the birds of the air and the beasts of the field took part.

The Narrow Escape of Grace and May.

BY MAUD WALKER.

Grace and May were two little sisters, aged, respectively, 8 and 6. They lived with their mamma and papa on a farm of broad, beautiful acres. A splendid river ran through their land, dividing the lowlands on the south from the highlands on the north. As the house, barn and other farm building were built on the lowland side where the beautiful meadows surrounded them, Grace and May had never explored the vast region of upland. Many, many times they would wander down to the river bank to look across its clear, cool waters to the wooded hills rising on the opposite shores—hills that seemed to run up and up almost to the clouds and as many times they would long to climb to those summits to see just where they led to.

One fine fall day, when their mamma was busy in the kitchen helping with the preserves and pickles, and their papa had gone to town on business, Grace and May set out to the river to look at the coveted hills beyond. They had a favorite spot, a place near the water's edge where an old fallen log afforded them a seat where they might sit and look and wish and wonder.

On the day that we tell about the little girls had scarcely settled themselves comfortably when May noticed a rope tied about the body of a tree that grew nearby. "Looky," she exclaimed, pointing to it, as she shook her sister's arm.

Grace glanced in the direction designated by little May's index finger and at once arose to investigate. "A boat," she cried as she neared the steep bank and peeped down into a tiny cove, or inlet, that afforded a snug harbor for a small craft. "I wonder where it come from?"

"Don't know," answered May, coming to her sister's side and looking down into a little skiff that gently rocked on the dancing wavelets. "Maybe a good fairy brought it for us so we can sail across the river to the hills."

"Maybe so," acquiesced Grace. Then she fell into a reverie. "If a good fairy brought it," she went on after a pause, "it can't be for nobody else but me'n you, 'cause fairies don't trouble themselves about growed-up people. Don't you know that when mamma tells us fairy tales they're always doing things for little girls and boys? I'm most sure this boat was brought for us by a good fairy—most certain sure."

"I 'spect it was," agreed May, holding to her sister as she leaned over the bank and examined the mysterious little boat. "Are we going to take a ride in it?"

"Ain't you afrald to?" asked Grace.

"Not if you go 'long, too," answered May, eagerly.

"But s'posen we can't make it go right," suggested Grace.

"W'y, the good fairy will do that," answered May.

"But she ain't no place in sight," ventured Grace, peering through the trees, half expecting to see a white-robed, gauzy-winged fairy appear among the branches, dropping from the clouds.

"But can we ever honest see 'em?" asked little May. "I thought fairies was bered their mother's warning about going too near the river—and here they were on its surface.

"Of course, she'll take us home," asserted Grace, trying to not only reassure May by her words, but herself as well. Although she was delighted to be on the swiftly moving water in the fairy-led boat, her frame of mind would have been more content had their protectress appeared visible to the human eye and spoken to them in a human voice.

"I wish fairies was like other people," said May, seeming to divine her sister's thoughts. And her voice quavered as she spoke, for she was growing more and more uneasy as they glided out and down the stream. "Wish we could see 'em."

"Wish so, too," agreed Grace, whose voice also betrayed anxiety.

"Wish she'd take us home now," went on May. "I don't like boat riding without mamma and papa are 'long."

"I'll ask her to take us back to the shore," suggested Grace. "Maybe she'll understand."

But just then a gust of wind came flying over the river's surface and set the little boat to rocking and tipping furiously, causing Grace and May to crouch down in the bottom and hang to the edges of the seats to keep from falling out. The water washed over the sides of the craft and wet their hair and neat white frocks.

"Oh—oh—o-h-" wailed little May. "I want to go home—I w-a-n-t to go to m-a-m-m-a. I— 'm af-raid!"

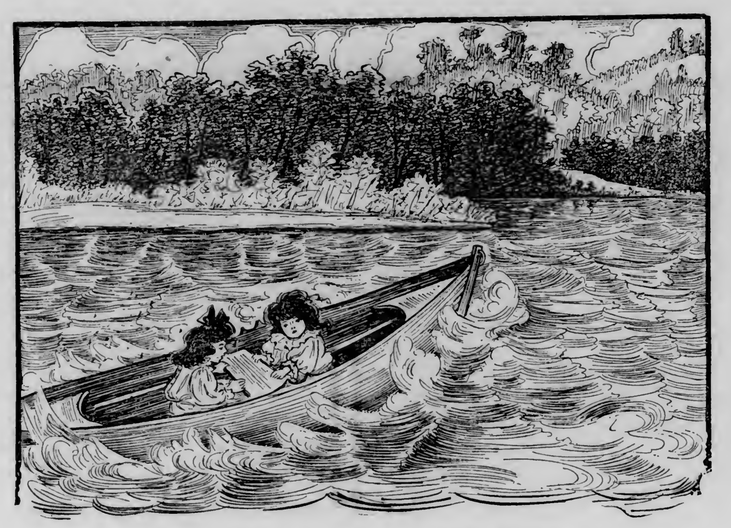

"Please, pl-e-a-s-e, dear, good fairy, take us home, and we'll never, n-e-v-e-r come out in a boat this way again; n-e-v-e-r," cried poor Grace, her face dripping with tears and spray from the dashing waves.

Just then May, whose face was turned toward her home, cried excitedly: "See, there's mamma and a man on the bank! Mamma's pointing at us. Oh, goodie, goodie!"

Then they both saw the man pull off his coat and plunge into the water, his head bobbing above the waves like a dark ball. On he came toward the little floating, helpless boat, his strong limbs making rapid strokes that carried him to them in a few minutes. When alongside the skiff he called out: "Keep quiet and stay in the bottom of the boat. I'm going to pull myself in. Now steady, and hold on for your lives!"

Grace and May obeyed the swimmer's instruction, and before they realized what he was about the boat gave a side-tip that almost upset her, the water splashed as she reeled to the opposite side, and then—lo! the young man, as wet as a drowned rat, was in the boat beside them. He reached down under the seats and pulled forth two oars and soon they were riding the rough, wind-tossed waves toward their home banks.

With beating hearts and dripping garments Grace and May were handed over the boat's edge by their rescuer into the arms of their mother, who was smiling through her tears, and who kissed and embraced them as if they had been away from her for years in-like angels—just spirits, and thin like water."

"Of course, they ain't made of meat and stuck onto bones, like us," explained Grace, who, being two years older than May, was, in her own mind, 10 years wiser. "They're like moonbeams and sunshine—just floating round in the air."

Then the two little girls sat down on the grassy bank and let their feet dangle over the side.

"'Tain't very far down to the boat," said May. "Bet I could jump into it just as easy."

"Bet I could, too," responded Grace. "S'posen I try it?" And she at once proceeded to go down the bank, holding to the long grass and weeds as a safe-guard against falling. With a jump, she was in the boat with both feet Splash—splish—splash! went the water as Grace quickly sat down and held to the sides of the rocking boat. On the bank little May jumped and hollowed with glee, clapping her hands in sheer delight. "Oh, may I come down, too?" she called out to Grace.

"If you want to," answered her sister. "But you must be awful careful, or you might tip us over!"

Then there was another splash—splish—splash! and two little girls instead of one held on to the sides of the slender skiff for dear life, laughing joyously, as they tossed to and fro on the troubled water.

After the first excitement was over and the water once more calm, they began to wonder why the good fairy did not move them out from the shore. They expected, of course, to have their craft gently guided across the river to the wooded hills beyond.

"Oh, I know what the matter is!" exclaimed Grace. "We're tied up to that tree. Don't you remember the rope?"

"Oh, goodness! how'll we get untied?" asked May, anxiously.

"Oh, I konw!" answered Grace. "I'll untie this end of the rope; then I won't have to get out." And she began to work at undoing the rope that was attached to the boat's bow.

Now, strange to tell, the owner or late occupant of the skiff had tied the rope in a very careless manner, and Grace had little difficulty in undoing the loose slipknot by using her strong little teeth and fingers. Once the rope was freed from the ring through which it was fastened, Grace threw it over into the water and both children settled themselves for a lively ride. Pretty soon they felt their boat gliding out of the cove, and Grace clapped her hands, crying: "Oh, the fairy is guiding us!"

"Wonder if she will take us back again?" ventured May, just a wee bit anxious; for all of a sudden she remembered their mother's warning about going too near the river—and here they were on its surface.

"Of course, she'll take us home," asserted Grace, trying to not only reassure May by her words, but herself as well. Although she was delighted to be on the swiftly moving water in the fairy-led boat, her frame of mind would have been more content had their protectress appeared visible to the human eye and spoken to them in a human voice.

When alongside the skiff he called out: "Keep quiet and stay in the bottom of the boat. I'm going to pull myself in. Now steady, and hold on for your lives!"

Grace and May obeyed the swimmer's instruction, and before they realized what he was about the boat gave a side-tip that almost upset her, the water splashed as she reeled to the opposite side, and then—lo! the young man, as wet as a drowned rat, was in the boat beside them. He reached down under the seats and pulled forth two oars and soon they were riding the rough, wind-tossed waves toward their home banks.

With beating hearts and dripping garments Grace and May were handed over the boat's edge by their rescuer into the arms of their mother, who was smiling through her tears, and who kissed and embraced them as if they had been away from her for years instead of only an hour. And how the happy children clung to their mother, rejoiced to be on land once more, and safe in the dear one's arms.

After the happy greeting their mamma turned to the stranger, who was tying up the skiff, and spoke from a full heart: "I cannot find words in which to express my gratitude and indebtedness to you for having risked so much to rescue my little ones. I beg you to accompany us to the house at once, where I shall be happy to provide you with dry clothing, and where I shall insist on your remaining till my husband returns home to thank you in a more substantial manner for the great kindness you have rendered us. Had it not been for your timely appearance I would have been helpless, for our little river skiff is undergoing repair several miles away, and not a man is about the place today. I would have been obliged to seek help from a great distance, and I shudder to think what might have happened through the delay." Then the good lady grasped the young man's hands and warmly shook them to express her gratitude.

Much to her disappointment, also Grace's and May's, the young man excused himself from accompanying them home, saying that he must join several of his companions who were in camp a mile down the river, and that just as soon as the wind fell a little he would take his boat, which he regretted had been the means of so much grief to her and the children, and go on his way. He explained that he was out from camp exploring the country along the river for fishing, and had just tied up his skiff to go and ask permission to cast his trout lines there, when to his dismay he saw the little girls jump into the boat and drift out into the heavy current. Being about a quarter of a mile from the cove, he had failed to reach there before their mother, who, having missed the children from the yard, had gone in search of them.

And just imagine the distress of the poor mother when nearing the river she saw her darlings tossed about on it, now rough and threatening under a strong wind, and she powerless to rescue them. She was about to throw herself in the water in an attempt to reach the boat, when the strange young man came up on the run and hurried to the relief.

"Well," urged the mother of Grace and May, "you must promise to come this evening to our home and bring your companions with you. Our house is roomy and is at your disposal. The lands across the river abound in all sorts of game, and the river here is full of fish. The place is yours to enjoy with your comrades as long as you desire to stay. I can assure you that my husband will join me in the warmest welcome we can find it in our power to give you. You have rendered us a kindness that we can never repay."

The young man—scarcely more than a boy—modestly blushed at the words of praise bestowed upon him by the generous lady; but he insisted that he had done nothing more than any human being should do for others in peril. Then, promising to call on the following day, he shook hands with them all and departed; but before he left Grace and May lisped their childish thanks to him, saying that they were glad he had turned into a man-fairy to rescue them from watery graves.

THE WATERMELON FEAST.

[BY CHARLES LINCOLN PHIFER.]

"Do you cadet-fellows like watermelons?"

This is the question Mr. Frisbee propounded to Porter Allee when he was in town the other day. Porter confessed that he always tried to get melons out of his sight as soon as possible, and that some of the other cadets were more valiant in their warfare on melons than in anything else they undertook.

"Well, I have about a hundred melons I want to get rid of, and so I reckon you had better get the cadets together next Sunday and come out and see what you can do to them. Bring the Professor too. We'll have a few neighbors in, and tell him we shall expect a speech from him."

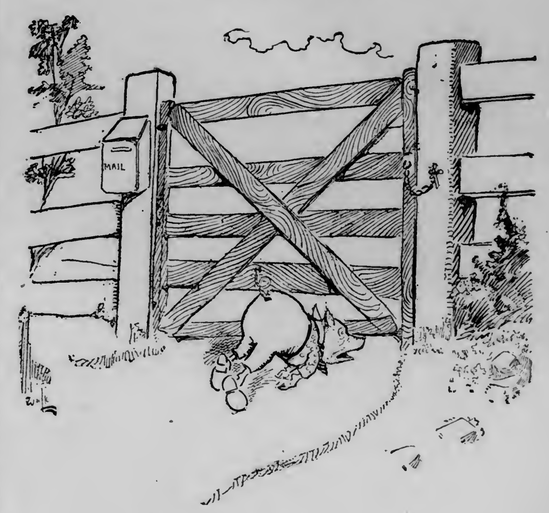

Porter could hardly contain himself until he had told the boys and the Professor, for he had heard of Mr. Frisbee's annual watermelon feasts and knew they would have a good time.

The best melons of the locally famous Watermelon King were saved for this feast, for it was from these that he gathered the seeds for the next year's planting.

The cadets were all enthusiastic about the trip and the preliminaries were soon arranged.

They started about 9 o'clock, Sunday morning, driving to Hally's Bluff by noon. The Bluff and its surroundings were familiar to the boys, but the foliage was thicker than when they had camped there, and the river was not so deep. There was much merriment in pointing out the places where little incidents had occurred on their camping-out trip. Before they had fully passed it they had planned for a hazel nutting party a little later on, for they knew these nuts were thick there. From the Bluff they drove down into a little valley, and then through the watermelon patch of Mr. Frisbee, comprising about two acres, yet full of melons in various stages of development, some dark green, others striped, and the yellow musk-

Naughty Piggie.

Ont into the fields one day
Naughty Piggie ran away;
Through the gateway he did go,
The gate was open, then, you know;
But later on the gate was tight,
And naughty Pig stayed out all night.

drops of rain would only cool the atmosphere and make the return home more pleasant, while they could find shelter in the house and under sheds. Now, however, there was a sudden change in conditions. Far away, but coming nearer, there was an ominous roar and clouds began to obscure the heavens. With one accord the throng repaired to shelter. The men for the most part went to the stable and machinery shed, while the women entered the house, but Porter and Dumpy accompanied the girls to the house. Suddenly the storm came roaring and bending the trees, twisting the saplings in two, lifting loose articles and whirling them into the air. It became dark as night, and in addition to the roar of the storm there was the crash of breaking trees, the thump of limbs striking the house, the squealing and whinny of the animals outside. Occasionally the thunder would crash like close artillery. All were frightened, but no voice could be heard in the roar, even if someone had had the tact to speak encouragingly. Porter was surprised to find a soft hand laid on his in the dark. He clasped it and placed an arm around the waist of one he knew, though he did not see her, to be Miss Abbott, and though no word was said, they understood much from those few fatal moments. The cyclone—for such it was, though not a very destructive one—tore through the forest where the feast was held, doing its work very rapidly, and then was gone, making a narrow path to the northeast. When it was past and the sun again shining, all rushed outside to see what damage had been done.

"Is anyone hurt?" asked Mr. Frisbee, in alarm. A hurried counting over those who were present seemed to settle that question rightly. Next attention was paid to the animals and the buildings, then to the crops. No serious damage had been wrought. Then the company repaired to the grounds where the picnic had been held. It was strewn with branches from the trees, and a few saplings had been torn up by the roots. One was peeled up a distance of five feet and left standing. So far everyone had been on a tension. But this was relieved by Dumpy's remark:

"It has cleared away all the rinds, anyhow."

And it had. That was one of the freaks of the storm, and a hearty laugh and many a jest followed the discovery.

But it had cleared away more than the rinds. It had taken the benches and tables and broken and splintered them and cast them down in a field adjacent. It had partly melted the knives with which the melons had been cut, and had left on the grounds a couple of hats that came from no one knew where.

"It was a decent sort of a cyclone," said Albert Newman; "it never touched the melons."

Strange to say, it had not. The pile of whole melons was still unhurt, though limbs and other debris were scattered over them.

Some of the horses had broken loose during the storm and several men were out catching them.

But now a strange sound came to those who were searching for the damage done—the unmistakable squealing of a pig coming from somewhere above them. It was not long until it was discovered lodged in the forks of a tree about 20 feet from the ground, where the storm had placed it, uninjured. It was squealing only because it wanted to get out and could hardly move.

"Porter," said the Professor, "you are such an expert climber, I think we shall have to send you to the rescue."

"Call him down," cried "Dumpy" Richardson to "Dot" Brown. "You have a good voice for calling hogs."

"That's another hog who has got up in the world," commented young Newman.

The pig was squealing lustily, and the older men had quickly planned a rescue. Already they were on hand with a ladder and a long, stout rope. The ladder was placed against the tree where His Lardship was lodged, but before anyone could mount it Porter sprang to the rungs.

"Let me help you, as Hooligan says," he remarked.

"I told you Porter was a hero," said the Professor, while the crowd laughed.

Porter clambered to the forks of the tree and soon had a noose fastened over the body of the shoat, just back of the forelegs. Plenty were shouting instructions to him, and, following the suggestions given, he threw the end of the rope over a limb higher up. Then those below hoisted and Porter helped the pig out with his hands, and soon, amid a babel of squeals, the poor creature was lifted from its predicament and lowered to the ground.

As Porter began to descend the ladder, "Dumpy" suggested that the band play "Hail, the Conquering Hero Comes." The girls had gathered a bouquet which they offered to present him for his gallantry. But Miss Abbott, more genuinely thoughtful, had a basin of water, soap and a towel on hand. These received Porter's attention first, and afterward he asked for the flowers.

There was considerable jesting over the outcome of the cyclone, but it all meant that the people were very thankful that the storm had done so little damage when it might have done so much. The brief but exciting incident opened the fount of conversation and there was a flow of talk which gave all a delightful visit ere their return home.

When the Cadets started for home they found in the wagon a big melon for each and another for the Professor. Around one was tied a blue ribbon, and by it lay a huge bouquet of flowers marked "Mr. Porter Allee. Remember the pig."

"It seems they have remembered the pig," remarked "Dumpy," eyeing the flowers with envy. "Porter, you are all covered with glorious flowers, if not with glory. When you can't rescue a girl a pig will do."

WANTON ACT OF THE RUSSIAN BALTIC FLEET AROUSES THE ANGER OF GREAT BRITAIN

FOUR LARGE BOATS ORDERED FOR STEEL CORPORATION FLEET

They Will Exceed In Size the Giant Steamer Wolvin.

The Increased Activity In the Iron Market Keeps Up.

Highest Prices of Year In Pig Iron Last Week.

Cleveland, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—For the first time since its formation the United States Steel corporation has placed an order for steamers to add to its already great fleet on the lakes. The order is for four steamers of the largest dimensions, exceeding in fact the giant steamer Augustus B. Wolvin, which has attracted world-wide attention owing to its great size. The new steamers, however, exceed the Wolvin by nine feet, being 569 feet over all, 549 feet keel, 56 feet bam and 31 feet deep. They will be built on the arch system of construction, without beams or stanchions and will have thirty-four hatches spaces twelve feet centers. That means that from the center of one hatch to the center of the other the distance will be only twelve feet, so that the hatches form an almost continuous hole. The hatch covers will be operated from a central station so that two men will be able to open and close the hatches in twenty minutes. The steamers will have water ballast capacity for 5500 tons, enabling them to run in any weather. The engines will be triple-expansion with cylinders 24½, 39 and 65 inches diameter by stroke of 43 inches, supplied with steam from two Scotch boilers 15 feet in diameter by 11½ feet long, fitted with Ellis & Eaves draft. They will carry 10,000 gross tons of ore. In a full season they will move 800,000 tons. The Steel corporation has already on the lakes a fleet of 112 vessels with an annual carrying capacity of 16,000,000 tons. With good dispatch it should move with its new vessels 11,000,000 tons per annum. This sum, however, would not meet the corporation's requirements for ore in an active year. It brought down 16,500,000 in 1902 and 12,500,000 in 1903. The corporation has a number of furnaces which have never been lighted since they were acquired, so that it can readily be seen that its ore-burning capacity is greater than its ore carrying capacity.

Shipbuilding on the great lakes has undergone a phenomenal boom during the past month for during that time twenty freighters have been ordered. With one exception all the vessels are 500 feet or over, showing the magnitude of latter-day craft and proving that the average ore cargo of the future will be at least 6000 tons.

It is absolutely true that those who are most informed concerning current conditions in the iron trade are the least able to accurately forecast the future. When the season of navigation opened on the great lakes, practically six weeks later than usual, expert authorities predicted that the movement of ore would not exceed 14,000,000 tons and one or two were inclined to put it as low as 12,000,000. Since then there has been a great revision of figures, a million or more at a time, until now the latest estimate is that the total shipments of the season will be between 18,000,000 and 19,000,000 tons. All things considered this is not a grave falling off from the shipments of last year, when approximately 23,500,000 tons were shipped. Proportionately the shipments this year have been heavier than they were last. The heavy movement of September, some 4,000,000 tons, will be equalled, if not surpassed, during the present month. Ore is moving now heavier than it ever has during fall months and there is excellent demand for ore boats.

The increased activity in the iron market that set in with October has kept up and in pig iron the past week has seen the highest prices of the year. Consumption has been overlanping production for several weeks and while melters of pig iron bought in the market, particularly foundries, find no marked increase of orders, they are steadily melting more iron than in the summer months. The statistics indicate that pig iron output on Oct. 1 was at a rate of about 16,500,000 tons a year, while in March, April and May, the spring "freshet" carried it up to a rate of 19,000,000 tons. Pig iron production is now on its second upturn for the year, and the extent of the movement depends on several factors. One is th uncertainty of the coal strike in the South. Should it end soon, a considerable increase in output of Southern iron ore could be made before the end of the year. Another factor is the amount of idle capacity that will come in as prices rise. The advance has not been enough yet for the blowing in of furnaces that have been waiting for a real profit. But the important fact is that merchant stocks of pig iron were reduced 75,000 tons last month, with coke and anthracite production 135,000 tons more than in August.

There are no indications of a boom, though exaggerated improvement reports always in evidence at such a time are coming. A feature both in pig iron and finished material lines is the widely distributed character of the buying, added to the fact that the material is almost entirely for early use in the shops of the buyers.

HON. JOHN MORLEY CARNEGIE'S GUEST.

RT. HON. JOHN MORLEY.

New York, Oct. 24.—The Rt. Hon. John Morley, the English statesman and author, arrived yesterday on the steamer Celtic. During his stay in this country Mr. Morley will be Andrew Carnegie's guest. When Mr. Carnegie, who also arrived on the Celtic, was informed that money is needed to maintain the peace palace at The Hague, he said:

"I have nothing to do with that. There is a convention between the powers to maintain it, and they should not find any trouble in raising $100,000."

On the question of calling a peace conference, he said:

"Let us call a peace conference now, when two nations are struggling in a fierce battle. Such action of President Roosevelt would be a great error and would not be looked upon with favor in Europe."

Turning to Mr. Morley, he asked:

"Don't you agree with me, Mr. Morley, that Mr. Roosevelt has taken a strong hold on the imagination of the English people?"

"Yes, Mr. Carnegie," was the reply. "I agree with you."

Mr. Morley will make his first and only address while in this country at Pittsburg on Nov. 3, before the Iron and Steel institute.

BLACKMAILERS EXPLODE BOMB

New York Oct. 24.—Three letters, each containing a demand for $5000 under penalty of death or injury to himself and family for refusal are reported to have been received by the proprietor of a new hotel in upper Fifth avenue.

Guests of the hotel, one of the richest in the country, were startled last Wednesday morning by an explosion. Inquiries were told that the noise was caused by the bursting of an electric light globe, but it now develops, according to the Herald, that the would-be blackmailers having failed to carry out their plan, set off a light charge of some explosive outside the proprietor's apartments on the fourteenth floor of the hotel.

The present police theory points to the attempt as the work of some employe or helpers of the hotel.

Half a dozen city detectives have been at work on the case for some days. When the second letter was received they disguised a man to appear like the hotel proprietor and had him follow the letter writer's instructions, dropping a package supposed to contain $5.00 at a given place. The detectives were secreted for several hours where they could observe the neighborhood, but no one appeared to take the letter and the next day a fresh threat was received stating that the ruse was known to the writer.

HARMLESS FISHING BOATS ARE RIDDLED BY CZAR'S WARSHIPS

Several Sunk and a Number of Men Killed and Mutilated In Attack, Apparently Uncalled For.

Prompt Demand Made on the Russians For an Explanation and Warships Are Made Ready to Sail.

No Report Yet Received From Russian Admiral as to the Reason For His Unprecedented Assault.

London, Oct. 24.—Foreign Secretary Lansdowne reached London this evening and after gathering the latest details known at the foreign office regarding the firing on the British fishing boats by the Russian fleet, proceeded to Buckingham palace, where he had a lengthy interview with King Edward. The latter telegraphed a message of sympathy to the mayor of Hull.

On returning to the foreign office Lord Lansdowne further conferred with Sir Henry King and subsequently addressed a strong protest to Ambassador Hardinge for presentation to the Russian government.

Special stress is laid on the callousness displayed by the Russians in not going to the assistance of the fishermen. Lord Lansdowne asks that immediate redress shall be made.

It is believed in government circles that the Russian government will take the earliest opportunity to give satisfaction and it appears to be expected that Russia will explain the affair, adding that the Russian officials had reason to believe that there were mines in the vicinity where the fishing fleet was attacked.

An interview between Lord Lansdowne and Count Benckendorff has been arranged for tomorrow.

In the absence of Count Benckendorff, the Russian charge called at the foreign office to express deep regret at the occurrence.

Lord Lansdowne is expected in addition to making the usual claim for indemnity for the vessels sunk, to pension the widows of those killed, and assurances that no other British ships will be molested. These demands, it is believed at the Russian embassy, here, will be speedily granted.

Of the 160 fishing vessels through which the Russian fleet passed, five are still unaccounted for, and some anxiety exists regarding their safety. The Wren, one of the boats reported last night as missing, has arrived at Hull. It will probably be some days before the foreign office is in full possession of all the facts, although the examination of witnesses at the foreign office today established the general correctness of the first accounts.

It is quite possible that in order to acclerate matters Vice Admiral Beresford with the Channel fleet at Gibraltar almost in the oath of the Russian fleet, may be ordered to detach a cruiser and communicate with Admiral Rojestvensky as was done in the case of the Russian volunteer steamers Smolensk and St. Petersburg.

Unusual activity prevailed at the admiralty throughout the morning, but no action was taken. A strong squadron lies at Portsmouth ready to sail at a few hours' notice. The Mediterranean fleet is off Venice and the home squadron is cruising off Scotland. Thus, in the quite unlikely event of Great Britain making a naval demonstration, her forces are in peculiarly good positions.

The affair, though the sole topic of conversation among all classes at the British capital, has not created the uproar which might have been expected.

London, Oct. 24.—The mayor of Hull has telegraphed to Premier Balfour as follows:

"The greatest indignation prevails here at the unprecedented and wanton attack on the Hull fishing fleet by Russian warships, resulting in the loss of valuable lives. We appeal to the government to take the speediest and strongest measures to ensure full redress and complete security against further Russian outrages."

Paris, Oct. 24.—The action of the Russian second Pacific fleet in firing on and sinking British fishing boats has aroused intense interest in official circles and among the public generally here. The officials say that Russia will undoubtedly make an immediate explanation and apologize and pay an ample indemnity.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Official news of the action of the Russian fleet in firing on British fishing vessels reached Washington today in a cablegram to the state department from the American consul at Hull. He recited the facts as stated in the press dispatches, and added that great excitement prevailed here.

FIRES ON FISHING FLEET.

Russian Baltic Fleet Commits an Outrageous Act.

Hull, England, Oct. 24.—A. M. Jackson & Co., solicitors for the owners of fifty Hull fishing boats, have notified the foreign office and admiralty of an attack on the Hull fishing fleet by the Russian Pacific fleet, commonly designated as the Baltic squadron.

The official information is that shortly after midnight Friday the Russian squadron fell in with the Hull fishing fleet in the North sea. The first portion of the fishing fleet passed safely. Then the Russian ships turned their searchlights on the British vessels for some time and a little later opened fire. The steam trawler Crane was sunk, and the decapitated bodies of her skipper and mate have been brought to Hull. The boatswain and other members of the crew, who are understood to be seriously wounded, are on board a mission ship. The only slightly injured member of the crew has arrived at Hull.

The steam trawlers Moulmein and Mino have arrived at Hull seriously damaged by shots, the latter having sixteen holes in her hull. It is feared that other damage was done to trawlers and that at least one more was lost with all hands.

London, Oct. 24.—The steamer cutter Magpie, belonging to the Gamecock trawler fleet, which was fired on by the Russian Baltic fleet, arrived in the Thames last night. Her captain, Peaker, confirmed the details of the story received from Hull. He says: "Friday night there were about forty vessels of the Gamecock fleet fishing in latitude 55 degrees, 15 minutes, longitude 5 degrees, 6 minutes. It was a misty, drizzling night. We spread over an area of some miles. Our admiral had just previously signalled by rockets and colored lights the fishing direction for the night. Whether that had anything to do with what followed I do not know, the whole thing is a mystery.

"Presently through the mist there appeared the lights of many vessels, big and small. Knowing that the Baltic fleet was en route, we naturally assumed that they were the Russians, but cannot say so for certain. They were signalling one another, and with powerful searchlights spied out every one of our fleet. Suddenly some of the warships started firing at about twenty boats which were nearest to them.

"We at first supposed they were blank shots, and the boatswain of the Tomtit, which was close in, held two big fish out at arm's length. Some say he was offering them to the Russians in fun, and others that he meant to acquaint the Russians with the fact that we were peaceful fishermen and not disguised enemies. In any case, there was no mistaking our occupation, for we were close enough for the Russians to see that our men were all engaged in gutting fish. When we realized that the Russians were firing shot and that men were being wounded, all became terror and confusion. Nets were cut away, steam was gotten up and the trawlers hurried away as fast as possible.

"Judging from the rapidity of the shots they were from quick firing guns. I have seen some of the shots imbedded in boats. They are about the diameter but not the length of a big cucumber and with brass heads.

"With the darkness, the rain, the glare of searchlights, we were unable to identify the warships. After about half an hour the firing ceased suddenly and the fleet steamed away speedily in the direction of the English channel."

From interviews with members of trawler crews, it appears that the admiral of the fishing fleet burned green flares to show that they were harmless fishermen, but these signals were ignored.

Eighteen injured men are here under treatment.

One trawler, the Wren, is missing, and it is feared she has been sunk.

There were many distressing scenes at Hull during the day and night, relatives inquiring after friends.

There is a rumor that the "Great Northern Fishing Fleet" was also chased by the Russians. This report has not yet been confirmed.

NO GREAT EXCITEMENT

In London Over the North Sea Incident.

London, Oct. 24, 1:23 p. m.—Foreign Secretary Lansdowne will arrive in London from the country this afternoon. Until then no official action will be taken in regard to the North sea incident, in which the Russian second Pacific squadron sank one or more British fishing boats and killed or wounded several fishermen. While public opinion insists that the fullest reparation be made, there is no evidence of undue excitement or of any belief that international complications will arise. Trading on the stock exchange was slightly affected at the opening, but prices speedily recovered.

The foreign office this morning was crowded with seafaring people connected with the fishing fleet, who are being exhaustively examined by the officials, so that the precise facts on which Lord Lansdowne may base a protest later in the day may be established.

Lord Lansdowne is expected to instruct Ambassador Hardinge late this afternoon.

No instructions have been received at the Russian embassy here, and the communications are not expected until Ambassador Hardinge has made his representation at St. Petersburg. The Russian ambassador here, Count Benckendorff will not be in London until nearly midnight, hence he cannot see Lord Lansdowne until Tuesday, when it is expected Foreign Minister Lamsdorff will have transmitted his instructions. Beyond making apologies, however, it was pointed out at the Russian embassy, that no explanation could be given until the squadron was heard from. Steps are on foot to get a communication to Rojesvensky, but some time may elapse before Rojesvensky could send a report to St. Petersburg. The Russian officials here are as much perplexed as to the cause of the firing on the fishing boats as are the British authorities, though they suggest it maybe due to the extreme nervousness consequent on the reception of definite information that a Japanese attempt would be made on the fleet before it reached open waters. The idea that war can arise over the matter is scouted, but it is admitted that it will strain Anglo-Russian relations to a point where diplomacy on both sides will be severely tested.

RUSSIANS DUMFOUNDED

By Attack of Baltic Fleet on Fishermen.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24, 2:15 p. m.—No official information from Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, commander of the Second Pacific squadron, or from other Russian sources, has reached the authorities here, as this dispatch is written in regard to firing by the squadron upon the British fishing boats, early Saturday morning, in the North sea. The authorities are dumbfounded by the press reports of the affair, and cannot credit the accounts as presented. For this reason the censor today declines to allow the publication of the foreign accounts of the affair.

Ambassador Hardinge, although momentarily expecting instructions from the British government on the subject, had not received any at noon today.

In the highest quarters, where the reports were circulated, the gravity of the affair was fully realized, and the incident was greatly deplored. That Russia will offer apologies and reparation, and make honorable amends admits of no doubt, but with the inflamed state of public opinion in Great Britain, and coming on the heels of the sinking by the Vladivostok fleet of the British steamer Knight Commander, and the Red sea incidents, it is recognized that the situation may become acute unless the cool heads among the British statesmen proceed calmly. Unfortunately in meeting such a situation, the Russian governmental machinery is so cumbersome as to render the prompt action which such a situation seems to demand almost impossible. Everything will depend on the British demands. Here, it is considered, lies the principal danger of a possible rupture. If they go to the extent of demanding the punishment of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, or even the recall of the squadron, as some of the British newspapers intimate, it is likely to create a situation here which would make it hard, if not impossible, to humble Russian pride to such an extent.

"Unfortunately," said a high placed admiral to the Associated Press, "we have not yet received the report of Admiral Rojestvensky, upon which we can act. The press reports are incredible to me. I know Rojestvensky as a careful, prudent man, and I cahnot believe that he would order his fleet to fire into a fleet of fishing smacks in such cold-blooded fashion as represented by the dispatches. There must be some explanation of which we are still in ignorance."

"Did you have any reason to believe that an attempt might be made to attack the squadron?" asked the correspondent.

"Yes," replied the officer, "we had some information which imposed particular care upon Rojestvensky."

"Could it have been the act of a captain who perhaps was haunted by fear of an attempt upon the squadron, lost his head and gave the order to fire without authority?"

"No, I do not think so. Only the admiral could assume such a responsibility, especially as the dispatches represent the squadron as sailing in squadron formation. We all intensely deplore the incident, and if a mistake has been made, as appears to be the case, Russia will make every amend possible. You are safe in announcing that."

In diplomatic circles the affair has caused a big sensation. Strange to say it did not have any effect on the Bourse, where the closing was the same as on Saturday.

PUT INTO CHERBURG.

Cherbourg, France, Oct. 24.—The advance guard of the Russian second Pacific squadron, consisting of torpedo boats, is in the outer harbor. The main squadron is expected here but it is not yet certain whether the warships will enter the harbor The vessels which first arrived were not with the larger ships when the latter fired on the British fishing boats in the North Sea Saturday morning. Therefore it is not yet possible to obtain the Russian version of the affair.

The Russian torpedo boats are surrounded by guard boats and the utmost vigilance is maintained. No person is permitted to approach them and no person is allowed to come ashore except the postman. The boats are furnished with the wireless telegraph equipment. They took on provisions from the transport Korea. During last night and this morning the vigilance was redoubled, owing to fears of Japanese ships being in the channel. Three Russian torpedo boats and the transport Korea headed ou to sea during the day, probably for the purpose of communicating with the main squadron.

The newspapers here report that the torpedo boats received a wireless telegram from the Russian flagship yesterday evening, warning their commanders to exercise extra vigilance as it was feared that a Japanese attempt might be made upon the squadron while in the channel.

JAPANESE ATTACK RUSSIAN OUTPOSTS BUT ARE REPULSED

JAPANESE HERO EN ROUTE TO U. S.

PRINCE FUSHIMI.

Yokohama, Oct. 24.—Lieut. Gen. Prince Fushimi, special imperial envoy to the St. Louis exposition, sailed yesterday with his suite on the steamer Manchuria for San Francisco, amid great enthusiasm. Prince Fushimi was attended from Tokio by officers of the imperial household, the American minister, Lloyd G. Griscom, and the entire American legation staff in uniform. Arriving at Yokohama, the prine and his party proceded to a detached imperial palace, escorted by the governor of the province, the mayor of Yokohama and city officials, and by the American consular officials.

Shortly afterwards Prince Fushimi embarked in the presence of an immense crowd amid shouts of "Banzai" and "America."

Prince Fushimi was until recently commander of a division of the Japanese army, and led the attack on Kinchow, May 26. He also distinguished himself in the Japan-Chinese war, when his exploits won him a lieutenant generalship. Prince Fushimi objected to quitting active service, but the war board at Tokio decided that he has not the physique to stand the hard Manchurian campaign. His rank is senior imperial prince.

RUSSIAN BODIES FOUND BY JAPS NUMBER 13,333

Tokio, Oct. 24.— Afternoon— The Japanese headquarters here today without referring to the general situation in the vicinity of the Shakhe river, published the following report received yesterday:

Since the last telegram referring to the enemy's dead, the bodies left on the field have been increased to the following:

Found by the right army.	5,200
Found by the left army..	5,603
Found by center army..	2,530
Total	13,333

The number of prisoners captured totals 709.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24.—Emperor Nicholas has received the following dispatch from General Kuropatkin dated Oct. 23:

"The night of Oct. 22-23 passed quietly. At 9 o'clock this (Sunday morning) our sharpshooters harassed the enemy while the Japanese tried to attack our outposts, but were everywhere repulsed by the Russian fire."

ARMIES IN CLOSE TOUCH.

With the Japanese left army (Gen. Oku's)—In field, Oct. 22, 4 p. m., via Fusan, Oct. 24.—The respective armies retain somewhat peculiar positions. Their advanced forces are lying in the trenches 70 yards apart, and their inaction cannot be explained.

For five days the Japanese have not attempted to make an advance for which the Russians seem to be waiting.

The outposts and patrols of both sides are in close touch, and there is occasional firing by the light artillery batteries. The Japanese are sending down the guns and rifles captured from the Russians and are receiving supplies of ammunition and reinforcements.

A Japanese forward movement is daily expected, and it is believed that there is heavy fighting ahead.

ABANDONED GUNS.

Gen. Oku's Headquarters, Friday, Oct. 21.—4 p. m., via Fushan, Oct. 24.—While clearing the field near the village of Shakhe, the Japanese found nine abandoned Russian guns. Their condition has not been reported. Both armies are resting on their guns. Continuous skirmishes are occurring between outposts and patrol and the artillery is firing daily. A great battle is expected south of the Hun river, where heavy field works have been erected. Great numbers of Japanese reinforcements are arriving.

Copnhagen, Oct. 24.—The Russian ice breaker, Ermak, has arrived in the Roads with her stern tube damaged.

PRODIGIOUS BLUNDER

Is German Opinion of Attack on Fisherman.

Berlin, Oct. 24.—"A prodigious blunder" is the German official verdict upon the attack of the Russian Second Pacific fleet on the British fishing fleet. It is assumed that the Russian government will make reparation immediately after receiving the official report, which will be telegraphed from some French port probably today. The excitement in Great Britain is regarded here as being fully justified, but the British cabinet, it is believed, will take the view that the deplorable affair was the fault of rash officers.

German naval officers refer to the incident as evidence that the Russian fleet is badly officered.

RUSSIANS AFRAID OF MINES.

New York, Oct. 24.—Danish papers state that the Russian officers showed much nervousness during the passage of the second Pacific squadron through the narrow Danish waters, says a Times dispatch from Copenhagen. It is declared they were afraid of striking Japanese mines. It was not believed in Copenhagen that any danger existed, especially in view of the precautions taken by the Danish authorities. Even in the smallest provincial towns every traveler and foreigner was watched with vigilance.

WANTON ACT OF THE RUSSIAN BALTIC FLEET AROUSES THE ANGER OF GREAT BRITAIN

FOUR LARGE BOATS ORDERED FOR STEEL CORPORATION FLEET

They Will Exceed In Size the Giant Steamer Wolvin.

The Increased Activity In the Iron Market Keeps Up.

Highest Prices of Year In Pig Iron Last Week.

Cleveland, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—For the first time since its formation the United States Steel corporation has placed an order for steamers to add to its already great fleet on the lakes. The order is for four steamers of the largest dimensions, exceeding in fact the giant steamer Augustus B. Wolvin, which has attracted world-wide attention owing to its great size. The new steamers, however, exceed the Wolvin by nine feet, being 569 feet over all, 549 feet keel, 56 feet bam and 31 feet deep. They will be built on the arch system of construction, without beams or stanchions and will have thirty-four hatches spaces twelve feet centers. That means that from the center of one hatch to the center of the other the distance will be only twelve feet, so that the hatches form an almost continuous hole. The hatch covers will be operated from a central station so that two men will be able to open and close the hatches in twenty minutes. The steamers will have water ballast capacity for 5400 tons, enabling them to run in any weather. The engines will be triple-expansion with cylinders 24½, 39 and 65 inches diameter by stroke of 42 inches, supplied with steam from two Scotch boilers 15 feet in diameter by 11½ feet long, fitted with Ellis & Eaves draft. They will carry 10,000 gross tons of ore. In a full season they will move 800,000 tons. The Steel corporation has already on the lakes a fleet of 112 vessels with an annual carrying capacity of 16,000,000 tons. With good dispatch it should move with its new vessels 11,000,000 tons per annum. This sum, however, would not meet the corporation's requirements for ore in an active year. It brought down 16,500,000 in 1902 and 12,500,000 in 1903. The corporation has a number of furnaces which have never been lighted since they were acquired, so that it can readily be seen that its ore-burning capacity is greater than its ore carrying capacity.

Shipbuilding on the great lakes has undergone a phenomenal boom during the past month for during that time twenty freighters have been ordered. With one exception all the vessels are 560 feet or over, showing the magnitude of latter-day craft and proving that the average ore cargo of the future will be at least 6000 tons.

It is absolutely true that those who are most informed concerning current conditions in the iron trade are the least able to accurately forecast the future. When the season of navigation opened on the great lakes, practically six weeks later than usual, expert authorities predicted that the movement of ore would not exceed 14,000,000 tons and one or two were inclined to put it as low as 12,000,000. Since then there has been a great revision of figures, a million or more at a time, until now the latest estimate is that the total shipments of the season will be between 18,000,000 and 18,-000,000 tons. All things considered this is not a grave falling off from the shipments of last year, when approximately 23,500,000 tons were shipped. Proportionately the shipments this year have been heavier than they were last. The heavy movement of September, some 4,000,000 tons, will be equalled, if not surpassed, during the present month. Ore is moving now heavier than it ever has during fall months and there is excellent demand for ore boats.

The increased activity in the iron market that set in with October has kept up and in pig iron the past week has seen the highest prices of the year. Consumption has been overlapping production for several weeks and while melters of pig iron bought in the market, particularly foundries, find no marked increase of orders, they are steadily melting more iron than in the summer months. The statistics indicate that pig iron output on Oct. 1 was at a rate of about 16,500,000 tons a year, while in March, April and May, the spring "freshet" carried it up to a rate of 18,000,000 tons. Pig iron production is now on its second upturn for the year, and the extent of the movement depends on several factors. One is the uncertainty of the coal strike in the South. Should it end soon, a considerable increase in output of Southern iron ore could be made before the end of the year. Another factor is the amount of idle capacity that will come in as prices rise. The advance has not been enough yet for the blowing in of furnaces that have been waiting for a real profit. But the important fact is that merchant stocks of pig iron were reduced 75,000 tons last month, with coke and anthracite production 135,000 tons more than in August.

There are no indications of a boom, though exaggerated improvement reports always in evidence at such a time are coming. A feature both in pig iron and finished material lines is the widely distributed character of the buying, added to the fact that the material is almost entirely for early use in the shops of the buyers.

HON. JOHN MORLEY CARNEGIE'S GUEST.

RT. HON. JOHN MORLEY.

New York, Oct. 24.—The Rt. Hon. John Morley, the English statesman and author, arrived yesterday on the steamer Celtic. During his stay in this country Mr. Morley will be Andrew Carnegie's guest. When Mr. Carnegie, who also arrived on the Celtic, was informed that money is needed to maintain the peace palace at The Hague, he said:

"I have nothing to do with that. There is a convention between the powers to maintain it, and they should not find any trouble in raising $100,-000."

On the question of calling a peace conference, he said:

"Let us call a peace conference now, when two nations are struggling in a fierce battle. Such action of President Roosevelt would be a great error and would not be looked upon with favor in Europe."

Turning to Mr. Morley, he asked:

"Don't you agree with me, Mr. Morley, that Mr. Roosevelt has taken a strong hold on the imagination of the English people?"

"Yes, Mr. Carnegie," was the reply. "I agree with you."

Mr. Morley will make his first and only address while in this country at Pittsburg on Nov. 3, before the Iron and Steel institute.

BLACKMAILERS EXPLODE BOMB

New York Oct. 24.—Three letters, each containing a demand for $5000 under penalty of death or injury to himself and family for refusal are reported to have been received by the proprietor of a new hotel in upper Fifth avenue.

Guests of the hotel, one of the richest in the country, were startled last Wednesday morning by an explosion. Inquiries were told that the noise was caused by the bursting of an electric light globe, but it now develops, according to the Herald, that the would-be blackmailers having failed to carry out their plan, set off a light charge of some explosive outside the proprietor's apartments on the fourteenth floor of the hotel.

The present police theory points to the attempt as the work of some employe or lodgers of the hotel.

Half a dozen detectives have been at work on the case for some days. When the second letter was received they disguised a man to appear like the hotel proprietor and had him follow the letter writer's instructions, dropping a package supposed to contain $5000 at a given place. The detectives were secreted for several hours where they could observe neighborhood, but no one appeared to take the letter and the next day a fresh threat was received stating that the ruse was known to the writer.

HARMLESS FISHING BOATS ARE RIDDLED BY CZAR'S WARSHIPS

Several Sunk and a Number of Men Killed and Mutilated In Attack, Apparently Uncalled For.

Prompt Demand Made on the Russians For an Explanation and Warships Are Made Ready to Sail.

No Report Yet Received From Russian Admiral as to the Reason For His Unprecedented Assault.

London, Oct. 24.—Foreign Secretary Lansdowne reached London this evening and after gathering the latest details known at the foreign office regarding the firing on the British fishing boats by the Russian fleet, proceeded to Buckingham palace, where he had a lengthy interview with King Edward. The latter telegraphed a message of sympathy to the mayor of Hull.

On returning to the foreign office Lord Lansdowne further conferred with Sir Henry King and subsequently addressed a strong protest to Ambassador Hardinge for presentation to the Russian government.

Special stress is laid on the callousness displayed by the Russians in not going to the assistance of the fishermen. Lord Lansdowne asks that immediate redress shall be made.

It is believed in government circles that the Russian government will take the earliest opportunity to give satisfaction and it appears to be expected that Russia will explain the affair, adding that the Russian officials had reason to believe that there were mines in the vicinity where the fishing fleet was attacked.

An interview between Lord Lansdowne and Count Benckendorff has been arranged for tomorrow.

In the absence of Count Benckendorff, the Russian charge called at the foreign office to express deep regret at the occurrence.

Lord Lansdowne is expected in addition to making the usual claim for indemnity for the vessels sunk, to pension the widows of those killed, and assurances that no other British ships will be molested. These demands, it is believed at the Russian embassy, here, will be speedily granted.

Of the 160 fishing vessels through which the Russian fleet passed, five are still unaccounted for, and some anxiety exists regarding their safety. The Wren, one of the boats reported last night as missing, has arrived at Hull. It will probably be some days before the foreign office is in full possession of all the facts, although the examination of witnesses at the foreign office today established the general correctness of the first accounts.

It is quite possible that in order to accelerate matters Vice Admiral Beresford with the Channel fleet at Gibraltar almost in the path of the Russian fleet, may be ordered to detach a cruiser and communicate with Admiral Rojestvensky as was done in the case of the Russian volunteer steamers Smolensk and St. Petersburg.

Unusual activity prevailed at the admiralty throughout the morning, but no action was taken. A strong squadron lies at Portsmouth ready to sail at a few hours' notice. The Mediterranean fleet is off Venice and the home squadron is cruising off Scotland. Thus, in the quite unlikely event of Great Britain making a naval demonstration, her forces are in peculiarly good positions.

The affair, though the sole topic of conversation among all classes at the British capital, has not created the uproar which might have been expected.

London, Oct. 24.—The mayor of Hull has telegraphed to Premier Balfour as follows:

"The greatest indignation prevails here at the unprecedented and wanton attack on the Hull fishing fleet by Russian warships, resulting in the loss of valuable lives. We appeal to the government to take the speediest and strongest measures to ensure full redress and complete security against further Russian outrages."

Paris, Oct. 24.—The action of the Russian second Pacific fleet in firing on and sinking British fishing boats has aroused intense interest in official circles and among the public generally here. The officials say that Russia will undoubtedly make an immediate explanation and apologize and pay an ample indemnity.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Official news of the action of the Russian fleet in firing on British fishing vessels reached Washington today in a cablegram to the state department from the American consul at Hull. He recited the facts as stated in the press dispatches, and added that great excitement prevailed here.

FIRES ON FISHING FLEET.

Russian Baltic Fleet Commits an Outrageous Act.

Hull, England, Oct. 24.—A. M. Jackson & Co., solicitors for the owners of fifty Hull fishing boats, have notified the foreign office and admiralty of an attack on the Hull fishing fleet by the Russian Pacific fleet, commonly designated as the Baltic squadron.

The official information is that shortly after midnight Friday the Russian squadron fell in with the Hull fishing fleet in the North sea. The first portion of the fishing fleet passed safely. Then the Russian ships turned their searchlights on the British vessels for some time and a little later opened fire. The steam trawler Crane was sunk, and the decapitated bodies of her skipper and mate have been brought to Hull. The boatswain and other members of the crew, who are understood to be seriously wounded, are on board a mission ship. The only slightly injured member of the crew has arrived at Hull.

The steam trawlers Moulmein and Mino have arrived at Hull seriously damaged by shots, the latter having sixteen holes in her hull. It is feared that other damage was done to trawlers and that at least one more was lost with all hands.

London, Oct. 24.—The steamer cutter Magpie, belonging to the Gamecock trawler fleet, which was fired on by the Russian Baltic fleet, arrived in the Thames last night. Her captain, Peaker, confirmed the details of the story received from Hull. He says: "Friday night there were about forty vessels of the Gamecock fleet fishing in latitude 55 degrees, 15 minutes, longitude 5 degrees, 6 minutes. It was a misty, drizzling night. We spread over an area of some miles. Our admiral had just previously signalled by rockets and colored lights the fishing direction for the night. Whether that had anything to do with what followed I do not know, the whole thing is a mystery.

"Presently through the mist there appeared the lights of many vessels, big and small. Knowing that the Baltic fleet was en route, we naturally assumed that they were the Russians, but cannot say so for certain. They were signalling one another, and with powerful searchlights spied out every one of our fleet. Suddenly some of the warships started firing at about twenty boats which were nearest to them.

"We at first supposed they were blank shots, and the boatswain of the Tantit, which was close in, held two big fish out at arm's length. Some say he was offering them to the Russians in fun, and others that he meant to acquaint the Russians with the fact that we were peaceful fishermen and not disguised enemies. In any case, there was no mistaking our occupation, for we were close enough for the Russians to see that our men were all engaged in gutting fish. When we realized that the Russians were firing shot and that men were being wounded, all became terror and confusion. Nets were cut away, steam was gotten up and the trawlers hurried away as fast as possible.

"Judging from the rapidity of the shots they were from quick firing guns. I have seen some of the shots imbedded in boats. They are about the diameter but not the length of a big cucumber and with brass heads.

"With the darkness, the rain, the glare of searchlights, we were unable to identify the warships. After about half an hour the firing ceased suddenly and the fleet steamed away speedily in the direction of the English channel."

From interviews with members of trawler crews, it appears that the admiral of the fishing fleet burned green flares to show that they were harmless fishermen, but these signals were ignored.

Eighteen injured men are here under treatment.

One trawler, the Wren, is missing, and it is feared she has been sunk.

There were many distressing scenes at Hull during the day and night, relatives inquiring after friends.

There is a rumor that the "Great Northern Fishing Fleet" was also chased by the Russians. This report has not yet been confirmed.

NO GREAT EXCITEMENT

In London Over the North Sea Incident.

London, Oct. 24, 1:23 p. m.—Foreign Secretary Lansdowne will arrive in London from the country this afternoon. Until then no official action will be taken in regard to the North sea incident, in which the Russian second Pacific squadron sank one or more British fishing boats and killed or wounded several fishermen. While public opinion insists that the fullest reparation be made, there is no evidence of undue excitement or of any belief that international complications will arise. Trading on the stock exchange was slightly affected at the opening, but prices speedily recovered.

The foreign office this morning was crowded with seafaring people connected with the fishing fleet, who are being exhaustively examined by the officials, so that the precise facts on which Lord Lansdowne may base a protest later in the day may be established.

Lord Lansdowne is expected to instruct Ambassador Hardinge late this afternoon.

No instructions have been received at the Russian embassy here, and the communications are not expected until Ambassador Hardinge has made his representation at St. Petersburg. The Russian ambassador here, Count Benckendorff will not be in London until nearly midnight, hence he cannot see Lord Lansdowne until Tuesday, when it is expected Foreign Minister Lansdorff will have transmitted his instructions. Beyond making apologies, however, it was pointed out at the Russian embassy, that no explanation could be given until the squadron was heard from. Steps are on foot to get a communication to Rojesvensky, but some time may elapse before Rojesvensky could send a report to St. Petersburg. The Russian officials here are as much perplexed as to the cause of the firing on the fishing boats as are the British authorities, though they suggest it maybe due to the extreme nervousness consequent on the reception of definite information that a Japanese attempt would be made on the fleet before it reached open waters. The idea that war can arise over the matter is scouted, but it is admitted that it will strain Anglo-Russian relations to a point where diplomacy on both sides will be severely tested.

RUSSIANS DUMFOUNDED

By Attack of Baltic Fleet on Fishermen.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24, 2:15 p. m.—No official information from Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, commander of the Second Pacific squadron, or from other Russian sources, has reached the authorities here, as this dispatch is written in regard to firing by the squadron upon the British fishing boats, early Saturday morning, in the North sea. The authorities are dumbfounded by the press reports of the affair, and cannot credit the accounts as presented. For this reason the censor today declines to allow the publication of the foreign accounts of the affair.

Ambassador Hardinge, although momentarily expecting instructions from the British government on the subject, had not received any at noon today.

In the highest quarters, where the reports were circulated, the gravity of the affair was fully realized, and the incident was greatly deplored. That Russia will offer apologies and reparation, and make honorable amends admits of no doubt, but with the inflamed state of public opinion in Great Britain, and coming on the heels of the sinking by the Vladivostok fleet of the British steamer Knight Commander, and the Red sea incidents, it is recognized that the situation may become acute unless the cool heads among the British statesmen proceed calmly. Unfortunately in meeting such a situation, the Russian governmental machinery is so cumbersome as to render the prompt action which such a situation seems to demand almost impossible. Everything will depend on the British demands. Here, it is considered, lies the principal danger of a possible rupture. If they go to the extent of demanding the punishment of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, or even the recall of the squadron, as some of the British newspapers intimate, it is likely to create a situation here which would make it hard, if not impossible, to humble Russian pride to such an extent.

"Unfortunately," said a high placed admiral to the Associated Press, "we have not yet received the report of Admiral Rojestvensky, upon which we can act. The press reports are incredible to me. I know Rojestvensky as a careful, prudent man, and I cannot believe that he would order his fleet to fire into a fleet of fishing smacks in such cold-blooded fashion as represented by the dispatches. There must be some explanation of which we are still in ignorance."

"Did you have any reason to believe that an attempt might be made to attack the squadron?" asked the correspondent.

"Yes," replied the officer, "we had some information which imposed particular care upon Rojestvensky."

"Could it have been the act of a captain who perhaps was haunted by fear of an attempt upon the squadron, lost his head and gave the order to fire without authority?"

"No, I do not think so. Only the admiral could assume such a responsibility, especially as the dispatches represent the squadron as sailing in squadron formation. We all intensely deplore the incident, and if a mistake has been made, as appears to be the case, Russia will make every amend possible. You are safe in announcing that."

In diplomatic circles the affair has caused a big sensation. Strange to say it did not have any effect on the Bourse, where the closing was the same as on Saturday.

PUT INTO CHERBURG.

Cherbourg, France, Oct. 24.—The advance guard of the Russian second Pacific squadron, consisting of torpedo boats, is in the outer harbor. The main squadron is expected here but it is not yet certain whether the warships will enter the harbor. The vessels which first arrived were not with the larger ships when the latter fired on the British fishing boats in the North Sea Saturday morning. Therefore it is not yet possible to obtain the Russian version of the affair.

The Russian torpedo boats are surrounded by guard boats and the utmost vigilance is maintained. No person is permitted to approach them and no person is allowed to come ashore except the postman. The boats are furnished with the wireless telegraph equipment. They took on provisions from the transport Korea. During last night and this morning the vigilance was redoubled, owing to fears of Japanese ships being in the channel. Three Russian torpedo boats and the transport Korea headed out to sea during the day, probably for the purpose of communicating with the main squadron.

The newspapers here report that the torpedo boats received a wireless telegram from the Russian flagship yesterday evening, warning their commanders to exercise extra vigilance as it was feared that a Japanese attempt might be made upon the squadron while in the channel.

JAPANESE ATTACK RUSSIAN OUTPOSTS BUT ARE REPULSED

JAPANESE HERO EN ROUTE TO U. S.

PRINCE FUSHIMI.

Yokohama, Oct. 24.—Lieut. Gen. Prince Fushimi, special imperial envoy to the St. Louis exposition, sailed yesterday with his suite on the steamer Manchuria for San Francisco, amid great enthusiasm. Prince Fushimi was attended from Tokio by officers of the imperial household, the American minister, Lloyd G. Griscom, and the entire American legation staff in uniform. Arriving at Yokohama, the prine and his party proceded to a detached imperial palace, escorted by the governor of the province, the mayor of Yokohama and city officials, and by the American consular officials.

Shortly afterwards Prince Fushimi embarked in the presence of an immense crowd amid shouts of "Banzai" and "America."

Prince Fushimi was until recently commander of a division of the Japanese army, and led the attack on Kinchow, May 26. He also distinguished himself in the Japan-Chinese war, when his exploits won him a lieutenant generalship. Prince Fushimi objected to quitting active service, but the war board at Tokio decided that he has not the physique to stand the hard Manchurian campaign. His rank is senior imperial prince.

Otherwise Everything Is Quiet on Mukden Battleground.

IMMEDIATE ANSWER

Must Be Given By Russia to Great Britain's Demands.

Situation One Which Will Not Admit of Delay.

London, Oct. 24, 8:02 p. m.—An official statement was issued by the foreign office this evening, as follows:

The foreign office has been in communication with representatives of the fishing industry at Hull and Grimsby and has obtained a full statement of the facts connected with the attack, on the night of Oct. 21, by the Russian second Pacific fleet upon part of the Hull trawling fleet. Urgent representations based on this information have been addressed to the Russian government, and it has been explained that the situation is one which does not permit of delay.

RECEIVED WITH DISMAY.

North Sea Incident Causes Apprehension at Washington.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The news of the attack on the Hull fishing fleet was received here with something like dismay, for it excited apprehensions that the result might be world-wide entanglements, unless extraordinary tact is shown by both the British and Russian governments in dealing with the affair. In official circles here there is the strongest possible desire to prevent any extension of the present war in the East. Arbitrary and unreasonable demands on the one hand, and an uncompromising spirit on the other, might, it is believed, backed by an excited press, easily involve the two great European nations in hostilities, the result of which would call to Russian support her ally, France, and perhaps develop an English alliance so far undiscovered to European politicians. But as the unfortunate incident was more carefully considered here, the impression strengthened that it was not one which would defy diplomatic treatment, particularly in view of the fact that it is the consensus of opinion here that the affair was by no means a premeditated attack on a neutral power, but rather a blunder, terrible, but not beyond repair by peaceful methods. The suggestion that the Russian ships were at target practice, and that their projectiles went wide of their mark, causing the damage, finds little support here, even though the scene of the incident was on the high seas, for no prudent naval commander would undertake such dangerous practice in the night in waters so crowded.

MAY HAVE PROCEEDED.

Large Russian Ships Not Seen at Cherbourg.

Cherbourg, Oct. 24, 3 p. m.—The large ships of the Russian fleet had not arrived up to the time of filing this dispatch. It was believed that they have gone on westward, intending to stop either at Brest or at Vigo, Spain. The only torpedo boats which proceeded with the fleet, put in here, and three of these, it now develops proceeded on their voyage at 10 o'clock Friday. Three others remain in the outer harbor taking on coal from the Russian collier Kitoy.

The Russians already here claim that their fleet was navigating through a thick fog on the night of Oct. 21-22 and fired their guns in neutral waters for the purpose of keeping in touch with each other. The Russians here appear to not be aware that any British boats were hit. They declare that no fishing boats were sunk and add that the torpedo boats received a signal from Admiral Rojesenvsky to be on the lookout as the admiral feared there were Japanese ships in the channel.

GREATLY DEPLORED

Is Sinking of Fishermen By the Russians.

St. Petersburg, Oct, 24, 5:54 p. m.—At the foreign office the sinking of the British fishing boats was deplored. The authorities manifested the greatest anxiety and expressed the hope that the unfortunate affair will be adjusted speedily and amicably, while some believe that some explanation which will throw a new light on the affair will be forthcoming as soon as Admiral Rojestensky can communicate with St. Petersburg. The authorities here are unable to believe that his ships fired on the fishing boats without warning.

The press reports are so startling that M. Sazonoff, the Rusian charge in London, in the temporary absence of Ambassador Benckendorff, was instructed this afternoon to expreass to the British government the intense regret and grief with which the reports had been received and the desire of Russia to voluntarily make full reparations in the event of the Russian squadron being responsible for the unfortunate occurrence involving the loss of human life.

It was also decided during the day to prepare a semi-official note expressing the regret of the Russian government and its willingness to make full reparation as soon as the responsibility is fixed.

This step, showing the attitude of the government, will, it is hoped, mollify the British government and public opinion in England and pave the way for honorable diplomatic adjustment.

NO MISTAKE

Could Possibly Have Been Made, Say Fishermen.

London, Oct. 24.—The mate of the trawler Mino which arrived in Hull with the Moulmen in bringing the news of the fishing boats said today:

"Between 200 and 300 shots were fired. The first vessel in line did most of the firing. But I think two others also fired several shots. Our whole fleet was under searchlights, which nearly blinded us. The Russians came within less than a quarter of a mile of us. We could see them plainly."

Captain Parker of the trawler Magpie declared it was impossible for the Russians to mistake the trawlers for torpedo boats. He added: "The whole affair lasted about twenty minutes. Not a quarter of their shots could have taken effect. When the firing ceased the ships disappeared as quickly as they came up. Every sailor knows that this part of the sea is a fishing ground and no one could have mistaken our fleet with its special lights as signals."

The officials of the admiralty say the captain of the Magpie did not exaggerate the situation in the statement he made yesterday. What is puzzling them most is that the Russian torpedo boats did not board nor approach within hailing distance of one of the trawlers. At the Russian embassy it was suggested that the Russian fleet steamed away believing that no damage had been done, but this with many other suggestions finds little credence and fails to lessen the irritated amazement with which all the officials here regard the affair, which was aggravated later by an allegation made by the fishermen at the foreign office, to the effect that the Russians detached a ship from the squadron and that she remained watching the trawlers until 6 o'clock on Saturday morning without lowering a boat or offering assistance.

A DEPLORABLE ACCIDENT.

Lenox, Mass., Oct. 24.—Sir Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador, said today concerning the attack of the Russian squadron upon the British fishing vessels:

"It seems a deplorable accident, which, of course, will be explained."

Ambassador Durand, up to 10 o'clock today had received no official dispatches concerning the matter.

A GENERAL WAR

Boston, Oct. 24.—Mr. Wyndham, British consul at Boston, said:

"If the Russians mistook the English trawlers for a Japanese fleet the Russian intelligence department must have been singularly lacking. There is but one other interpretation to put upon the incident and that is that Russia is trying to embroil European nations in the hope of a general war. The disgrace would be less if she were whipped by the allied European nations. On the other hand she may think she would get aid, perhaps from Germany and France in a general war. This may not be the correct interpretation of this incident. But unless an apology and reparation are made promptly, I think our people can find no other motive in the act."

WARSHIPS SIGHTED.

Portsmouth, England, Oct. 24.—Vessels arriving at Portsmouth report having sighted four Russian torpedo boat destroyers and four battleships making for Cherbourg. One of the battleships appeared to have broken down. There is no confirmation of the report of a battleship having been damaged.

In Reference to the Vassar Coat!

In a card in Sunday's News Tribune in reference to Vassar Coats, an attempt is made by the other store advertising these goods, to shift the responsibility of their actions—and we shall end the controversy with this letter—as we only desire to place ourselves right before the people—and through no malice or personal feeling WE SHALL DEAL WITH THE FACTS ONLY!

And in doing so, let us first answer a question asked—and we shall quote their own words—"is it ignorance, greed or inexperience?"

Indeed! A great statement for a house which this very ignorance, greed and inexperience helped to prosper and grow to over three times its original size in five years!

Was it ignorance and inexperience that modernized and built up their store and its stocks to its present standard?

Is it ignorance and inexperience that has since taken THIS BUSINESS and in a little over six months built up a business such as we have here, and that in the face of one of the dullest spring periods experienced by Duluth merchants for some years, and also in the face of a presidential-election year, which is always feared by all classes of business institutions?

Where does the ignorance and inexperience crop out—in the accused—or the accusers—for making such a statement?

Bamberger Bros.

3 & 5 WAVERLY PLACE,

1 DOOR WEST OF BROADWAY

LEON J. BAMBERGER,
EDWARD S. BAMBERGER
IRVING W. BAMBERGER.

New York, Oct. 21st, 190—

Messrs. J. M. Gidding & Co.,
Duluth, Minn.

Dear Sirs:-

In order to make our position clear to you, we hereby give you permission to publish the following over our signature: We are willing to give to any charitable institution, designated by the paper in which this ad will appear, the sum of $500.00 if Messrs. Silberstein & Bondy Co. can show a bill for $1.00 worth of merchandise bought from us.

Yours very truly,

Bamberger Bros.

AND NOW TO THE FACTS—We care not who buys goods such as we do—for as we have said before, "imitation is sincerest flattery!" and if a house sees fit to buy the same goods that we do, it shows that our judgment of them must have been right. But what we do object to, is that we should be placed in a peculiar light before the public! We are just as proud of our reputation as the other house is of their's, for we fully realize that reputation is an asset that money cannot buy.

Then why should we allow another house to hurt ours? What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander! If they did not wish to have us question their methods, why did they allow themselves to be placed in such a position, where their actions could not help but be questioned?

They advertised the Vassar Reefer for Girls at $7.00, and even at $5.00, whereas $8.50 is the lowest price at which they can be bought for from the makers. Anyone has a right to sell goods for what price one pleases—but to advertise the Vassar Reefer at $7.00 or for whatever price they please, in itself shows an unfair motive of putting out a "bait" and making the public believe that the other house selling them is overcharging! And if they did sell the Vassar Coat, that might go unnoticed—But they did NOT sell the Vassar Coat at $7.00. Instead it was a light-weight cheviot Reefer Coat with a red flannel lining, which might even be termed a "cheap" imitation of the "Vassar." Is this legitimate competition?

We know nothing as to the correspondence that passed between Bamberger Bros. and this other house. But we do know that the sale of these goods was confined to our firm alone in Duluth—our orders having been placed for them early last summer—and which our competitors admitted in their note of yesterday and by publishing Bamberger Bros.' letter.

WHEN WE ADVERTISED THE VASSAR COATS, WE HAD THEM IN OUR STORE!

Immediately this other house advertised that they had them also—whereas their own statement in yesterday's paepr shows conclusively that they DID NOT have them! To quote them exactly they say: "* * * upon receipt of this letter we advertised that among the Juvenile lines shown this season, we would display the Vassar Coat and Barnard Suit." Their advertisement in the papers at that time, however, stated that they WERE THEN SHOWING the Vassar Coat and Barnard Suit. And the newspaper copies of those dates show that—and here they are—reproduced exactly and verbatim—FROM THE HERALD OF FRIDAY, SEPT. 2:

...ew Milita..., Dress for girls—chic and swell.

Now, how could they legitimately have advertised them, when they did not have even one of these garments in their house?

And were we not fully justified in resenting any such business methods?

And even if they had them, how could they have legitimately sold them for $5.00, when the lowest-priced Vassar garment sells at $8.50—right from the makers?

It is self-evident that this was all done with the sole purpose of placing us in a false light before the public!

It is needless to say that such methods are unworthy of a house which has tried to maintain an untarnished reputation for so many years—and we regret exceedingly that we were compelled to turn on the lime light!

We have given them plenty of opportunity to produce the bills from Bamberger Bros.—and we have tried to avoid in every way possible, any continuation of the controversy, but even in last Friday night's paper, they continued their METHODS which we, in justice to ourselves must and will resent.

Bamberger Bros.' letter reproduced will show the transaction up in its true light—and instead of there being one hundred dollars for charity, there is now ready Six Hundred Dollars!

And we shall now close the incident.

WILL PLAY CHESS

The Organization of a Club In Duluth Is Projected.

Meeting to Be Held In Y. M. C. A. Rooms Wednesday Night.

The organiaztion of a chess club in Duluth is now projected. Those interested in the matter will meet on Wednesday evening at the local Y. M. C. A. rooms, and enter into a discussion of the project with C. C. Marshall, vice president of the Iowa States Chess association, who is now in the city. The plans of Mr. Marshall did not provide for so long a stay at the head of the lakes, but, at the request of the Y. M. C. A. officials, he kindly consented to remain in town until Wednesday night, so that he might have an opportunity of meeting local enthusiasts and assist them in forming a club in Duluth on the rigat basis.

The club is not to be a Y. M. C. A. affair. A membership in the asociation is entire unnecessary as far as belonging to the proposed organization is concerned. The plan is to have all the men in the city who are interested in chess sufficiently to join a club, get together and take steps towards forming one. The first few meetings will probably be held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. Whether they are held there right along or at some other place especially secured for the purpose will very likely rest with the members themselves.

It appears that, while there are a number of enthusiastic chess players in Duluth, there has never been a regular club for them, and the idea of forming one is meeting with great favor. Association officials, who started the project, already have quite a list of names of prominent local players, who express a desire to become members. At the head of the list is Mayor M. B. Cullum, popularly supposed to be the most expert man at the game in the city. Others on the list are E. A. Tinkham, J. S. Rich, A. LeRicheaux, A. S. Hamilton, D. W. Scott, J. B. Erd, A. Larson, Charles P. Frank, C. L. Kidder, John Heitman, E. A. Moye, Fred Johnson and Guy Warren.

The idea is, after organization is complete, and after the club has gotten to running nicely, to have regular chess tournaments, both between local teams and with Minneapolis, St. Paul and other outside clubs. Mr. Marshall has traveled quite extensively over the country and in so doing has become widely acquainted with chess experts, and has assisted in the organiaztion of various chess clubs. He is himself a good player, although he does not by any means pose as an expert. He offers to play five games at one time Wednesday evening, but says he will not guarantee to win all or any of them. It is expected this challenge will be accepted by local players, and if it is the event will add greatly to the interest of the first meeting.

BIRDS DEAL STERN JUSTICE

Many Hold Regular Courts of Law and the Punishment Is Invariably Death.

A North Dakota story tells of a crow that eloped with the wife of another crow, and, having been captured, was brought back, tried, sentenced to death and executed. This narrative may have been intended to show that North Dakota is adopting a high moral plane and will make some radical change aimed against facile divorces, but though the majority of persons laugh at the crow story, there are a few naturalists who are inclined to give it credence, says the New York Herald. Dr. Edmondson, who studied their habits for years, tells us that in the Shetland Islands the bedding of crow courts is an every common occurrence.

As a rule a hill or field is selected as a courthouse, and the session commences. As may be conjectured, the proceedings are conducted in any way but silently, though, as to the exact mode of procedure, whether counsel are employed or a jury is impaneled, no ornithologist has been able to inform us. Dr. Edmondson avers that after a great deal of cawing the whole court falls upon the unhappy prisoners and they are promptly exterminated, after which the court rises and the crows disperse, each to his own district.

Not only do crows hold courts of over and terminer, but, according to Rev. Dr. Edmund Cox, rooks likewise meet together for this purpose. One day when he was riding along a quiet road in the vicinity of Norwich he was startled by a great cawing, which proceeded from an adjoining rookery. The reverend gentleman alighted from his horse, tied it to a gate, and, concealing himself behind the trunk of a large tree, managed to obtain a view of the proceedings.

Surrounded by some forty or fifty clamorous and indignant rooks, he saw what was apparently the criminal, who had been put upon his trial. Although at the first perky and jaunty, the prisoner, after some minutes of cawing, lost his gayety, and appeared much as did the famous jackdaw of Rheims after the Cardinal had cursed him with bell, book and candle. That the jury found him guilty may be gathered from the fact that the circle of rooks suddenly closed in upon him and speedily pecked him to death, after which they all cawed vociferously for some minutes and then departed.

More tragic is the following story, for which a certain Father Bougraut is responsible, concerning a theft committed by a sparrow and the dire punishment which overtook the thief. A sparrow finding a nest which a marten had just built annexed it for his own use.

On the sparrow refusing to quit, the marten called upon his friends for help, and several hundred martens came and attacked the usurping sparrow, who, presenting his large beak at the aperture of the nest, severely pecked several injudicious martens which came within his reach. After a quarter of an hour's unequal war, the martens withdrew from the field, and the sparrow began to congratulate himself upon his superior strategic qualities. In a short time the martens returned, each bearing some of the tempered earth with which they make their nests. With one accord they all fell upon the sparrow and plastered the hole over with the soft earth, inclosing him in the stolen nest, much in the same way as were the guilty Vestal Virgins.

Even in our common law, with all its boasted advantages, circumstantial evidence has been the means of hanging many an innocent man, so it is not to be wondered at that innocent birds have been done to death by a feathered judge and jury through the same means. Bishop Stanley tells us that a French surgeon at Smyra, being unable to procure a stork because of the great veneration in which these birds are held by the Turks, took the eggs from a stork's nest and put hen's eggs in their place.

The female stork in all innocence hatched the chickens. This, it would appear, was more than the male stork could stand. He at once deserted the partner of his his joys and sorrows and was not seen for three or four days. At length he returned in company with many other storks, who, forming a circle, placed the unhappy female in the middle and commenced to adjudicate the case.

To bring forth chickens instead of young storks, even unintentionally, is evidently a serious crime among these birds, for they all fell upon the prisoner and straightway killed her.

Still more remarkable is a similar story which comes from Berlin. Two storks built a nest upon the chimney of a mansion, the owner of which, finding an egg in the nest, took it and put a goose's egg in its place. As in the previous case, the female stork hatched the egg, much to the anger of her companion, which circled three or four times around the nest and then flew away.

For some days the female stork fed the young goose, and all went well until, upon the morning of the fourth day, the inmates of the house were disturbed by a loud clamoring. The noise proceeded from nearly 400 birds, which were standing in a compact body, apparently listening to the harangue of a solitary stork standing some twenty yards off.

All this time the female stork was sitting in the nest, trembling with fear, which perhaps was not altogether unwarranted, for suddenly the whole company of storks flew toward her, headed by one, presumably the injured husband, who struck her violently three or four times, knocked her out of the nest and then killed her.

REGRET EXPRESSED

By Lamsdorff For the North Sea Incident.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24, 6:31 p. m.—While Ambassador Hardinge did not receive any instructions during the day he called on Foreign Minister Lamsdorff this afternoon informally and impressed upon him the extreme gravity of the affair. Count Lamsdorff expressed horror and regret at the occurrence.

Count Lamsdorff will see the emperor tomorrow and there is good reason to believe that the emperor may personally convey to King Edward not only his regret, if the report should prove true, but his determination to institute a searching inquiry and fix the responsibility.

It is rumored that the emperor personally received Admiral Rojestvensky's report this afternoon at Cronstadt but at 6 o'clock both the admiralty and the foreign office declared the report had not reached them yet.

NO CHANGE AT FRONT.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24, 6:15 p. m.—There was no fresh news from the front today. Gen. Sakharoff, telegraphing at 2:45, reported that there was no change. The war office does not confirm the report that the Russians have occupied Bentsiaputze.

The official returns of the Russian losses received up to date do not exceed 30,000. Gen. Sakharoff telegraphs that there was no fighting during the night of Oct. 23-24.

The Russians buried 1500 Japanese at Lone Tree hill.

Cliff, of Chicago, affirming the decision of the United States district court by which Cliff was convicted of violating that portion of the oleomargarine law, fixing a tax of 10 cents per pound on oleomargarine artificially colored. In this instance Palm oil was used for the purpose of coloring the substance and the prosecution was resisted on the ground that the oil produces a natural and not an artificial coloration.

TRIAL TRIP OF THE CRUISER COLORADO.

Boston, Oct. 24.—A clear sky and a moderate northwest wind proved excellent conditions for the official trial trip of the new armored cruiser Colorado, which was to be held over the Cape Porpoise course today. The contract for the Colorado, which was built by William Cramp & Sons, of Philadelphia, calls for a sustained speed of 22 knots an hour for four consecutive hours.

Rockport, Mass., Oct. 24.—The cruiser Colorado started on her trial trip just before 8 o'clock today. She crossed the starting line off this port at 8:44:22, as timed from shore.

MUST HEAR CASE

Judge Morris Ordered to Proceed With Barber Asphalt Case.

Circuit Court of Appeals Vacates His Stay of Proceedings.

St. Paul, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Sanborn in the United States circuit court of appeals today vacated a stay of proceedings granted by Judge Page Morris of the United States district court of Duluth, and ordered to trial the action brought against the city of Duluth to recover $38,316.14 due on a contract for street paving.

In May, 1902, the city of Duluth ordered street paving done amounting to $54,760. There is an ordinance on the city statute books of Duluth directing that the city attorney shall, on petition of seven taxpayers, appeal any claim for $25 or more against the city to the judge of the district court.

When two payments were authorized on the total amount of the paving done, certain taxpayers objected. These objections were pending in the state courts when the Barber Asphalt company, as a non-resident corporation, began suit in the United States district court to recover on the debt due to it. Judge Morris ordered a stay of proceedings until the matter should be determined in the state courts. The Barber company thereupon mandamused Judge Morris in the circuit of appeals to bring the case to trial. According to the decision today Judge Morris must go ahead with the case before him.

The court held that the petitioners had the right to recover a debt not conditioned by presentation of a claim to the city council or by any requirement of the charter relative to enforcement. It held the action cognizable by original process in the United States circuit court. There is nothing in the charter which deprives the court of its duty to give a speedy trial.

The action stayed only involves the question of the amount involved.

SUPERIOR FIRM IS CHANGED

The new management has incorporated under the name of the Turnbull-Cameron-Degler company, and will resume the house furnishing business at the old stand.

The round-up of the Needlework Guild will take place tomorrow and the garments will be sent to the store at 24 East Superior street, formerly occupied by Bayha & Co. The officers of the guild hope that each section president will make a special effort to have her quota in as early as possible and facilitate the work of collection and distribution. The work of this organiatzion is one of the most popular of charities the world over, as no creed or belief is necessary to contribute to its work, simply a desire to help the less fortunate of the world's people and the giving of two new garments to help them.

One of the delightful features of the guild is that all garments are new, no three-quarters worn coat or dress with the buttons all carefully removed is sent out by the officers, but each article is new and complete. The round-up will take place tomorrow. Wednesday visitors are invited to call and see the collection and Thursday the garments will be distributed to the charitable organiaztions of the city and needy families. Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the annual meeting of the section presidents will be held.

THE TRUTH OF IT.

Bachelor Girl's Riddles "Coddled" Women's Theories.

"If anything just makes me dead tired," said the bachelor girl, giving a vicious slam to the book she had been reading, "it is when these women who have been cared for and coddled all their lives by devoted fathers, brothers and husbands, get up and air their views on the working woman, the independent woman, or whatever they choose to call her" relates the Brooklyn Eagle. "If they don't criticise her they do what she resents even more, pity her. What in the name of common sense do they know about her, anyway, when they aren't able to see two steps beyond their own comfortable domicies. Naturally the woman who works for a living is too much occupied with that problem to sass back, so these domestic autocrats have it all their own way.

"Now, in this story I've just been reading—a recent and really clever piece of writing," she went on, "the author queries as to how far the office propinquity and sympathy of employer and woman assistant is fair to the woman at home, adding: 'The free woman errant goes out, equipped for the day's contest with all her best points accentuated. The woman domestic may have been up all night with a sick or restless child in addition to other unavoidable burdens that serve to try her. Can she be at her best, trim, manicured, and as faultless in hair and gown when her husband leaves for his office as the woman he finds there? Is not this very contrast a challenge?'

"There! Would any woman who had ever achieved business life, or had it thrust upon her, recognize herself in that description? If my best points are accentuated by slaving in a dingy office all day, by being too tired to sleep at night, doing my odd sewing and mending at daybreak, swallowing a boarding house breakfast in double-quick time and making a desperate dash for a train or a trolley, why, all I can say is, I shouldn't want to see the worst one brought out. 'Faultless in hair and gown,' indeed! Heaps of time and money we have to spend on hair and gown. No frills and furbelows and pretty house gowns for us. We must not be overdressed nor underdressed; we must strike the golden mean somewhere in those severe, inconspicuous garments, whose only possible saving grace lies in their being made by a high-priced tailor.

"As for that sympathy and propinquity business—this is about the size of it: Enter Mr. Moneymaker, he says to his secretary: 'Mornin', Miss Jones. Got that order from B. & Co. yet? No? Well, let me know as soon as it comes. That letter from the Pinchback company was mislaid yesterday; don't let such a thing occur again, please. Here, take these memoranda and copy them out in good shape—I want them by 10 o'clock.' And Miss Jones says meekly, 'Yes, sir.' and falls to in a frenzy of effort. Her employers' only thought, so far as she is concerned, is to get his work well done and as cheaply as possible, while she hasn't, for the time being, any idea beyond finishing her allotted labor creditably and gaining an increase of salary in the near future. That's the business woman from my point of view. Not much like the pictures drawn by that author. And, by the way, that sick child that she tries to work up our sympathies over is probably pure fiction. Ten to one she hasn't a child or chick of her own, or if she has the nurse is taking care of it while its mother is togging herself out in finery that the working woman has no time or opportunity to even dream of wearing."

And the bachelor girl, having relieved her feelings, returned to her book in a more placid frame of mind.

Women in the World.

Miss Thomas, of Bryn Mawr, the ablest and wisest of the women presidents of womens' colleges, admits that the secluded life of women in the past has developed in them priceless virtues, but she thinks that the college education and the emergence of women into the life and activity of the world are going to supply to the whole race many advantages which will take the place of any virtues of the fireside that may be lost, says the New York Mail. She specifies the "working of men and women together for purposes of civilization, and the loyalty of women to one another.

To men, these new advantages are likely to seem a poor return for family affection, for modest purity, for religious devotion which may be lost. But Miss Thomas might answer—we do not know that she will—that what has passed for women's virtues has often been but men's notion of women's virtues. The best woman, to most men's thinking, is the woman who is best for a man.

The question of the advantage or disadvantage that lies in woman's higher education and in her complete emergence from seclusion can only be answered by the effect of these things on men and women both. Probably our children, when they are grown, can tell better than any man or woman of the present day whether woman has done well to put on the armor and fight by man's side. As yet the doubt persists, though the confidence of such women as President Thomas helps to dispel it.

COMMON SENSE NEEDED.

Some Comments on Furnishing of a Home.

In furnishing a house the processes of imitation and of assimilation both come into play. There seems to be no such thing as absolute originality, but by absorbing one idea here and another there one finally produces a composite which is in a way one's own, says Anne Higginson Spicer, in House Beautiful.

But in this assimilative process common sense must hold sway. Things which will look well in the great roomy country house of a friend may be absurd when transferred to a city apartment. The cast of the "Singing Boys" hung in a niche especially built for it may be a dominant note of beauty in a room, but in a small house, hung, on a figured wall paper, it may become the one discordant thing in an otherwise pleasant little living room.

This indiscriminate use of plaster casts is distressing, for a note of pure white in a room where the color is of a low rich tone is seldom pleasant. The white hits the eyes, as it were, so unless the cast is so beautiful that you dare let it challenge the attention, do not buy it, or, if it is a gift relegate it to some obscure corner.

It takes a little courage to dismiss from a room an article absolutely good and worthy, simply because it is inappropriate, but it is the thing to do. So also in buying. Unless where you consider buying an article you can picture it to your mind's eye as occupying the very position for which you design it, pass it by. It will not do. When this lesson is learned the most important step toward economy and fitness also has been taken.

A PRECEDENT FOR HEROINES

By Helena Smith.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The princess tossed aside, impatiently, the book she had been pretending to read.

"How tiresome heroines are, as a class," she complained. "Why allow a misunderstanding to exist when a few words would fix it all up happy for every one concerned? It has taken this heroine 357 pages to bring about what might have been done in a jiffy, barring a tedious regard for conventions."

She arose and walked around the luxurious apartment, stopping before a mirror to gaze at herself critically.

"No well-conducted heroine would ever be permitted to send that note I did this morning," she said defiantly. "But fortunately real people don't sacrifice their happiness for mere pride." Yet her decision did not remove the anxiety from her manner.

"If one were 19 it wouldn't be quite—er—the thing," she went on. "But at 32 one hasn't so much time to allow situations to develop. No—at 19 I wouldn't have done it."

It was said in her youth that Edith Selby was so clever one resented her prettiness as an incongruity. The years since spent abroad had made her glorious. Travel had given poise and Paris had taught the art of gowning.

The princess turned from the beautiful reflection to a great cluster of American Beauties in a bowl. Her cream lace gown trailed softly over the green carpet, the rest of the furnishings being of the same dark, restful tint, forming an effective setting for the exquisite woman.

When the roses were arranged to her satisfaction, she went over to the tiny writing desk and took up an envelope, addressed, stamped, but not sealed. She opened it and ran through it again.

"Dear Jim," it began. "Don't suppose you have learned of my return as yet. At least I hope I may be the first to tell you. The fact is, I've just run over quietly—unofficially, as it were. Oh, Jim, dear, how can I ever tell you how I have come? In doing so, I am defying proprieties—but what is that, Jim, when your heart is just asserting itself and demanding recognition?

"What a blind fool I was, Jim, back in the prehistoric days when you used to love me! I have been a regular 'Babe,' dear, in love—always trying to avoid purchasing a gold brick and at last purchasing one to pay me for my smartness! It has been such a beast of a failure, Jim. Oh, yes—I got the position all right. I have as many titles to tack onto my name—when I bother to use them—as any woman in Europe. But, Jim—I left them all behind in Europe—I am again Edith Selby. That is the name I came over on—the name I want you to use again. Oh, yes, and there was more money than even I could use, Jim, in my most extravagant moments. But do you know, money doesn't buy lots of things one wants. One of the most pathetic things in the world is to see a fine set of aspirations at half mast, lowered by bitter experience! Jim, I have come back to you. Yes, dear, and how sure I feel of my welcome! Were I less sure I should never write this letter. It is a dreadful thing to throw one's self at a man—but I know how happy the man will be. I hope you love me just as madly, just as foolishly, as in the old days—and of course, long ago, you forgave me for my wicked ambitions. You never cared much for worldly things. I know you are just plodding along—dear old boy! And just to think that I care enough to come back and share your obscurity. When the prince died it was found his property had been lost in speculations. Mine went with it. But I don't mind in the least. The remnant will suffice for all ordinary use—and you do hate display, anyway. Hasn't it all come about just as it should? For the first time in years I am happy. Oh, dear-est! you'll come to me at once, won't you? You always said you would wait till doomsday—but it didn't take that long, did it? I shall expect you at once—"

"I can't lose a chance of happiness again," she said in self-defense. "He told me once if I ever changed my mind—if I ever wanted him—when I tired of the world and all its shallow charm—to come back. And Jim is just the dear old plodder who would do that quixotic sort of thing. I should have taken the count were it not for Jim. But there has never been a moment when I haven't loved Jim and gladly given it all up for him!"

She rang a tiny silver bell and a trim maid put her head through the green silken draperies.

"Post this, Celeste."

And then she began to wait, in a fever of hope, fear, nervous excitement. It was a quick turn on the plot that fate, the novelist, had been developing. If the heroine could finish up the story happily the silence would be well broken. She smiled in happy confidence. Jim would understand.

It was late the next day when his answer came. She tore the envelope in shreds in her impatience to get it open. Her eyes raced madly over the dashing lines:

"My dear princess," it began, "I am pleased to learn that you are again in America. Mrs. Richmond joins me in hoping that you may find it convenient to dine with us at an early date. Would Wednesday be agreeable? Unfortunately, that is the only free evening we have for some time. Dorothy, as you may remember, was always a sad butterfly, and sinc our marriage I have rather fallen into the way of it myself. I trust you will be able to come, princess, for you must see the children. Jim, Jr., is—"

The letter fell from the princess' hand. The little bell tinkled imperatively.

"We sail Wednesday, Celeste!"

"Yes, princess."

"And, Celeste! Don't ever try to let down the hem of an old romance!"

WHY APPENDICITIS?

Why is appendicitis so common today?

Because we have got into the pernicious habit of eating too fast.

Dr. Curtis, the great authority on this disease, says: "Appendicitis often follows the eating of a very hasty, or particularly large or indigestible meal."

After carelessly following a foolish custom, you can insure your safety by taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

It is an accepted scientific truth, which admits of no dispute, that if you will only keep your digestive apparatus in good order, you will never suffer from this dread disease, which, at best, means a weakening operation, with long weeks wasted in bed, and big doctor's and surgeon's bills to pay as souvenirs.

Keep your appendix in health by the proper use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, whenever you have laid yourself open to danger by overeating, and upon the least sign of stomach or intestinal trouble, for otherwise, at any time, this dangerous disease may lay you low.

The curative influence of this great medicine is quickly shown in the gentle, soothing effect it has on all inflamed conditions of any part of the digestive tract.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets tone all parts up to a proper condition of perfect health, and regulate their functions into a proper working state.

They also make away with all the causes of irritation, inflammation or indigestion, by helping to dissolve, digest and assimilate, or put to proper use, all the food which is lying around in odd corners of your digestive apparatus, fermenting, rotting and curdling, like so much garbage in a dirty sink.

In these natural and perfectly simple ways, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets restore all sufferers, from any form of dyspeptic trouble, to health.

They are safe and reliable. They never fail to relieve and cure, quickly and permanently.

Use them, and you need nevery worry about your appendix vermiformix.

"Rip Van Winkle," with Thomas Jefferson, the son of the immortal originator of the character, in the title role, was presented at the Lyceum Saturday evening before a well filled house.

Mr. Jefferson himself, while handicapped by the remembrance of his father's interpretation of the part, has strong dramatic ability and in the comedy parts especially, pleased the audience.

His daughter Lauretta, who is the sixth of the family to adopt the stage as a profession, took the part of Meenie. She is somewhat lacking in experience but showed considerable promise, and has in addition a charming stage appearance.

The supporting characters were scarcely up to the standard set by Mr. Jefferson.

The play was well staged, and the costumes appropriate.

"THE RUNAWAYS."

This evening at the Lyceum "The Runaways," a brilliant musical comedy production will be seen. It is in two acts, the first showing the club house and race track at Saratoga and the second in the Island of Table D'Hote in the far Pacific, where indigestion is unknown. A riot of music, color and fun begins at the rise of the curtain and never fags. In the cast in the suport of Arthur Dunn, that diminutive comedian, are Charles Dox, Clarence Harvey, Thomas Whitbread, William Meehan, Erminie Earle, Sallie Randall, Blanche Wayne and the Althea sisters.

"HER FIRST FALSE STEP."

Two large and beautiful African lions are one of the many new features introduced in the new play "Her First False Step," which comes to the Metropolitan theater for the first time, commencing Thursday next and for three nights and Saturday matinee. They are seen in the fourth act of the play in the great circus tent, where is to be seen numerous animal cages, each in charge of the usual number of uniformed attendants. Beyond this tent can be plainly seen the interior of another large tent where a performance is in progress. Here the author has introduced clowns, tumblers, acrobats, and all other characters necessary to make a complete circus. At the end of the fourth act is where occurs the daring rescue of a child from a den of African lions. The child is thrown into the cage by the villain and is rescued by Jack Walters, the leading man.

MURDERER CHEATS THE CHAIR.

New York, Oct. 24.—Frank Gustafson, a convicted murderer, who today was to have been sentenced to death in the electric chair, committed suicide during the night by hanging himself in his cell in the Tombs prison. On the night of June 1 last Gustafson shot and killed his wife.

SAVES TWO FROM DEATH.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Y., "but, when all other remedies failed, we saved her life with Dr. King's New Discovery. Our niece, who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for coughs and colds.

TUESDAY THE DAY

Boards of Registration Will Meet From 6 A. M. to 9 P. M.

But One More Chance to Register For General Election.

Tomorrow is registration day, and those who fail to get their names on the voters' list will have but one more opportunity to register before the general election in November.

The judges of election will be in their places ready to receive names from 6 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock in the evening, so that every voter will have an opportunity to register.

At least 1500 names should be added to the list of voters tomorrow and 1500 more on Saturday in order to bring the number eligible to vote at the general election up to the normal figure. A normal registration for a general election should be about 10,000. At the primaries the total registration was a little under 7000, and in order to reach the 10,000 mark, 3,00 voters will have to get their names on the books in the two remaining days.

Persons who have moved from one precinct to another since October 9, will be ineligible to vote either in their old precinct or a new one, although, removals from one house to another within the same precinct will not affect their standing.

No person can vote at the general election who has not registered either at the primaries or on one of the two remaining days of registration. Those who registered for the primaries do not have to register a second time.

The same polling booths that were used for the primaries will be used for places of registration tomorrow and Saturday.

The heaviest registration is expected in the Second, Fourth and Eighth wards, which cast a light vote at the primaries, while the lightest registration will probably be in the First ward, which, owing to the fight for sheriff, voted nearly to the limit in September.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Boy Insists That Shooting of Girl Was Accidental.

Sault Ste. Marie—Adolph Laramie, the 16-year-old Sugar Island boy who shot 10-year-old Viola Fillatrault as she was standing in the school yard, has been arrested and taken to the Chippewa county jail at the Soo. He maintains that he mistook his little victim for a bird. Some sixty shot lodged in the girl's body, and the outcome of her wounds is still problematical.

Attorney M. F. McDonald, of the Soo, is in New York, having been called there on business relative to the construction of the proposed De Tour-Soo railroad. He was accompanied by W. D. Hitchcock, prime mover in the scheme to connect the two towns by rail. It has been known for some time that matters in connection with the building of the road have been in progress, but the men back of the enterprise have been very reticent when approached on the subject. It is now stated that there is a fair likelihood of actual work on the road being commenced early in the spring. The company's prospectus was issued some time ago, and it is said has received the endorsement of some of the leading railroad promoters in the country.

Munising—Employes of the Cleveland-Cliffs conipany at Munising ridicule the idea that the moose whose carcass was found recently near Sable point came from the Grand island game preserve. They point out the fact that as Grand island is thirty or thirty-five miles from Sable point, a moose which fell off the rocks on the island would not be apt to keep very warm after floating around in the icy waters of Lake Superior half a day. The fact is, there are wild moose in the upper peninsula, and those who are well acquainted with the woods say they have been seen as near Munising as the Pictured rocks, as well as along the Tequamanon river.

Menominee—A local architect is at work on plans for a new church edifice for the German Lutheran congregation at Menominee. The structure will go up on the site of the present building, will be of brick, 40 by 73 feet in ground dimensions, and will cost about $8000. Construction work will be started in the spring.

Manistique—McArthur Bros. & Co., of Chicago, the concern which has the contract for the construction of the new station of the Manistique Light and Power company, has an extensive plant on the ground, included in the outfit being a 40-horse power boiler to furnish steam for an 11-ton drum hoist, stone drills, pumps and enough machinery of smaller type to equip a small machine shop. In the construction of the station 700 barrels of cement and 100,000 pounds of structural steel will be used. Water wheels weighing 40,000 pounds will be installed. Men are at work on a coffer-dam which, when completed, will leave a dry river bed in which quarrying operations will be conducted. The rock blasted out will be utilized in the construction of the building.

Gousby Walked a Mile to Get Weapon to Kill Gates.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Portal—Early James Gousby, the murderer of Walter Gates, was taken to the county jail at Minot. He talked freely of the crime and admitted the killing, although he did not go to look at Gates after he had shot him. The county coroner drove at once to the scene, and a verdict that the murdered man came to his death by a gunshot, the weapon being in the hands of Gousby, was returned by the jury. It develops that after he had words with the murdered man, and Gates had struck him over the head with the shovel, that Gousby walked nearly a mile to the cookcar and procured the rifle that he might return and shoot Gates. On his way back to the machine he was called to, but his only reply was to raise his rifle at the speaker and command him to keep away. When it was seen that he was determined to shoot, every effort was made to avoid him, it appears that Gates did not use the best of judgment, and thinking he could get away, started across the field. This is where Gates erred, as the negro saw him and made an extraordinary shot, his bullet striking Gates in the back, glancing upward and coming out his neck and mouth.

Devils Lake—President J. M. Kelly, of the Farmers' railroad, which runs from here to Starkweather, has issued a call to stockholders for a meeting Nov. 9, at which time it is proposed to increase the number of shares to 250,000 for the purpose of extending the line twenty-five miles north. The enterprise has been a financial success and the proposed extension will add materially to the company's business, as it will run through a rich farming section in Ramsey and Cavalier counties.

Sheriff Rutten arrested Ralph Bishop, Great Northern agent at Lawton, a small town in this county. The prisoner is charged with embezzling between $500 and $800 of the company's money, and there is also some suspicion that a few nights ago he set fire to the station, which was destroyed, to cover up his shortage. Bishop is 55 and has a family in Duluth. He will appear before District Judge Cowan to plead guilty to the charge of embezzlement. Drink is the cause of his downfall.

Shortly before noon a gasolene stove exploded in Thomas Franklin's restaurant and the building was ruined. Prompt action of the fire department saved it serious conflagration as the burning building stood in a row of frame structures. The loss is $100, with only little insurance.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—A grand jury will be summoned for the next term of circuit court in this city. One of the matters which it will have to investigate will be the daylight robbery of the Agrant pawnbroking establishment in this city last July.

But the determination to call the jury chiefly grew out of charges of graft against city officials and others which have been flying broadcast the past six weeks. Many of the charges grew out of the alleged collection during the street fair and carnival last August of large sums of money from gamblers and others for the privilege of operating.

The names of the men who are alleged to have received this money have never been made public, having been only hinted at.

As the result of a case which has been temporarily disposed of by Judge Jones the state banking law may be declared unconstitutional.

The constitutionality was questioned when the case of George L. Struble, an officer of a bank at Egan which failed some months ago, was called. Struble is charged with making false reports to the state bank examiner. The constitutionality of the state law has not been passed upon by Judge Jones, but he decided that the information against Struble was defective and continued the case. The state will, in the meantime, be permitted to file a new information. There is no doubt that when the case is again called the question of constitutionality will once more be raised.

Aberdeen—A prairie fire of destructive proportions in North Dakota between Oakes and Ludden. The fire is supposed to have started from a spark from an engine on the Northwestern railroad. The blaze has covered a section four miles wide and nine miles long, sweeping everything before it.

Stephen Nikolas, a young Russian, was arrested for sending an obscene letter through the mails.

The Aberdeen district of the South Dakota conference of the German Evangelical church will meet in Aberdeen next week, commencing on Thursday morning, for the annual convention, which will continue until Sunday evening.

TONS OF POWDER ARE BLOWN UP

Marshalltown, Iowa, Oct. 24.—The powder house of Abbott & Son in the suburbs of Marshalltown containing tons of powder and dynamite was blown up early today, shaking the entire city and blowing out windows and doors for blocks. It is believed to have been caused by two tramps seen about the place, of whom no trace can now be found. There were no fatalities except the tramps. Had the explosion occurred half an hour later many workmen would have been killed. A woman, eight blocks away was thrown to the ground and there were a number of other minor accidents resulting from the explosion shock.

THE WHEAT EXPORTS

Reach Lowest Point In Trade's History For Many Years.

Flour Exports Also Show Effect of the Wheat Shortage.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Wheat exports from the United States seem likely to reach, in the current year, their lowest point in the history of the export trade for many years. Figures prepared by the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, show exports during the nine months ending with September of less than 10,000,000 bushels, as against 65,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1903, 96,000,000 bushels in the corresponding months of 1902, and 129,000,000 bushels in the corresponding months of 1901. Thus the exportation of wheat in the nine months ending with September is but one-fifth that of the corresponding months of 1902, about one-tenth that of the corresponding months of 1903, and but about one-fourteenth as much as that of the corresponding months of 1901.

Even the flour exports are beginning to show the effect of the great shortage in the wheat supply available for exportation, and for the nine months ending with September, 1904, they amounted to only 9,000,000 barrels, speaking in round terms, against 13,500,000 in the corresponding months of 1903, and over 14,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1901. Flour exports are less readily affected by a shortage of wheat than are those of wheat itself. During the past decade flour exports for the nine months' period have but twice fallen below 10,000,000 barrels, but in the nine months of the present year have amounted to but 9,000,000 barrels. Wheat exported during the decade had never fallen below about 50,000,000 bushels for the nine months' period and ranged from that amount to about 140,000,000 bushels for the period under consideration, but amounted, in the nine months ending with September, 1904, to only 9,762,722 bushels.

In ordinary crop years about one-half of the wheat exported goes in the form of flour, but in years in which the exportations of wheat are light, a much larger proportion is turned into flour before being sent. The flour export statements of the bureau of statistics are stated in barrels, and these are reduced to terms of wheat by reckoning one barrel of flour as the equivalent of 4½ bushels of wheat. A comparison of the wheat and flour exports from 1899 to 1904 shows that in average years the quantity of wheat exported in the form of flour does not differ greatly from the quantity exported as flour when stated in terms of wheat. In heavy crop years the proportion of wheat exported in the form of flour is very large. In 1901, with an abnormally large wheat crop, the flour exports for the nine months represented about 81,000,000 bushels of wheat, while the exports of wheat in the natural state amounted to nearly 132,000,000 bushels.

During the first nine months of 1903, however, with a small surplus of wheat for exportation, 60,000,000 of wheat were exported in the form of flour and but 55,000,000 exported in the natural state. In the nine months ending with September, 1904, the quantity of wheat exported in the form of flour is over 40,000,000 bushels, while during the same time but 10,000,000 bushels have been exported in the natural state. In the full fiscal years from 1899 to 1904 the percentage of the wheat exports which were sent in the form of flour has been: In 1899, 37 per cent; in 1900, 46 per cent; in 1901, 39 per cent; in 1902, 34 per cent; in 1903, 44 per cent, and in 1904, 63 per cent.

This marked reduction in the exports of wheat during 1904 is discussed by the chief of the bureau of statistics in his annual review, as follows:

The reduction in the exportation of wheat in the fiscal year 1904 to a point below that of any year since 1891 can not be charged to a shortage in production in the preceding year, since the wheat crop of 1903 was larger than the average of the last five years, and was the largest in the history of the country, with the exception of the crops of 1898, 1901 and 1902. The wheat crop of 1904 was but 32,000,000 bushels below that of 1903, while the exports of the fiscal year 1904 fell 82,000,000 below those of 1903. The reduction in exports in the fiscal year 1904 being much greater than the crop reduction of the calendar year 1903. The reduction in exports seems to be due chiefly to the steadily increasing consumption by the home population, while the further fact that the supply of several of the other wheat-producing countries of the world was unusually large in 1903 reduced to some extent the European demand upon the United States and furnished wheat ta the European market at prices below those made in the United States by the growing demands upon the home market.

The following table, in which the quantities of flour exported are reduced to their wheat equivalents (at the rate of 4½ bushels of wheat to one barrel of flour), shows the relative exports of wheat in the natural state and in the form of flour in each fiscal year from 1899 to 1901:

Year	Wheat.	Wheat flour reduced to wheat.	Total.
	Bushels	Bushels	Bushels
1899	139,432,815	83,186,605	222,619,420
1900	101,950,389	84,146,373	186,096,762
1901	132,069,667	83,929,405	215,990,072
1902	151,836,102	79,916,413	234,772,515
1903	114,181,420	89,084,178	203,265,598
1904	44,158,744	75,282,975	119,441,719

ABUSES OF CAMPAIGN

Judge Parker Calls Attention to Corrupt Practices.

Esopus, Oct. 24.—Judge Parker today laid aside the issues usually discussed in national political contests and addressed a crowd of several hundred persons on the general topic of campaign practices and abuses. He rebuked the present administration for the part government officials are alleged to be taking in the campaign. He charged that the officers of the government are now practically chosen by a handful of corporate managers, who contribute the assets of the corporations to keep the conduct of the government in the hands they consider best for their private interests.

In a comparison of modern and early methods of raising money for the conduct of political contests Judge Parker said: "Individuals of all classes used to contribute to the campaign fund. Vast sums are now contributed by corporations which thrive through government favoritism.

"This has built up the class called floaters and has made them a most important factor in elections."

Judge Parker further charged that "excessively protected interests have been joined by the trusts. Their plan is to perpetuate the present administration, to purchase four years more of prosperity by tariff taxation or four years more of extortion from the public by means of monopoly."

He asked: "Why do they contribute? If public welfare and the interests of a subscribing corporation or trust should conflict which would likely be protected?"

The question to be settled is whether the floaters and illegal combinations can together control an election in this country. Such a contest means on one side vast sums of money and every man with an itching palm. It ought to array every honest independent and patriotic citizen on the other side.

PRISONERS WED

Municipal Court Room the Scene of a Wedding.

Judge Gives Two Young People Chance to Escape Fine.

Aside from the customary charge of $2 for the license fee, it not only cost Lydia Antilla and Ole Johnson nothing to enter the bonds of matrimony, but it effected a saving of $35 which they will have to commence housekeeping with.

The wedding, which was performed by Judge Windom in municipal court this morning, was attended with rather romantic circumstances. The young woman is a stranger in the city and has neither friends or relatives here. She has been ill for some time past and unable to work to support herself.

She was engaged to marry Johnson and the wedding was to take place just as soon as they thought that conditions warranted it. Friday evening the two young people were arrested in a lodging house on lower Lake avenue by Sergt. Fritz and Officer Lahti. They pleaded guilty in court Saturday morning and Judge Windom sentenced them each to pay a fine of $15 and costs.

In explaining the matter to the court the young woman stated that she was unable to work and that she had been compelled to seek aid of her future husband. Johnson when questioned, told the same story, and stated that he had been supporting the young woman.

"Why don't you get married?" asked the court. "That will solve the whole question. If you will agree to get married I will suspend sentence and perform the ceremony free of charge."

They were given until Monday to get the necessary documents, and early this morning they appeared before the court and asked to be made man and wife.

"I pronounce you man and wife," said Judge Windom after the usual questions had been asked and answered, "and the former sentence of this court against you is suspended indefinitely."

"This is indeed a court room in every sense of the word," said the clerk as Mr. and Mrs. Johnson passed out the door arm in arm.

West Duluth

Two West Duluth football teams engaged in games yesterday with uptown aggregations, and neither of the two won. The Fairmonts played the Gophers of Duluth, the game resulting in a tie score, 5 to 5. The match factory team did not fare so well at the hands of the Second street team, going down to defeat to the tune of 5 to 0. Both games were good exhibitions.

The features of the match factory game were fifty-yard runs, made by Buskey and Coughlin. Hanna and Sommers were the stars in the Gopher eleven yesterday, while J. Sarvela shone with particular brilliancy in the ranks of the West Duluth players. It is claimed that the Fairmonts outweighed their opponents five pounds to a man. The tie game was played at Athletic park, before 500 people. The line-up for this game was as follows:

Fairmonts.		Gophers.
H. Kenney ..	left tackle ..	L. McNulty
P. Hormann ..	left guard ..	B. Hart
C. Jones	center..	C. Dahlrymple

A BIG RALLY.

Republicans Have a Fine Meeting Saturday Night.

In point of attendance and enthusiasm the Republican rally in Great Eastern hall, Saturday night, under the auspices of the West Duluth Republican club, was a decidedly successful one. The large hall was taxed to the limit of its capacity. So great was the crowd that it could hardly be accommodated, and for a time it was feared that an overflow meeting might be necessary.

Dar F. Reese, of St. Paul, spoke from 8:30 to 11 o'clock. He pleased his audience, and his remarks in praise of R. C. Dunn for governor, and the Republican candidates in general, called for frequent bursts of hearty applause. After a general discussion of the issues involved in the present campaign, Mr. Reese referred to the fact of the dissatisfaction of many because, it is claimed, that R. C. Dunn did not obtain the nomination fairly. He said the records told a different story, and that all statements to the contrary were malicious and unjust. Dunn was opposed in the convention by the corporate interests of the Twin Cities, according to the speaker, and the delegates were so incensed at this that they arose in their might and gave Dunn the nomination.

"It was no act of Dunn's that unseated delegations, but that of the majority of the delegates present, who saw and understood the reasons why he was being mailgned."

Mr. Reese emphatically denied that Mr. Dunn is a "Jim Hill" man, and spoke of the stand Dunn has taken in advocating an increase in the gross earnings tax of the railroads from 3 to 4 per cent. He explained that this proposed increase will mean an additional annual income to the state of over $600,000. Mr. Reese also took occasion to praise Dunn's past official record.

Down to Finals.

In the men's fall handicap at the golf grounds H. H. Myers has beaten W. L. Dalrymple in the semi-finals, which puts Mr. Myers against F. H. White in the finals. This contest is for a cup, which must be won three times to gain permanent ownership. Mr. Myers won it last fall and Ward Ames, Jr., won it this spring. If Mr. Myers defeats Mr. White he will have to win the cup one more time, but if he is defeated, Mr. Ames, Mr. White and he will each be on the same relative basis toward the trophy, with one victory to their credit.

TO ST. LOUIS MEETING.

Duluth Delegates to Leave For There Wednesday.

Three delegates from this city to St. Louis to attend the meeting of the Interstate Commerce congress will leave Duluth Wednesday. They are E. M. Ferguson, representing the Commercial club; Simon Clark, of the Grocers' union, and A. J. Milner, of the Butchers' union.

Before going to the St. Louis meeting Mr. Clark will attend the meeting of the executive committee of the Retail Grocers' and General Merchants' association of Minnesota, to be held at the Twin Cities, which has in hand the direction of a campaign in favor of legislation more favorable to the interests of the retail grocers and other dealers throughout the state. It is the endeavor to put all possible efforts forth to secure the election of men to the legislature who are favorable to the measures desired by the association members.

There is no contest on in any of the three local legislative districts for seats in the lower house and senators will not be elected locally this year. Mr. Clark says the candidates offered in this vicinity, however, are favorable to the ends which the association is working for.

WANT LINE BUILT

Bemidji Desires One to Red Lake Sixty Miles Distant.

Would Traverse a Fine Section—Soo Road's Extension Operating.

A railroad from Bemidji to Red Lake is projected and was agitated at a mass meeting held last Saturday night in Bemidji. The distance is sixty miles between the two points and the only road between them now is a wagon road. The Red Lake Transportation company is pushing the idea as much as possible, being a large and powerful company, and of considerable influence in public movements in the vicinity of Bemidji.

This company is operating a stage line over the sixty miles of wagon road now open and keeps this in operation the year round. The country is said to be very rich in agriculture with considerable logging going on also, which would make the projected steam road a rather feasible proposition.

Such a line would cost probably $1,125,000, broad guage, and the financial end of the deal has yet to be arranged. It is understood that the town of Bemidji, through its citizens, will give the road the right of way, which will make this part of the project of easy solution.

At present the nearest railroad between the two points is the Minnesota & International road, which runs northwestwardly from Bemidji to Northome, with a branch cutting northward to Kelliher, but this only gets within twenty-five or thirty miles of Red Lake, and probably forty from the point on the lake nearest Bemidji, to which the new line would undoubtedly run.

If the new proposition to build a branch of the South Shore from this city to Thief River Falls should be realized it might be that the survey would carry the line along the south shore of Red Lake, which would make an indirect route from Bemidji to Red Lake through the use of the M. & I. from Bemidji to the junction with the South Shore, and from there to the lake Such a route would probably be 100 miles or over in length.

SOO ROAD'S PLANS.

Extension to Thief River Falls Now Operating.

W. R. Callaway, general passenger agent of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie line, has issued an announcement to connecting lines and ticket agents of the developments being made by his line.

He says the Manitoba extension of the company's line is now in operation from Glenwood to Thief River Falls, and the grading completed to Emerson. Eighty-pound steel rails are being laid at the rate of two miles a day, and it is expected that the entire line will be ready for passenger service Dec. 1. At Emerson, connection will be made with the Canadian Pacific railway for all points in the Canadian Northwest.

If the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic should build from Duluth to Thief River Falls, as reported, it will undoubtedly make a through route to Winnipeg from its own territory, east of Duluth, and would also establish a competitive line to work against the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, on Duluth-Winnipeg business.

NEW PLANS FOR ERIE.

Some Unusual Ones Making For That Road.

A new survey develops a route by which the Erie, at the cost of less than $15,000,000, can make a freight road from Chicago to tidewater, with a ruling grade eastbound of two-tenths per cent, and three-tenths per cent westbound, except upon the New York division. There the ruling grade westbound will be six-tenths per cent.

The plan is to produce a single track freight road with these gradients, with second and third tracks much of the way where the present line is followed.

Five sections of new road will be built through New Jersey, New York and Eastern Ohio. The new line will be built as single track, with simple passing sidings. The tunnels and bridges will have provision for a second track. To effect these large grade reductons only five miles will be added to the present distance from New York to Chicago. Cleveland will be put on the main line.

The plans also provide for revision of the Hoboken terminal as a cost of $10,000,000. At the same time plans are being formulated for the electrification of the suburban service throughout New Jersey. Some fifty-one miles in all will be electrified.

The whole expense contemplated for the entire scheme of development is less than $30,000,000. It comes within the financial provisions already made.

No Shortage In West.

Those in charge of the office of the general manager of the Northern Pacific deny that there is a shortage of cars on the system's Western lines. A report from Portland stated that the buying of Oregon and Washington wheat for shipment to Chicago had ceased, owing to the inability of the railroads to furnish cars to handle the business.

F. N. Finch, chief clerk in the general manager's office, said that the company since Sept. 1 had handled 1800 cars of Washington and Idaho grain to Eastern terminals, and that as many cars of the same wheat had been shipped to Puget Sound points.

Railroad Notes.

M. J. Rice, tie inspector of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, is here inspecting some material which he accepted by his company for use.

J. O. Goodsell, traveling passenger agent of the Union Pacific, with headquarters at Omaha, who spent considerable of his time in this city, and was here but a short time ago, has been transferred to a similar position at Toronto, and Harry Carter, of Toronto, will succeed him at Omaha.

S. J. Bigelow, commercial agent of the Michigan Central, is distributing some large and comprehensive maps of the New York Central, Lake Shore and other Vanderbilt lines.

Thomas F. Gough, traveling passenger agent of the Pere Marquette at Minneapolis for so long, has had to change his position. This change follows that made by the company in amalgamating with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton system, the combined force now being the C. H. & D.-Pere Marquette lines. Mr. Gough is here today after business.

W. W. Walker, general freight agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, returned from Chicago this morning.

W. B. Van Bergen, conductor on the Sante Fe system, with his headquarters in Kansas City, is expected tomorrow to arrive to visit his brothers, C. E. and Henry Van Bergen.

GEN. MILES SUGGESTS

Better Use of Millions Expended In Philippine Islands.

New York, Oct. 24.—Gen. Nelson A. Miles, in a letter to Col. Finley Anderson, says:

"It was recently proclaimed by the highest official in the Philippines that the people of that country should not contemplate free government, and the principal reason given was that revolutions had constantly occurred in South American republics. This appears to come with bad grace, when the very man who uttered that statement had been engaged in a revolution which had caused more blood letting and wasted more American lives than all the revolutions in the republics of South America in the last one hundred years. Should we adopt the same measures toward the people of the Philippine islands that we have found so successful with the people of Cuba, their gratitude would be unbounded. ninety-nine per cent of the American people would be satisfied with the result, and ours would be the glory of establishing the first republic in the Orient where now its hundreds of millions of people are watching with intense anxiety the action of this great American republic.

"Our first responsibility is to do unto others as we would have others do unto us. Hundreds of millions of dollars that have been expended in the Philippine islands, to say nothing of the thousands of lives that have been lost would have put water upon every quarter section of our arid land available for that purpose, thus benefiting the home builders of our own country. it would have given us a magnificent system of good roads over our entire country, or have built two canals across the isthmus. In fact instead of seeking to subjugate the people of far distant countries it would, in my judgment, be a wiser endeavor to benefit our own people at home.

"There is more material wealth within our own borders than is available for the people of any country on earth. One half of it still remains practically unoccupied. The Western half of the United States is occupied today by scarcely more people than are crowded in the Philippine islands—an area less in extent than that of New York and the New England states or the territory of New Mexico.

"On the banks of the Hudson there dwells an eminent citizen and courtly gentleman, a distinguished patriot, profound statesman, just judge, who, if elected president of these United States, will carry to that responsible office dignity, ability and high character; and his administration, I know will be marked by patriotism, integrity and earnest efforts, not only to promote the welfare of the people now living within our borders, but to preserve for those who shall follow us this blessed inheritance within the bounds prescribed by the fathers who founded our great republic."

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN DULUTH

TO SUBSCRIBERS:
It is important when desiring the address of your paper changed, to give both old and new addresses.

REGISTER TOMORROW.

Every citizen of Duluth who desires to vote at the general election on November 8 must first be registered. That is now the requirement of law and there is no getting around it.

Those voters who participated in the primary election are already registered and are not required to register again. But those who neither voted at the primary election nor registered on that day will be compelled to register either tomorrow or on Saturday next, else they cannot vote.

The polls will be open in the different precincts tomorrow from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. and the voter can register at any time between those hours. The requirements of voting are that the citizen shall have resided in the state six months and in the precinct thirty days before the day of election. Foreign-born citizens are required to have their second citizenship papers three months before the day of election. So it is too late now for foreigners to take out second papers with the intention of voting on November 8. But no matter if a man has complied with all the other requirements he cannot vote if he does not register.

Register tomorrow; or, if that is impossible, be sure to register on Saturday next.

PHYSICIAN, HEAL THYSELF.

The Atlanta News, which appears to be the most pronounced (at least it is the most open) negro hater among the newspapers of the South, addresses a recent editorial to Booker T. Washington. It is a sort of open letter, advising him as to the kind of speech the Atlanta paper thinks he ought to make to the leading men of his race.

The whole screed is a bundle of insults to the negro. For instance, it advises Washington to say to his people: "Be careful what you say to the ignorant mass about you. Do not, as you value peace, preach discontent to these negroes. Do not dissatisfy them with their employers. Do not advise them to do as little work as they can for the white man and get as much money as they can out of them. Warn them against combines to keep white people from getting cooks and nurses and help."

Now, isn't that grand! It is not for negroes to get as much money as they can for as little work as they can do. That remains a prerogative of the white man, who is also entitled to get as much work as he can for as little money as possible. It is the negroes' duty to work, no matter what the conditions or the pay. They are supposed to come when the white man beckons. They are not to have a word to say about the bargain. All that is to be reserved for the white man. When the white man wants a cook or a nurse or other help it is the duty of the negro to come to his assistance. White people have a right to refuse if they want to, as a matter of course. But the negro has no such right. And he is a "b-a-d" man if he does.

Then the News concludes its advice as to what Washington ought to say in this paragraph: "And then, my brethren and my friends, with all the solemn earnestness that you can command, and with all the force that God may give you, preach to them in thunder tones against lawlessness and lust. Point them with awful warning to the fierce and fiery vengeance which is sure to fall upon this sin. Paint the horrors of the gallows, the horrors of the stake and the perpetual horrors of hell fire in which, according to their religion, they will burn for ceaseless ages for this sin. Tell them that this sin is ruining the race and will surely exterminate it. Tell them that every negro that commits it is sure to die—either to have his neck broken on the gallows, or his body riddled with bullets or burned at the stake. Preach, paint, picture, describe, denounce, shame, exhort, appeal and pray around this sin; and let us see, my brethren, if all the good negroes in the world cannot influence all the bad negroes in the world to abide the law, to respect property, and to never, never, never lift their eyes or even their thoughts toward the person of a white woman so long as they shall live."

Of course it does not make any great difference whether a white man ever, ever, ever lifts his eyes toward a black woman. That is a prerogative of the superior race, which is mainly responsible for the mixture of blood in the two races, and which is, no doubt, also largely responsible for the inborn criminal instincts of many of these mixed bloods.

According to the News it is only the black man who should be warned repeatedly against the sin of lust. It is only his teacher who should "preach, paint, picture, describe, denounce, shame, exhort, appeal and pray around this sin." But let us see how the white man compares with the negro in regard to this "one awful crime." During the course of an article appearing in the October number of the Forum, Prof. Kelly Miller says:

"Current discussion on this question would persuade us that assault upon women was a new atrocity originated by the negro and incited by the Fifteenth amendment. But the plain fact is that it is an offence common to every race and to all stages of society. In 1887 there were in England and Wales 878 prisoners convicted for assault upon women and 758 for assault upon girls under thirteen years of age. In 1890 there were 814 white prisoners in the United States convicted on the charge. A Chicago paper has stated that in one year the number of white men in Chicago alone arrested and convicted on the charge was greater than the number of cases charged against the entire negro race. In the city of New York there were 148 arrests for this crime during 1902, and 9 in Cleveland, Ohio. During 1903 there were 39 such cases in Baltimore, 10 of which were colored and 29 white. Washington had 11 cases, 8 of which were colored and 3 white. St. Louis had 12 cases and Buffalo 34.

"Vengeance is wreaked on less than 50 negroes a year on the charge, arousing the whole nation to a state of frenzied passion against the black scourge of mankind; and yet 148 white men commit a similar offence in the city of New York without attracting the least public notice beyond the regular process of judicial procedure. If cases of lightning-stroke were advertised with as much horrifying particularity, we should all live in momentary dread of the terror of the sky."

Assault upon women is a terrible crime, but it is no more terrible for a negro than it is for a white man; in fact it should be considered more of a crime for a white man because he is supposed to be farther removed from savagery, and we know that he has had centuries of education and moral training where the negro has had only a few years.

It is not negro assaults upon white women that disturb the South nearly as much as it is negro assaults upon wage slavery and class distinction. Does the Atlanta paper also want the privilege of assaulting women reserved for white men? If not, in view of the above statistics, it would seem to be about time for it to begin preaching to and praying about somebody else besides negroes.

Instead of John Temple Graves presuming to teach Booker Washington his business, the editor of the Atlanta News ought to take a few lessons in ordinary decency.

NO THIRD TERM ISSUE NOW.

The ridiculous inconsistencies in political life and political discussions were never better illustrated than in the present campaign in Wisconsin.

Previous to the nomination of Governor La Follette his opponents laid great stress upon the fact that he was seeking a third term, something that they stigmatized as abhorrent to American principles. They attempted to drag in the unwritten law regarding a third term for a president, but in spite of all their opposition he secured the renomination.

After all this anti-third-term talk the Democrats nominated as their candidate for governor George W. Peck, who had already served two terms in that office. But that was not all. When the supreme court of the state declared against the Stalwarts and designated the La Follette ticket as regular, the Stalwart candidate for governor withdrew. Straightway these holier-than-thou people, who had been howling vociferously all through the campaign against third terms, proceed to place at the head of their ticket a man who had also served two terms in the executive chair.

The third term is no longer an issue in Wisconsin this year. But let the same conditions again arise and it will be just as great an issue as ever.

What fools the politicians are! Or is it only the people who are fools?

AN ABLE ADDRESS.

The splendid state ticket presented by the Minnesota Democrats this year contains a number of eloquent speakers, and one of the ablest in the list is Thomas J. McDermott of St. Paul, the nominee for attorney general. Mr. McDermott ranks high in the legal profession and is a fitting associate for John A. Johnson and F. G. Winston, the nominees for governor and lieut.-governor, and the other candidates named by the Democratic convention. It is very important that the people should elect an attorney general in thorough sympathy with the governor, otherwise the executive will be seriously handicapped in carrying out the reforms needed in the administration of the state's affairs and in prosecuting the timber thieves and other despoilers of the state lands. The election of John A. Johnson to the governorship should be accompanied by the election of Mr. McDermott as attorney general.

The Herald takes pleasure in presenting in its news columns today a report of the able address delivered by Mr. McDermott at Belle Plaine on Saturday night. All who desire to be fully informed on the state issues should carefully read what Mr. McDermott says. The Republican candidate opposed to Mr. McDermott for attorney general is Edward T. Young, whose record as state senator debars him from the support of every voter who is anxious to see this important office filled by one who will faithfully guard the state's interests.

THE FIELD SURVEY

It would be practically unanimous for John A. Johnson on Nov. 8 were it not for the fact that, if elected, he would have the handing out of appointive offices. Therefore there are some "Republicans" who will vote for their party's candidate for governor.

Further evidence of the Republican revolt against Dunn was furnished at the meeting at Redwood Falls addressed by Hon. John Lind last Friday night. The chairman of the meeting was Mayor Philbrick, one of the leading Republicans of Redwood county, and other prominent Republicans sat on the platform, including Capt. W. P. Dunnington, formerly sergeant-at-arms of the state senate, and Till Tibbetts, who is one of the Republican leaders of that section of the state. Redwood has always been a strong Republican county, but it is evident that Johnson, Winston and the whole Democratic state ticket will receive a handsome vote there in November.

The Brooklyn Eagle makes this suggestion: "There is also ample reason why Republicans having the welfare of Brooklyn at heart should enroll on those days as Democrats, thus arming themselves to aid their fellow-citizens in the repulsion of the Tammany forces at the Democratic primaries next year. That enrollment cannot in any way interfere with them voting as they please at the election. It involves no sacrifice of political conviction and it will involve little sacrifice of time. The alternative is the clutch of the tiger." That is the kind of a Democratic paper the Brooklyn Eagle is. It counsels Republicans to violate the law and stultify themselves in order to assist it in defeating the will of the Democratic majority.

Hotel Gossip.

Election troubles are rampant at Sault Ste Marie, Ont., according to Howard Bengough, a traveling man who was at the McKay Saturday night. He says the people in the two cities of that name are much interested in the outcome. Although the election difficulties are in regard to the choice of a representative the two towns are gently concerned about one another's affairs.

"There's a man named Andrew Miscampbell in the Canadian town who was elected to the Ontario parliament from his county over a year ago," said the traveling man. "That is to say, he was elected according to the figures turned over to the public by the election board. Miscampbell had formerly sat in the Ontario parliament from another district in the province, but when the Sault was growing with the swelling of the Clergue industries and bade fair to become a manufatcuring metropolis of central Canada, I guess he thought it would be a good place to locate, so did it. He's a good man for the office, I think, too, but sometimes things don't turn out satisfactory for the people who are apparently chosen.

"It was found that his seat had been obtained through fraud, so they tell me, although it is not claimed that he caused the fraud, but that some of his enthusiastic electioneers did. They brought about 351 indictments against the correctness of his election and the result was that at a trial he was unseated. The man he had run against him was Charles Nelson Smith, editor and owner of the Soult Ste Marie Express, who was a Liberal, while Miscampbell was a Conservative. They tell me up there that the Conservative party is estimated as the party corresponding to the Republican party in the states, while the Liberals are much the same as our Democrats.

"After Miscampbell was unseated they had a bye-election to choose a member a second time, so Miscampbell and Smith ran against one another once more, for the unseating of Miscampbell did not disqualify him from running again for the office. The result of the second election was the seating of Smith.

"Not long ago they brought charges against Smith similar to those his friends had brought against Miscampbell on account of his indiscreet friends. The result, may prove to be the same as it was in Miscampbell's case.

"Among other things they claim Smith's friends hired a boat and filled it with men from the American side and elsewhere and carried them up to Michipicoten or somewhere up there and voted them in favor of Smith. All this was without Smith's knowledge, so it is said, and it seems that the presumed friends of these men have been their worst enemies.

"One of the most serious things in connection with the tale is that they say the boat which took the 'ringer' voters up into the Canadian country stopped at the Michigan Sault, took on some men, then left and touched at the Canadian side two or three places, without having had clearance papers from the United States port. They tell me this is a very decided breach of the law, and that it is liable to mean severe punishment for somebody if it is proven.

"The people in the Canadian town especially are greatly worked up and I don't believe there has been as much excitement there since the time of the Princeton mess."

'Twas Only J. P. Morgan.

Chicago Chronicle: As the Atlantic liner Cedric was about to sail from New York the other day the ship's steward informed the purser that Mr. Morgan had given orders to be notified five minutes before the gang plank was to be hauled in. "And who the deuce is Morgan?" asked the purser. "Blamed if I know," answered the steward, hurrying away. Just then he saw an official of the line and learned from him who Mr. Morgan is. With a frightened look he dashed back to the purser and whispered: "Oh, I say, Mr. Purser, I've just 'eard 'o this 'ere Mr. Morgan is. Blessed if he ain't the howner of the bloomin' ship—Pierpont Morgan, you know." The purser was careful to give Mr. Morgan the desired information.

Why He Wouldn't Help Her.

Nashville Banner: Representative Clayton of Alabama has a brother-in-law, Capt. Wiley Williams, who is chief of police of Columbus, Ga., and he says that Williams recently told him about a woman who applied to him his every effort to get a "delinquent" sweetheart to marry her.

"I cannot assist you," said Chief Williams. "It is beyond the power of my office to make the fellow marry you."

"Can't you?" urged the woman.

"It is out of the question."

"Barney White and a heap of folks told me you could."

"White and others have misrepresented the powers of my office."

"Are you a married man yourself?"

"Yes, madam."

"Then I don't wonder you won't help me."

Enormous Debts to Milliners.

London Truth: The other day I saw published the balance sheet of a limited liability milliners' establishment. If I remember rightly, the debts unpaid were set down at about £30,000.0 By the amount of credit in this one establishment, one can judge of the enormous sum owed to all milliners by their customers collectively. It is well known that heavy commissions are offered to ladies who introduce customers and that many ladies are not above accepting them.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Ada Herald: The Dunn papers are now claiming that it became imperative to bounce Heatwole's man from the state committee because Heatwole is so strongly tied to the railroad interests. Their admission of this fact is only another reason why the people of Minnesota should elect John A. Johnson as their next governor. If it had not been for the efforts of Heatwole in Dunn's behalf the Princeton mess would not now be the nominee of the Republican party. It is due to Heatwole's efforts and the pull he had with the corporations—that Dunn was nominated and the situation is made one which after by the recent deal which was given Heatwole. The people should study the situation carefully and when they realize the condition of affairs they will find their duty lies in electing Mr. Johnson as our next governor.

Appleton Tribune: When Republicans are willing and anxious to assist in hiring brass bands for John A. Johnson meetings and to back their promises to vote for him by wagers of hard cash that he will be elected, as they are now doing, it does not look as though Mr. Martin would be able to whip them into line for R. C. Dunn.

Anoka Union: In a personal letter to the editor, from the head of one of the largest retail houses in Minneapolis, the following extracts are made: "I have always voted the Republican ticket, but knowing what I do about the candidate for govelnor I believe him to be an utterly unfit man for the office, and in fact I believe it would be a disgrace to the state if he should be elected. Hundreds of the best citizens in the state will not vote for him. I have yet to find the first prominent business man in this town who will."

Albert Lea Tribune (Rep.): Maj. Bowler, who was accused of being able to extract three or four varieties of vinegar from one barrel at the same time, when he was dairy commissioner under the Lind administration, has had "too much Johnson" and announces that he is done with the Democratic party and will support Dunn for governor. This may prove a serious blow to the Dunn cause, but it could not well be avoided and Frank Day, chairman of the Democratic state committee, insists that the "Majah" is after his old place, longing to get back to the vinegar testing business again. Mr. Bowler is a Populist and has always been hard to keep in the traces, but when Dunn gave him an opportunity to exploit his ability and also draw a salary he seemed permanently moored in the Democratic party. He has evidently had a revelation and sees an opportunity to get into office once more should Dunn win out, while with Johnson he stood no show, as the St. Peter man could doubtless see through the "majah's" polly-foxing methods. Let it be recorded that the Dunn strength has been accelerated by the adhesion of Maj. Bowler, late of Bird Island.

Sauk Center Herald: Hon. Joel P. Heatwole, of Northfield, "happened" to drop into St. Paul last week. He took two large rooms at the Ryan in order to secure privacy. It "occurred" to twenty-five or thirty prominent Republicans of the Third district to arrive in St. Paul at the same time to "avoid" holding a conference with him. He paid a "friendly" visit to Governor Van Sant. A detective was employed to shadow him to see that he did not get run over by the cars. We can't express the happiness of our gladness that Joel P. is "out of politics." If he can create so much disturbance when he is "out of politics" what in heaven's name would be do if he was "in politics."

THE DUTY ON WHEAT.

Springfield Republican: Some time ago it was noted that the Minnesota milling interests, located in the thick of the wheat-growing region of the United States, were buying grain on the Pacific coast and transporting it more than half the way across the continent to be ground up into flour. Now they are buying wheat in Manitoba and bringing it through our customs houses on the northern boundary at a tariff expense of 25 cents a bushel. There exists a fair supply of home-grown wheat, a little more than enough to meet the home demand, but in the Northwest it is of poor quality and Canadian wheat of better grade is needed to "tone up" the domestic grain in the manufacture of flour.

The attention of the Home Market club should be called to the fact that the Dingley duty of 25 cents a bushel on wheat is now operating not so much to protect home wheat producers as to burden the flour-milling industry and tax the home consumer. It never did afford any protection to the American farmer, since the price of his wheat, in common with that of Canada, is fixed in the European markets. But it is now proving a serious drawback to the Northwestern millers. It is a tax on their export trade which cannot but injure it materially. They can, to be sure, recover 99 per cent of the duties paid on Canadian wheat so far as used in the manufacture of flour for export, provided they can identify the foreign element in the exported product; but as the drawback law now stands this is next to impossible, and the expense of undertaking the identification is considered quite as great as the gain.

The way out of the milling industry is not clear, consistent with the maintenance of this silly customs duty on grain. Some of the millers are agitating in favor of the passage of the bill of Congressman Lovering of this state, simplifying the drawback provisions of the tariff law. But all of them are contemplating the advisability or necessity of establishing branch flouring mills on the Canadian side of the border to supply flour for the export trade.

Perhaps the Home Market club can perceive an advantage to home industry in such a movement which, as Candidate William L. Douglas recently pointed out, is becoming quite general among American manufacturers not only of flour, but of other products which seek a foreign market. But others are not so discerning. A reciprocity which can win concessions from Canada in return for the repeal of these idle or injurious duties on natural products—what can possibly be urged against it?

CORTELYOU'S COLLECTIONS.

Life: Mr. Cortelyou and his collections are the leading campaign issues this month. Mr. Cortelyou is Mr. Roosevelt's campaign manager, and it devolves upon him to see that the sinews of war are where and when they should be. It is current Democratic doctrine that the beneficiary is no better than the collector and that the Republican collector is exceedingly culpable. On Oct. 1 Mr. Pulitzer devoted eight extra-wide editorial columns of his newspaper to an effort to convince the president that Mr. Cortelyou was permitting the great corporations of the country to purchase immunity from attack by the Roosevelt administration by contributing liberally to the Republican campaign fund. The New York Times on the same day went a little further, averring, in effect, that Mr. Cortelyou was not merely permitting, but constraining, the trusts to buy safety. The Times described a concrete instance, but gave no names. The trusts, declared the Times, are buying the president. The Outlook retorted that the Times' story was "a fabrication from beginning to end," and that its "concrete instance" was "an absolute, unqualified falsehood, with no grain of truth in or under it to give it even a semblance of reality." The Times replied, in effect, that it knew of no pledges of immunity given by anybody, but that the acceptance of large contributions to the Republican campaign fund from trusts and railroads implied a bargain to protect the contributors.

All that these accusations seem to come to is that the process of electing a president is progressing about as usual. It is no secret that the Roosevelt administration is at peace with the trusts and the railroads. So is the Parker candidacy. There isn't going to be any ripping up of any class of interests, no matter who is elected. Somehow the administration managed months ago to allay most of the distrust that Wall street felt for the president. That the Republican candidate gave any pledges not to enforce the laws is, of course, incredible. That he soothed alarm is obvious. That Mr. Cortelyou has raised the black flag and is cruising for blackmail is also incredible. But he has raised money. The Republican party is comfortably reinstated in its profitable position as the friend and protector of those who have, and as the defender of the favored interests that find their profit in an extortionate tariff. That is clear enough. It is significant, but hardly scandalous. Some day the Republican party is going to be beaten on the tariff issue, and because it stands in with too many hogs, and has protected too many abuses. When that day comes, let us hope the Democratic candidate may be as wise a man as Judge Parker.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: If a woman's clothes are comfortable it is sure proof they are not in the fashion.

Women are very trustful to expect some of their clothes to conceal what they don't.

Women like to have Thanksgiving come around so they can wish they had something to be thankful for.

A woman likes to have a great deal of sentiment so she can be sorry for the disappointment it causes her.

A girl thinks she is sick abed when her new gown doesn't come home for her to wear to church next morning.

Her Day.

She worried over little woes,
From which he laughing turned;
She smarted 'neath the little blows
Which left him unconcerned;
She borrowed little troubles when
She had none of her own;
He smiled as is the way with men
And let her fret alone.

A sorrow that was real and great
On them was laid one day;
Bewailing his heart-breaking fate
He flung his hopes away.
But in that dreary hour she went
While still her eyes were wet,
And led him forth, infirm and bent,
To help him to forget.

Whittling Down the Big Stick.

New York World: President Roosevelt is playing "fast politics" these days, to use the baseball vernacular.

Following his action in the Slocum case, he has instructed Secretary Taft to go to Panama to quiet the apprehensions of the people in regard to the intentions of the United States. The president wishes it understood that the powers granted to us in the treaty must be so exercised "as to avoid creating any suspicion, however unfounded, as to our intentions in the future." We have not the slightest intention of establishing an indepenent colony in the middle of the state of Panama," he says.

These assurances will be welcomed in Panama. But there was a time when they would have been unnecesary. That was before the days of the Big Stick and the Cuban letter. It was before the days when Mr. Roosevelt gave Panama an example of American good faith by assisting the insurgents to plunder Colombia of her canal property.

IS CLAPP A TRIMMER?

Goodhue County News: Senator Clapp has climbed a tree and pulled the tree up after him. It leaves him in the air without a leg to stand on.

Senator Clapp is member of the interstate commerce committee. In charge of this committee is a bill that has slept two years in spite of all the efforts of commercial bodies, shippers' associations, manufacturers and others, to get a report on it.

It is the measure of vital interest to every man in the United States and some of Senator Clapp's constituents would like very much to know his attitude on it. In a number of matters he has been eminently successful in keeping his opinions dark and this was one of them.

Among others the editor of the Cannon Falls Beacon has a keen and intelligent interest in this measure. It is a bill that would do more to destroy the power of the trusts than any other, even more than taking away their tariff privileges. It would do more than any other measure to restore the independence of the small shippers. It would leave the railroads no longer masters of their territory but servants of the public. Under the circumstances the railroads and the trusts do not particularly fancy it.

So Mr. Applegate of the Beacon some weeks ago wrote Senator Clapp about it. By the way formal letters have been sent every senator and representative by commercial bodies interested. Nelson declared for the bill, Davis, ditto, though not quite as definitely as might be wished. Craven, of Carver, Democratic candidate for congress, is exactly in accord with it and the state platform of the Democratic party has specifically endorsed it.

Well, Clapp replied to the former letter some polite nothing some time last winter. Applegate wrote him about six weeks ago to know his attitude. No answer. Senator Nelson was in Cannon Falls a fortnight ago and Applegate mentioned the circumstance. Nelson gave Clapp a tip that he would better attend to it. Clapp wrote accordingly.

And here is where Clapp climbs a tree and pulls the tree up after him: "While I cannot anticipate legislation nor say what additional legislation may be necessary in the matter of discriminative rates, you may be assured that it will receive, like all other subjects, the most careful consideration, and my record upon that subject ought to be evidence of my interest in it."

Are you with us or agin' us? "I will give the matter careful consideration," says he. What kind of an ally is that?

EXTORTION AND EXTORTION.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Phillip Weinseimer, former treasurer of the Building Trades' association, who was charged by George Essig, a master plumber, with extortion, has been found guilty in New York City and will have to serve a term in the penitentiary. Under threat of creating a strike among workmen employed upon a building for the erection of which Essig had the contract, he paid to Weinseimer $700 and secured exemption from further annoyance. Every one will admit that the law is a salutary one against an offense which robs the workingman of his right to earn a living by honest labor, and which is responsible for many of the strikes that bear so heavily upon the families of laboring men and so seriously affect the business of the country. It is a species of blackmail which cannot be too severely punished.

There is, however, another kind of extortion going on right under the eyes of the courts which needs equal punishment, but for which the perpetrators are not only exempt, but encouraged with the approval of men in the highest official position. The corporations and trusts are held up and by similar blackmail required to contribute money for political corruption, and the same practice is extended to mail carriers, clerks and many thousand employes of the administration, while nothing is done to put a stop to it. Parks and Weinseimer may go to the penitentiary for extortion. The political extortioner is rewarded with high office.

High School Football Players Give St. Paul a Great Fight.

Up Against Mass of Avoirdupois They Could Not Overcome.

Playing a hard, consistent game against a mass of avoirdupois they could not withstand, the Duluth football team went down to defeat at the hands of the St. Paul Central, Saturday afternoon, but made a most creditable showing, losing in the second half by a score of 13 to 5.

Both teams played a hard, fast game, contesting every yard, and staying with the play until every possible inch had been gained. The men on both sides were in the best of condition and played ball from the start to the finish, never letting up an instant.

A raw, north wind was blowing across the field, and low clouds were continually hovering over head. Occasionally a sprinkling of rain fell, adding to the discomfort of the 1500 spectators who were compelled to wade through the water and mud on the side lines in order to watch the game. The gridiron was in poor condition, in spite of the fact that the lowest places had been filled with sawdust and a strong wind had been blowing all morning.

In the first half the Duluth men played all around their opponents, in all departments of the game, but in the second half the visitors braced up, and, by sheer force of weight, pushed the locals before them down the field. They used their heavy tackles with telling effect, hurling them against the lighter Duluth line time and again for decisive gains whenever they were within striking distance of the goal.

The locals all played a hard, steady game, characterized throughout by clear headwork and good interference. Had it not been for the lack of weight the men from the capitol city would never have had a look in, except perhaps on a chance fluke, for they were outplayed. The locals had a better formation, their back field played a headier game, nor did they fumble near so frequently. It was a very noticeable feature that the locals generally managed to get the ball at every fumble, whether it was of their own making or not.

Fitzsimmons, the St. Paul left half; Clayton, the Saintly quarter, and Clark, the visitor's captain and left tackle, made the majority of their team's gains and were the leading actors of the struggle.

On the first kick-off, Fitzsimmons received the oval on his own 5-yard line and made the longest and most sensational run of the day, carrying the ball for ninety yards, past the entire Duluth eleven to the latter's 15-yard line. He also made several shorted runs of fifteen and twenty yards later in the game, and was always shoving the men with the ball ahead. At another time he got away on Duluth's 45-yard line and carried the ball back for St. Paul's touchdown.

Clayton, their quarter back, was a very fast man, making several good gains on quarter back runs and on the kick-offs. He was in every play and ran the team well.

Clark, the big 185-pound tackle, was responsible for most of the gains on line smashes. When once he started, it seemed almost impossible to stop him inside of from five to ten yards. On the defense, however, he was not so strong, Duluth making a large number of yards through him.

The local backs had the better of their opponents at all stages. Both Dunn and Sarvela put up a strong aggressive game, and were good for gains the larger part of the time. Sarvela made the only touchdown that Duluth was able to score. He secured the ball on a fumble and carried it over for a touchdown from the 25-yard line.

Michaud at right end played a star game. He was exceptionally watchful, and on three consecutive fumbles went through the St. Paul line and fell on the ball.

Frank Crassweller at quarter showed good judgment in running the team and made several very pretty tackles that would otherwise have resulted in touchdowns for the visitors.

McDevitt was in evidence in every play. From his station at the center of the back field, he went through short right and left end for steady gains, while on the defensive he worked like a Trojan, as was seen from the barren results that the visitors obtained through center rushes.

In the first half Dinham broke through right guard twice and blocked the play before they were able to get fairly started. Furni and Montgomery at the tackle positions also played well, but here again weight was against them, 140 pounds against 180, making rather heavy odds.

Two of the local and one of the St. Paul players were retired because of bruises, Michaud being the first one out. He had a bad knee before going into the game and during the second half he became so badly battered that Coach Church thought it best for him to leave, but he could not see it this way, however, and had to be literally carried off the gridiron. Dunn, the Duluth left half, and Horwitz, the St. Paul right half, both received wrenched ankles and had to take a side line position.

Capt. Clark won the toss and decided to receive the kick off at the east goal. At 3:07 McDevitt booted the oval to Fitzsimmons on the 5-yard line, dodging through the locals he ran to Duluth's 15-yard before being downed by McDevitt. Clark then hit the line for five yards, but being unable to repeat the performance the locals received the ball on downs. Montgomery and McDevitt cut off five yards. St. Paul was penalized five for off side and McDevitt made five more. Again the Saints became unruly and were penalized in the next play, only to see the pigskin lost on downs at the 40-yard mark.

On their first two tries Dinham broke through and blocked their plays for a loss to them of five yards and having ten paces to gain on the next down Fitzsimmons punted. The ball went out of bounds and was put back on the 30-yard line.

The back field then advanced the oval twenty yards. Here the visitors presented a solid front and McDevitt punted to their twenty-five yard line. Fitzsimmons broke away for fifteen yards and F. Crassweller downed him on the forty yard mark, where Duluth regained the ball on a fumble. McDevitt and Dunn worked up to the twenty-five yard line, Crassweller was tackled for a loss of two yards on attempting a quarter back run, and signalled for a punt. McDevitt fumbled on the forty-five yard but the visitors immediately repeated the trick and Michand fell on the ball at the forty yard station. Another penalty gave the Zenith City five yards, Montgomery and the backs advanced to the fifteen yard line. Here St. Paul held for downs. Clayton sprinted down for ten yards, McGregor chopped off fifteen more around right end, Olund advanced to the fifty yard mark, and Clark added another five. Clayton fumbled and Michand secured the oval.

Unable to gain the locals punted to the twenty yard checker, Clayton carried to the thirty yard line, Fitzsimmons added another five, and Clark then plunged ahead for two gains of four and seven yards respectively. Duluth held for downs and were playing the pigskin on the Saints forty-five yard mark when time was called at 3:40.

Clark reopened hostilities at 4:05 by kicking to the five yard line. Dunn advanced fifteen yards, and Duluth advanced to the forty-five yard line. St. Paul held for downs and from there ploughed their way straight through the local goal by playing their tackles, McCrae going over for a touchdown after six minutes play. Clark kicked an easy goal. Score, St. Paul 6, Duluth 0.

Clark kicked to the ten yard line and Dunn advanced the oval twelve yards. Finding that they could not make their distance Duluth kicked to the forty-five yard mark. With the ball on the visitor's fifty yard line they received a penalty of five yards for slugging, and then punted to Duluth's forty yard mark. McDevitt advanced fifteen yards and then kicked to St. Paul's twenty yard line. The Saints advanced five. Clayton again fumbled and this time Saruela secured the pigskin and carried it over for a touch down. McDevitt failed to kick a difficult goal. Score St. Paul 6; Duluth 5.

Clark kicked to the fifteen yard line. Furin advanced to the twenty-six yard line. McDevitt made three yards Sarvela added two, Durin made three, Sarvela five more, McDevitt another three, Furin six. St. Paul received the oval on the fifty-three yard line, and advanced to the forty-five yard mark. Fitzsimmons then broke away and ran down the field for a touchdown. Clark missed goal. Score: St. Paul 11, Duluth 5.

The visitors kicked to the 40-yard line. St. Clair caught the pigskin and ran fifteen yards, McDevitt punted to the 25-yards line, and Clayton advanced again to the 50-yard mark. Clayton made another run of twenty yards, and when, on the 25-yard mark, the visitors attempted a drop kick, Duluth fumbled and St. Paul received the ball on the 10-yard line. Fitzsimmons made five yards and Clark made four more in two attempts. Duluth held for downs on the 2-yard line and were pushed back on the next play to within a couple of inches of the goal. McDevitt fell back for a punt, but fumbled and scored a safety, making the score—St. Paul, 13; Duluth, 5.

McDevitt kicked from the 25-yard line, and time was called with the ball on Duluth's 35-yard line.

SUPERIOR TEAM WINS.

Defeats St. Paul Eleven In a One Sided Game.

The Superior City football team had little difficulty in downing the Great Northern Athletic association eleven of St. Paul in the game played yesterday afternoon at the Superior driving park.

The St. Paul team was composed of the clerks in the general offices of the Great Northern road in St. Paul, and while they were outclassed by the Superior team, they made a game effort to score. The game ended with a score of 16 to 0.

The visitors won the kick off. Bell received the ball and made twenty yards before he was down. Successive gains through tackle and guard, and a brilliant end run of thirty-five yards by Buchanan resulted in a touchdown. The goal was not kicked.

Buchanan worked in another thirty-five yard run in the first half and steady gains by the Superior backs resulted in another touchdown before half time was called.

Long runs by Chapman, Deering and Bell resulted in a third touchdown for Superior within a few minutes after play had commenced in the second half. Deering kicked the goal, and the score stood 16 to 0.

The visitors made about twenty yards after the kick-off before they were forced to punt.

Superior worked the ball steadily down the field, making gains through all parts of the line. Time was called with the ball on St. Paul's four-yard line.

The line-up was as follows:

St. Paul line-up:		Holmes, center; Roosevelt, right guard; Yeager, right tackle; Swartz, right end; Clark, left guard; Brisenham, left tackle; Noyes, left end; Elliott, quarter back; Blanchard, right half; Shiller, left half; Volkman, full back.

MYSTERIOUSLY KILLED.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Oct. 24.—Called from the room in which she was making merry with a boon companion, Mary Chester became the victim of a mysterious murder early yesterday morning. Her friends within heard a single shot and in an instant later the woman staggered with a ghastly wound in her throat. She died almost instantly.

The men in the house rushed out to grapple with the stranger, who had done the deed, but he stood them off with a revolver and made his escape in the darkness. No arrests have been made yet.

A GREAT TEAM

All Records Smashed By Gophers In Game With Grinnell.

Best Scoring Machine That Dr. Williams Has Yet Devised.

Minneapolis, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Gophers smashed all records in the game with Grinnell. The score of 146 to 0 has not been equalled on any gridiron east or west against a team as strong and swift as the Iowa boys are. But the Minnesota team is a veritable whirlwind. Dr. Williams has the best scoring machine he has yet devised. Nothing short of a stone wall can top his mass plays. If compartive scores mean anything the Gophers are easily at the top in western football. The game Saturday was an eye opener, but they fought every inch and so far as physical condition was concerned were all that could be desired. They made no complaints and were in the game at all times, but they were not in their own class. Only once did they make any gains and then on a fake play they made five yards. But whenever they got the ball and tried to buck the line they were held and forced back a yard or two in most every instance. The Minnesota boys simply gave the spectators a chance to see what could be done and the rooters were abundantly satisfied. No one is complaining. Unless over-confidence results, the boys should win from Nebraska by a comfortable score next Saturday. Such is the opinion of every member of the Grinnell team who would express himself.

In the game Saturday, subs were largely used and they proved themselves a goodly bunch to pick from in case any of the first team are hurt. Larkin took Hunter's place at quarter and proved himself a serious opponent for first team honors. Thorpe and Burdick were both in the game and played with the vim that reminded the rooters of last year's game with Michigan. Brush is developing into a marvel. When he charges down the field at a ten second clip one man cannot stop him. In addition to his great speed he weighs about 225 pounds and has not an ounce of superfluous flesh on him. The way he tore up the Grinnell line was spectacular. He never failed to gain when given the ball. Vita at left tackle was another player who made good. Tall and lanky, yet possessing great strength, he played a star game and next year should be a star.

Grinnell had everything in her favor at the opening of the game. She won the toss, and Minnesota lost the ball twice on fumbles within five minutes after the game started. Then the Gophers warmed up and the fun commenced. The Grinnell boys were simply swamped. The fierce rushes of Captain Strathern's men literally took them off their feet. They deserve great credit for not losing their heads. They met the Gopher rush as best they could, but it was useless. They knew it but would not give up or get discouraged. Their playing was just as fierce in the last five minutes as it was in the first five minutes.

Luce and Marshall have the making of two splendid ends, and Burdick will have to play hard to displace either of them. "Sig" Harris is to be out in pretice this week, but it is very doubtful if he displaces Hunter. Critics say he is no better. But with Harris in trim the Minnesota team need not fear the quarter-back position, as Hunter, O'Brien, Harris and Larkn are a quartet hard to beat. Captain Strathern is the best center in the West. Mills, of Nebraska, weighs 265 pounds, and is a giant in stature, but Booth will not let Him play against Strathern. Last year he opened great holes in Michign's line, and made the Wisconsin center look like a tin soldier. This is his last year in the game and he is bigger, stronger and better natured than ever.

Dope fiends are figuring out second place. Football enthusiasts are looking pretty unanimously upon Minnesota as being entitled to first place and are inclined to put Wisconsin second. Michigan could not have had an easier schedule than she has had. The teams she has met have been weaker as a rule than high school teams. The Ohio state team is the only team she has met that makes any pretense to a football team of merit and Yost's machine went all to pieces, allowing Ohio to score. Maroon and Gold adherents are figuring out that the Badgers should win from the Wolverines next Saturday.

Excitement here is running high over the Nebraska game next Saturday. Special trains are coming from all the nearby points. The Cornhuskers are coming here to win. Borth makes no secret of it. He has the strongest team he has ever had and everyone knows it. He has worked and worked to get Nebraska into the "conference" colleges and if he beats Minnesota it will go a long way towards achieving this result.

In the game Saturday the line-up was as follows:

Minnesota.	Position.	Grinnell.
Marshall-Luce	left end	Clark
Strathern	center	Miuskens
Thorpe-Ricker	right guard	Horton
Brush-Ittner	right tackle	McDonald
Burdick	right end	Clow
Larkin	quarter back	Noble
Davies-Gleason	left half	Jacques
Burgan-Nessle	right half	Spencer
Current-Kremer	full back	Bleanster

WISCONSIN-DRAKE.

Badgers Make Fourteen Touchdowns In Hour's Play.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 24.—Wisconsin against Drake at Camp Randall resulted in a sweeping victory for the Badgers, with a score of 85 to 0. It was expected the Iowa boys would be comparatively easy for the Badgers, but the most optimistic Wisconsin rooters did not predict such a monstrous score. The points came in fourteen touchdowns, eleven goals and two safeties. From start to finish Wisconsin played Drake to a standstill. Twice only in two thirty-minute halves did Drake make required yards. It was not so much the weakness of Drakke as the strength of Wisconsin that made the big score.

Drake is easily the fastest team that has come to Camp Randall this year. Wisconsin's offense was simply irresistible and the defense was superb. The playing of Vanderboom, Wrabetz, Jones and Schneider behind the line was of the highest order. Several times during the game Remp and Stromquist broke through Drake's line and forced their opponents back for losses. Stromquist also did good work in breaking up punts. The sensational features were the 90-yard run of Jones and the 60-yard run of Schneider. On the kick off, after a touchdown, Schneider received the ball, but fumbled. Jones picked it up and started down the field. He ran through the whole bunch of Drake players, shaking men off right and left, twisting and swirling until he had a clear field before him.

At the 50-yard line Main, Drake's right halfback, started in pursuit, gained on Jones steadily and at the 10-yard line brought Jones to the ground by a brilliant tackle. Shortly after Jones' spectacular play Schneider made a 60-yard run for a touchdown through the whole field of Drake players. The game gives a good line on Wisconsin for next Saturday's game with Michigan. The feeling here is that Wisconsin stands more than an even chance when they meet Yost's aggregation next week. Assistant Coach Cole, of Michigan, was present. The line-up:

Drake.	Position.	Wisconsin.
Sparnberg	center	Remp
Hofman	right guard	Stromquist
Self	right tackle	Brindley
Gilbert	right end	Bush
Taylor	quarter	Jones
Main	right half	Wrabetz
Woodrow	full back	Clark

Touchdowns, Clark 1, Wrabetz 3, Vanderboom 5, Grogan 2, Schneider 2; goals from touchdown, Wisconsin 13, Drake 0; safety touchdowns, Drake; umpire, Dr. Stehle; referee, Lieut. Hackett; linemen, John Gregg; time of halves, 30 minutes.

GRAND RAPIDS WON.

Cass Lake, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Cass Lake and Grand Rapids football teams played a game here on Sunday that was fierce contest from beginning to end nd although the local players were beaten by a score of 25 to 0, they were in no wise outclassed, and many believe that with consistent practice they can give the Grand Rapids team a much harder game, with chances good of winning a future contest. It was the first game ever played in this place and it was the initial performance for the local eleven.

The Grand Rapids team made their first touchdown in exactly six minutes after the ball was placed in play. They worked end plays and formations that were difficult for the home players to fathom, owing to their inexperience. During the last half of the game, Cass Lake braced wonderfully, and having got the "hang" of the game somewhat, held their opponents in a commendable manner.

SOLD LOTTERY TICKETS.

Six Men and One Woman Arrested In New York.

New York, Oct. 24.—In a series of raids, representatives of District Attorney Jerome's office yesterday seized $100,000 worth of lottery tickets and arraigned six men and one woman, all residents of the lower East Side.

The prisoners are charged with selling lottery tickets at wholesale to ticket peddlers. Most of them ostensibly sold "steamship tickets," though one advertised his place of business as a real estate office and another was the proprietor of a dry goods store.

All the places, it is alleged, sold four kinds of tickets of different foreign lotteries. Two tickets were for German lotteries, which are legalized by the German government. These are said to be brought into this country by stewards of steamships, and smuggled by agents, who in turn delivered them to the smaller agents.

The attention of the district attorney's office was called to the traffic in lottery tickets here by the receipt of a number of complaints regarding the methods used by some of the wholesale dealers. The only way for the winners of the prize tickets to get their money was through the persons who sold them. These men, according to Assistant District Attorney Kressel, have in many cases taken the winning ticket, sent it to the company and received and kept the winnings, with the result that the real holder has referred the matter to the district attorney. As there is no law to reach such a case there has been no arrests and the business has continued.

The prisoners will be prosecuted under the section of penal code which makes the selling of lottery tickets a misdemeanor.

ADDRESS BY DEBS

At Meeting Called to Ratify His Nomination.

New York, Oct. 24.—Eugene V. Debs, the presidential candidate of the Socialistic party, addressed a meeting which was held here yesterday in the Academy of Music to ratify his nomination. The hall was crowded and Mr. Debs was given an enthusiastic reception. He said the economic freedom of the laboring class hinges upon the showing which the Socialists may make in the coming election and declared that the enmity between the leisure class and the laboring class is increasing.

The so-called middle class will cease to exist as soon as the laboring class finds out that it has had enough of capitalism," he continued. "You need a few more millionaires and tramps, the one enslaved by superabundance of food with lack of digestion; the other cursed with abundance of digestion, but lack of food. The capitalist is bound to attack the so-called middle class, and when he gets through with you gentlemen of the middle classes you will be ready for us. You will then find that the time has come to shake off the two platforms of the same party which are in the field for election. The nominee of the one of these platforms was the choice of J. P. Morgan, the nominee of the other the choice of John D. Rockefeller. You have no candidate, you middle class. You will be expropriated by these capitalists; then you will come to us. We will in turn expropriate the expropriators."

CHURCH GOERS

Engage In Fatal Quarrel After Hearing Sermon.

Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 24.—Within half an hour after the benediction had been pronounced at the close of the services in the little church near Mill Creek, on the Big Sandy river yesterday, one man who had listened to the sermon was dead and another fatally stabbed. The tragedy was the result of a political argument in which a half dozen members of the congregation engaged in after leaving the church. The dead:

WILLIAM KENNEDY, aged 29, leaves a wife and family.

The dying:

Henry Wellman, stabbed during the fight.

Ralph Wellman is alleged to have shot Kennedy, who died within a few minutes.

KIDNAPED BOY KILLED.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—With the forehead crushed and the throat cut, the body of 4-year-old Michael Mayerski, who was kidnaped near his home in Phoenixville, twenty-eight miles from this city, Friday evening by a band of men supposed to be gypsies, was found in an abandoned farm house a few miles from Valley Forge. In connection with the murder six men belonging to a party of gypsies were arrested by Chief of Police Carter, of Phoenixville, and several constables, and after an exciting time, were lodged in the jail at that place.

THREE TRAINMEN KILLED IN A HEAD-ON COLLISION.

Vicksburg, Miss., Oct. 24.—Three men killed and two severely hurt in a head-on collision between a passenger and a freight train on the Natchez-Jackson branch of the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railroad at an early hour yesterday. The dead:

WILLIAM SCHLESER, Natchez, engineer pasenger train.

EMIL MACKEY, Natchez, fireman passenger train.

JOHN ALLEN, negro brakeman.

Seriously injured: R. J. Yearwood, conductor of passenger train; Y. W. Hatchett, engineer freight train.

The two trains were a local southbound freight and the regular northbound passenger, which came together twenty miles north of Natchez.

The passenger train is said to have had orders to meet the freight at Stampley, but passed the station.

OUTLOOK IN CHINA BAD.

London, Oct. 24.—Bennett Burleigh, after a careful inquiry into the situation, cables the Daily Telegraph from Shanghai, that the political outlook in China is worse now than prior to the Boxer outbreak in 1900. Widespread operations of secret societies, he says, show a dangerous recrudescence of anti-foreign feeling. Drilling of large bodies of well equipped troops is proceeding night and day in many districts of southern and middle northern provinces and the Chinese authorities are buying wholesale all kinds of military equipments and stores.

WOMEN TO RESCUE

Join Bucket Brigade to Fight Park Point Fire.

Home of C. G. Gillman Is Burned to the Ground.

Not to be outdone by the Lakeside women who turned themselves into a salvage corps to save the furniture from a neighbor's house recently, six Park Point women joined the bucket brigade this morning and helped their husbands fight the flames that were consuming a neighbor's house.

"You tell Chief Black," said an enthusiastic Park Pointer to a Herald representative this morning, "that we have the finest bucket brigade in the country.

"Our brigade this morning had six women and ten men in line from the bay to Mr. Gillman's house, and we kept the buckets moving. We are a little community shut off by ourselves down here, and we have to organize for mutual fire protection. Our brigade isn't a very showy one, but the members are not afraid of work when a neighbor's property is at stake. We were not in time to extinguish the fire this morning, but we kept it under control and prevented it from spreading."

The house in question was owned by C. G. Gillman. Mr. Gillman was in the house this morning, preparing it for the occupancy of his family during the coming winter. He built a fire in the kitchen range, and having occasion to leave the house for a few minutes, returned to find the building in a blaze.

The flames were seen by the neighbors and all the men and women within reach hurried to the scene with pails and buckets. With one end of the line on the bay shore and the other at the burning house, the ten men and six women kept the buckets going back and forth at a rapid pace. The flames had too big a start, however, and nothing short of a steady stream from a fire engine could have saved the property. The water from the buckets kept the flames from spreading, however, and the house burned to the ground without endangering any other property.

The house was a four-roomed dwelling situated near the pavilion. It was valued at about $800.

FORCIBLE AND CONVINCING

Was Congressman John Lind's Speech at Redwood Falls.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Oct. 24.—The Lind meeting here was the largest and most enthusiastic ever held in the history of Redwood county.

The meeting was held in the court house and the room was packed to the stairways. Chairs were placed in the aisles and around the judge's bench, and at least 700 people were in the audience. Mayor Philbrick presided and introduced Congressman Lind, and such well known Republicans as Capt. W. P. Dunnington, Till Tibbetts and others, who are strong supporters of Johnson and Winston, sat on the platform with the speaker. The hall was handsomely decorated and delegations from the surrounding towns were present, some farmers driving twenty miles to hear their old friend speak to them on state issues, in which they are vitally interested.

Mr. Lind was at his best and delivered a most forcible and convincing address. He took up R. C. Dunn's record as shown by his pamphlet and established the falsity of the claims advanced for the former state auditor. Little Falls & Dakota railway grant, instead of saving the state $400,000, as he claims, Mr. Dunn really lost to the state 35,000 acres of land by his settlement. He reiterated his charges of recklessness on the part of Dunn in the Duluth & Iron Range land grant and declared that the damage done the state's interests would run into the millions. The record of Ray W. Jones, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, was exploited by the former governor, and Mr. Lind challenged his old Republican friends to vote for a convicted timber thief. He closed with an eloquent tribute to John A. Johnson, his private character and his public services, and an appeal to the voters, irrespective of party, to vote for F. G. Winston and the others on the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Lind was given an ovation on his conclusion, and he was congratulated by many Republicans, who said that for the first time in their lives they would vote a Democratic state ticket. Mr. Lind's speech was of great value in this section of the state. Redwood county is one of the counties in his old Second district and he is acquainted with almost every voter in the county.

The North Redwood and Redwood Falls bands furnished music, giving a concert before the meeting. A delegation of fifty citizens came from North Redwood to attend the meeting.

INHERITED SCROFULA

When a child I had a very severe attack of Diphtheria, which came near proving fatal. Upon recovery the glands of the neck were very much enlarged, and after the free use of iodine, the right one was reduced to its normal size, but the left one continued to grow—very slowly at first, until it was about the size of a goose egg, which began to press on the windpipe, causing difficult breathing, and became very painful. An incision was made and a large quantity of pus discharged. The gland was removed, or as much as could with safety be taken out. For ten years I wore a little piece of cloth about an inch long in my neck to keep the place open. During this time I had to have it cut open by the doctor every time I took cold or the opening clogged. In the Spring or early Summer of 1883 I was persuaded by my wife to use S. S. S., which I did, strictly in accordance with directions. I took twenty-six large bottles, and was entirely cured, for I have not suffered since that time. B. S. RAGLAND.

WOMAN DIES OF TREMENS

Prisoner In the City Jail Expires of Alcoholism.

Lying dead in her cell as the result of an attack of delerium tremens, Mary Cameron, aged 38 years, was found yesterday afternoon by Jailor Smollett when he opened the door of the womn's department to take in supper to the occupants.

The woman was arrested Sunday morning by Detective Schultz, who found her frantically waving her hands and shouting, in the rear of a barn on St. Croix alley.

Several times during the afternoon the jailor opened the door of her cell to see if there was anything wanted, the last visit being made about twenty minutes before he was found dead.

Deputy Coroner Linneman was summoned and held a post-mortem examination, declaring death to be due to alcoholic poisoning. The woman was unmarried, and had been employed as cook in various lumber camps about Duluth. She has been arrested on several occasions for drunkenness and has served time in the county jail for that offene.

FRANK HICKS GETS JUDGMENT

Is Awarded $10,483 on Old Claim—Other Court Matters.

A judgment of $10,483.78 has been awarded by Judge Dibell to Frank Hicks, against the Huntress-Brown Lumber company. The suit was one brought here from Lake county, and one in which Mr. Hicks sought to collect on a judgment of $6,572.78 secured in 1894 by Anna M. Costello, executrix, and John T. Lucas, executor of the will of J. J. Costello, deceased. The court also granted the request of Mr. Hicks to redeem any lands owned by the lumber company which may be disposed of under the foreclosure sale, now pending in Lake county district court.

Judge Cant has taken under advisement the argument case of W. J. Schober against the National Home Investment company. The action is one in which Schober seeks to recover $247.50 alleged to have been paid in before the company was taken over by the United States Installment & Realty company.

Judge Dibell has ordered a foreclosure of the mortgage held by Katherine Walkowiak against the property of Balcer Kaminski. The mortgage is claimed to be security on $500 loan given in November 1900.

A continuance of two weeks h g been ordered in the case of S. M. Hays against Parian Semple, et al. Mr. Hays asks for payment of judgment for $42,408.31 awarded against Mr. Semple and others in 1900.

The condemnation proceedings of the Minnesota Canal & Power company against William Yawkey and others was continued until tomorrow.

The case of G. J. Norris against the Duluth Building and Loan association has been ordered continued.

SWEEPSTAKES TO MINNESOTA

State Wins the Grand Butter Prize For Fourth Time.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the fourth and last World's fair butter contest, Minnesota takes the sweepstakes on unsalted and print butter. This is the fourth time that Minnesota has won out in these classes. S. GEORGE STEVENS.

SHOOTS WOMAN BECAUSE SHE WOULD NOT WED HIM.

Minneapolis, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Brown, aged 40 years old, is dead at the county morgue, and Mrs. Pauline Weissle, aged 38 years, is in the city hospital probably fatally wounded. She was shot by Brown as she was entering her home last night because she refused to marry him. Brown then shot himself, dying almost instantly.

BIG GAME SEASON

Time For Shooting Deer and Moose Drawing Near.

Game Preserve Being Established In the Red Lake Country.

Less than three weeks now remain before the date set for the opening of the big game season in Minnesota. From Nov. 10 to Nov. 30 it will be allowable to shoot deer, male moose and male caribou in this state, and hunters will be flocking here from all parts of the country, eastern points in particular. Northern Minnesot guides are making their preparations for the reception and entertainment of the city sportsmen, and getting the haunts of the big game located.

Reports have it that hunting will be good this year. It will be much the same as usual, it is claimed, neither better nor poorer, except in some sections of the Big and Little Fork country, where the great influx of settlers during the past two years has been the cause of driving the moose deeper into the unsettled regions. It is believed that within the course of a few years the only good moose hunting in Minnesota, or anywhere in the central west, in fact, will be up in the Red Lake country, where vast muskegs extend over miles and miles of teritory, which, from present indications, will be valueless to mankind for several generations. These great muskegs, or swamps, are dotted with islands of timber, and make ideal retreats for the larger varieties of wild animals. They are also very difficult of access, and there is little danger of their becoming depopulated of moose, deer and caribou for a good while yet. Under existing conditions this region is hunted scarcely at all either in season or out, except by the Indians, and they kill enough only for their own use. Caribou are also numerous in that section of the state.

Henry Buenther, a Bemidji taxidermist of considerable note, is now in the Red Lake district, establishing a large game preserve. He has a fine spot for the purpose—a large timber island surrounded by the muskeg, in the heart of a good game country. The idea of the project is something new for this part of the country. Camps for hunters will be established in different parts of the preserve, and city hunters will be taken at so much a head and placed in them, with guides and complete outfits for camping and hunting. Of course patrons will be people who will be willing to pay well for their pleasure, but judging from reports from the country in question they will get their full money's worth.

The law allows each hunter three deer, one male moose and one male caribou in season of twenty days. In Wisconsin where the open season for big game also extends from Nov. 10 to 30, only two deer to a man are allowed by law.

HAMMERBERG IS ACCUSED

By Coroner's Jury of the Murder of August Bloom.

Two Harbors, Minn., Oct. 24.—The coroner's inquest on the remains of August Bloom, found murdered near an old logging camp, at Mile Post 44, on the Duluth & Iron Range road, resulted in a verdict that Bloom came to his death by reason of wounds inflicted by Alfred O. Hammerberg.

Stephen Skyland, clerk at William O'Brien's camp, near Cloquet river, identified the murdered man as August Bloom who began work at the camp on Oct. 5, in company with Hammerberg. On Oct. 14, the two men quit work and started to walk to Two Harbors. That was the last time Bloom was seen alive. Bloom had some money and a check for $7.50 when he left the camp but both were missing when his body was found.

Sheriff Nelson saw Hammerberg around Two Harbors Saturday before the murder was known and he said he was going to Duluth on the boat. Hammerberg has a sister named Mrs. Joseph Johnson, who lives at No. 2007 West First street, Duluth, who states that her brother was at her home Sunday. He told her that he had purchased a ticket and was going to Minneapolis, and she has not seen or heard of him since.

SUMMER AT ST. LOUIS

Weather Man Hands Out Ideal Weather For the Fair.

Five More Weeks of the Exposition Full of Events.

St. Louis, Oct. 24.—Having dropped another half million into Uncle Sam's strong box, the fair goes right along, rolling up the gate receipts, increasing in daily interest and attendance, as though nothing had happened. Dropping a half million would occasion something of a jar in the machinery of most business enterprises, but in this colossal undertaking it is only an incident, so vast is the organization necessary to conduct it and so big and multitudinous are its daily transactions. In another week it will make the final yapment on the government loan of $4,600,000, wiping out the debt in honor and with punctuality, having made every payment promptly on the day it was due. The fair has five more weeks to run, and if the weather man gives to St. Louis the kind of a November he usually hands out to this section of the country, it will add to the fame already accorded it of being the greatest universal exposition ever held in any country, the distinction of being a financial success.

And the weather man has certainly done the handsome thing by the fair during the first half of October. It is Indian summer here. For ten years I have written annual editorial panegyrics upon Chicago's autumns and autumns, but common candor compels the admission that October weather in St. Louis is the most ideal I have ever experienced, and I am told that November is not much cooler. In fact, winter does not make its appearance here until December is well advanced. The days are warm enough to make wraps and overcoats unnecessary, but not fatiguing or depressing. It is astonishing how much tramping one can do in these grounds on these October days without getting fatigued.

A few days ago I met George R. French, of French & Bassett, the big house furnishing firm of Duluth, Minn., one of the biggest in the Northwest; also Frank Sullivan, one of the leading lawyers of Duluth. They declared they had been walking from early morning until late at night for four days and were not fatigued but felt "as fresh as a daisy." Each also averred that the night spectacle produced by the cascades, grand basin and electric illumination was easily worth the long journey from Duluth, to say nothing of the vast indoor and out-door exhibits.

The evenings are cool enough to make a light overcoat comfortable, if you are dining at the Alps or any outdoor restaurant, but hundreds go without overcoats with no apparent discomfort. There has been no frost as yet, and the gardens are, therefore, in full bloom and at the climax of floral beauty and luxuriance. Every department of the exposition is at the top-notch of perfected completion, the exhibits are at their best, all the attractions are at high tide in interest and attendance, and considering the ideal, bracing weather, I should say that these are the best days for seeing the fair. So far as I can learn, while there may be individual instances of extortion, the stories of increased charges at hotels and restaurants are pure fabrications. They have no foundation in fact. On the contrary, these prices are more apt to take a downward turn as the competition for guests and patrons grows keener. And the five weeks are to be crowded full of events that appeal to the interest of all sorts of World's fair pilgrims.

TRUMAN A. DE WEESE.

A HANDSOME TESTIMONIAL

Large and Enthusiastic Audience at E. W. Prophet's Concert.

Edgar William Prophet must have felt decidedly pleased yesterday by the size of the benefit audience which appeared at the Lyceum theater to show their good will. It was an unusually large and enthusiastic house and the program, although altered in several places, was presented in such a way as to keep the audience in the best state of enjoyment.

The beneficiary was in good voice, which means that he was at his best with an unusually fine quality of tone, and he sang a number of songs in the most pleasing way, including the prologue from "Pagliacci," Pinsutti's "Bedouin Love Song,' and several encores. His last appearance was the signal for such prolonged applause that after many recalls he was compelled to make a short speech acknowledging his thorough appreciation of the kindness of his friends in turning out so plentifully to encourage him.

Mrs. James McAuliffe appeared in two program numbers, a solo from "Mignon," by Ambroise Thomas, to which she had to add "I'm Wearin' Awa, Jean" and "Il Miserere," from "Il Trovatore," the last being partly sung by George L. Tyler and a chorus. Mr. Tyler was suffering from hoarseness, which was apparent in this duet and which prevented him from appearing in a solo that had been announced for him. But, nevertheless, this did not keep the number from being appreciable. Mrs. McAuliffe sang with facile execution and good expression.

C. D. Ostergren's violin solo and the clainet number by Fred E. Kretschmar were transposed, which did not interfere, however, with their excellent rendition, and both gentlemen had to appear a second time and play to satisfy their admirers.

Miss Harriet Nobles' soprano voice was heard to good effect in "Daffodils-a-Blowing," by German, and shared in the encores. Miss Adele McClaran gave a selected reading about a tin toy colonel on a horse who was jealous of the affections of a doll for another toy of lower rank but higher price, and had to appear a second time. W. S. McCormick gave a reading also, telling how the sheriff of Yuba county killed his own brother in mistake for a bandit, and did it in his most dramatic style.

The entire program was one well diversified and every one assisting therein was received in a flattering manner.

We Offer $1,000

For a Disease Germ That Liquozone Can't Kill.

On every bottle of Liquozone we offer $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. We do this to assure you that Liquozone does kill germs.

And it is the only way to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact which gives Liquozone its worth to humanity; a worth so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights. And we have spent over one million dollars, in one year, to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one who would try it.

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is an absolutely certain germicide. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

Liquozone goes into the stomach, into the bowels and into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable, for a germ disease must end when the germs are killed. Then Liquozone, acting as a wonderful tonic, quickly restores a condition of perfect health. Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone, and it cures diseases which medicine never cures. Half the people you meet—wherever you are—can tell you of cures that were made by it.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

LUMBER IS HIGHER

Manufactured Pine In North Scarce and Prices Elevated.

Effect to Be Felt In Retail Trade Next Year.

Not much is being said about sales, by the local lumber interests, at the present time, but the manufacturers express the greatest confidence in the continued firmness of the market and point with significance to the summary of trade conditions as given at the close of last week by the American Lumberman. This publication says:

"A certin amount of stimulas has been imparted to the trade no doubt by the stories of higher prices that come from the upper lake districts. Pine lumber is today from $1 to $2 higher than during the summer and buyers are beginning to appreciate the scarcity of pine and its consequent elevation in price. Almost every grade of northern stock has advanced from 50 cents to $1.50, and while these advances have not been felt in the retail field as yet they will be fully shown before the spring trade shall open. According to the best advices there is no lumber that will be carried over at northern lake ports, where is previous years hundreds of millions of feet have been available for spring shipment. This circumstance of itself will result in a steady and probably stronger market for all the stock available."

The Edward Hines Lumber company is reported to have purchsed 20,000,000 feet of lumber from George Wilkinson, of Ashland. The sale represents the entire lumber cut made by Mr. Wilkinson for the past season.

It is now expected that the Alexander & Edgar mill at Iron River, Wis., will close down for good, this coming winter, the company having exhausted its supply of timber. The Alexander & Edgar Lumber company has large Western holdings of pine and it is likely that the big mill at Iron River will be dismantled and shipped to the Pacific coast. The mill has been in operation at Iron River for several years and has given employment to 250 men summer and winter.

The Union Match company of this city has recently made a large purchse of match timber from the Lake Superior Lumber company at Ashland. The latter company is to operate two camps in hardwood timber this winter, the logs going to Ashland.

The lumber business is reported fair at Cloquet. The mills there are to continue sawing until the river freezes up. Abundant rains have kept the water at an excellent stage and logs have been plentiful at the mills. The various lumber companies with headquarters at Cloquet have begun active logging operations in the woods.

Negotiations are said to have been going on for some time past between the Edward Hines Lumber company, the Musser-Sauntry Lumber company and the Nelsagamon Lumber company over the ownership and logging of a large tract of timber in the central part of Douglas county. It is said that the Hines company will probably log the timber and will buil da spur track to it from its main line at Hawthorne.

M. Kelley, of this city, John W. Blodgett, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; C. D. Danaher, of Chicago, Ill. and Arthur Hill, of Saginaw, Mich., all prominent lumbermen capitalists, have purchased a half interest in the holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber company of Eugene, Ore. The purchase price is said to be $2,500,000, part of which has already been paid over. Although the Eastern men have purchased so large an interest the Portland Oregonian says that the management of the company is to remain as formerly, in the hands of F. H. Buck, of San Francisco, State Senator R. A. Booth and Kelly Bros., of Oregon.

Commenting on the purchase the Portland Oregonian says:

"They have made the purchase as an investment, and it is stated they do not propose at the present time to enlarge the capacity of the company's four mills—about 200,000,000 feet per year—but an additional 20-mile spur track will be built on the Southern Pacific road from Lane county mills to the growing timber near streams which are feeders to the MacKenzie river, to facilitate the better handling of logs.

"The Booth-Kelly Lumber company is one of the largest timber concerns in the Northwest, and its four sawmills are now working overtime. The estimated value of the plant is about $5,000,000, and the Kelly-Blodgett-Dannahaher-Hill syndicate owns a controlling interest in the stock. The company's holdings in Lane county consist of about 165,000 acres of timber, estimated to contain about 6,000,000,000 feet. The company also owns other property valued at $1,000,000, noted for its valuable soft pine and grazing land."

HUNTERS ARE NUMEROUS

Early Woodland Car Takes Out Twenty-Three Guns.

The pleasant weather yesterday morning sent a flock of the local hunters into the woods after partridges and the outgoing early morning cars were crowded with men and boys with guns.

The first car for Woodland, leaving Third avenue west shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning carried 23 hunters. One of the residents at the end of the car line remarked at noon that every car arriving during the morning brought out from one to half a dozen other men with guns and that Saturday evening a number of parties arriving by car struck out into the woods to camp and start out for early morning shooting.

A conservative estimate places the number of guns of all sizes and styles, in the country north of Woodland, extending over as far as Colbyville, at from 60 to 75 and the shooting throughout the day resembled a bombardment.

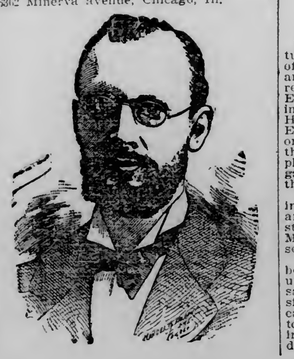

With all the shooting that went on during the day, members of the car crews on the Woodland line claim not to have seen a single partridge brought in. The farmers residing within the shooting district are said to have locked up their chickens, stabled their stock and fastened the blinds over the windows during the dangerous interval. They claim that if there ever were any partridges in the country round about Woodland the noise has now driven them miles away.

The Duluth hunter claims to have run across three deer in the woods near Woodland. Several men reported seeing numerous deer tracks in that locality.

It is said that the exodus of hunters out toward Lester Park and toward the woods beyond the Western end of the city was fully as great, but there have been no reports of many partridges killed.

Many Rejoice at Return of Health!

Scores of such men and women from our vicinity and many for a hundred miles distant. All have words of praise for Dr. Chas. A. Hoag, the eminent Chicago specialist. COMMANDANT OF MARINES

Tells of Wants of Corps In Panama and Philippines.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Temporary structures for the health and accommodation of the marines on the isthmus of Panama are necessary, if the battalion is to be retained there, says Brig. Gen. George F. Elliott, commandant of the marine corps, in his annual report, made public today. He submits no estimates for this work. Estimates for the Philippines are also omitted, but the announcement is made that he later will submit "full and complete recommendations concerning the organization and disposition of marines in the Philippines."

The most important recommendation for improvements in this country is that for an appropriation of $250,000 for the construction of barracks at the navy yard at Mare Island and $50,000 for three additional sets of officers' quarters.

Of the trouble that has been experienced between the marine band and the musical unions of the country, the commandant says that it is only by taking up outside work that the members of the band can make their emoluments correspond to the amount they would be able to earn in civil life, and he earnestly requests the department's attention to this situation.

REV. WHITE RESIGNS

Pastor of Unitarian Church Decides to Leave Duluth.

Will Return to the East —His Church Has Prospered.

The resignation of Rev. Harry White as pastor of the First Unitarian church, Eighth avenue east and First street, was tendered at yesterday morning's services. The minister gives as a reason for resigning the fact that he desires to again go East, where he was at the time he received a call to Duluth.

It is the intention of Rev. White to leve on Nov. 9 for Canton, Mass., where he will preach on Sunday, Nov. 13. From Canton he will go to Cambridge, Mass., where he intends to remain for several weeks. It is understood that he has no pulpit in view as yet.

The young minister has met with great success in his work in Duluth. The local church is his first charge. He came here direct from the Harvard divinity school, at the completion of his course. Rev. White has created an excellent impression in the Zenith City, and is well liked by the members of his congregation. When he arrived in the city there was a $600 debt on the church building. This debt has been paid since Mr. White assumed charge, and in addition the lot on which the building is erected has been purchased. The membership has also increased, twenty new members having been taken in this fall.

WHY THE DUNN TICKET SHOULD BE DEFEATED

Strong Speech By the Democratic Nominee For Attorney General.

Thomas J. McDermott Given a Warm Reception at Belle Plaine.

Belle Plaine, Minn., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thomas J. McDermott, of St. Paul, Democratic nominee for attorney general, opened his campaign in this part of the state, here on Saturday. This city is located on the Minnesota river, practically on the corner of Scott, Le Sueur, Carver and Sibley counties, and is largely patronized by the sturdy and substantial farmers of these fertile counties.

The day was an ideal one from every standpoint for a political demonstration, and the meeting had been largely advertised and as a result many persons had driven in for miles. Mr McDermott was born and reared near this city, in Le Sueur county, and is well and favorably known throughout this section of the community, and has many warm supporters for the position to which he aspires, in both of the dominent parties. The meeting was held in Weibler's hall and was thoroughly representative. His speech was listened to by a large and appreciative audience and he was frequently interrupted by enthusiastic applause.

Mr. McDermott's arraignment of the so-called Republican convention's action in its treatment of Judges Lovely and Douglas was most severe and caustic; and his argument advanced why the entire ticket should be defeated bristled with logic and clear cut analysis. That his words carried conviction to the minds of many of his hearers is evidenced by the deep interest taken and the manifestations of friendship of the audience irrespective of parties.

THOMAS J. McDERMOTT,
Democratic Nominee For Attorney General.

Mr. McDermott was introduced by F. C. Irwin, of this city, one of the best known attorneys in the Minnesota valley as the next attorney general of the state of Minnesota. At the conclusion of Mr. Irwin's introduction the audience applauded enthusiastically, and the nominee for attorney general began by expressing his appreciation of the warmth of his reception. He spoke in part as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen and Fellow Citizens: I know of no more appropriate place in which to open the present campaign than before the united Democracy of Scott, Sibley and Le Sueur counties, and I understand this audience is composed of many persons from each. Although the vote, where party lines are tightly drawn, is very close you have never been dismayed by local defeats, nor discouraged by adverse circumstances nor overwhelmed by the victories of our adversaries but, with a firm purpose to establish the true principles of government to which we adhere and with a persistency that would stop nowhere short of success, you have for years maintained your party organization intact, and are alway ready for the struggle with our friends, the enemy, with renewed vigor and an earnestness that persages success.

It is with pleasure that I recall almost immediately after attaining my majority the Democracy of Le Seueur county, the county of my birth and boyhood home, honored me with my first nomination for a public office; and during all my political career the Democrats of Le Seueur county have been among my most loyal supporters from the time of my nomination when a mere boy for the office of superintendent of your schools in 1886 through all the varying vicissitudes of politics up to the present moment.

I am also reminded that your beautiful and prosperous city is located in the very center of the Minnesota valley, a region that has produced more men that have been honored with public trust than all other sections combined, and I sincerely believe that history is about to repeat itself by selecting Hon. John A. Johnson, one of your St. Peter neighbors, as chief executive of our state, and bearing in mind all these circumstances it was deemed entirely proper that the formal opening of my campaign for the Democratic ticket should be uttered on soil made interesting by such pleasant memories.

> It is my wish and intention to conduct the campaign on my part free from the unnecessary personalities, vituperation, abuse or calumny; and worthy of the high official positions for which we have been named, and the important distinction between the two tickets and platforms of the principal parties as presented by the issues of 1904.

In a state or country that is governed by political parties and not by hereditary royalty, the existence of at least two great parties is necessary and essential for the welfare of the community. There must of course be different ideas and theories on some public questions, and such difference honestly entertained can furnish no valid reason for abuse, rivalry or better personal reflections.

Every person that has given this matter any special attention must come to the conclusion that the men named by the so-called Republican convention were in reality named by the J. Pierpont Morgan-Hill combine. Vainly do the candidates cry "No." But to paraphrase from holy writ, while it is the voice of Bob, it is the hand of James, or the merger.

If this is not a correct conclusion to arrive at, and the only exact analysis that can be made, I ask the respective nominees of the Republican ticket why the brilliant and energetic chief executive of this state, Governor Van Sant, is not to be heard upon the hustings, or in public press, in advocacy of the selections of the present nominees of the merger or Republican convention. That his services and ability are in demand is evidenced by the fact that he is constantly being importuned to speak for the national Republican ticket in outside states, and to the requests, so far as his time will permit, he accedes; and recently in a brilliant speech, delivered by him in Moline, Ill., he took occasion to say that no nomination should be ratified by putting unworthy men in office, undoubtedly referring to his home state, and thus the so-called Republican convention, by its action, has precluded the possibility of obtaining the support of the Republican governor, and of not one, but thousands, of other independent, fearless Republicans, who prize country above party and are willing to make a sacrifice in order to uphold the honor, the integrity, the dignity and fair name and fame of the state of Minnesota.

If the people of this state permit their public officials to be selected by corporate interests, it is but natural that the beneficiaries and recipients of official horrors and emoluments should be grateful to their benefactors, and above all things, they must never do anything to antagonize their schemes or plans. And a brief survey of the history of our state for the past half century would indicate the placidity with which the lumber and mineral thieves have denuded the state of these vast treasures, and during all this time our public officials have been so passive as to not secure a single conviction, nor do the records disclose, so far as I am aware, that there has ever been an attempt made to indict or punish these lawless barons.

> Can it be possible that the public mind has gotten into such condition that it is considered respectable to steal a mine, a railroad, or millions of feet of pine lumber, and the perpetrators of these colossal abstractions from the common wealth may go unpunished; but the purloining or taking a chicken from a hen roost, or a loaf of bread, perhaps to relieve a starving family of dire necessity, must be met by swift and severe punishment by the arrest and conviction of the wrongdoers?

We certainly cannot ratify the merger convention by the selection of its candidates and still claim to be free people. It would be outrageous, unjust, infamous. I appeal to the good people of this state to rise to the full dignity of God-given American citizenship and bravely meet the danger that confronts us in this matter or crisis, and laying aside party prejudice, disappointments, preference, and imbued with the lofty and bold sentiments of patriotism, unite together as one man to preserve the life of our state, now seriously menaced or imperiled.

Among the persons who will contribute to this happy result in no small degree will be the remnants of those gallant bands who, almost half a century ago, when the life of our nation was at stake, left their pioneer homes to face the horrors of war in order that liberty and life should not perish from the earth.

For more than a decade the tendency of this country in many departments of our public affairs has been retrogression rather than progression and this condition is brought about largely by that insidious foe of public honor—corruption. Instead of an armed assailant that we meet on the field there is today an enemy that is invisible and intangible; but everywhere at work silently and secretly destroying our institutions. That enemy is the boodler, lobbyist or corruptionist. It seeks to control the the press. In many instances it does control it; it seeks to direct all official acts where its interests are involved; it dictates and only too frequently controls the formation and construction of laws. It is constantly attempting to shape and control public sentiment. It has emasculated American politics and placed them on the new plain of juggery. The tendency now is to shirk principle and follow expediency and their platforms are usually drawn to evade or straddle every live issue. The idea is to conjole rather than to convince, ignore great wrongs and wink at abuse and to court the support of all powerful interests even at the sacrifice of honor. Many of our public officials seem to think it necessary to be colorless and negative upon all public questions of importance, and to maintain the countenance of pharisee with the heart, disposition and greed of a wolf, drawing all their inspirations from the altar of concentrated wealth. The result is, office holding has, to a great extent, taken the place of real achievements, and instead of great and noble careers in public life, we are facing a harvest of slippery, dissipated, blear eyed and empty mediocrity, which in many instances glide into oblivion without the assistance of death.

> To be eligible for a nomination as a candidate before the late Republican state convention it seemed to be necessary, judging by the persons selected, to stand for nothing in particular and to represent no definite principles, but be all things to the few and nothing to the many.

Almost half a century ago the cry went forth for men to fight an open enemy in the field and from Minnesota, the Great North Star state, although only in its infancy, the response was quick and certain and we have the extreme honor of being not only the first state in the Union to offer a regiment to preserve the life of the Union, but more than this the greater honor of offering the first soldier that participated in that momentous struggle, and I am glad that the citizens of Minnesota, acting through their legislature and Grand Army associations have seen fit to commemorate this great act of patriotism upon the part of Josias R. King, who was the first to offer his services in behalf of his country by erecting a suitable monument in Summit park, in the city of St. Paul, but today our country again calls upon us louder than ever for sturdy manly men who will be true to our republican institutions and preserve sacredly public trusts when placed in their hands. Men who will stand forth under all circumstances and dare to do right, men who will enforce the spirit and letter of the law without distinction of person when called upon to do so, men who will be brave, patriotic and fearless under any and all circumstances instead of praising the flag and lauding the Stars and Stripes with champagne dinners while the pole from which it floated was being eaten off by corruption and the controlling facter of their forces was stabbing to the vitals the foundation stone of our republican institutions.

> I am sure that most thinking and intelligent people who have calmly considered the action of the Democratic state convention in taking the advance stand that it has for a non-partisan judiciary for the supreme court will approve of its action in so doing.

Our candidates for governor and lieutenant governor are John A. Johnson and F. G. Winston. Both are men of irreproachable character. They have lived in the state practically all their lives. Mr. Johnson is not only thoroughly known to many of you, but to the people throughout the state of Minnesota generally. The same may also be said with truth of Mr. Winston, as a member of the firm of Winston Bros., the great railway contractors, who have constructed many of the railway lines in Minnesota. He has been for a quarter of a century last past one of the heaviest employers in the state, during one year the firm having on its payroll 30,000 men. During all this unbroken record of employment they have never had any labor disturbances, difficulties or strikes and he is known for his liberal, just, upright and honorable treatment of his employes. Comparing their public and private life with that of their respective opponents and eliminating political predilections, I am sure that a candid, fairminded person must agree with me in saying that they are far superior to that of their competitors, and when elected to the high offices for which they have been nominated they will discharge the duties of their respective offices fearlessly and honestly, with due regard to the vast interest you have entrusted to them, and the same might be said about all of their associates on the ticket, including the railroad commissioners, who are among the most important officers to be selected.

I am naturaly reluctant about making any reference to a position where my own personality is involved, but having been nominated for the important positon of attorney general it is only right and proper that I should define my attitude in the event of my election. This position, under the constitution of our state, forms part of the executive departments of the government and next to the chief executive or governor is, perhaps, the most important position of this branch of the state government. You will recall that in the litigation in which the state of Minnesota prosecuted the railway combination, known as the merger, Attorney General Douglas, together with Governor Van Sant, stood in the fore front of the memorable contest. What position would the governor of Minnesota have been in if the attorney general at that time was favorable to the combine? While I do not wish to descend to personalities and under no circumstances shall I do so, because I have always been one of those that believe that where a candidate resorts to abuse they do so for lack of reason and argument; but where a person that has held a public office wishes to be re-elected either to the office he has formerly held or any other public position, their public record should be subject to legitimate criticism.

> The nominee for attorney general on the Republican ticket, Edward T. Young, was for a number of years a state senator, and he is the one man who contributed most to the defeat of the Jacobson 4 per cent gross earnings tax both by voice and vote during the session of the senate in 1898, when this bill was urged for passage.

He was at that time chairman of the judiciary committee of the senate, and submitted and advocated a report which declared that the present law was a territorial contract, and the legislature had no right to change that contract and that the tax could not be collected by law if the amendment was adopted. He voted against the measure, which was defeated by a single vote, the final vote standing 30 for and 31 against the proposition to increase the gross earnings tax from 3 to 4 per cent. This action was taken by Senator Young notwithstanding the fact that surrounding states, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and other sister states with like resources are receiving 4 per cent gross earnings of the railway companies and this certainly is not an unreasonable tax. If this change had been made in the law and the companies obliged to conform to the enactment the additional revenue to the state of Minnesota would be between $800,000 and $800,000 per year, thus decreasing the amount which the ordinary people are now called upon to contribute and make up. The proposition resolves itself to this: That those other persons who believe that they themselves are not paying taxes enough at this time should, of course, vote for and support Mr. Young in his candidacy for attorney general, and reversing the position those persons who feel that they are now paying enough and the public services corporations should be forced to contribute a reasonable amount I am entitled to and expect their support, besides there are many other reasons why the merger nominees should be defeated.

> There is a tidal wave sweeping over Minnesota of revolt against the methods such as practiced in the so-called Republican convention, indicative of the selection of John A. Johnson and F. G. Winston, the independent and fearless exponents of popular sovereignty, for the respective positions for which they have been nominated.

I am sure that no thoughtful person desires to confer upon these gentlemen a responsibility, and at the same time partially cripple them by placing them in power with those persons whose whole public career are inimical to the success of the public will. And in conclusion, I desire to say that if selected for the responsible position for which I have been nominated, I shall assume the duties of the office with the full knowledge that my election has been brought about not only by united Democracy, but by independent, fearless, straightforward manhood of the state of Minnesota, and will enter therein with all its burdens and responsibilities, and I peldge you my honor and sacred word that everything that can be done to restore, maintain and safeguard the interests of the state of my nativity shall be done by me. And that the great majority of the people of this state are with us in heart and soul I feel certain. The only difficulty is to have them understand the real situation. But this is an age of enlightenment, with the great daily press as well as weekly, recording the history of events from day to day, also personal observation, it would seem as though no mistake can be made. One trial of the Democracy's standard bearer, as chief executive of this state has ben in recent years given, and the citizens of Minnesota, irrespective of party affiliations, point with pride to the clean business-like and fearless administration of that peerless leader of Democracy, Hon. John Lind. We now ask for a renewal of your confidence, and we present for your consideration, the speaker excepted, the highest type of American manhood. We ask for an opportunity to not only administer the laws of the state, but to audit the accounts as they now stand, and I think you will agree with me, judging from reports from our public examiner, that these accounts need a thorough inspection. With all the resources bestowed upon us in such a bounteous manner by a merciful Providence, and a fair, honest administration of our state affairs in legislative, judicial and executive branches, there is no valid reason why we should not be the most contented and happy people on earth.

Wheat Market Opens Wild and Closes at Good Advance.

Minneapolis Leads In Strength — News Is Generally Bullish.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 24.—The Russian-English news, causing fears of fresh complications in the war situation, took the Minneapolis wheat pit off its feet this morning and the opening there was wild, ranging from $1.19½ to $1.21, against a close of $1.18⅜ Saturday. The advance there affected other markets also, particularly Duluth, which was up 2c, but the same excitement was wanting in the other exchanges. Other causes of strength were higher cables and a smaller Northwest movement of grain. The increase in the visible supply was not heavy, the world's shipments, while above the 10,000,000 mark, were considerably less than a year ago, and in general there was nothing bearish in the news. The Liverpool market advanced ¾d, Paris was unchanged to ½c lower and Antwerp unchanged.

The December option in Duluth advanced 1c, in Minneapolis 1½c, in Chicago ¾-⅞c and in New York ¼c.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week last year were as follows:

WHEAT.	This Week.	Last Week.	Last Year.
American	856,000	1,664,000	4,440,000
Russian	4,720,000	5,232,000	5,456,000

CORN.
American	656,000	536,000	1,728,000

The amount of wheat on passage decreased 1,046,000 bus, and corn decreased 316,000 bus.

Car receipts at Duluth were 144, against 194 last year, and at Minneapolis 677, against 818 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 821, against 1012 last year. Chicago received 34, against 78 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,362,350 bus., last year 1,367,055 bus. Shipments 720,158 bus., last year 461,668 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 22,000 bus.

The visible supply of wheat last week increased 1,236,000 bus., and is now 24,625,000 bus. Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½c higher. In the Chicago market December corn closed 3⅜@4c higher. December oats closed unchanged. Primary receipts of corn were 332,100 bus., last year 636,000 bus. Shipments 256,320 bus., last year 676,665 bus. Clearances were 3000 bus. The visible supply of corn last week decreased 759,000 bus., and is now 3,440,000 bus.

Trading in wheat was rather dull in spite of the bulge in the price. The December option opened 2c higher at $1.19½, fell to $1.18 at 10:10 and then rallied to $1.19 at 12:05. After that it fell away gradually and closed at $1.18⅜, an advance for the day of 1c. The May option advanced ⅝c, closing at $1.17⅛.

Cash wheat continued on the same basis as at the close of last week. No. 1 northern selling at 3c over December and No. 2 at 7c under. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Russian Fleet Incident Has Influence on Trading.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—As a reult of higher cables and a decreased movement in the Northwest, the wheat market today was strong. Fears of fresh complications in the war situation growing out of the Russian Baltic fleet incident had considerable influence on trading. December opened a shade lower to ⅝@⅝c higher at $1.15 to $1.15¼. May was up ⅛c to ⅝c at $1.14 to $1.14½. On an active demand from shorts, December advanced to $1.16, while May sold up to $1.15¾. On a rumor that Russia had apologized to Great Britain, the market was subjected to considerable selling presure, and December reacted to $1.15⅝. May sold off to $1.14⅜. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 858 cars against 1067 cars last week, nd 1090 cars a year ago.

Under the support of a prominent bull operator the market became stronger, the December advancing to $1.16⅜. May sold up to $1.15¼. A strong undertone prevailed throughout the remainder of the day, the close on Dec. being up 2@2¼c. May was up ¾c at $1.14⅞.

Smaller receipts and strength of wheat caused a firm tone in corn. There was a fair demand from shorts with some selling by pit traders. December opened ½@⅝c to 1⅛@1⅛c higher at 48¾c to 48⅝c and held at 48¾@4¼c. Local receipts were 101 cars with four of contract grade.

The market continued strong the whole session, Dec. closing with a gain of 3⅝@4c, at 48¾c.

Strength of wheat and corn had a steadying effect on the oats market. There was a fair demand from commission houses and local bulls, but offerings were light. December opened ½c up at 29c, and later sold at 28¾c. Local receipts were 162 cars.

Small receipts of hogs and higher prices at the yards imparted a firm tone to provisions. Trading, however, was light. January pork was up 5c at $12.60. Lard was up 2½c at $7.30. Ribs were 5c higher at $6.90.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Tribune: "The factors in price making that have brought this May future up from 80c a bushel," said E. W. Wagner, "are still in force and will continue to be so until the country grows a crop that is beyond our own ability to consume, and we are forced to accept the beggarly bids of foreign countries. Our farmers are beginning to see that they have had all the exporting of wheat they care for, and they will no longer produce it for that purpose. Every country engaged in it is poverty-stricken and will remain so. Let anyone who thinks differently compare the countries that are selling it to the countries that are buying it. We should export only in the form of flour. The contemplation of this proposition is too clear to the farmer for us to ever go through the depression caused by a glut of wheat."

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat had a wild opening, Minneapolis December selling at $1.21, again establishing a new high mark. Fluctuations all day were quick and the trend of prices wide, on the whole market was very firm. All cash houses have advices that deliveries are falling off in the country. It is worth noting, we think, that notwithstanding the bulk of the crop has been marketed, contract stocks in six of the principal markets are under 5 million bus. With a further let up in receipts, we could easily get a run away market. Foreign news will be a strong factor also, because of the new war possibilities, which might spread and involve several of the big European powers. We see nothing to alarm holders. This has been the case for weeks and wheat should be bought on little declines.

St. Louis—Advices from St. Charles county, Mo., say hessian fly is in wheat in large numbers. Springfield, Green county, Mo., reports same in regard to pest and adds plant looks sickly.

EXCITED IN STOCKS

Russian Fleet's Attack on English Fishermen Caused Decline.

Prices Soon Made General Recovering and Close Irregular.

New York, Oct. 24.—The opening decline in prices of stocks today was attributed to the nervousness caused by the attack of the Russian fleet on an English fishing fleet. There were large blocks of the principal active stocks offered at the opening. Reading fell a point and there were large fractional declines in the local tractions, Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Erie, Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania, Southern Railway, Louisville & Nashville, Amalgamated Copper and People's Gas. The opening sales in these stocks were of 100 to 5100 shares, the latter for Southern Railway. Ontario & Western and St. Paul showed up a sharp contrast with the rest of the list, the former opened unchanged then rising a point, and St. Paul, after opening up an ⅛, rising a large fraction in addition. Supporting orders were in evidence and caused almost immediate rallies from the opening decline.

The selling at the rally proved more aggressive than at the opening and carried prices to an average level lower than the opening. The gains in strong stocks were practically wiped out. Reading was carried 1½ under Saturday, Pennsylvania, Wabash preferred, Wheeling & Lake Erie and the second preferred a point, Manhattan 1¼, Louisville & Nashville 1⅜ and North American 1⅜. United States Steel preferred touched 81 and the common 28⅜. There was heavy realizing in Copper, Erie, Rock Island and Chicago Great Western. When the selling spent its force, Ontario & Western was lifted to 43⅛. Bonds steady at noon.

Erie and Ontario & Western monopolized most of the midday dealings and both reached a substantially higher level. Erie touched 46⅝ and Ontario & Western 46. The general market became narrowly and there were several distinct weak spots, particularly Southern Pacific, Louisville & Nashville and Illinois Central. Large buying of the Mexican Securities benefited National of Mexico preferred ½. Some of the specialties became buoyant, the Virginia-Carolina Chemical stocks rising 2 and Smelting preferred 1½ points. Northwestern, New Haven and Lake Erie & Western declined a point and Chicago Great Western preferred B 2.

An outbreak of bullish enthusiasm occurred in the Pacifics after 1 o'clock and they rose rapidly on large transactions. Southern Pacific sold over a point above Saturday's close and Missouri Pacific crossed 105. The Granger shares moved up sharply in sympathy and Pennsylvania also exhibited belated strength. Continued buying of Erie brought it to 41, but O. & W. was easier on realizing. Ice preferred declined 2½.

The market ultimately rallied. Locomotive lost 1½, Pressed Steel Car 2, and Westinghouse Electric first preferred 3. Prices did not rally at all cases recover from top and there was some absence of renewede realizing. The close was, in consequence, animated.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: We have another broad active and strong market. The firing upon English vessels by the Russian fleet caused a little hesitation and some little scattered selling pressure at the opening. In the main, however, everyone seemed to take the rational view that it was another unfortunate accident. Election day is still more than two weeks off. It occasions no anxiety and it was questionable whether preceding that time we will get any important liquidation of stocks. We do not think that business improvement or the advance in stocks have yet reached their limits and while reactions are likely, we think they should be taken advantage of and stocks bought.

* * *

New York to Coe Commission Co.: Waldorf hotel gossip states that for the long pull sentiment is still bullish among the best judges and any temporary reaction should be taken advantage of to buy stocks. A great combination of Mexican railroad is under way. Mexican National will sell at 50. It is reported that the floating supply of St. Paul has been taken out of the market. This stock will advance to two hundred on this bull movement.

* * *

New York to B. E. Baker: H. C. Frick has been strongly advising his friends of late that Pennsylvania is about the cheapest stock for investment on the list.

* * *

C. E. Lewis to B. E. Baker: The sentiment on stocks among the big people is very bulish and they believe prices this winter will go higher than any we have ever seen. American Smelter, Northwestern, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Reading, Pennsylvania, Missouri Pacific, are all picked for big advance.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Oct. 24.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 3 to 8 points, or just about as due on the cables. Reports of frost on the Eastern belt and in some sections of the Central and Western districts seem to have caused shorts a little uneasiness, and at first demand for covering was moderately active. But it was felt in local circles that no recovery of moment could be expected until supplies already avanuable had been considerably reduced, offerings increased the bulge, so that prices soon after the opening weakened. New Orleans operators were good buyers, about 9 or 10 points down from the list, and checked the decline. The market at the end of the first hour was steady and about 3 to 4 points from the bottom.

Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9.95; ditto gulf, 10.20. Sales 3525 bales. Futures closed barely steady; October, 9.52; November, 9.52; December, 9.66; January, 9.75; February, 9.79; March, 9.83; April, 9.85; May, 9.90; June, 9.92; July, 9.95.

TIME FOR AN EXPLANATION

By the Republicans of Increased Expenditures, Says Bryan.

Wheeling, Va., Oct. 24.—William J. Bryan spoke to a large crowd of people here today. He said that while the money question was not the paramount issue this time he had determined to carry on the fight against imperialism, as that was what threatened the people of this country at this time more than any other one thing.

He said that Judge Parker stands for the constitution and government most adaptable to this age. He condemned the colonial policy and said Mr. Roosevelt stood for the enlargement of the navy. It had cost the country $115,000,000 since the last Republican administration and now Mr. Roosevelt wants it increased to $415,000,000 more.

"I think it time that the Republicans are giving us reasons for these increased expenditures," said Mr. Bryan. In closing, he referred to the full dinner pail, by saying that when he reached Ohio he found that Senator Beveridge had turned the dinner pail into a coffee pot and that there was reasons to believe that the coffee pot would be turned into a water pitcher at the present rate of progress for the poor man.

Mr. Bryan arrived in Wheeling Sunday afternoon. He departed today over the Wheeling & Lake Erie for Bridgeport, Ohio, where after making a fifteen-minute speech, he left for Canton, Ohio.

Mr. Bryan was accompanied by Chairman Harry Garber, of the Ohio executive for Mr. Bryan and who is managing the Democratic campaign in the state. The itinerary as arranged provides speeches of five to thirty minutes duration today in eighteen towns in Ohio, concluding with a night meeting in Hamilton, somewhat an attempt at record breaking in speech making, considering the number of addrees, the number of miles covered and the time consumed.

It was at first intended to have Mr. Bryan to visit the state, taking two days' time, but this plan was abandoned and a tour of one day beginning early and lasting until late in the evening was mapped out. To save time reception committees and introductions were intended to be done away with, and it was planned to have Mr. Bryan make all speeches in Ohio, with one exception, from the rear platform of his special car. It was arranged for Mr. Bryan to cover the entire state from Wheeling, W. Va., and Bridgeport, Ohio, northwest to Massillon, thence directly across the state within fifteen miles of the Indiana line, south 175 miles and ending the speech-making with an address at Hamilton, near Cincinnati. The total distance being approximately 42 miles.

Following the tour through Ohio, Mr. Bryan is scheduled again to visit Indiana for several days of speech-making, after which he said today, he would go to Missouri to make one address and then to Nebraska.

Senator Fairbanks left in his private car today for Ohio points, having been in Wheeling since Saturday afternoon.

THE MEN OF THE WEST ARE TRUE MOULDERS OF NATION'S DESTINY

Rev. Dr. Hillis Says That the Men Who Will Make Themselves Known Forty Years Hence Are Now Husking Corn In Nebraska.

New York, Oct. 24.—In a sermon on the work of missionaries in this country during the last hundred years the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis in Plymouth church, Brooklyn, has declared that the men of the West are the true moulders of the nation's distiny.

"So accustomed are we to thinking that Athens made Greece, that Rome made Italy, that Paris made France, that England is London," he said, "that we believe now that as New York goes so does the destiny of the United States. But I say that as New York goes so does not go the destiny and history of the United States. I do not mean that New York has no influence, but we in our sufficiency have come to over-emphasize ourselves.

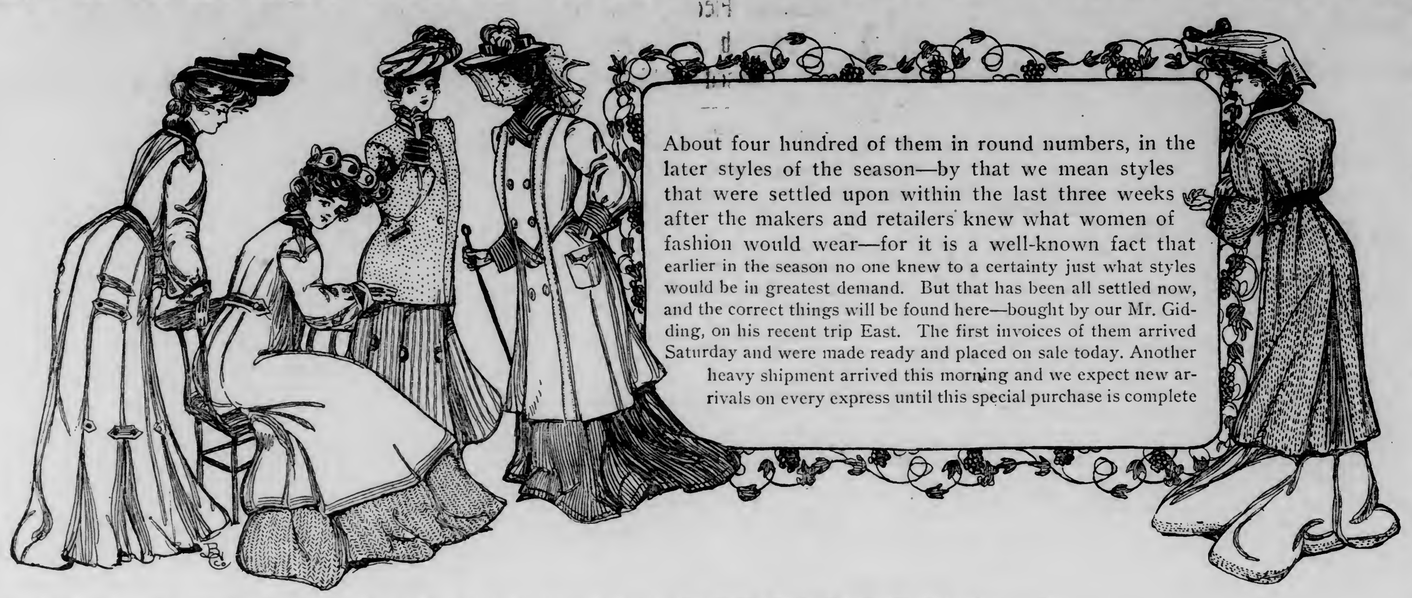

"The boy who is nourished in the city, who all his life has breathed only the tainted air of the city and has been cramped by his surroundings has no chance. It is the boy who has been reared far from the complexity of

The Most Remarkable Values in Women's Outer Garments Ever Offered By a Duluth Store Were Placed on Sale Today!

HOW and WHY

We are able to offer these great buying opportunities right at the very beginning of the season.

Briefly told, it is this—Our Mr. Gidding, when in New York, was offered the opportunity of making a transaction whereby he could close out the balance of the high-class woolens from a maker who supplies us with a very large portion of the high-class coats that we use. With the understanding that we were to take all there remained of any one piece—thus, if a piece of goods contained forty yards we had to take that—and that would make three or four garments according to how it would cut up—in all there were enough yards to make up close to 400 garments in various late styles to be delivered as soon as they could be made up—and we bought heavily.

About four hundred of them in round numbers, in the later styles of the season—by that we mean styles that were settled upon within the last three weeks after the makers and retailers knew what women of fashion would wear—for it is a well-known fact that earlier in the season no one knew to a certainty just what styles would be in greatest demand. But that has been all settled now, and the correct things will be found here—bought by our Mr. Gidding, on his recent trip East. The first invoices of them arrived Saturday and were made ready and placed on sale today. Another heavy shipment arrived this morning and we expect new arrivals on every express until this special purchase is complete

New Invoices Of Fitted Coats Have Just Arrived.

Black Broadcloths and finest Kerseys—white or black satin-lined Worombo Covert Coats—in 27, 30, 32, 36—and down to 60 inches in length—that have just begun to take well among women who want a style of this kind—tailored in the highest fashion—starting at $25 for a very handsomely tailored and strapped coat, then $32.50, $37.50 and up to $62.50 for an elegantly tailored coat 56 inches long—made of the very highest grade imported heavy Broadcloth, lined throughout with finest quality Men's Silk Serge.

We also offer two Special Values in Women's Coats at $15.00.—One style is sunburst-pleated back and front, and velvet trimmed back and front—the other style is plainer, but handsomely trimmed—colors are black, castor, brown, tan and navy—and run in sizes from 32 to 44 bust measure.

A Splendid Winter-weight Pebble Cheviot Coat, 27 inches long, and full lines—at $10—Flat collar, is velvet trimmed and piped—full $13.50 value.

New invoices of Fur-lined and Fur-trimmed Cloth Coats—Our First were sold about as fast as they came, and these new invoices will leave about the same way. Deep storm rolling collars, of Persian lamb, brown marten, sable squirrel, mink, black lynx and moleskin — with fine locked quirrel linings—$57.50 to $150.

And special fur-lined coats (not all sizes) at $35.

It is a sale that in point of value-giving has never before been approached by any other retail house at the head of the lakes.

And this on garments of the very highest class. All of them tailored by the very best man tailors in the East. All of them absolutely up to the very hour in style—trimmed in the very best possible manner and cloths that are not only very fine but that are also very scarce. Thank us for planning this sale right at the very threshhold of the winter season, when they are in greatest demand, and thank us also for the fact that right at a time when we could get their full value for them we pass them along to you at the same proportionate savings that came to us.

The cloths are of the season's richest and most desirable mixtures and plain colors—

In the new browns, the subdued greys, the nobby Scotch and English novelty mixtures, with a dash of red or a touch of green, or a very nobby mixture of brown and tan.

Some of the styles are fitted—some are half fitted—some are the loose swagger Motor and Tourist models, and some are full length—which style has been coming to the front very rapidly. Some of the mixtures we have had made up light weight enough to be worn as a rain or shine coat.

The first invoices of them were placed on sale this morning, and we shall continue to fill in the stock with the new arrivals as fast as they get here. Enough of the styles and sizes are already in to give you a choice from all of the styles, and sizes are about complete. We will lay aside for you any garment you may select, upon payment of one-third of the price of the garment, until you want it. This assures you of getting the garment that you desire at the present sale price. And last of all, let us state emphatically that notwithstanding the seemingly low prices the best-dressed woman can feel assured that everything about the garments down to the smallest detail is as perfect as "Gidding" clothes can be, and that means the very best.

The prices here in detail will give some idea of the values we are offering—but the garments can tell more plainly than printers' ink why it is to your interest to SELECT YOUR WINTER COAT NOW

LEARN TO VOTE

Three More Voting Machines Arrive In the City.

Four Will Be on Exhibition on Registration Days.

"Have you learned how to vote?"

That is the question that voters in four precincts of the city will be asking each other during the next few days. The three additional voting machines arrived in the city yesterday, and the four will be set up in four different precincts before the boards of registration meet tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock, in order that all voters who come to register may learn how to operate the machines.

The four polling places in which the machines will be used are as follows: Fourth precinct of the First ward, 218 Fourteenth avenue east; first precinct of the Fifth ward, 407 West Michigan street; fourth precinct of the Sixth ward, 1928 West Superior street; first precinct of the Eighth ward, West Duluth police station.

P. G. Sjoblom, the agent for the machines, arrived in the city this morning and will instruct the judges in the precincts where the machines are used, in the method of operating them.

All voters who care to examine the machines and become familiar with their method of operation may stop at any one of the four polling places either tomorrow or Saturday and the judges will instruct them how to cast their ballot. All voters who register tomorrow will also be instructed, and it is expected that the great majority of the voters in these four precincts will be thoroughly familiar with the machines before election day arrives.

Mr. Sjoblom is also sending out circulars of instructions to all the voters in the four precincts. Until the machines are seen, however, the circulars and printed matter convey the impression that the process of voting is a complicated one, and half a minute's study of the machine itself will be worth more than a careful perusal of all the printed matter.

The method of operation has been explained several times in The Herald and it is estimated that from 1000 to 1200 voters inspected the machine at the primary election held in September.

Small models of the machines will be erected in the four polling both on election day and all who have not learned how to vote by that time will be instructed by the judges then. It will greatly expedite matters, however, if the majority of the voters can become familiar with their use before election day, and the judges are anxious to have as many as possible visit the polling places tomorow and Saturday.

LOVERS OF THE FISTIC SPORT

At Houghton Treated to Three Bouts on Saturday Night.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Saturday night, monthly boxing matches at the Amphidrome, under the management of the Houghton Athletic club, with Sig Hart as matchmaker and Abe Pollock as referee gave lovers of the fistic sport one very tame ten-round go, one whirlwind battle and one promising fight that ended in an accidental foul when just fairly started. The second go, between Frankie Baker and "Young Scotty," was one of the best fights ever seen here, or elsewhere. Young Sharkey had been matched against Baker, but indulged in a little pot-boiling go with Young Scotty at Calumet, one week before the Amphidrome meet, and was put to sleep so effectually that he was unable to toe the scratch on the big fight he had been training for, and the man who drubbed him was substituted. Young Scotty was whipped by the superior generalship of Baker, but gave that young pugilist all that he wanted, if not a trifle more.

The fight between Memsic and Harry Cobb of Detroit was awarded to Cobb on a foul, after two minutes fighting in the first round, which, judging from the opening, was all that saved Cobb from lasting three or four rounds. The foul, while plainly evident and not denied by Memsic, was as plainly unintentional, and nobody feels worse over the matter than Memsic, who not only lost a fight which he would have won in all likelihood, but also stained as exceptionally clean ring record. Before the Cobb-Memsic fight was called, Sig. Hart, manager for Memsic, issued a sweeping challenge to any 133-pound man in the yorld, barring no color, to meet his man, Memsic having weighed in at 133-pounds at the ringside before donning the mitts. Memsic has fought several battles here, winning all but the last, and his clever and clean work has made him many friends, who are willing to give him cash backing for any match he may be able to arrange with top-notcher of his own weight.

NEGRO LYNCHED FOR ASSAULTING OFFICER.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 24.—George W. Blount, a negro proprietor of a fish and oyster shop in the suburb of Berkley, was taken early this morning from the police station where he was confined, by a mob of fifty masked men, and lynched. Blount had been arrested Saturday night for striking T. D. Hoilihan, a policeman, in the face with a lighted lamp, badly burning him. The officer had gone to Blount's place to arrest another negro and Blount refused the officer permission to enter.

A CAUSTIC SERMON

Rev. A. F. Elmquist Preaches on "Side Doors to Hell."

Enumerates Cigarettes, Cheap Theaters, Public Dances and Saloons.

In spite of the rain an immense crowd had gathered long before the service commenced in the Bethany Lutheran church last night to hear Rev. A. F. Elmquist, Ph. D., deliver his sermon on "Side Doors to Hell." In opening the speaker said:

"It is impossible for me to tell of all the side doors tonight for two reasons, time is too short and no human person has knowledge of all. I desire, therefore, to tell of a few that are well known to our people."

The doors mentioned were: Cigarettes, impure literature, cheap theaters, public dances and saloons. The speaker laid special stress on the carelessness of parents in allowing their young boys to "weaken their mental faculties by sucking into their body the poison of asps through a cigaret fiber." He mentioned the fact reported by Officer Withrow how many otherwise promising boys annually drop out of the public schools from fourth or fifth grades at an age of 14 or 15 on account of cigaret evil.

About the cheap theaters the speaker said in part: "The main purpose of the institution is to make money. If it is to be a success it must be glaringly sensational. The advertisements on the billboards ought to be enough proof of the doses given within. Still you can apply to them the words of the queen of Sheba speaking of Solomon. 'The half was not told.' None can ever come out equally pure after as before, having seen and heard 'East Lynne,' 'Mr. Hyde and Dr. Jekyll,' 'Ghosts,' 'The School for Scandal,' 'Texas Steer' or even 'Ole Olson.'"

The dance evil was spoken of and the saloon issue was dwelt on at length. He scored the churches and Christians who are negligent about the matter. "A saloon dedicated by a bishop is nothing but a saloon still. It is as the poet says:

'A man converted against his will
Is unconverted still.'

"To legalize an evil is worse than denying its existence as Mrs. Eddy does of sickness and sin. There are persons highly thought of in the community who say the saloon evil is simply an apparent, not real, true, evil and ought therefore to be left alone. We have in the West End fourteen saloon 'side doors to hell,' who pay to a damnation-receiving public $14,000 annually for permission to keep open seven days of the week. These are hell-holes of infamy whence the fumes of roasted souls arise as obnoxious to the nostrils of real manhood and womanhood as the smell of a 'stink-house!' May the Lord himself soon come and do house-cleaning in the West End and help the midnight houseman to see his duty!"

Your "want" is not important—to anyone but yourself—until it has been "put into type."

HIGGINS HEARING

In Thomasson Murder Postponed to Wednesday.

Peoria, Oct. 24.—The preliminary hearing of Richard Higgins, charged with the murder of Mrs. Nellie Thomasson has been postponed until 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. This action was taken at the request of both the state and the defense. The defense rely somewhat upon the story that a mysterious man was seen at the Taylor home in Lacon by Dr. Potts when called to attend Mrs. Thomasson. Dr. Potts this morning corroborated this statement, but could not give a very accurate description of the man, save that he was tall and spare and of middle age. He had a light mustache and brown hair. A witness to the alleged assault by Richard Higgins has been found in the person of Conrad Sufi, alms house keeper of Marshall county. He was peering through the door of the waiting room when the affair took place.

DETERMINED SUICIDE.

Man Throws Himself Under Elevated Train.

New York, Oct. 24.—Wrenching himself from the grip of two men who had divined his purpose and seized him, an unknown man today flung himself under a Third avenue elevated train at Forty-second street and was crushed to death in the presence of scores of people who crowded the platform awaiting a downtown train. So tightly was the body wedged under the forward trucks of the car that more than an hour was required to remove it and during all that time traffic on the south-bound track was at a complete standstill.

ACUTE STAGE OF THE NORTH SEA INCIDENT IS BELIEVED BY DIPLOMATS TO HAVE PASSED

DELAY IN RENEWING BATTLE ON SHAKHE RIVER UNEXPLAINED

Armies Are Now Entrenched But a Few Yards Apart.

Skirmishes Are Continuous But No General Engagement.

Marshal Oyama Reports His Losses In Battle at 15,879.

The Russian and Japanese armies now confront each other in intrenched positions only a few hundred yards apart. The dispatches say that at some points not more than 15 yards separate them. General fighting, however, has not yet been resumed and dispatches form the front fail to explain the delay of the expected engagement. Artillery firing is kept up and skirmishes are continuous. Field Marshal Oyama reports that his losses at the battle of Shakhe river were 15,879.

General Oku's headquarters, Sunday, Oct. 23, 4 p. m., via Fusan, Oct. 25.—It is reported unofficially that the right army buried 3500 Russian dead, the central army 1500 and the left army about 5000.

The armies average 600 yards apart and at places only fifty yards separate them. The men are constantly in the trenches and by placing their caps on their bayonets draw scores of bullets from their opponents.

The Russian artillery is searching the Japanese lines and skirmishes are almost continuous.

Tokio, Oct. 25, 7 p. m.—Field Marshal Oyama reports that the Japanese total casualties were 15,879 officers and men at the battle of Shakhe river.

OKU'S CASUALTIES

In Battle of Shakhe River Were 6422.

Gen. Oku's Headquarters, Sunday, Oct. 23, 5 p. m., via Fusan, Oct. 25.—The official report of the Japanese casualties from Oct. 10 to Oct. 22 is as follows:

Killed—Officers, 46; men, 823.

Wounded—Officers, 213; men, 5340.

The first indications of winter are appearing. At night the termometer shows several degrees below freezing point. Heavy clothing and overcoats have been issued to the men, who, apparently are not affected. Elaborate preparations are being made to provide for the comfort of the troops during the winter months.

CHILEAN NAVY

Said to Have Been Purchased By Russia.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25, 3:25 p. m.—A story is current here that Russia has purchased the Chilean navy, which will join the Russian Second Pacific squadron at the Azores islands. According to the report, an infraction of Chilean neutrality will be avoided by transferring the ships to Turkey, for which the porte will receive $2,000,000 from Russia. While the story receives some credence, it is denied in responsible quarters.

JAPS LOSE SUPPLIES.

Che Foo, Oct. 25, 6:30 p. m.—A junk, which arrived here today from Antung, an the Yalu river, reports that eight Japanese warehouses, containing rations, clothing, ammunition and the prizes secured at the battle of the Yalu, were burned recently; the fire lasting two days. Incendiarism is suspected. Two Japanese officers, who were responsible for the care of the buildings, committed suicide.

NO FIGHTING MONDAY.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25.—A dispatch has been received from Gen. Kuropatkin announcing that there was no fighting yesterday between the opposing armies.

RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR

At London Barely Escapes Assault From Mob.

London, Oct. 25.—Count Benckendorff, the Russian ambassador, returned to London last night from celebrating his silver wedding with his wife's relatives in Silesia, and barely escaped assault from a crowd at the Victoria station, which followed him almost into the embassy. Fortunately for the issue of peace or war, nothing resulted; yet, throughout he night a special force of police was compelled to guard the Russian embassy.

Count Benckendorff has been always regarded in official circles here as a friend of peace, and he was as much opposed as was Count Lamsdorff to the Russo-Japanese war. Indeed, he is almost an Anglophile in sentiment. There is no doubt that Count Benckendorff was deeply hurt by last night's demonstration. After escaping from the hostile crowd that met him at the station, he drove at a gallop to the embassy. Half a dozen rowdies followed, but the ambassador arrived unharmed. His noisy pursuers encountered a cordon of police that had been hurriedly dispatched to guard the embassy. After singing "Rule Britannia," the disturbers dispersed, no arrests being made; but the police continued to guard the embassy, as if it were a British fortress. With such vigilance did they carry out their task that when Prince Sviatopoik-Mirsky, a cousin of the new Russian minister of the interior and second secretary of the embassy, arrived, he had hard work getting in. Count Benckendorff had telephoned him to come to the embassy to write a long cipher message to St. Petersburg, describing tonight's hostile demonstration. In reply to a request for some statement to the Associated Press, the ambassador sent word that he could say nothing, but it was gathered that he had sent a dispatch to St. Petersburg, which may add to the existing delicacy of the situation.

FORMAL WARNING

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25, 1:35 p. m.—Ambassador Hardinge during the night received instructions from his government on the subject of the North sea incident and will present them during the day, probably after Foreign Minister Lamsdorf sees the emperor this afternoon.

Capt. Calthorpe, the British naval attache, in full uniform, accompanied by the embassy chasseur, wearing his full uniform, with hunting knife and plumed hat with the British colors, drove in state today to the admiralty, where the attache formaly notified the minister of marine that there were other British fishing fleets on the Spanish coast. This formal warning probably indicates the temper of the British instructions, which, there is reason to believe, are couched in a vigorous and somewhat peremptory tone.

Up to noon the admiralty announced that it was not prepared to offer an explanation of the trawler incident, saying that Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's report has not yet reached the admiralty, where it was explained that it was not Rojestvensky's portion of the squadron which stopped at Cherbourg. It is pointed out that Rojestvensky's message will probably be filed at Vigo, Spain, which presumably is the first stopping port of his fleet.

METHODIST BISHOPS

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 25.—Twenty-two bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church are expected to arrive here today to participate in the semi-annual bishops' conference in Grace M. E. church. Bishop Goodsell of Tennessee probably will preside, and Bishop John M. Walden of Cincinnati will serve as scribe. All the deliberations of the bishops will be private. The conference will make the appointments of presiding bishops for the conferences all over the country, and will give consideration at length to the financial and spiritual welfare of the denomination in all parts of the world, and will give much time to the discussion of missionary work in the Philippines and Porto Rico.

KILLED BY BOILER EXPLOSION.

St. Paul, Oct. 25.—A special to the Dispatch from McHenry, N. D., says: Henry Ehlert, a farmer, was killed, and John Lundeen, an engineer, had both legs broken by the explosion of a threshing engine on the farm of J. H. Hancer, near here, today.

TREACHEROUS WOMAN MAY BE RESPONSIBLE FOR PEORIA MURDER

New Witness In Case Furnishes Some Important Evidence.

The Woman Encouraged the Higgins-Thomasson Attachment.

At Same Time Posted Family on What Was Doing.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 25.—Oliver Kratzert, whose name has been prominently connected with that of Mrs. Nellie Thomasson, gave out a statement for the first time today. He declares that a woman, whose first name is Maud, and who formerly lived in Chicago, but now lives in Peoria, may have been responsible for the assault upon Mrs. Thomasson by Richard Higgins. He says that she did everything possible to cement the attachment between Mrs. Thomasson and Higgins, and then kept the family posted as to what was going on. All efforts to get him to divulge her identity further failed. Kratzert asserts that Higgins inflicted the injuries.

Richard Higgins will be rearrested in jail on a coroner's warrant, charging him with murder, and the hearing on the petition for a writ of habeas corpus proceedings will come up next Monday. John G. Higgins is still missing or in hiding in the city.

COLLIERS ARRIVE

At Vigo, Spain, to Coal Russian Fleet.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 25.—Five colliers from the island Teneriffe arrived here during the night and four others have reached Arosa to await the Russian squadron, which is expected to divide, half of it coaling here and the other half at Arosa, a small island in Arosa bay, about twenty-five miles north of Vigo.

The Spanish warships Estremadura and Rio De La Plata are on their way here to see that neutrality is observed.

CANOT COAL AT BREST.

Brest, Oct. 25.—Three Russian torpedo boats with a collier, passed Ushant, twenty-seven miles west by north of Brest, traveling westward, this morning. It is understood that orders have been received by the local authorities not to permit the Russian vessels to coal in port.

The Russian consul general at Barcelona has arrived here to arrange for revictualing the squadron.

TRANS-MISSISSIPPI CONGRESS IN SESSION

Eight Hundred Delegates Gather at World's Fair Grounds.

President Kerens Speaks of Work of the Organization.

St. Louis, Oct. 25.—Eight hundred delegates to the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress assembled today in Congress hall, on the World's fair grounds. During the sessions of the congress, which continue through Saturday, matters of importance to residents of the Trans-Mississippi region will be discussed such as irrigation, good roads, river navigation and interstate commerce laws.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman of the executive committee, Hon. Thomas Richardson, of Portland, Ore. In a short introductory address, Mr. Richardson presented the president of the congress, R. C. Kerens, of St. Louis. President Kerens spoke in part as follows:

In declaring the Fifteenth Annual Session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress open for this session, it should be stated that this organization was created in 1889, there being a demand upon the part of the states west of the Mississippi for a fair and equitable distribution by the government for internal, river and other improvements. Prior to the organization of this congress, appropriations by the national congress contemplated improvements almost wholly upon rivers and harbors in states east of the Mississippi; through the wide discussion by the Trans-Mississippi congress in all the years of its existence, there has been a perceptible change, and now states and territories of the West are receiving their full share of national improvements.

Year after year this congress is made up from the business masses, highly representative in its character, whose delegates are appointed by the governors of states and territories, Mayors of cities, boards of trade, chambers of commerce, and kindred associations. These congresses represent the commercial and public wants of the greater geographical portion of the United tSates. This present congress represents upwards of 20,000,000 people. The improvements essential to the sections represented here are annually brought conspicuously forward by resolutions and recommendations of the congress of the United States; bills are formulated at Washington and systematic work is done to the end that measures emanating from the Trans-Mississippi. EMPEROR NICHOLAS EXPRESSES DEEP REGRET TO KING EDWARD Admiralty Has Received No Report From Rojestvensky as Yet.

Will Probably Hear From Him When He Reaches Vigo.

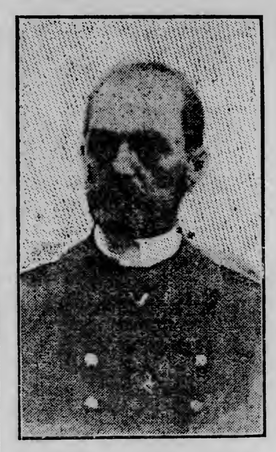

Many Colliers at Spanish Port Awaiting the Squadron.

In the absence of Admiral Rojestvensky's report, no official account of the action of the Russian Pacific squadron in firing on the Hull fishing fleet, is yet made public. The British foreign office has made certain formal and categorical demands upon Russia, couched in language which is said to preclude any diplomatic quibbling or delay, and while the situation is tense, the best official opinion is that Russia will make such ample official and pecuniary reparation as will prevent any grave international results. The British public is described as being much wrought over the occurrence, but the official tone of both governments is correct, and European cabinets are inclined strongly to the belief that the incident will be satisfactorily adjusted. The emperor of Russia has personally telegraphed King Edward, expressing his regret at the occurrence, and his sympathy with the families of the killed fishermen. Ambassador Benckendorff has made similar expressions to Lord Lansdowne. Additional particulars of the attack on the trawlers only serve to increae the strangeness of the incident.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25.—Emperor Nicholas has telegraphed to King Edward expressing his deep regret at what occurred in the North Sea Saturday and his sympathy with the families of the killed and wounded fishermen.

Foreign Minister Lamsdorff, who handed the telegram to Ambassador Hardinge, stated that the emperor had not yet received a report from his officers on the subject, but asked the British ambassador, nevertheless, to convey the assurance that fullest reparation would be made to the families of the sufferers. Later, the ambassador went to the foreign office and formally presented a copy of his instructions. The note was couched in a moderate but firm tone.

London, Oct. 25.—In his interview with Lord Lansdowne, Ambassador Benkendorff expressed in the most earnest and unreserved fashion his personal regret at the attack on the trawlers.

ADMIRAL ROJESTVENSKY,
Commander of Baltic Fleet Which Fired on Fishing Boats.

Washington, Oct. 25.—A cablegram received at the state department today from Spencer Eddy, the American charge of embassy at St. Petersburg, stated that the Russian government had received the protest of the British government regarding the North Sea incident and that the foreign office was busy preparing a reply.

It is believed here, that the acute stage of this incident has already passed.

London, Oct. 25, 6:12 p. m.—It is officially stated that no announcement will be made this evening with reference to the negotiations between the Russian and British governments for the purpose of obtaining an explanation of the North Sea affair.

Lord Lansdowne was engaged with his private secretary until late this afternoon.

BRITAIN'S DEMANDS

Upon Russia Will Admit of No Compromise.

London, Oct. 25.—In the note dispatched to St. Petersburg yesterday, the British government put forward certain definite demands in language which it is understood leaves little opening for any suggestion of a compromise. These comprise apologies for the action of the Russian squadron in firing on the British fishing fleet in the North sea Saturday morning and full compensation for the sufferers. It is further insisted that a searching inquiry shall be instituted with all dispatch and under conditions which will insure that appropriate action shall follow the result of the investigation. In other words the responsibility shall be fixed and punishment meeted out to the offenders, whoever they may be.

That King Edward correctly interpreted the feeling of the nation in publicly stigmatizing the affair as "unwarrantable" was evidenced by the reception given him this morning when he started for the race meeting at Newmarket. A big crowd awaited the king both at Buckingham palace and at the railroad station and the heartiness of the cheering and the vigorous waving of hats and handkerchiefs with occasional shouts of "Good old Teddy" from the ultra enthusiasts made up a remarkable demonstration and afforded the king evident pleasure.

The Russian ambassador, Count Benkendorff, called at the foreign office this morning and had an interview with Foreign Secretary Lansdowne.

In view of the popular demonstration last night against the Russian ambassador special precautions were adopted by the police to guard him against any unpleasantness but they proved unnecessary.

Henry White, the secretary of the American embassy, also visited the foreign office this morning.

Queen Alexandera has sent a letter to the mayor of Hull enclosing a donation of $500 for distribution among the disabled men and the widows and orphans of the killed, expressing sympathy and asking to be informed as to the progress of the injured.

The call of Henry White at the foreign office was purely personal. He went to invite Lord Lansdowne to lunch, but did not see him.

The foreign office up to 2 o'clock this afternoon had not received any word from Sir Charles Hardinge, the British ambassador at St. Petersburg.

The foreign office disclaims having made representations to Washington on the subject of the North sea incident.

Premier Balfour went to the admiralty during the day, armed with many papers, and had a conference with Lord Selborne, the first lord of the admiralty. Subsequently Mr. Balfour lunched with the foreign secretary at Lansdowne house.

The admiralty is understood to be taking measures for the protection of the British trawlers in the bay of Biscay. Besides notifying St. Petersburg of the presence of trawlers there, it is thought probable that a warship may be dispatched from Gibraltar to watch over the fishermen.

NO SIGN OF FLEET.

Paris, Oct. 25, 2 p. m.—The vigilant watch kept at the northern and western ports of France has failed to sight the Russian fleet.

JAPANESE' VIEWS

Of the Sinking of Fishermen By Russians.

Tokio, Oct. 25, 10 a. m.—The details of the sinking of the British trawler Crane in the North sea by the Russian Second Pacific fleet are not known in Tokio, and popular and official judgment is awaiting fuller knowledge. The only information received came in a brief telegram, conflicting between attack and accident. The Ji Ji is the only newspaper commenting on the incident. It first [illegible] misses it as "a [illegible] which has shov[illegible] discretion seve[illegible]

"The most likely explanation of the outrageous action of the fleet is found in the fact that some days ago, owing to a rumor that Japanese vessels laden with explosives, had been reported in the Danish strait, the Danish authorities sent an escort with the Russian squadron to prevent any violation of Danish neutrality. We know nothing of the supposed dispatch of our ships to that quarter, but it is likely that the Russian ships, apprehending attack by the Japanese, out of excessive fear, mistook the trawlers for Japanese vessels, sinking mines, and attacked them without any inquiry."

SIGNIFICANTLY SILENT

Are Russian Papers Concerning North Sea Incident.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25, 7:50 a. m.—The press, as a whole, is significantly silent regarding the North sea tragedy. The papers generally publish, without comment, foreign telegrams concerning the sinking of the trawlers, indicating a desire not to embarrass the government or complicate an already extremely delicate situation by an expression of opinion before all the facts on both sides have been ascertained.

One exception, however, is the Novoe Vremya, which says that one of the minor powers, before the sailing of the second Pacific squadron, categorically informed Russia of an impending attack on the vessels. The paper begs that judgment may be suspended pending the receipt of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's report, but declares that full justice will be done by Russia.

HAS NO NEWS.

Admiralty Has No Report From Admiral Rojestvensky.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25, 5:26 p. m.—The admiralty and foreign office were besieged today with inquiries from correspondents and diplomats, asking for the Russian version of the trawler affair, but the authorities have absolutely nothing to offer. They declare they are as much in the dark as the public and even more anxious for news. Inexplicable as it may seem, the Associated Press was positively assured, in the name of the minister of marine himself, at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, that no report of the affair had yet reached the admiralty, which has been telegraphing widely to London, Cherbourg and Vigo, asking for an immediate report. The foreign office is greatly embarrassed in meeting the British representations by lack of news. As a possible explanation of the failure to receive a report, the admiralty points out that Rojestvensky's division of the fleet did not stop at Cherbourg, but proceeded direct to Vigo. If only the cruiser division was involved in the affair upon its arrival at Cherbourg, Rear Admiral Enquist, who commands that division, may have forwarded his report to Rojestvensky at Vigo, instead of to the admiralty here, although in such an extraordinary case the Russian regulations require an immediate report to the admiralty as well as to his superior officer in command of the fleet.

The conflicting nature of the British reports of the affair are creating much comment here. One statement says that the Russian hospital ship Orel has some wounded fishermen on board. This statement is utterly inconsistent with the first reports that the Russians made no effort to succor the drowning fishermen.

DELAY IN RENEWING BATTLE ON SHAKHE RIVER UNEXPLAINED

Armies Are Now Entrenched But a Few Yards Apart.

Skirmishes Are Continuous But No General Engagement.

Marshal Oyama Reports His Losses In Battle at 15,879.

The Russian and Japanese armies now confront each other in intrenched positions only a few hundred yards apart. The dispatches say that at some points not more than 15 yards separate them. General fighting, however, has not yet been resumed and dispatches form the front fail to explain the delay of the expected engagement. Artillery firing is kept up and skirmishes are continuous. Field Marshal Oyama reports that his losses at the battle of Shakhe river were 15,879.

General Oku's headquarters, Sunday, Oct. 23, 4 p. m., via Fusan, Oct. 25.—It is reported unofficially that the right army buried 2500 Russian dead, the central army 1500 and the left army about 3000.

The armies average 600 yards apart and at places only fifty yards separate them. The men are constantly in the trenches and by placing their caps on their bayonets draw scores of bullets from their opponents.

The Russian artillery is searching the Japanese lines and skirmishes are almost continuous.

Tokio, Oct. 25, 7 p. m.—Field Marshal Oyama reports that the Japanese total casualties were 15,879 officers and men at the battle of Shakhe river.

OKU'S CASUALTIES

In Battle of Shakhe River Were 6422.

Gen. Oku's Headquarters, Sunday, Oct. 23, 5 p. m., via Fusan, Oct. 25.—The official report of the Japanese casualties from Oct. 19 to Oct. 22 is as follows:

Killed—Officers, 46; men, 823.
Wounded—Officers, 213; men, 5340.

The first indications of winter are appearing. At night the termometer shows several degrees below freezing point. Heavy clothing and overcoats have been issued to the men, who, apparently are not affected. Elaborate preparations are being made to provide for the comfort of the troops during the winter months.

EMPEROR NICHOLAS EXPRESSES DEEP REGRET TO KING EDWARD

Admiralty Has Received No Report From Rojestvensky as Yet.

Will Probably Hear From Him When He Reaches Vigo.

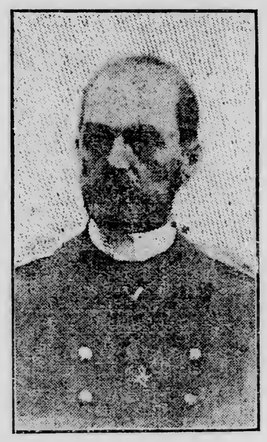

Many Colliers at Spanish Port Awaiting the Squadron.

In the absence of Admiral Rojestvensky's report, no official account of the action of the Russian Pacific squadron in firing on the Hull fishing fleet, is yet made public. Lord Landsdowne was engaged with his private secretary until late this afternoon.

BRITAIN'S DEMANDS

Upon Russia Will Admit of No Compromise.

London, Oct. 25.—In the note dispatched to St. Petersburg yesterday, the British government put forward certain definite demands in language which it is understood leaves little opening for any suggestion of a compromise. These comprise apologies for the action of the Russian squadron in firing on the British fishing fleet in the North sea Saturday morning and full compensation for the sufferers. It is further insisted that a searching inquiry shall be instituted with all dispatch and under conditions which will insure that appropriate action shall follow the result of the investigation. Premier Balfour went to the admiralty during the day, armed with many papers, and had a conference with Lord Selborne, the first lord of the admiralty. Subsequently Mr. Balfour lunched with the foreign secretary at Lansdowne house.

The admiralty is understood to be taking measures for the protection of the British trawlers in the bay of Biscay. Besides notifying St. Petersburg of the presence of trawlers there, it is thought probable that a warship may be dispatched from Gibraltar to watch over the fishermen.

JAPANESE' VIEWS

Of the Sinking of Fishermen By Russians.

Tokio, Oct. 25, 10 a. m.—The details of the sinking of the British trawler Crane in the North sea by the Russian Second Pacific fleet are not known in Tokio, and popular and official judgment is awaiting fuller knowledge. The only information received came in a brief telegram, conflicting between attack and accident. The Ji Ji is the only newspaper commenting on the incident. It first [illegible] misses it as "a [illegible] which has shov[illegible] discretion sever[illegible]

"The most likely explanation of the outrageous action of the fleet is found in the fact that some days ago, owing to a rumor that Japanese vessels laden with explosives, had been reported in the Danish strait, the Danish authorities sent an escort with the Russian squadron to prevent any violation of Danish neutrality. We know nothing of the supposed dispatch of our ships to that quarter, but it is likely that the Russian ships, apprehending attack by the Japanese, out of excessive fear, mistook the trawlers for Japanese vessels, sinking mines, and attacked them without any inquiry."

SIGNIFICANTLY SILENT

Are Russian Papers Concerning North Sea Incident.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25, 7:50 a. m.—The press, as a whole, is significantly silent regarding the North sea tragedy. The papers generally publish, without comment, foreign telegrams concerning the sinking of the trawlers, indicating a desire not to embarrass the government or complicate an already extremely delicate situation by an expression of opinion before all the facts on both sides have been ascertained.

One exception, however, is the Novoe Vremya, which says that one of the minor powers, before the sailing of the second Pacific squadron, categorically informed Russia of an impending attack on the vessels. The paper begs that judgment may be suspended pending the receipt of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's report, but declares that full justice will be done by Russia.

HAS NO NEWS.

Admiralty Has No Report From Admiral Rojestvensky.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25, 5:26 p. m.—The admiralty and foreign office were besieged today with inquiries from correspondents and diplomats, asking for the Russian version of the trawler affair, but the authorities have absolutely nothing to offer. They declare they are as much in the dark as the public and even more anxious for news. Inexplicable as it may seem, the Associated Press was positively assured, in the name of the minister of marine himself, at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, that no report of the affair had yet reached the admiralty, which has been telegraphing widely to London, Cherburg and Vigo, asking for an immediate report. The foreign office is greatly embarrassed in meeting the British representations by lack of news. As a possible explanation of the failure to receive a report, the admiralty points out that Rojestvensky's division of the fleet did not stop at Cherbourg, but proceeded direct to Vigo. If only the cruiser division was involved in the affair upon its arrival at Cherbourg, Rear Admiral Enquist, who commands that division, may have forwarded his report to Rojestvensky at Vigo, instead of to the admiralty here, although in such an extraordinary case the Russian regulations require an immediate report to the admiralty as well as to his superior officer in command of the fleet.

The conflicting nature of the British reports of the affair are creating much comment here. One statement says that the Russian hospital ship Orel has some wounded fishermen on board. This statement is utterly inconsistent with the first reports that the Russians made no effort to succor the drowning fishermen.

To Prove What the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, Will Do for YOU, Every Reader of The Herald May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Absolutely Free by Mail.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

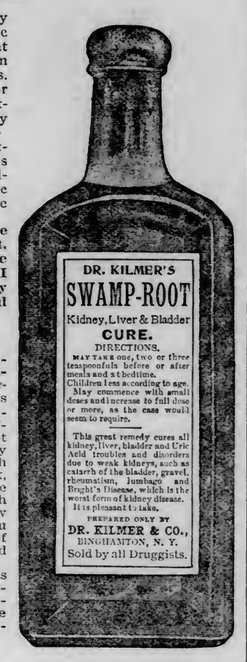

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

I cheerfully recommend and endorse the Great Remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, for Kidney trouble and bad liver. I have used it and derived great benefit from it. I believe it has cured me entirely of kidney and liver trouble, from which I suffered terribly. Most gratefully yours,

A. R. Reynolds, Chief of Police,
Columbus, Ga.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering and fatal results are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; make your head ache and back ache, cause indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, make you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

The cure for these troubles is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the world-famous kidney remedy. In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

(Swamp Root is pleasant to take.)

How to Find Out.

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in The Duluth Evening Herald. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

BASEBALL MEN MEET

The Annual Convention of Professional Baseball Leagues.

New York, Oct. 25.—Owners of the baseball clubs and representatives from every prominent baseball league in the United States, with the exception of the two major organizations, assembled at the Victoria hotel today, where the fourth annual convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues was called to order by President P. T. Powers.

The board of arbitration held a session yesterday which lasted until nearly midnight and the hearing of claims and disputes was resumed early today. The more important cases were adjusted as follows:

In the dispute between Augusta, Ga., Clarksdale, Miss., and Memphis, O. F. Butler was awarded to Augusta. Angelo Marre was awarded to Clarksdale, Clarence Nelson to Houston, Tex., J. Delan to Little Rock and J. Barton to Grand Rapids. The claim of Ii. W. Swalm against the Waterloo, Iowa, club, was allowed and the charges preferred by the Yazoo City club against Robert Rohermel, was dismissed.

An application for membership was received from the Tri-state league, which includes Wilmington, Del., Harrisburg and York, Pa., and protection has been asked for Richmond, Lynchburg, Newport and Norfolk, Va., where a new league is to be formed before next season.

Denver, Colo., will probably be selected as the place in which the annual meeting will be held next year.

SCHELL OUSTED FROM INQUIRY

Leading Politician Says He Will Back Priest Before President.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 25.—After being excluded from the investigation at which Indian Commissioner Jones invited him to prove his charges of corruption on the Winnebago reservation, Father Schell yesterday made public a letter from one of the most prominent Republican politicians in Nebraska, stating he would accompany Father Schell to Washington in case the present investigation, conducted by Inspector A. O. Wright, proves another whitewash.

The matter will be taken to President Roosevelt and Secretary Hitchcock, and inasmuch as the politician who has agreed to back Schell is of national influence, there seems excellent prospects of having the frauds probed to the bottom.

Father Schell is much incensed against Inspector Wright because the latter publicly announced that the accused grafters had done banking business for Green Rainbow leveled a finger at Wright and suddenly declared:

"You've been bought."

"What do you mean?" demanded the inspector.

"I mean that you have tried to buy me, and you are acting the same way."

"Don't mind him," interrupted Father Schell, "he is going only by appearances."

Inspector Wright says he excluded Father Schell because he persisted in taking part in the inquiry. Father Schell says he was challenged by Jones to prove his charges in this inquiry and that he can't do so if prevented from presenting the evidence.

Vigna said that rather than have his linen mutilated in the machinery of New York laundries he had brought two trunks filled with shirts, which he would take back to Italy next spring to have laundered.

Fortesque was offered the decoration of the Rising Sun by the Mikado, but was not authorized to receive it.

RELIED ON FRIEND

Viola Boynton Now Seeks to Get Her $600 Back.

Claims Fred Kohagen Obtained Her Money By Misrepresentation.

Alleging that Fred W. Kohagen, a well known young man of this city, has flimflammed her out of $600 by making false representations, Miss Viola Boynton, a young woman well known about the city, has instituted a suit in district court of this county to recover the money, with interest on it at 6 per cent from the first part of February last.

Miss Boyton, in her complaint, filed by Marshall & Whipple, this morning, alleges that Feb. 10 last Kohagen, who was then employed in one of the county offices, represented to her that he had the option for and could procure for her for $600, certain lands in Presque Isle county, Mich.

Relying on the representations made to her as to the alleged option and the opportunity to make a good investment, Miss Boynton says she gave Kohagen the $600 with which to purchase the lands. She claims that she has since learned that Kohagen had no right or authority to make a transfer of the property to her and she has not been able since to get a deed or her money back.

Miss Boynton charges that Kohagen falsely, wilfully and illegally embezzled her $600, that he never intended using the money to buy the property for her.

Miss Boynton is the young woman who telephoned one of the county offices last spring, after Mr. Kohagen had gone to Minneapolis, to find out if there was any way she could get back some money she claimed to have entrusted to him for investment.

ELECTRIFIED HOUSE.

Dwelling In Geneva Becomes Huge Leyden Jar.

Geneva, Oct. 25.—Electricity has been the cause of an extraordinary series of accidents at a Geneva dwelling on the Route de Lyon.

The first victim was Charles Girod, a baker, who arrived with the bread in the morning. He was passing the loaves through the bars of the kitchen window, when he uttered a terrible cry and fell to the ground in agony. Soon afterward he died.

Police were called, and the concierge of the house, in explaining the affair to them, passed his arm through the window, when he also was struck to the ground by a severe electric shock. Several persons who went to help him all received severe shocks, and for some time were unable to move him.

The mistress of the house then tried to call a doctor by telephone, but received a shock which rendered her unconscious, while a servant who ran to draw some water at the tap had her fingers badly burned by electricity.

In some way the house had become powerfully charged with electricity, and was, in fact, a huge Leyden jar. The current is supposed to have leaked from the tramway or lighting cables.

HIS LAST CAROM.

Billiard Player Dies as He Wins Game.

Paris, Oct. 25.—A billiard player named Frassio, known as the champion of Villette, fell dead during a game under curious circumstances. The story is related by French papers under the heading "His Last Carom." Frassio was challenged for a match of 100 points. He soon was in the lead. Near the ninety mark he became red in the face, but his stroke continued firm. At ninety-eight he seemed to weaken and made the next point with difficulty. As the marker cried out "One hundred" Frassio fell dead from apoplexy.

Calumet Baking Powder

The Standard of Perfect Baking.

West Duluth

The Elliott & Co. meat packing plant at Thirty-seventh avenue west, is undergoing important improvements just now in the way of new machinery. Steam hoisting machines, manufactured by the National Iron company of West Duluth, are being installed. They are exact patterns of those used in the large Chicago and Omaha packing etablishments, and, besides being time and labor-saving devices, they will result in a better grade of meat being turned out by the house.

The old style of slaughtering beef, and one still followed in various of the smaller houses, was to leave the animals lying on the floor for a considerable time after death. With the steam hoisting apparatus the cattle are immediately lifted into the air and left to hang there, allowing them to bleed more freely, and thus improving the final quality of the meat. The improvement will not be entirely complete for two or three week yet, but when it is, the patrons of Elliott & Co will be invited to inspect the plant, which is now on a footing with the larger houses throughout the country. When Mr. Elliott assumed charge of the establishment there was no steam about the place, all the work being done by hand, but since the business came under his control modern steam-operating machinery has become an important factor in turning out a high-class product.

SCRAPING THE AVENUE.

Mud Being Removed From the Main Thoroughfare.

Men under the direction of the board of public works, are still engaged in scraping the mud off Central avenue. After the scraping, and while in a half-frozen condition, the pavement presented quite a respectable appearance this morning, but business men assert that warm weather with rain would still produce mud, unless the whole of the surfacing of the street is scraped away, exposing the crushed rock. This condition would be a small improvement over the mud.

The whole trouble is said to be due to the fact that too much earth and powdered rock, or rock dust, were used in the construction of the pavement, and the general opinion in West Duluth is that the only way to remedy the evil in a satisfactory manner will be to resurface the street with the proper material.

INVITATION TO POWERS

For Peace Conference Sent Out By President.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Acting Secretary of State Adee today dispatched a note looking to a reconvention of The Hague conference. This is an invitation from the president of the United States to the signatory powers of the original Hague treaty to come together again. In addition to the signatory powers the invitation goes forward to four of the South and Central American republics, which have signified an earnest desire to adhere to The Hague treaty. The note is directed to American ambassadors and ministers abroad, with instructions to sound the governments to which they are accredited and to extend President Roosevelt's invitation in such terms as they see fit. A majority of the powers must determine the place as well as the date of the meeting.

CANADIAN CONTEST

Laurier Party Predicts a Landslide, But Opposition Is Confident.

Chamberlain's Preference Tariff Has Been But Little Discussed.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 25.—The Laurier men are predicting a landslide in Ontario for their chief and party, while John Haggart, who is cool headed and capable of taking a reasonable view, in spite of the fact that he was once a conservative minister of railways, expects the opposition to gain at least six seats in this province.

Haggart looks for an increase of the opposition from Quebec from seven members, the present number, to eighteen or twenty, and a majority for Borden over the whole dominion of not less than twenty-two.

One naturally expects rosy predictions for their side from political leaders, but so far as John Haggart is concerned, he never was one of the bragging sort, and no living man has had a more intimate experience of politics in Canada than he.

Laurier, the prime minister, and R. L. Borden, the opposition leader, will have completed the first part of their campaign tour by Saturday, and each has had triumphal progress through the country. Laurier drew more thousands than Borden at Toronto, but the conservatives claim Borden left the best impression, and that every conservative seat in the city will be held with increased majorities. Borden's reception at Montreal was a surprise to the liberals, who are making preparation on a gigantic scale to insure the Laurier demonstration next week, throwing it entirely into the shade.

In the provinces of Quebec generally the campaign issues seem to be narrowing down pretty much to tariff revision as advanced by the prime minister and higher protection as laid down by the opposition leader and supported by Mr. Tarte, who has gone out of the party politics to devote his entire attention to his newspaper interests.

Mr Tarte's organ, La Patrie, is second only in circulation among the French Canadians to La Presse, and its influence, which is by no means to be despised, is thrown wholly on the side of high protection, thus tending to strengthen the conservative cause against the Laurierites. Mr. Tarte has not been seen much on public platforms since the campaign began.

The question of imperial preference has so far been made a leading issue in Quebec for the French Canadian elements to pronounce upon, though it may influence many of the English speaking electors who are not fettered by Quebec party ties to cast their ballots for the conservative nominees.

Mr. Tarte's position on this question was defined anew at the farewell banquet to the governor general, when he favored preferences within the empire, but said Canada should be consulted more on matters of imperial importance; in other words, Britain should not have the sole voice in imperial affairs, for imperial affairs are in a sense Canadian affairs.

Lord Minto, it may be recalled, on the same occasion, preceding Mr. Tarte, had said what is good for Canada is good for the empire.

Earl Grey, the newly appointed governor general of Canada, in succession to Lord Minto, leaves Liverpool for Montreal to take up his post at Government house, Ottawa, on Nov. 3 next, the day on which the Dominion parliamentary elections are to be held. He comes on the Tunisian, and the same steamer on its return trip to Liverpool will have on board the earl and countess of Minto and family and the outgoing viceregal household.

Col. Hanbury-Williams, who is to be Earl Grey's military secretary, has had extensive experience in the imperial army in Egypt, being mentioned in dispatches and receiving the war medal with clasp, the khedive's bronze star and fifth class Medjidieh. In India he was aide de camp to the governor of Madras and in Cape Colony military secretary to Lord Milner, governor.

Confederation with Canada is so unpopular in Newfoundland the opposition leaders have issued a general election manifesto solemnly undertaking to do nothing and to allow nothing to be done that can in any way pledge the colony to union with the Dominion. Confederation is declared not to be an election issue, and if the subscribers to the manifesto are elected it will be on the understanding that victory at the polls is not a warrant to negotiate with Canada.

Confederation must be in bad odor in Newfoundland when both political parties feel called upon to repudiate it.

Boston supplies the British market with various grades of American leather products in successful competition with German and British producers. W. A. McKinnon, the Canadian commercial agent at Bristol, Eng., calls attention to the fact, and expresses the opinion that Canadian leather manufacturers will find the market well worth fighting for. The bulk of the imports of leather come now from the United States for the reason that American brains, American skill, and American machinery have united to produce a better article at a lower price than the Canadian manufacturers have so far been able to supply.

It is believed that if the Canadian leather men decided to make a determined effort to compete they could divide the market with the Boston men.

MARRIED TO A CORYPHEE

Chorus Girl Is Bride of Rich Harry K. Thaw.

Pittsburg, Oct. 25.—Harry K. Thaw, heir to millions has been captured by Evalyn Nesbitt, a chorus girl and art model, and they have been married in London. The news fell like a thunderbolt on the Thaws, of Pittsburg. The family has spent nearly $1,000,000 in protecting the young man from the machinations of the girls. He was sent to London as a golden bait for women of title, and the entree to his society was given to a couple of countesses and an "Honorable Miss." Thus the news is all the more bitter to his relatives, who practically own the Ohio valley here.

The Thaws in Pittsburg are religious, and when a reporter on Sunday sought an interview with Mrs. William Thaw regarding the marriage, he was met with the reply that she did not care to hold wordly converse with anyone who worked on the Lord's day. She had just returned from church and would not answer questions.

That it took Harry Thaw so long to get married is the only sourse of wonder in Pittsburg. Since the boy was fourteen years old he has been guarded most jealously by male companions, whose only instructions were to keep him from evil influences and the girls. When he went to swim in the Pittsburg natatorium he was accompanied even into the water by one of his guards. The young man wanted for nothing, but always was under complete surveillance by employes of the family.

An explanation for the affair cabled from London that young Thaw and his bride did not attend the late birthday party of the Earl of Yarmouth is readily given here. Society still remembers how the Earl of Yarmouth practically held up the Thaw family for a fortune in cash when the guests already were gathered in the church for his wedding. Harry Thaw was one of the family who wanted the earl sent back to England without either the money of Alice Thaw as his wife, and he has never forgiven his titled brother-in-law.

SEQUEL TO DREYFUS CASE

In Courtmartial of Four Prominent Officials.

Paris, Oct. 25.—A sequel to the Dreyfus case was the opening of the courtmartial today of four prominent officials of the war ministeries, Cols. Deautrich, Rollin, Francois and Marechal, charged with upsing military funds and otherwise influencing witnesses against Dreyfus at Rennes. The court is composed of Gen. Berlin, four colonels and two lieutenant colonels. The previous ministerial investigation partially vindicated the accused, who demanded a courtmartial. Col. Deautrich testified that, during the entire course of the proceedings at Rennes, he followed the orders of his superiors.

The ruins of an old cabin found on the mine identify it as the claim which was first located nearly fifty years ago, when the Modoc Indians killed every prospector they could find.

DISGRACEFUL TACTICS!

I supposed this meat question was settled, and I had made up my mind that the trust had perhaps given up trying to bust me up in business, since Brother McAuley had used all the money that the grievance committee had in their treasury and found it was fruitless to try, and went back to the good old union.

But I have another fight on hand which may prove more serious. One of our large packing houses has taken the fight in hand and say they will exterminate me from the face of the earth and they have hung out an independent sign on a great big, big, big scale. But to attach their name, knowing that if they did the public would be indignant and shun their rebel sign. But I'll tell the public who they are—no other than one of the big packing houses of Duluth.

Now, when a large institution of that kind, I supposed to be doing a legitimate and honest business, will stoop so low as to try and run one lone man who is trying to make both ends meet and make an honest living, such an institution is a disgrace and a public nuisance, and should be driven from among civilization. I believe there is a law to prohibit such business, and if there is not, there should be. Now, if the public will stay by the old genuine Independent Meat Market, situated at 907 West Michigan street, we will show the trust and combine shops where they get off at

May Summer Here.

When asked this morning for plans which might follow his leaving the vice presidency of the Oliver Iron Mining company, Dr. Nelson P. Hulst said that he had no plans and indicated that he was not expecting to formulate any very soon.

The doctor said that his family would make their home in Milwaukee, but might have a summer home in Duluth, to which place they had become attached through their frequent sojourns.

EARLY CALLERS FOR PARKER.

New York, Oct. 25.—Judge Parker had a number of early callers today. Among them was George F. Parker, chairman of the literary bureau of the Democratic national committee, and conferred with Judge Parker for nearly an hour. Judge Parker arose early, despite his late hours last night, when he attended the performance at the Grand Street theater.

A NERVOUS MAN

German Says Rojestvensky Is Not Fit to Command Fleet.

Often Thrown Into Violent Excitement Through Trifles.

Berlin, Oct. 25.—Lieut.-Gen. Count Von Reventlow has written to the Tageblatt as follows:

Admiral Rojestvensky is an extremely nervous man who is thrown into violent excitement through trifles. It is all the more remarkable that he was appointed to a command to which he was least suited."

Von Reventlow, who is an authority on naval subjects, blames the admiral for choosing a course in the North Sea where he was sure to find fishing vessels and omitting adequate scouting measures to determine the character of the vessels sighted. The Russian squadron, he adds, apparently neglected ordinary precautions.

BLAME THE JAPS.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25, 6:10 p. m.—A special dispatch from London to an afternoon paper here charges that the attempt to sink the steamship Esperanza yesterday at Barry, England, was the work of Japanese emissaries.

JAPS IN DISGUISE.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25, 6:10 p. m.—The Associated Press learns that the Russian admiralty has had the most specific reports of the agents abroad that disguised Japanese officers had been seen in Denmark, Sweden and Germany, which indicated that an attempt would be made to attack the Russian fleet.

NOVIK'S CREW ARRIVES.

Vladivostok, Oct. 25.—The officers and other members of the crew of the Russian protected cruiser Novik, driven ashore by the Japanese Aug. 29, in the harbor of Korsakovsk, island of Sakhalin, arrived here today after a hard fifty days' journey from Korsakovsk. They travelled to the northern part of the island through a hundred miles of swamp, crossing the mainland at Nicolaievsk.

The weather at Vladivostok is cold and stormy. A fierce gale is now raging.

A GAME AT WORLD'S FAIR

May Be Arranged Between Minnesota and Michigan.

Minneapolis, Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—President Cyrus Northrop, of the University of Minnesota, has received a telegram from President Francis, of the Louisiana purchase exposition, formally inviting the Minnesota foot ball team to play the Michigan foot ball team for the Western championship in the gladium at St. St. Louis on a date yet to be set. A similar invitation has been sent to President Angell at Ann Arbor. Edward O. Wild, representing the exposition, is here seeking to arrange for the game. As Michigan and Minnesota played a six to six game last year for the championship, the game would, it is believed, attract an immense throng. Minnesota cannot play Michigan until after its Thanksgiving game with Iowa.

WILL MAKE BOW

Duluth City Team to Meet Superior Eleven Saturday.

Old High School and College Players In the Game Again.

The Duluth city football team will make its initial appearance before the football public Saturday afternoon in a game with the heavy Superior city eleven.

The Duluth team is composed largely of old high school and college players, and every man on the eleven has had several years' experience on the gridiron.

The Superior ranks well with the smaller college elevens through the West. Two weeks ago it was defeated by the University of North Dakota by the score of 12 to 0, but it has shown a big improvement since that time, shutting out the St. Paul Athletics last Saturday by the score of 16 to 0. The Superior men have a heavy, aggressive line and a fast back field.

The Duluth team has had but little time to practice, but all of the players are in good shape, most of them having played baseball or rowed during the summer months.

An attempt is being made to get Coach Church of the high school team in the game Saturday. He has not yet decided whether to don the moleskins again or not, but the other members of the team have not yet given up hope of getting him out. Several members of last year's Zeniths will be in the line, and the team will probably be the heaviest and strongest football team seen in Duluth in years.

The game will be called at 3 o'clock at Athletic park.

The line-up of the two teams has not yet been fully decided, but as nearly as is known, it will be as follows:

KEMPF IS JUBILANT

Over the Outlook of His Case In the Court.

Milwaukee, Oct. 25—The case of John J. Kempf, candidate for state treasurer on the La Follette Republican ticket, who resigned and later instituted proceedings to prevent his name from being dropped from the ticket, came up before Judge Williams in the superior court today. Kempf's attorney objected to proceeding with the case, on the ground that he had not agreed to the stipulation for the removal of the case to Judge Williams' court. The case was previously before Judge Tarrant, in the circuit court. Judge Tarrant is now trying a criminal case, and it is not probable the case will be finished in time to take up the Kempf case. As Monday is the last day for filing nominations with the secretary of state, it is not thought possible that the case can be disposed of unless the attorneys of both sides can agree on stipulations as to some other court. Kempf's friends are jubilant over the outlook.

W. J. BRYAN IS CONFIDENT

That the Democrats Will Carry State of Indiana.

New York, Oct. 25.—A statement from William J. Bryan of his impressions during his speaking tours in Indiana, as expressed in a letter received here, was issued at Democratic national headquarters today. In the statement as given out by the committee, Mr. Bryan is quoted as saying:

"So far as I can judge from the size of the crowds and the interest manifested and the expressions of the people, the Democrats of Indiana are ready for election day. There will be no considerable defection among the silver Democrats of the state. If I can judge from what I have seen in the sections I visited, I take it for granted that every gold Democrat who has not gone over to the Republican party permanently, will support the ticket. I leave Indiana with hope and confidence of Democratic victory."

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 25.—William J. Bryan arrived from Hamilton, Ohio, today and for the second time started to tour the state, having left Indiana last week to make a number of addresses elsewhere. It was arranged to have him speak today in eight towns, as follows:

Kendallville, Goshen, Warsaw, North Manchester, Bolivar, Rochester, Plymouth and at South Bend in the evening.

ARC LIGHT FALLS.

Causes Sudden Commotion In Spalding Lobby.

Shortly before 8 o'clock last evening guests at the Spalding were startled by a loud report. Some thought the Russian fleet had opened fire in the Duluth harbor. Others, who were nearer to the cause of the trouble, were glad that they carried accident insurance.

One of the ceiling lights in the lobby, just beyond the Superior street entrance, fell to the floor with a great crash and scattering of broken glass, giving some of those who were standing inside at the time a palpitation of the heart that was rather emphatic. No one was hurt, however, which was considered very fortunate, as the falling apparatus was rather heavy.

Some wires had become crossed, causing a great sputtering of the light and finally dissolution of the chandelier. Repairs were made this morning.

AMERICAN SINGER

Has Quit the Opera Comique In Paris.

Paris, Oct. 25.—Miss Courtney Thomas of St. Louis is leaving the Opera Comique after seven years. She is preparing to go to America and is negotiating with Mr. Johnston for a tour of fifty concerts. She is greatly annoyed at reports published in the American press concerning the dispute with Massenet concerning the "Cherubim." She sang the parts for Massenet last year while he composed them, but the opera never was intended for her.

Emma Eames will make her reappearance at the Opera Comique Oct. 27 at a matinee organized to found a room for artists of that theater in the Maison de Retraite des Comediens. She will sing Puccini's "Fosca."

Bessie Abbott made her debut at the Opera Comique Thursday as Layme. She will sing Zerline in "Don Juan" the first week in November.

HUNGRY EAGLE

Is Captured By Dog It Had Attacked.

Paris, Oct. 25.—A dog belonging to a farmer in the vicinity of Romans, captured a big eagle recently, after a desperate struggle. The bird had picked out the dog for a meal while the animal was dozing in the sun. The dog, feeling the eagle's talons in his back, squirmed quickly round and bit the eagle's leg. The bird let go, but the dog hung on and completely subdued the eagle. When the owner of the dog arrived the bird was still alive, with its four-footed victor lying on top of him, keeping guard. The eagle measured five feet from tip to tip of its outstretched wings.

WAISTCOATS

Of London Smart Set Have New Cut.

London, Oct. 25.—It is the fashion among the ultra-smart, well-dressed men to have their white waistcoats for evening dress cut low, right to the bottom of the shirt front, and then fastened with two buttons, which are generally jeweled. The ends of the waistcoats are coming in long points with a roll. The revers of the waistcoats are not ironed flat back, but form quite a turnover in the old-fashioned style, worn by Count Dorsay. Of course, the vest wants well cutting and well washing, and then the effect is extremely smart. There is a tendency, too, for the use of two studs instead of one.

P. S.—WE WILL HAVE MORE OF THOSE 63c STANDS SOON.

Last evening, at the club room of the library, an interested audience of many of the prominent club women of the city and others interested in the lecturer, listened to a delightful lecture by Dr. Richard Burton, formerly of the Minnesota university. Dr. Burton was presented to the audience by Clarence B. Miller, who, as a student at the State university, was a keen admirer of Mr. Burton's manifold abilities.

The subject of Dr. Burton's lecture was "The Modern Drama," and it was presented in an interesting manner, with the convincing force of a scholar, cultured and widely read on this subject, which is of so much interest to the educated people of the day. Dr. Burton said in part:

"To many of us dramatic literature means Shakespeare, but this master of dramatic poetry has by no means always enjoyed the approbation he now receives, nor was he placed in his own day in the niche he now occupies. Shakespeare was regarded by many of his contemporaries as a scamp, and at one time for a period of upward of 200 years. When his plays were patronized, they were modified, and always to their injury. 'King Lear,' was played for this extensive period, was changed to such a hodgepodge of unreality that the majestic grandeur of the tragedy was unrecognizable. Edgar, if you please, son of Gloucester, in the play, was married to Cordelia, and Lear was resuscitated and reigned for many years. Imagine it.

"But for 100 years or more the drama has been regarded as Shakespeare. Welcome as is this adoration for the great dramatic poet, the result is rather unfair and ends in a misappreciation of the later dramatic development, and a great deal has been done in the last half century. In the first of the eighteenth century there was Sheridan and Goldsmith, followed later by Knowles and Bulwer. With the '60s and '70s came a change, and with the next thirty years a general and brilliant development occurred. The last quarter century can point to a poetic development surpassing in some points the Elizabethan period."

The names and works of the present day masters followed. The lecturer pointed our the qualities in the plays of the present day writers that make them worthy of study and that will make them the men whose writings will be considered worthy of study years hence. All of Dr. Burton's criticism was made from the standpoint of one who accepted the strong vital points of the writers, and not an enthusiast, who accepts all that may be presented. He spoke of the immense influence Ibsen exerts in the realm of intellectual literature, together with what he is doing for the technical development of the play, as a form. He spoke of the work of Annunzio, Rostand and Stephen Phillips; of Jones, Pinero, Irving and Grundy, and of the strong and virile work of Maeterlinck, and of the rather freaky productions of Gates and George Bernard Shaw, pregnant, however, with a satiric directness that make them worthy of consideration.

Dr. Burton closed with a plea for a greater attitude of culture and conscience on the part of theater-goers which will bring nearer the possibility of an independent theater, which will help immensely the work of the poetic dramatist.

HER AFFINITY

By C. S. Valentine.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Gerald Powers and Margaret Hope leaned over the rail of the great ocean steamer and gazed absently at the vast stretch of waters. Each was busy with thoughts of the other—the man wondering whether he dared ask the question which had been trembling on his lips since the third day out, the girl striving to think of some way to avoid the declaration of love. She knew he was a masterful man, who sooner or later would have his say, and she dreaded the moment when it would come.

She had left her home in Kentucky under the chaperonage of an officer's wife, to go to the Philippines to marry a young lieutenant, to whom she had been engaged since her school days. He had joined the army and had eventually been sent to the Philippines, where they had arranged she was to meet him and be married the following year. The correspondence between them had been very brisk at first, but, almost imperceptibly, the intervals between their letters had lengthened. Margaret belonged to a gay set, who were dining and dancing and constantly pursuing pleasure, although she was not a shallow butterfly; she had depths of feeling which few of her companions suspected, and she often wished she were out of the giddy whirl of fashionable life, and determined that when she married she would devote much of her time to the uplifting and refining of the strange people to whose country she was going.

Lieut. Walford had written that society at the post where he was stationed was much like that at home. There were several officers with their families and numbers of delightful tourists to help enliven their assemblies. Naturally, he went about a good bit, for he was one of those gay, light-hearted young fellows who are general favorites. The fact that Violet Landon, his captain's daughter was often mentioned in his letters had never given her uneasiness; she was the daughter of his captain, and would probably become her most intimate friend when she went to the Philippines, and it was very nice in her to do so much for Lieut. Walford. Margaret did not stop to ask herself whether this lack of jealousy was the result of a perfect trust in the loyalty of her fiance to herself, or because she did not love him so completely that it did not hurt her to have him attentive to other women. She took it simply as a matter of course that she should trust him implicitly, as he, doubtless, trusted her.

For some months the plans had been made for her trip, the chaperone engaged and the wedding day set, and Margaret prepared her trousseau and secured passage in the great ocean steamer without any misgivings. There had been no letter on the last regular letter day, but that had occasioned no uneasiness in her mind, for mails were frequently delayed. Could she have pierced the veil of the future and read what was written in the letter which was delayed, her whole life would have been changed. But luckily in some cases, unluckily in others, it is not given to human beings to see what lays "just beyond."

It was a great shock to Margaret when, in mid ocean, she discovered that Geraud Powers, whom she had never met until the day of sailing, had aroused a love in her breast before which the placid, calm affection she felt for Lieut. Walford faded into significance.

They were both good sailors, and were much together from the beginning of the voyage. Margaret's chaperone had suffered greatly from mal de mer and had not left her stateroom, otherwise, as she was a garrulous woman, she would have told Powers the object of Margaret's trip. Margaret did not speak of it, so he was blissfully ignorant.

From the first these two had been drawn together by that strange power which is variously called fate, magnetism, or affinity of souls. No one has yet discovered what this power is, although countless thousands of men and women, in all ages, have felt and marvelled at its strength.

They were within a day's journey of Margaret's destination when the avowal she dreaded, yet longed to hear, came. When he had poured out his whole soul to her and begged her to give her life into his keeping, she made a pitiful effort to be brave. How hard the struggle was between love and duty only those who have gone through a similar experience can ever know. Every fiber of her womanly nature cried out against giving up this perfect, new-found love, but her lips opened to refuse the cup of happiness pressed to them, when they were interrupted by a party passing noisily by.

"What a bore to get the news before we land!" cried a woman waving a paper aloft. "I wish the 'wireless' had never been invented, or ships allowed to get out newspapers. Listen how Vi Landon has got ahead of us. 'The marriage of Miss Violet Landon, daughter of Capt. Landon, to Lieut. Walford, has been announced to take place on the 20th instant.'" Gaily commenting on the affair they passed on, leaving Margaret stunned by the news. She felt it must be true, her fiance must have written, and the letter, telling of his desire to marry another, must have come after she left home. Had fate lent a hand in this affair? With a sob of joy she turned to the man beside her.

"I can tell you now that I love you, Gerald," she whispered to him, "but first you must hear my story and see whether you still want my love."

"Since you love me," he made answer, "nothing on earth shall keep us apart."

Half an hour later, as they paced the deck, arm in arm, no shadow of unhappiness was upon their faces. The future golden and full of alluring promise, lay before them, and they were blissfully content.

BUFFALO BILL STILL FIGHTS

For Divorce and Is Said to Be Very Bitter.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Oct. 25.—Much to the surprise of the people in this section the celebrated Cody divorce suit has been brought into the Laramie county court on a change of venue from Sheridan county.

It has been reported that Col. W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," who startled the world over a year ago by filing a petition for divorce from Mrs. Cody, in which he made sensational charges, had dropped the suit against his wife.

Col. Cody is, however, more bitter than ever, and has decided to prosecute the case to the finish. Mrs. Cody will implicate persons of title in England and many prominent Washington and New York women in matters which will prove one of the sensations of the year.

FOOD, NOT FLOWERS,

Wanted By Students of School for Blind.

Janesville, Wis., Oct. 25.—"Give us food, not flowers," is the plea of the students of the Wisconsin state institution for the blind here.

The state is expending $4500 for a hothouse to grow table decorations for the school, but the boys cared for there say it would be better were the money used to improve the fare served.

Ten days ago twenty-one of the students signed a petition to the state board of control, asking that the quality and quantity of food served them be increased, as it was insufficient. They state that the table fare has decreased materially for months.

Harvey Clark, a member of the state board visited the school two hours. He made a report that the food was good except for five days, when there was trouble in the kitchen, but that it had been remedied. The students say this is false, and that they have to go down town two miles to get meals. Small boys are alleged to have cried themselves to sleep from hunger.

OPERATIONS A FAD.

The latest fad in operations has been the appendicitis fad; before that the fad for rectal operations (piles, etc.) held sway. Hundreds of patients were frightened and hurried into hospitals, operated upon and robbed of their last dollar, when the trouble was a simple case of hemorrhoids or piles only, easily cured at home with a simple remedy costing but fifty cents a box.

"I procured one fifty cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure of my druggist, with the intention of buying a larger box later, but was happily surprised when I found that I was cured, and still have six pyramids, left out of the first and only box. I have not had the least sign of piles since I used this one box, which has been about two months; previous to using Pyramid Pile Cure I had the worst kind of bleeding and protruding piles for over thirty-one years, and no one knows, except those who have had the piles, the pain and misery I suffered.

"I am a poor man, but have often said I would give a fortune, if I had it, to be cured of the piles, and now I have been cured for fifty cents. I should be very ungrateful if I did not thank you and give you every privilege to use my name and this letter, when I know there are so many who suffer as I did." J. A. Weismiller, 1100 Bladensburg Road, Washington, D. C.

The Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., publish a little book on the causes and cure of piles, which they will be glad to mail free to any applicant, and we advise all sufferers from this painful disease to write to them for it.

CONNECT TRUSS

Ends of Cross Bridge Pieces to Be Joined November 15.

Both Carriers Now In Place—Work on Approaches Progressing.

"I expect to see the connection in the center of the ferry bridge made by November 15," said one of the engineers supervising the work on the bridge this morning. "All that wil be left to do then will be to install the machinery and hang the car in its place.

"The work of installing the machinery is always slow for some reason, and it is hard to tell just how long that will take, but I can see no cause for any further delay in the work on the truss. Both carriers are up and they should be able to build out those two arms very rapidly."

Joseph Lane, one of the engineers employed to supervise the work left this morning for Minneapolis to secure another crew of experienced men. During the last week only one crew has been at work, but the number will be doubled during the next few days and much better progress will be made. Only experienced bridge workers can be employed and none but union men are allowed to perform any work in connection with the erection of the bridge. Had it not been for this sailors would have been employed to do the common work on the towers, but this is not allowed by the union men.

The operations of the carriers will be an interesting one to watch. They run out along the top chord of the truss carrying the heavy steel girders and lowering them into position.

Work on the bridge has now become dangerous to any but experienced men who are accustomed to working at great elevations. The men will be compelled to walk out over the canal 100 feet above the water and a cool head and steady nerves will be the requirements of all who attempt the task.

The approaches are making good progress. One retaining wall has been constructed for the approach on the north side of the canal, and the other has been commenced. Work has not been commenced on the approach on the south pier as yet. The retaining walls of both approaches will be constructed before any filling is done, as the contractors fear a heavy frost which will make the concrete work ineffective. The sand filling can be put in any time.

The extension of time for which the company has applied will allow two months more for the completion of the bridge, and it is hoped to have it ready for operation by January 1, which was the date predicted by City Engineer McGilvray several weeks ago.

Sault Ste. Marie—The old idea of making a new state of the Upper peninsula has been revived by the citizens of this part of Michgan. But the old plan of tacking on a part of Wisconsin has been dropped, the general opinion being that the Upper peninsula is large and rich enough to become a separate state without acquiring any new territory.

Advocates of the plan favor calling the state Superior, which would be the most representative name that could be chosen. The Upper peninsula is growing rapidly, both in population and wealth. Its mining interests are assuming mammoth proportions, while it will be but a short time before some of its cities will be large manufacturing centers.

One of the chief reasons for wanting a change is that the peninsulas really have very little in common. In politics, the northern part of the state has never been represented as it should be, leading politicians feeling that they have been given nothing but the crumbs. Their strongest men have been turned down in favor of less worthy aspirants for public favor, simply because, it is alleged, the Upper peninsula has always been sure to give a big Republican majority.

A majority of the people of the Upper peninsula know nothing of the southern part of the state. Many of them have come from the West; others from Canada and the South. Therefore, they do not take the interest in state affairs that they would were the Upper peninsula to become a state by itself.

Marquette, the Soo and Menominee will probably enter the race for the state capital. Marquette has the best natural location, as it is nearest to the center of the peninsula, but the other towns have many advantages that would make them strong bidders for the prize.

Ionia—Frank Bird, aged 19, was shot and killed by a member of a party which was shooting at a target.

Munising—Never before in that part of the country, it is declared, have hawks been as numerous as they are at present on Grand Island, off Munising, to which they are attracted by the game birds which make their home there. The birds have been seen in flocks numbering seven or eight. Fully twenty-five hawks have been killed by the gamekeepers on Grand Island and the war of extermination still goes on. A further consignment of twenty-six game birds has been received from Sweden by the Cleveland-Cliffs company, owner of the island. These birds, like those which preceded them, have been turned loose in the game preserve, which is proving an idal place for them. Another consignment is expected shortly.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Five Hold-Ups Occur at Fargo In One Night.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—This city seems to be passing through an epidemic of crime and the police apparently are powerless. The "strong-arm men" began shortly after supper time Saturday night last and two of the victims were young women. The first holdup took place a few minutes after 6 o'clock, and the victim was a working girl on her way home with her week's wages. The usual command "Hands up" and the pressing of a revolver were used in each case. Handbags and pocketbooks were obtained and the robbers got away.

One young fellow who was stopped happened to have a stick and made a quick move and caught the highwayman over the face and head with the result that the robber took to his heels. Altogether there were five holdups, but nothing was accomplished by the police and the thieves obtained but little.

A well dressed young fellow tried his hand at raising "easy money" through the forged check route and the buying of clothing and getting a substantial amount in change back. As it happened the local clothing men have become rather wily and all checks now have to pass through a rigid censorship, and that is how Roy Lowry became entangled in meshes which landed him in the county jail to await trial. Before coming to Fargo he tried to cash the fraudulent paper in saloons and clothing houses in Moorhead. The name he attached to the check was that of a prominent insurance man.

Numerous complaints have been made of attempted assaults on young girls, and the police are making every effort to catch a well dressed middle-aged man who points a revolver at the head of the victim attacked and then invites the girl to a secluded spot near by.

Oscar Camp, a returning harvest hand, trusted two friends too implicitly and displayed his roll of $150 while taking a social glass over in Moorhead. The trio went to the same hotel to sleep, but two of them were early risers and Camp is minus his money.

Food Commissioner Ladd has come out with an official notice which puts the ban upon two varieties of prunes, the Silver and the Ruby, which he has been testing and has found to contain large quantities of sulphates. He urges merchants to secure guarantees from the packers before offering them for sale.

Grand Forks—Owing to defective information, the supreme court has reversed the verdict of the lower court in the case of the state against Martin Mattison, Erickson Mattison and Lye Storby, charged with shooting with intent to kill a settler named George Olson, who lived on a claim adjoining the Mattisons, in Ward county. Martin Mattison was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary, Lye Storby to one year and Erick Mattison to eighteen months.

It is expected that new information will be filed against the men.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Huron—Harry H. Green and Miss Grace M. Harding, both of Alcaster, were married here by Rev. J. P. Anderson. It appears that these young people, in order to avoid a "spread wedding," with its accompanying frills, determined to go to Pierre, and on the trip stop in this city and be married. A telegram detained the clerk at his office after office hours, to accommodate them with a marriage license.

Yankton—The attention of President Roosevelt is called to the family of John Gropper, who resides on a farm west of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Gropper have been married sixteen years, and have fifteen children to show for it. If the president has any medals to distribute for "well done good and faithful," he should bestow about seventeen of them upon the Gropper family for their successful effort in neutralizing the "race suicide" of our fashionable Eastern people. It wouldn't be a bad plan to pension Mr. and Mrs. Gropper, and thus stimulate others to go and do likewise.

Deadwood—The marriage of C. E. Dawson and Miss Bertha Wringrose took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wringrose, the parents of the bride. After the ceremony a reception was held and was attended by a large number. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson left for an Eastern trip.

THE STORY OF CARDIFF GIANT

Michael Foley of Fort Dodge, Ia., Quarried the Stone.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Oct. 25.—Surrounded by a happy family of children and grandchildren, Michael Foley, of this city, celebrated his 82nd birthday anniversary with good chances for participating in many to come. Mr. Foley has lived a quiet life for many years, but remembers well the time that he was engaged to quarry the rock which was afterward made into the "Cardiff giant," one of the most colossal frauds ever perpetrated upon an unsuspecting public.

It was in the month of July, 1868, that two men, one giving his name as Hull, of Syracuse, N. Y., and the other Martin, claiming to be from Cedar Rapids, engaged quarters in the old St. Charles hotel in this city. They pretended to be studying the geographical conditions about Fort Dodge. They made several inquiries as to where they could find a large ledge of gypsum rock. They even went so far as to buy an acre of ground and quarried it with a view of finding out just what they wanted, but failed. They were finally informed in a casual way that Michael Foley, who was engaged in getting out rock for a railroad company, could in all probability get them what they wanted. When pressed for an explanation as to what purpose they intended putting the rock, Hull explained that they were going to ship it to New York to exhibit for the purpose of raising a stock company to manufacture plasterparis. Martin said they were going to take it to Springfield, Ill., as Iowa's contribution to the Lincoln monument, which was then being built.

When Mr. Foley was interviewed concerning the stone, he informed them that he could ill their order. He had just stripped a ledge of gypsum rock about 100 feet long. On the top of this he drilled some twelve holes and poured in about fifteen pounds of powder. A long fuse touched it off at once and the rock was broken loose in splendid condition. It was 24 feet long, 3 feet wide and 18 inches thick.

The stone was shipped to Chicago, where it was given in charge of a sculptor, who carved it into a giant, packed it with needles, while it was soft, to give it the appearance of human skin, treated it with acids to give it the ancient appearance, and packed it in an iron box, 12 feet long, 4 feet wide and 3 feet deep, and in this manner shipped it to George Olds, at Union, N. Y. It arrived at Union on Oct. 13, 1868. On Nov. 4 a man claimed the box, receipted for it, loaded it on a large wagon, hitched four horses on and carted it fifty miles to a place near Cardiff, in Onondaga county, N. Y., where the giant was buried and remained until Oct. 16, 1869, nearly a year, when the resurrection took place while men were pretending to dig for a well. Special trains were run from New York, carrying visitors by the thousands, to see it, and it is estimated that 50,000 persons visited the spot the first week after it was discovered and paid $1 each for a sight of the giant made from the stone quarried by Michael Foley.

MARINE BAND NEEDY.

Famous Government Band On the Down Grade.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The annual report of Brig. Gen. He points out that because of the opposition of musical unions the band is prevented from accepting many outside engagements, and the men refuse to re-enter the service at the expiration of their terms of enlistment, as it is only through outside work that they area ble to earn as much as they can in civil life.

P. S.—WE WILL HAVE MORE OF THOSE 63c STANDS SOON.

Last evening, at the club room of the library, an interested audience of many of the prominent club women of the city and others interested in the lecture, listened to a delightful lecture by Dr. Richard Burton, formerly of the Minnesota university. Dr. Burton was presented to the audience by Clarence B. Miller, who, as a student at the State university, was a keen admirer of Mr. Burton's manifold abilities.

The subject of Dr. Burton's lecture was "The Modern Drama," and it was presented in an interesting manner, with the convincing force of a scholar, cultured and widely read on this subject, which is of so much interest to the educated people of the day. Dr. Burton said in part:

"To many of us dramatic literature means Shakespeare, but this master of dramatic poetry has by no means always enjoyed the approbation he now receives, nor was he placed in his own day in the niche he now occupies. Shakespeare was regarded by many of his contemporaries as a seamp, and at one time for a period of upward of 200 years. When his plays were patronized, they were modified, and always to their injury. 'King Lear,' was played for this extensive period, was changed to such a hodgepodge of unreality that the majestic grandeur of the tragedy was unrecognizable. Edgar, if you please, son of Gloucester, in the play, was married to Cordelia, and Lear was resuscitated and reigned for many years. Imagine it.

"But for 100 years or more the drama has been regarded as Shakespeare. Welcome as is this alteration for the great dramatic poet, the result is rather unfair and ends in a misappreciation of the later dramatic development, and a great deal has been done in the last half century. In the first of the eighteenth century there was Sheridan and Goldsmith, followed later by Knowles and Bulwer. With the '80s and '90s came a change, and with the next thirty years a general and brilliant development occurred. The last quarter century can point to a poetic development surpassing in some points the Elizabethan period."

The names and works of the present day masters followed. The lecturer pointed out the qualities in the plays of the present day writers that make them worthy of study and that will make them the men whose writings will be considered worthy of study years hence. All of Dr. Burton's criticism was made from the standpoint of one who accepted the strong vital points of the writers, and not an enthusiast, who accepts all that may be presented. He spoke of the immense influence Ibsen exerts in the realm of intellectual literature, together with what he is doing for the technical development of the play, as a form. He spoke of the work of Annunzio, Rostand and Stephen Phillips; of Jones, Pinero, Irving and Grundy, and of the strong and virile work of Maeterlinck, and of the rather freaky productions of Gates and George Bernard Shaw, pregnant, however, with a satiric directness that make them worthy of consideration.

Dr. Burton closed with a plea for a greater attitude of culture and conscience on the part of theater-goers which will bring nearer the possibility of an independent theater, which will help immensely the work of the poetic dramatist.

HER AFFINITY

By C. S. Valentine.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Gerald Powers and Margaret Hope leaned over the rail of the great ocean steamer and gazed absently at the vast stretch of waters. Each was busy with thoughts of the other—the man wondering whether he dared ask the question which had been trembling on his lips since the third day out, the girl striving to think of some way to avoid the declaration of love. She knew he was a masterful man, who sooner or later would have his say, and she dreaded the moment when it would come.

She had left her home in Kentucky under the chaperonage of an officer's wife, to go to the Philippines to marry a young lieutenant, to whom she had been engaged since her school days. He had joined the army and had eventually been sent to the Philippines, where they had arranged she was to meet him and be married the following year. The correspondence between them had been very brisk at first, but, almost imperceptibly, the intervals between their letters had lengthened. Margaret belonged to a gay set, who were dining and dancing and constantly pursuing pleasure, although she was not a shallow butterfly; she had depths of feeling which few of her companions suspected, and she often wished she were out of the giddy whirl of fashionable life, and determined that when she married she would devote much of her time to the uplifting and refining of the strange people to whose country she was going.

Lieut. Walford had written that society at the post where he was stationed was much like that at home. There were several officers with their families and numbers of delightful tourists to help enliven their assemblies. Naturally, he went about a good bit, for he was one of those gay, light-hearted young fellows who are general favorites. The fact that Violet Landon, his captain's daughter was often mentioned in his letters had never given her uneasiness; she was the daughter of his captain, and would probably become her most intimate friend when she went to the Philippines, and it was very nice in her to do so much for Lieut. Walford. Margaret did not stop to ask herself whether this lack of jealousy was the result of a perfect trust in the loyalty of her fiance to herself, or because she did not love him so completely that it did not hurt her to have him attentive to other women. She took it simply as a matter of course that she should trust him implicitly, as he, doubtless, trusted her.

For some months the plans had been made for her trip, the chaperone engaged and the wedding day set, and Margaret prepared her trousseau and secured passage in the great ocean steamer without any misgivings. There had been no letter on the last regular letter day, but that had occasioned no uneasiness in her mind, for mails were frequently delayed. Could she have pierced the veil of the future and read what was written in the letter which was delayed, her whole life would have been changed. But luckily in some cases, unluckily in others, it is not given to human beings to see what lays "just beyond."

It was a great shock to Margaret when, in mid ocean, she discovered that Gerald Powers, whom she had never met until the day of sailing, had aroused a love in her breast before which the placid, calm affection she felt for Lieut. Walford faded into significance.

They were both good sailors, and were much together from the beginning of the voyage. Margaret's chaperone had suffered greatly from mal de mer and had not left her stateroom, otherwise, as she was a garrulous woman, she would have told Powers the object of Margaret's trip. Margaret did not speak of it, so he was blissfully ignorant.

From the first these two had been drawn together by that strange power which is variously called fate, magnetism, or affinity of souls. No one has yet discovered what this power is, although countless thousands of men and women, in all ages, have felt and marvelled at its strength.

They were within a day's journey of Margaret's destination when the avowal she dreaded, yet longed to hear, came. When he had poured out his whole soul to her and begged her to give her life into his keeping, she made a pitiful effort to be brave. How hard the struggle was between love and duty only those who have gone through a similar experience can ever know. Every fiber of her womanly nature cried out against giving up this perfect, new-found love, but her lips opened to refuse the cup of happiness pressed to them, when they were interrupted by a party passing noisily by.

"What a bore to get the news before we land!" cried a woman waving a paper aloft. "I wish the 'wireless' had never been invented, or ships allowed to get out newspapers. Listen how Vi Landon has got ahead of us. 'The marriage of Miss Violet Landon, daughter of Capt. Landon, to Lieut. Walford has been announced to take place on the 20th instant.' " Gaily commenting on the affair they passed on, leaving Margaret stunned by the news. She felt it must be true, her fiance must have written, and the letter, telling of his desire to marry another, must have come after she left home. Had fate lent a hand in this affair? With a sob of joy she turned to the man beside her.

"I can tell you now that I love you, Gerald," she whispered to him, "but first you must hear my story and see whether you still want my love."

"Since you love me," he made answer, "nothing on earth shall keep us apart."

Half an hour later, as they paced the deck, arm in arm, no shadow of unhappiness was upon their faces. The future golden and full of alluring promise, lay before them, and they were blissfully content.

BUFFALO BILL STILL FIGHTS

For Divorce and Is Said to Be Very Bitter.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Oct. 25.—Much to the surprise of the people in this section the celebrated Cody divorce suit has been brought into the Laramie county court on a change of venue from Sheridan county.

It has been reported that Col. W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," who startled the world over a year ago by filing a petition for divorce from Mrs. Cody, in which he made sensational charges, had dropped the suit against his wife.

Col. Cody is, however, more bitter than ever, and has decided to prosecute the case to the finish. Mrs. Cody will implicate persons of title in England and many prominent Washington and New York women in matters which will prove one of the sensations of the year.

FOOD, NOT FLOWERS,

Wanted By Students of School for Blind.

Janesville, Wis., Oct. 25.—"Give us food, not flowers," is the plea of the students of the Wisconsin state institution for the blind here.

The state is expending $450 for a hothouse to grow table decorations for the school, but the boys cared for there say it would be better were the money used to improve the fare served.

Ten days ago twenty-one of the students signed a petition to the state board of control, asking that the quality and quantity of food served them be increased, as it was insufficient. They state that the table fare has decreased materially for months.

Harvey Clark, a member of the state board visited the school two hours. He made a report that the food was good except for five days, when there was trouble in the kitchen, but that it had been remedied. The students say this is false, and that they have to go down town two miles to get meals. Small boys are alleged to have cried themselves to sleep from hunger.

OPERATIONS A FAD.

The latest fad in operations has been the appendicitis fad; before that the fad for rectal operations (piles, etc.) held sway. Hundreds of patients were frightened and hurried into hospitals, operated upon and robbed of their last dollar, when the trouble was a simple case of hemorrhoids or piles only, easily cured at home with a simple remedy costing but fifty cents a box.

"I procured one fifty cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure of my druggist, with the intention of buying a larger box later, but was happily surprised when I found that I was cured, and still have six pyramids, left out of the first and only box. I have not had the least sign of piles since I used this one box, which has been about two months; previous to using Pyramid Pile Cure I had the worst kind of bleeding and protruding piles for over thirty-one years, and no one knows, except those who have had the piles, the pain and misery I suffered.

"I am a poor man, but have often said I would give a fortune, if I had it, to be cured of the piles, and now I have been cured for fifty cents. I should be very ungrateful if I did not thank you and give you every privilege to use my name and this letter, when I know there are so many who suffer as I did." J. A. Weisiniller, 1106 Bladensburg Road, Washington, D. C.

The Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., publish a little book on the causes and cure of piles, which they will be glad to mail free to any applicant, and we advise all sufferers from this painful disease to write to them for it.

CONNECT TRUSS

Ends of Cross Bridge Pieces to Be Joined November 15.

Both Carriers Now In Place—Work on Approaches Progressing.

"I expect to see the connection in the center of the ferry bridge made by November 15," said one of the engineers supervising the work on the bridge this morning. "All that wil be left to do then will be to install the machinery and hang the car in its place.

"The work of installing the machinery is always slow for some reason, and it is hard to tell just how long that will take, but I can see no cause for any further delay in the work on the truss. Both carriers are up and they should be able to build out those two arms very rapidly."

Joseph Lane, one of the engineers employed to supervise the work left this morning for Minneapolis to secure another crew of experienced men. During the last week only one crew has been at work, but the number will be doubled during the next few days and much better progress will be made. Only experienced bridge workers can be employed and none but union men are allowed to perform any work in connection with the erection of the bridge. Had it not been for this sailors would have been employed to do the common work on the towers, but this is not allowed by the union men.

Work on the bridge has now become dangerous to any but experienced men who are accustomed to working at great elevations. The men will be compelled to walk out over the canal 100 feet above the water and a cool head and steady nerves will be the requirements of all who attempt the task.

The approaches are making good progress. One retaining wall has been constructed for the approach on the north side of the canal, and the other has been commenced. Work has not been commenced on the approach on the south pier as yet. The retaining walls of both approaches will be constructed before any filling is done, as the contractors fear a heavy frost which will make the concrete work difficult. The sand filling can be put in any time.

The extension of time for which the company has applied will allow two months more for the completion of the bridge, and it is hoped to have it ready for operation by January 1, which was the date predicted by City Engineer McGilvray several weeks ago.

Escanaba Woman Dies Almost Instantly In Dentist Chair.

Escanaba—Matilda Bensen, aged 24 years, died in the dentist's chair yesterday from a shock occasioned by having twelve teeth extracted. Dentist A. S. Winn had his patient under chloroform and this, with the severe shock caused almost immediate death.

Sault Ste. Marie—The old idea of making a new state of the Upper peninsula has been revived by the citizens of this part of Michigan. But the old plan of tacking on a part of Wisconsin has been dropped, the general opinion being that the Upper peninsula is large and rich enough to become a separate state without acquiring any new territory.

Advocates of the plan favor calling the state Superior, which would be the most representative name that could be chosen. The Upper peninsula is growing rapidly, both in population and wealth. Its mining interests are assuming mammoth proportions, while it will be but a short time before some of its cities will be large manufacturing centers.

One of the chief reasons for wanting a change is that the peninsula really have very little in common. In politics, the northern part of the state has never been represented as it should be, leading politicians feeling that they have been given nothing but the crumbs. Their strongest men have been turned down in favor of less worthy aspirants for public favor, simply because, it is alleged, the Upper peninsula has always been sure to give a big Republican majority.

A majority of the people of the Upper peninsula know nothing of the southern part of the state. Many of them have come from the West; others from Canada and the South. Therefore, they do not take the interest in state affairs that they would were the Upper peninsula to become a state by itself.

Marquette, the Soo and Menominee will probably enter the race for the state capital, Marquette has the best natural location, as it is nearest to the center of the peninsula, but the other towns have many advantages that would make them strong bidders for the prize.

Ionia—Frank Bird, aged 19, was shot and killed by a member of a party which was shooting at a target.

Munising—Never before in that part of the country, it is declared, have hawks been as numerous as they are at present on Grand Island, off Munising, to which they are attracted by the game birds which make their home there. The birds have been seen in flocks numbering seven or eight. Fully twenty-five hawks have been killed by the gamekeepers on Grand Island and the war of extermination still goes on. A further consignment of twenty-six game birds has been received from Sweden by the Cleveland-Cliffs company, owner of the island. These birds, like those which preceded them, have been turned loose in the game preserve, which is proving an ideal place for them. Another consignment is expected shortly.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Five Hold-Ups Occur at Fargo In One Night.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—This city seems to be passing through an epidemic of crime and the police apparently are powerless. The "strong-arm men" began shortly after supper time Saturday night last and two of the victims were young women. The first holding took place a few minutes after 6 o'clock, and the victim was a working girl on her way home with her week's wages. The usual command "hands up" and the pressing of a revolver were used in each case. Handbags and pocketbooks were obtained and the robbers got away.

One young fellow who was stopped happened to have a stick and made a quick move and caught the highwayman over the face and head with the result that the robber took to his heels. Altogether there were five holdups, but nothing was accomplished by the police and the thieves obtained but little.

A well dressed young fellow tried his hand at raising "easy money" through the forged check route and the buying of clothing and getting a substantial amount in change back. As it happened the local clothing men have become rather wily and all checks now have to pass through a rigid censorship, and that is how Roy Lowry became entangled in meshes which landed him in the county jail to await trial. Before coming to Fargo he tried to cash the fraudulent paper in saloons and clothing houses in Moorhead. The name he attached to the check was that of a prominent insurance man.

Numerous complaints have been made of attempted assaults on young girls, and the police are making every effort to catch a well dressed middle-aged man who points a revolver at the head of the victim attacked and then invites the girl to a secluded spot near by.

Oscar Camp, a returning harvest hand, trusted two friends too implicitly and displayed his roll of $150 while taking a social glass over in Moorhead. The trio went to the same hotel to sleep, but two of them were early risers and Camp is minus his money.

Food Commissioner Ladd has come out with an official notice which puts the ban upon two varieties of prunes, the Silver and the Ruby, which he has been testing and has found to contain large quantities of sulphates. He urges merchants to secure guarantees from the packers before offering them for sale.

Grand Forks—Owing to defective information the supreme court has reversed the verdict of the lower court in the case of the state against Martin Mattison. Erickson Mattison and Lye Storby, charged with shooting with intent to kill a settler named George Olson, who lived on a claim adjoining the Mattisons, in Ward county. Martin Mattison was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary, Lye Storby to one year and Erick Mattison to eighteen months.

It is expected that new information will be filed against the men.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Huron—Harry H. Green and Miss Grace M. Harding, both of Alcaster, were married here by Rev. J. P. Anderson. It appears that these young people, in order to avoid a "spread wedding," with its accompanying trills, determined to go to Pierre, and on the trip stop in this city and be married. A telegram detained the clerk at his office after office hours, to accommodate them with a marriage license.

Yankton—The attention of President Roosevelt is called to the family of John Gropper, who resides on a farm west of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Gropper have been married sixteen years, and have fifteen children to show for it. If the president has any medals to distribute for "well done good and faithful," he should bestow about seventeen of them upon the Gropper family for their successful effort in neutralizing the "race suicide" of our fashionable Eastern people. It wouldn't be a bad plan to pension Mr. and Mrs. Gropper, and thus stimulate others to go and do likewise.

Deadwood—The marriage of C. E. Dawson and Miss Bertha Wringrose took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wringrose, the parents of the bride. After the ceremony a reception was held and was attended by a large number. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson left for an Eastern trip.

Michael Foley of Fort Dodge, Ia., Quarried the Stone.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Oct. 25.—Surrounded by a happy family of children and grandchildren, Michael Foley, of this city, celebrated his 82nd birthday anniversary with good cheer, for participating in many to some. Mr. Foley has lived a quiet life for many years, but remembers well the time that he was engaged to quarry the rock which was afterward made into the "Cardiff giant," one of the most colossal frauds ever perpetrated upon an unsuspecting public.

It was in the month of July, 1868, that two men, one giving his name as Hull, of Syracuse, N. Y., and the other Martin, claiming to be from Cedar Rapids, engaged quarters in the old St. Charles hotel in this city. They pretended to be studying the geographical conditions about Fort Dodge. They made several inquiries as to where they could find a large ledge of gypsum rock. They even went so far as to buy an acre of ground and quarried it with a view of finding out just what they wanted, but failed. They were finally informed in a casual way that Michael Foley, who was engaged in getting out rock for a railroad company, could in all probability get them what they wanted. When pressed for an explanation as to what purpose they intended putting the rock, Hull explained that they were going to ship it to New York to exhibit for the purpose of raising a stock company to manufacture plasterparis. Martin said they were going to take it to Springfield, Ill., as Iowa's contribution to the Lincoln monument, which was then being built.

When Mr. Foley was interviewed concerning the stone, he informed them that he could fill their order. He had just stripped a ledge of gypsum rock about 100 feet long. On the top of this he drilled some twelve holes and poured in about fifteen pounds of powder. A long fuse touched it off at once and the rock was broken loose in splendid condition. It was 24 feet long, 3 feet wide and 18 inches thick.

The stone was shipped to Chicago, where it was given in charge of a sculptor, who carved it into a giant, pricked it with needles, while it was soft, to give it the appearance of human skin, treated it with acids to give it the ancient appearance, and packed it in an iron box, 12 feet long, 4 feet wide and 3 feet deep, and in this manner shipped it to George Olds, at Union, N. Y. It arrived at Union on Oct. 12, 1868. On Nov. 1 a man climed the box, receipted for it, loaded it on a large wagon, hitched four horses on and carted it fifty miles to a place near Cardiff, in Onondaga county, N. Y., where the giant was buried and remained until Oct. 16, 1869, nearly a year, when the resurrection took place while men were pretending to dig for a well. Special trains were run from New York, carrying visitors by the thousands, to see it, and it is estimated that 50,000 persons visited the spot the first week after it was discovered and paid $1 each for a sight of the giant made from the stone quarried by Michael Foley.

MARINE BAND NEEDY.

Famous Government Band On the Down Grade.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The annual report of Brig. Gen. Elliott, commandant of the marine corps, urges that increased pay be given the Marine band, by special act of congress, to maintain its efficiency. He points out that because of the opposition of musical unions the band is prevented from accepting many outside engagements, and the men refuse to re-enter the service at the expiration of their terms of enlistment, as it is only through outside work that they are able to earn as much as they can in civil life.

STEAMSHIP LOST

The Massachusetts Is Wrecked Near the Old Bahama Channel.

Was Bound to New Orleans From Cardiff England.

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 25.—The captain of the Spanish steamship Ontaneda, which arrived today, reports the loss of the steamship Massachusetts. The captain states that on the afternoon of Oct. 20, while off Stirrup key, his vessel was approached by an American two masted schooner with flag at half mast. The schooner asked the Ontaneda to report upon arrival at port the loss of the Massachusetts, the wreck having occurred seventeen miles north of the Old Bahama channel. The name of the schooner reporting the wreck is not known. It made no mention of loss of life. The Massachusetts was a steamship bound from Cardiff, England, to New Orleans and consigned to the Leyland line at the latter place.

New Orleans, Oct. 25.—A. J. Sanders, agent of the line admitted that the vessel was now five days overdue, Mr. Sanders, however, has received no advices indicating the loss of the ship except through New York agents of the line. Mr. Sanders said it might be that the vessel has been delayed because she is using but one engine on her present trip.

Lodging House Keeper Is Fined For Selling Liquor.

Charged with selling liquor without a license, Lillie Smith, an employe of the Durham lodging house, was given a hearing before Judge Windom in the municipal court this morning.

It was claimed that last Friday night the woman disposed of a bottle of beer to two lodgers, charging them fifty cents for it. In defense she claimed that she had purchased the beer in the saloon below the lodging house, and had charged the men twenty-five cents for doing the errand.

Judge Windom found her guilty and imposed a fine of $50 and costs with the alternative of spending sixty days in jail.

FAIRBANKS IN MICHIGAN

Vice Presidential Candidate Making Tour of Wolverine State.

Adrian, Mich., Oct. 25.—Senator Charles W. Fairbanks began his Michigan tour today at Monroe, having come across the Michigan line from Columbus, during the night. In spite of the early hour a large crowd assembled to hear the senator, who was introduced by Former Congressman Spaulding. Senator Fairbanks' general text at Monroe was the prosperity, which he said the country has invariably enjoyed under Republican administration and the corresponding depression which he said was bound to come from Democratic rule. His speech, which was brief, was generously applauded and at its conclusion the senator was kept busy for ten minutes shaking hands with the people who wished to meet him.

He spoke in part as follows:

"I am gratified indeed by your cordial early morning welcome to the grand old state of Michigan. I always come to this state with most infinite pleasure. I never come that I do not feel my faith in Republican principles and in the Republican party strengthened. There is something about the Republican party in Michigan that is infectious. The people of this state have been wise thinkers on the problems of government. We honor the memory of that stalwart of stalwarts, Zachariah Chandler, a tower of strength in the perilous hours of the republic. From the time of Lincoln until now the people of Michigan have been loyal in supporting Republican policies and upholding Republican administration.

"The Republican party is a live party: it deals with live questions; it deals with those great problems which are suited to our advancing needs. You always know where to find it when you read its platforms, because the policies therein enunciated are founded upon enduring principles. During the last two administrations we have increased our power at home and we have increased it among all the nations on earth. Not by an appeal to the sword, although once we did invoke the sword to bring about a change in the unhappy conditions in the island of Cuba, but by peaceful methods, our power and prestige throughout the world have been steadily increased, thanks to the brilliant and wise statesmanship of McKinley and Roosevelt and Hay."

Senator Fairbanks also addressed a large crowd at Adrian. His train is scheduled to make eleven stops in Michigan today, including an evening meeting at Grand Rapids. Tomorrow will be devoted to Illinois and Thursday and Friday to Missouri.

TO HOLD UP PAYMENTS

On Panama Canal Object of Suit In Court.

Washington, Oct. 25.—An effort to restrain the secretary of the treasury from making payments or issuing bonds for the acquisition and construction of the Panama canal was made today in the equity branch of the supreme court of the District of Columbia. W. S. Wilson, of Hinsdale, Ill., is the author of the suit and presented his own argument. The principal question involved is whether the courts have authority to restrain a federal office from a wrongful interpretation of a federal law and consequent depletion of the federal treasury. No decision has been made.

DRUNKEN DANE RUNS AMUCK

Shoots at Saloon Keepers and Then Wounds Himself.

Minneapolis, Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hans Olsen, aged 25 years, in a drunken frenzy, last night, fired two shots at the proprietors of the saloon at 701 Washington avenue, south, and then turned the pistol on himself. The saloon is conducted by Henry Rhine and Emil Liljengren.

Olsen had been in the saloon since 10 o'clock, and had been drinking steadily. About midnight he ordered suppers for himself and Liljengren, who was attending the bar. An hour later Rhine came to the saloon, and, after counting the cash, began locking up.

Rhine and Liljengren went into the toilet room to wash their hands, and when they came out saw Olsen standing near the stove with a revolver in his hands. Rhine was in advance, and Olsen blazed away at him, but missed his mark. The former fled out of the back door. As Liljengren emerged two more shots were fired, but Liljengren managed to escape the furious Dane. Later the saloonkeepers, together with a restaurant man named McGregor, returned to the saloon and found Olsen stretched in the throes of death, the pistol lying beside him. He was removed to the city hospital, where his wound was dressed. The bullet entered the stomach, and it is not believed the man can live.

STARTLED BY AIRSHIP

Appearance Over World's Fair Grounds Causes Great Excitement.

St. Louis, Oct. 25.—An aeronaut in the airship of T. C. Baldwin, of Los Angeles, Cal., caused intense excitement at the World's fair grounds today by suddenly appearing over the transportation building at a height of about 1000 feet.

The presence of the airship was not noticed by the majority of the World's fair visitors during the flight from the aeronautic course to the main part of the exposition grounds, a distance of about one mile, but the fact of the flight being made soon attracted the attention of thousands and the flight of the airship was greeted with continued cheering.

The Baldwin airship is constructed along the lines of the popular conception of a flying machine. The buoyancy is secured by a large cigar-shaped balloon, and the car, which is long and narrow, is suspended from the balloon by many wire ropes.

The motive power is secured by means of two large propellers, or wings, one on each side of the car, run by a compact motor, located at the stern. The airship started from the aeronautic course and was controlled by E. R. Knabenshue, of Toledo, Ohio. It was announced that the ascent was simply a trial trip and not an attempt to qualify for the World's fair prize.

THE HUGE TIP SYSTEM SHOWN

Practice at Carlton Hotel In London Revealed In Suit.

London, Oct. 25.—The immediate and enormous success of the new restaurant in Piccadilly, where decent meals at moderate prices are obtainable, and tipping really is forbidden, has started a press discussion on the never-long dormant question of tipping. This has received a great fillip from a remarkable lawsuit just heard. A discharged cloak room attendant brought an action against the Carlton hotel for $415, which he claimed was due him as his proportion of the cloak room tips appropriated by the hotel management.

Evidence showed the claimant received $1.25 a week wages, the salary being made up by a weekly division of tips among the attendants, according to position and length of service. But before the cloak roomers divided the cloak room tip box, the management each week deducted $65. The latter contended the employes had agreed thereto. The claimant denied this, and the result was the jury awarded the claimant $250.

The Carlton now is sore at the revelations of the tipping system prevailing there. It seems the management deducts a proportion of all tips given in the hotel. Counsel, after examining the books, calculated that the management obtained in this way $45,000 during the eighteen months claimant was in service.

Out of the deduction from cloak room tips alone the whole hotel staff is uniformed for one year, at a cost of over $4000, and even then enough is left for the junior attendant to average over the junior attendant to average over $10 weekly. The senior is believed to get $40. The amount of money distributed in great hotels in the form of tips is almost incredible. The tips in the main restaurant alone of the Carlton are believed to amount to $80,000 in one year. The Carlton, however, is the only leading hotel which deducts from its employes any proportion of tips. A pooling arrangement, insuring a fair division, according to rank and length of service, prevails in all hotels.

A NEW PERIL IN KISSING

"Craw-Craw" a South African Disease, Has Been Discovered.

New York, Oct. 25.—A London cable to the Herald says: A new danger has been added to the many which medical men assert surround the habit of kissing. According to Dencer Whittles, who lectures on dental histology and pathology at Birmingham university, "craw-craw," a disease common on the west coast of Africa, has been introduced into this country. Birmingham, he says, has hundreds of cases, while traces of the disease have been found in many other places.

The disease is due to the presence of what is described as a nematove bacillus, which has a peculiar penchant for destroying white corpuscles in the blood. The chief symptom is an intense itching of the skin. Kissing, Mr. Whittles asserts, is one of the means by which the disease is disseminated, and there are large numbers of courting couples suffering from "craw-craw" in Birmingham, he said, and oftener than not one lover transmits disease to the other by kissing.

In one case which came under his observation, an engaged girl was kissed by her sweetheart, who was a victim of the disease, and shortly afterwards she complained of a terrible itching. The case was incorrectly diagnosed, and the young woman, who slept with her sister, transmitted the disease to her, and the latter passed it on to a younger brother, and thus four persons became affected through kissing.

In another case a barmaid went to see her brother, a soldier, on his return from the war, and they kissed, the result being that the young woman, a few days subsequently, complained of intense itching of the skin. The soldier was unaware of the fact that he was himself suffering from the disease, but the namatove bacillus was distinctly shown in a number of blood films.

BANK MESSENGERS ROBBED OF $2000.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 25.—While members of the Bank of Hamilton staff were returning from Plum Coulee to Winkler village, masked robbers held them up about a mile and a half outside of Plum Coulee.

The bank men were ordered at the point of revolvers to turn over to the robbers the satchel, which contained $2000 of the bank's money. The robbers escaped.

Delightful Relief from Catarrh.—Here is one of a thousand such testimonies. The Rev. A. D. Buckley, of Buffalo, says: "I wish all to know what a blessing Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder is in a case of catarrh. I was troubled with this disease for years, but the first time I used this remedy it gave most delightful relief. I now regard myself entirely cured after using it for two months."—24.

GOOD TIMES AT HAND.

The gratifying news was brought to The Herald's readers yesterday that the United States Steel corporation had placed orders for four monster new steamboats with an annual carrying capacity of 800,000 tons of iron ore, each to be slightly larger than the Wolvin, which is now the greatest freighter on fresh water.

The building of these monster boats will furnish employment to thousands of skilled workmen during the winter and this order will surely give an impetus to business in all lines.

It is a rather remarkable fact that the iron and steel trade has recovered so quickly from the depression that set in last fall that ore shipments now exceed those of a year ago at this time, and this notwithstanding the fact that there was hardly a boat moving in the iron carrying trade until late in the season of navigation. The Herald's special dispatch from Cleveland announces that while the present movement is large, and while consumption of iron and steel has been exceeding production for several weeks, there is nothing in the nature of a boom in progress. But the placing of these orders for new steamships is an indication that the officers of the steel corporation expect a great increase in production by the time these boats are ready to be launched and are making preparations to take advantage of these improved conditions.

This news is of especial interest to the people of Duluth and St. Louis county. Iron is the great trade thermometer and the mercury is now slowly but steadily rising in the glass. This gives promise that there will soon be a sharp demand for iron properties which have lain dormant during the past year and that within a few months every mine on the iron ranges will be in active operation, while the underground properties will, no doubt, be large producers during the winter. The demand for men on the ranges is said to be greater than the supply and this is further indication of a healthy condition of affairs.

As the iron and steel trade grows, the growth of Duluth will keep pace and every interest in the city will feel the healthful stimulus that will follow this revival in the iron and shipping industries. All signs point to the probability that the production of wealth in 1905 will be by far the greatest in the history of the country.

IS IT A MISTAKE?

The Herald has received the following communication, which is self-explanatory:

To the Editor of The Herald:

Dear Sir: I have just read your editorial of the 13th on "Just Taxation" with interest and sympathy, but wish to call your attention to one slight omission. One might infer from your editorial that a tax on a privilege or franchise could be shifted by the owner unless prevented by some affirmative legislation. I think this is a mistake. Those who own franchises and privileges, in the absence of any legislation or of any tax, will fix the price at the highest point which they think will return the most revenue; a higher price they think would reduce the demand so as to reduce their revenue.

This is absolutely true of a tax on the privilege of holding land, and I think it is also true of any other privilege. A tax on land falls wholly on the landlord, and this has been demonstrated many times by the most eminent economists, including Ricardo, John Stuart Mill, and in our own day Edwin R. A. Seligman.

Yours truly,
LAWSON PURDY.

New York, Oct. 22.

It is evident that the writer of the above is a "single-taxer," and The Herald well understands that the majority of men who accept the Henry George thoery believe it is the only correct principle of taxation. There is little doubt that it would be much preferable to the present system and that the burdens of taxation would be more equitably distributed, because then the government would only take as revenue the rent on such things as it owns (or those things the people own in common) instead of taking away, as it does today, a portion of what every man earns, the smaller the earnings the greater the proportion taken.

But The Herald does not believe that under the single-tax system the rich would be prevented entirely form shifting the tax burden onto the poor. The man with money and ability would have an advantage, just as he has today, although his advantage might not be so great.

Individual fortunes and combinations of capital would be just as necessary then to carry on the world's work as they are today, and the man who possessed the brains and ability to take advantage of opportunities would profit from the labor of other men just as he does now.

Man cannot live on land alone. He must have a house to live in and tools to work with. And if he does not possess these things he must pay tribute to the man who does, no matter what the scheme of taxation.

Therefore The Herald believes that it does not make much difference in what manner taxes are levied as long as no more are raised than are necessary for an economical administration of the government and as long as they are raised in the most equitable manner. Neither does it believe that revenues can be equitably raised by taxing personal property, for the reason that there must always be inequalities and injustice in such a system. Furthermore, the government should not give away what it owns to one man and forcibly deprive another of a portion of what he earns.

But admitting all this, there is no good reason to believe that, under the single-tax system, men possessed of wealth and brains would be deprived of all opportunity to take advantage of their poorer and less fortunate fellow men; that there would be neither monopolies nor predatory trusts; that the money owner could take no more tribute from the toiler.

It is not the ownership of land nor the ownership of railroads that gives the meat trust their great power over the American people. It is their ability to violate the laws of the land without being prosecuted; it is their ability to be a controlling factor in the government; it is their ability to get better railroad rates than their competitors by fair means or foul. And it is money that gives them this power.

The single tax would neither make dishonest men honest nor thieves saints. It would not prevent the forming of pools, the watering of stocks, the robbing of the unsuspecting. It would not give the man without capital the same opportunities as the man with capital.

Ricardo, John Stuart Mill and Henry George were all great men and eminent economists, but there is a chance for each and every one of them to have been mistaken. And The Herald believes that a practical application of their theories would demonstrate that they were mistaken, at least in part. In its opinion the only really effective check that can be put upon inordinate greed and predatory wealth is an income tax, the greater the income the greater the tax. But, as above stated, it is willing to admit, in fact is confident, that a system of raising government revenue from franchises and privileges alone would give these predatory classes far less opportunity for shifting their burdens to the shoulders of the toiler than they possess today.

RUSSIA'S LATEST BLUNDER.

The Russian navy has made another serious blunder, or worse than blunder. In firing upon and sinking a portion of an English fishing fleet, and the killing and wounding of a number of the fishermen, the officers of the Baltic squadron have exhibited to the world both their incapacity and their cowardice.

Not all the defeats sustained by the Russian army and navy since the beginning of the war with Japan will operate as much to discredit that nation in the eyes of the world as this latest wanton assault upon the peaceful toilers of another nation. The Herald uses the word wanton advisedly because, while this was no doubt the result of an error of judgment, it was an error so great at to be a crime, just as the shooting of a man in mistake for a deer is a crime. It indicates the fact that Russian naval officers are so filled with fear of the superior ability and prowess of the Japanese navy that they shoot first and investigate afterward.

The Russian government will no doubt humbly apologize and make other reparation, but anything it can do will not alter the fact that its great Baltic fleet is in incompetent and cowardly hands.

This incident also serves as an illustration of the folly and imbecility of warfare among nations. Think of a great big bully walking up and down a city street armed to the teeth because he expects to meet an enemy who is also armed, and then think of him shooting right and left at any person who may approach him because he is filled with terror and imagines that some one of these innocent people may be his enemy. How soon he would be disarmed and placed in jail or else riddled with bullets. And yet the nations of the earth permit just such a thing on the high seas on the part of other nations that may be at war with one another. And when they shoot down innocent bystanders they are permitted to go free by apologizing and paying an indemnity.

The world cannot consider itself fully civilized until the same code of morals and laws as apply to individuals, also apply to nations.

WHO PAYS THE FREIGHT?

The Fergus Falls Globe asks: "Who pays the freight for John A. Johnson, the Democratic candidate for governor? Johnson is a comparatively poor newspaper man in St. Peter, and as such is clearly unable to bear the burden of such an expensive campaign as he is putting up. Therefore, it is fair to ask: Who pays the freight for John A. Johnson? How much of the freight is paid by John D. Rockefeller?"

This would be a fair question if it was asked in good faith. But it does not appear to be. The editor of the Globe is Haldor E. Boen, who ought to be suffiiciently well posted to know who pays the expenses of the Democratic campaign. It is true that Mr. Johnson is a comparatively poor man, and it was for this very reason that he long hesitated before consenting to become the Democratic candidate for governor. He wanted to know where the funds to pay his campaign expenses were to come from before he entered the race. This is well known. It is also as well known to those who have taken the trouble to inquire that a large part of that campaign fund was contributed by F. G. Winston, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, while the remainder was made up by voluntary contributions from Democrats in all parts of the state.

If the Fergus Falls Globe does not know this, it ought to know it. And it is for this reason that The Herald does not believe its question is put in good faith, but is simply an attempt to cast a suspicion upon the motives of the Democartic candidate for governor that he does not deserve and that the Globe knows he does not deserve.

THE FIELD SURVEY

When Congressman Bede held the federal office of United States marshal and desired to take part in a political campaign, he resigned his office. But the Republican federal officeholders in this state at present are not so particular, as Mr. Bede will notice. Even Register Culkin, of the Duluth land office, traveled all the way to St. Paul to predict, according to the News Tribune, a majority of 8000 for Dunn in St. Louis county, when the total vote here will probably not exceed 11,000! Certainly Mr. Culkin should receive a reward of some kind.

Practically all the surfacing that was placed on one block of the Central avenue pavement has been scraped off as mud and the wheels of vehicles are now running on the sand that was used as a binder. As soon as that works up into mud, it will, no doubt, also be hauled away and the rocks exposed. That was certainly a splendid job of street paving and one that does great credit to the city engineering department and its inspection bureau.

Hotel Gossip.

"Plays are certainly hard to pick," was the reflection of John E. Hogarty last night. Mr. Hogarty represents "Vivian's Papas," which will shortly be at the Lyceum.

"You can never tell what the fate of any theatrical proposition is going to be until you get it right out back of the footlights and see how it shows up. The best of managers can no more tell, sometimes, what a production is going to be in the way of a favorite than they can fly. With the longest of experiences they will make failures right along and pick out things that are not good.

"Take Daniel Frohman, for instance, and he gets a hold of more failures, I suppose, than anyone else. That's because he takes more plays. He is the most notable manager of his class, probably, in the country and he is by no means without plenty of poor plays on his list. But it's a poor rule that don't work both ways, for the plays that a manager thinks are good that fall are offset by the meritorious ones that are put away in a desk some place and never see the light of day except through an accident.

"You remember 'My Partner?' Well, that play lay in A. M. Palmer's desk in the Union Square theater in New York for six months because Mr. Palmer did not think it was good. He wasn't going to give it a show—turned it down.

"One day Louis Aldrich came along and happened to need a play. He said to Palmer, 'Haven't you got a play for me?' Palmer said he did not think he had. 'Nothing, unless you try this thing. You might look at it anyway, but I don't think much of it.' Aldrich took hold of the manuscript and looked it over. He liked the impression it gave him and decided to give the play a trial. It was one of the greatest successes of its time and thousands upon thousands of people have seen it and admired it. No Western play, probably, ever set a higher standard than it did, and none ever had a greater success. There may be others locked up in some of the managers' desks throughout the country now that we'll see later on, when they are rescued by some chance or other.

"It's been a long time since I was in Duluth, but I used to come here a good deal. I was well acquainted with Ambrose Miller here. He was city editor of the 'Tribune' years ago and left there to become treasurer of the theater in the Masonic Temple. Later he went on the road in the theatrical business and he is now on his way from Australia to England with a company that he is connected with."

M. B. Davidson, of Joplin, Mo., formerly of this city, who has been stopping at the St. Louis for the past fortnight, expects to leave today for his home. Mr. Davidson says he has found the election very quiet since he has been up in this part of the country and expects the silent vote to get in its work this time.

A traveling man who was in New York last week said the betting was 4 to 1 that Roosevelt would carry the state, but 10 to 9 that D. Cady Herrick, the Democratic candidate for governor, would be elected. He said the greater city of New York was Democratic but the rest of the state was Republican.

"Are you an expert on the distance that the human ear can detect the tinkle of a cowbell?" asked a reflective man of the hotel scribe a couple of days ago.

"It's a science that was never forcibly brought to my mind until the other day when I went out hunting. I made my headquarters not so very far from Duluth, but never mind about the headquarters. My friend and I after wandering about for a time in search of game got hungry and decided to see if we could not locate something to eat. We inquired of some loggers that we ran across where we could find a farm or some house that might be able to give us something to eat.

"The man that we asked said that he believed we could find a farm only a mile and half from where we were. He said it was a mile to a certain tree, and that when we got to the tree it would be only a half mile at a right angle to the farmhouse. We got to the tree all right, but we heard the tinkle of no cowbell. Upon second thought we decided that it had been a mile and a half to the tree. We started in the direction that we expected to find the farm, and by the time we should have been within hearing distance of the place there was nothing doing as to the lay of the cowbell. We were uncertain as to whether our ears were so well filled with music of the forest that we could not hear anything more or not. But we decided to continue our pace until further consideration, and we did so. We struck the farm house, all right, but no cow bell did we hear even when we got there. The farmer had the cow tied up because she was sick, and her bell was getting a rest from its customary labors.

"But it was a mile from the tree to that farm house, and the entire distance we had traveled was fully two miles and a half instead of the one mile and a half that we had been told would be the entire trip. I have often heard people kick about the distances that they find in the country as being unreasonable, and I begin now to see just how it is. The farmers and loggers forget what a city mile is and give a guess at it. Or else they don't care what it is, and merely wish to have the satisfaction of giving the city folks something to occupy their time and thoughts when they are on a tramp in the woods."

GOOD EXAMPLES.

New York American: We gave Cuba her freedom a few years ago, and now Cuba gives us a lesson in politics. Half a dozen men of the Santiago province thought it would be a good thing to get a favorite in congress. They stuffed the ballot box and gave themselves no trouble as to the consequences.

But the new Cuban government does not regard a ballot box stuffer as different from any other scoundrel. The six men were arrested. They were leading citizens of Santiago, but when the case was ended they found themselves sentenced to serve fourteen years in the penitentiary.

They have appealed to the highest court of Cuba, but it looks as if they must wear stripes fourteen years for slipping a few extra ballots in the box and voting a few dead men.

Mexico, our neighbor to the South, also gives us a good working plan to avoid railroad wrecks. When there is loss of life from a wreck in Mexico there is a criminal proceeding. Even if a peon is killed, the railroad officials do not get off without a searching investigation.

Railroading is more hazardous in Mexico than in the United States, but proportionately fewer persons are killed there than here.

We might adopt the Mexican method of investigating wrecks, and get off with a smaller dead list.

Recognized It.

New York News: Here is a campaign story told by the late Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania:

"A certain candidate thought his chance for election would be increased if he acquired a knowledge of Pennsylvania Dutch, so he prevailed upon a friend who was familiar with that patois to accompany him and teach him a Dutch sentence to use at the end of each speech.

"In the excitement of one meeting, however, he forgot the phrase so patiently taught him early in the day, and under cover of taking a drink of water hastily communicated that fact to his mentor.

"'Never mind,' was the whispered reply, 'just say, "Was nempst?"'

"This the speaker innocently did, and the result astonished him.

"Such a rush from a hall,' he afterward said, 'was probably never before witnessed in the state of Pennsylvania. What I said in Pennsylvania Dutch was, "What will you have to drink?" and the proprietor of the hotel to which my audience had adjourned taxed me $5 for my "Was nempst" remark.'"

"Methodical?" inquired the patent-churn man, who had put the first question.

"Yes, suh! Every time he gets drunk he goes over to the cou't house and insists upon payin' taxes on five imaginary green dogs. There's always exactly five of 'em, and they are always green. Yes, suh, the cuhnel is a very methodical man."

DUNN LOSING GROUND.

Hibbing Ore (Rep.): The movement of Republican voters to the Democratic standard-bearers is increasing as the day of election approaches, and even the most hide-bound Republican will admit that it is extremely doubtful if Dunn's majority will reach the 6000 mark, and others are free to say that it is a long way from a certainty that the head of the Republican state ticket will be elected at all. If the adverse movement continues with its present increasing growth, it is more than probable that the Democratic gubernatorial candidate will carry the state by at least 2000. Republican voters who have heretofore eschewed everything Democratic are this year out in open support of the Democratic candidate, and the number is steadily increasing. There are several apparent reasons why Dunn's candidacy is the very worst thing that could possibly have happened to the Republican party of Minnesota. Primary in the list is the stand the Dunn crowd took in the pre-convention campaign, which was the rottenest political affair that ever occurred in the state. The uncalled for, unnecessary and viciously wicked fight was carried to the floor of the convention hall, and it was a lost battle until the convention was organized. Then the will of the people was thwarted by the political tricksters that had attached themselves to the Dunn machine. The spectacle was one that sickened many life-long Republicans, men who believe that honesty and fair play is as essential in politics as well as in other things, and while they have not bolted the party they will not support its candidate for governor. Among this class will be found men who have been the leading architects in building up the Republican party of the state, and they seem determined to teach Bob Dunn and his horde of political buccaneers that there is a penalty attached to the sacrifice of party and friends for the sake of gaining a political office. And on the other hand, every time Bob Dunn opens his mouth he lessens his chances of election. The Johnson reports, dealing with his administration of the office of state auditor, have enlightened the people of Minnesota as to what there was to "Honest Bob Dunn's" honesty. The reports show that he was dishonest in the settlement of timber trespassing cases and that the most flagrant dishonesty was practiced by him in the leasing of state mineral lands. Dunn attempted to reply to the charges made by Public Examiner Johnson, but he dealt only with his characteristic bluff and bluster and there was no explanation, at least not to the satisfaction of the people he is asking to elect him to the highest office within the gift of the people of the state.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Perham Enterprise: Our Republican friends now say that the tax on the gross earnings of railroads should be raised from 3 to 4 per cent. If they are sincere in their statements, they will vote for T. J. McDermott, the Democratic candidate for attorney general. They cannot vote for the Republican candidate, Ed. Young, the man who defeated the bill to increase the gross earnings tax when he was a member of the state senate. If elected attorney general he would be put in a position to again assist the railroad corporations and prevent the enforcement of the law.

Bemidji Sentinel (Rep.): Minnesota Republicans can hardly afford to commit themselves to the protection of trusts and corporations yet that is what it amounts to when men are elected to the United States senate who are the tools of corporations and the apologists for gigantic trusts such as the steel corporation.

Goodhue County News: It is only fair to say that Bob Dunn is not a drunkard. It is his misfortune that his ordinary manner often gives the impression that he is intoxicated when he is perfectly sober. Truly to offset his lack of dignity he ought to have strikingly sterling qualities if the people are going to elect him governor. But candor compels us to defend him from one charge frequently made under misapprehension. There are plenty of other reasons why he ought not to be elected.

Hinckley Enterprise: A prominent Republican in the north end of the county, one who is supporting Dunn, said the other night, "I don't know why it is but Dunn votes are very scarce up our way." We can tell this man why it is. It is because the people have lost confidence in Dunn and no efforts of the politicians can make them regain it.

Sauk Center Avanlanche: The manner in which R. C. Dunn's political speeches are being received throughout the state shows that the thoughtful Republicans of Minnesota take pleasure in throwing icicles down his back and then laughing at his contortions. Dunn visited Glenwood last week and the reception tendered him was of the same temperament he has met with elsewhere. Republicans received him in about the same spirit that an A. P. A. banner would be received in a St. Patrick's day parade.

Hawley Herald: On Oct. 10, 1904, a "Republican Anti-Dunn club" was duly formed and organized in the village of Hawley. Since the organization of this club practically all the business men of the village have enlisted in the movement and farmers living in this locality are likewise subscribing to the same cause. The popularity and unquestioned success of this club has caused it to receive state-wide attention, the greater part of which has consisted of favorable comment from various sources. This landslide of Republicans against Dunn and Jones has brought forth the cunning efforts of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, the official organ of the Republican state central committee, which is making use of false statements and gross misrepresentation in order to check the influence of the club.

Le Seuer Sentinel: Cass Gilbert, the state capitol architect, need have no fear that what he said about the pemuriousness of St. Paul will hurt the feelings of any one in that city. So long as they don't have to "give up," their hide, like that of the rhinoceros, will never be pierced.

Hinckley Enterprise: A good round damn may relieve the feelings but when prefixed with the name of the Lord and repeated several times in the presence of ladies as it was last Friday night by the man sent over from Princeton to testify to the good moral character of Dunn, it becomes not only an insult to the ladies but to every gentleman present.

CLEVELAND'S ESTIMATE OF ALTON B. PARKER.

Grover Cleveland in November McClure's: I have known Alton B. Parker for more than twenty years. He impressed me on our first acquaintance as a sincere, honest, and able man; and this impression has, with time and observation, grown to clear and undoubting conviction. In the year 1886 I invited him to Washington and urged him to accept the position of first assistant postmaster general. I shall always remember with admiration the fine sense of duty and the frankness and honesty he manifested as he gave me his reasons for declining the appointment. Not long afterwards he began his judicial career, which culminated in his election to the chief judgeship of the court of appeals of the state of New York—a tribunal conceded to be in dignity and importance second only, among the courts of our land, to the supreme court of the United States. At the head of this great court he has for nearly seven years given to his work such patient investigation, such care in finding out justice, and such fearlessness in announcing his determinations, that his courage, fairness, and impartiality have been universally conceded. He assumed the grave responsibilities of this high judicial place without self-conceit, but with such self-reliance as grows out of faith and confidence in the sustaining power of adherence to duty. This adherence to duty is with Judge Parker not only a sustaining power but an inflexible rule of conduct. He evaded the nomination for governor of the state of New York because he saw greater duty in continuing to serve the people of his state in the place to which they had already called him. When his candidacy for the presidency became a matter of wide discussion, no feverish ambition influenced his judgment as he contemplated the situation and strove to keep in sight the path of duty. Of one thing he was certain throughout it all. If he should in the end be summoned by an imperious mandate of the highest citizenship to accept the responsibility of national party leadership, duty required of him in the meantime the undisturbed and unruffled discharge of his judicial obligations.

THE NEW STENOGRAPHER.

I have a new stenographer—she came to work today,
She told me that she wrote the latest system.
Two hundred words a minute seemed to her, she said, like play,
And used for word at that—she never missed 'em!
I gave her some dictation—a letter to a man—
And this, as I remember it, was how the letter ran:

"Dear Sir: I have your favor, and in reply would state
That I accept the offer in yours of recent date.
I wish to say, however, that under no condition
Can I afford to think of your free lance proposition.
I shall begin tomorrow to turn the matter out;
The copy will be ready by August 10th, about.
Material of this nature should not be rushed unduly.
Thanking you for your favor, I am, yours, very truly."

She took it down in shorthand with apparent ease and grace;
She didn't call me back all in a flurry.
That I: "At last I have a girl worth keeping 'round the place;"
Then said: "Now write it out—you needn't hurry."
The typewriter she tackled—now and then she struck a key,
And after thirty minutes this is what she handed me:

"Deer sir, I have the Feever, and in a Pile i Sit
And I except the Offer as you Have reasoned it.,
I wish to see however That under any condition
can I for to think of a free lunch Preposishun?.
I Shal be in tomorrow To., turn the mother out,
The cap will be red and Will costt, $10, about.
Matterial of this nation should not rust
N. Dooley.
Thinking you have the Feever I am
Yours very Truely."

Why Die?

Tens of Thousands of Men and Women Go to Their Graves Every Year Uselessly.

They Either Drug Themselves to Death or Die From Sheer Carelessness in Not Taking the Simplest Precautions to Preserve Health and Life.

Chrystal Tonic, the Marvelous New Vegetable Discovery, Cheats Death of its Prey—It is a Predigested Liquid Food That Builds Up All the Tissues of the Body and Really Arrests the Progress of Natural Decay, Commonly Known as "Growing Old," and Prolongs Life Indefinitely.

REV. ALEXANDER McKENZIE.

Master shall call, but even now (in my 88th year) I feel that I have strength for many years to come, whereas a year ago I was firmly persuaded that my call was very near, as sight and hearing were rapidly failing. My mind was far from clear, and I was so weak I could scarcely stand.

"My daughter persuaded me to try Chrystal Tonic, and it has accomplished a miracle. I can see and hear as well as ever in my life. I eat and sleep well and feel not a day over 50 years old. In fact, were it not for the opposition of my beloved children I should surely take a pulpit again. Chrystal Tonic is surely a wonderful discovery."

The strenuous life demanded by modern conditions make men and women old before their time. Tired muscles do not kill, tired nerves and brains do.

Top pressure work with low pressure care for the head is certain to result in that brain and nerve fag which wrecks the human machine.

Chrystal Tonic is bran food—nerve sustenance. It is a predigested liquid food that builds up all the tissues of the body and really arrests the progress of natural decay commonly known as "growing old" and prolongs life indefinitely. It stimulates and tones the tired muscles, nerves and brain without a "next morning" feeling, which is worse than the original trouble.

There is no trying reaction from its use. From the first fifteen minutes after the first dose is taken the beneficial effects are felt, and there is a decided daily improvement until normal conditions are permanently restored.

Chrystal Tonic is not made from drugs—it does not contain an atom of poison or impurity; it does not ruin the digestion to build up the nervous system, or poison the blood to invigorate the brain.

There is no long weary waiting for benefit. You feel better and you know you feel better from the hour you take the first dose.

Chrystal Tonic cures rheumatism, constipation, consumption, torpid liver, kidney trouble, Bright's disease, heart disease, neuralgia, nervous exhaustion, male and female weakness, bad blood, headache, backache, dizziness, sleeplessness, dyspepsia, general debility, tired brain and any run-down condition of the system.

Don't take our word for what Chrystal Tonic will do for you. Write a letter today. If after using it you are not delighted with the result, write the company at Marshall and they will refund your money. What could be fairer?

Get Chrystal Tonic from your druggist at $1 a bottle or direct from the Chrystal Tonic company, Marshall, Mich., prepaid, on receipt of price.

COURT BAILIFF KILLED.

Well Known Butte Citizen Shot In Revolver Duel.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 25.—Henry J. Callaghan, bailiff of the federal court and a well known citizen of Butte, is dead as the result of a thrilling revolver duel with Miles Fuller, now under arrest. The trouble was of long standing, originating, it is alleged, over the alleged theft of gold by Fuller from the sluice boxes of Callaghan. Callaghan, it is alleged, caught Fuller in the act and gave him a beating. Fuller later threatened the life of Callaghan. The prisoner denies all knowledge of the shooting.

ACCIDENTLY SHOT.

Virginia, Minn., Oct. 25.—Wallace Billy, son of Napoleon Billy, surface boss at the Lincoln mine, was injured by the discharge of his rifle in the woods north of this city Sunday afternoon. He went down to drink from a spring, and on arising his rifle, which was held in one hand was accidently right side but the injury is not dangerous.

MAY ALTER THINGS

Sensational Testimony Is Given at Minneapolis In Ham-Potter Case.

James R. Wallace Claims He Married Sara Ham In 1884.

Theodore Hollister, attorney for Miss Sara Ham, of Dubuque, Ia., the plaintiff in the sensational breach of promise action brought against George Potter, of this city, was in Minneapolis yesterday to be present at the taking of the deposition of James R. Wallace, of that city, who claims to have been married to and divorced from Miss Ham. Mr. Hollister has not returned, having proceeded to Red Lake, Minn., where he has a law suit for trial.

The deposition was taken before Judge C. B. Elliott, of Hennepin county and the testimony is said to be of a startling nature. It will be used by P. J. Neff, Potter's attorney, in his attempt to secure a new trial.

The Minneapolis Journal thus reports the proceedings in that city:

"Sarah Ham, of Dubuque, Ia., who recently won the envy of all fortune hunters by securing a verdict of $20,000 for breach of promise against George Potter, a prominent Duluth lumberman, who may yet be receiving condolences, is a principal in a new sensation.

"This morning James R. Wallace, of Minneapolis, appeared before Judge C. B. Elliott and gave some startling testimony in the noted suit upon which the defendant is moving for a new trial.

Mr. Wallace says, under oath, that in 1884 he married Sarah Ham in a little town over in Wisconsin. For some mysterious reason connected by inference with Potter, the woman refused to live with her husband from the first up to the time they were divorced in Minneapolis, only about two years ago.

"This testimony, which was perpetuated this morning for use in the Duluth case, is considered of the most vital importance to the defendant. In the trial of the breach of promise suit, he endeavored to show that the plaintiff was a woman of loose character, but this evidence was discredited.

"Mr. Wallace's story will be used to show that at the time Miss Ham was receiving the attentions of and listening to the promises of Mr. Potter, if he made any, she was really a married woman.

"There is nothing definite in Mr. Wallace's testimony that connects Potter with Wallace's marriage to Miss Ham. But when the witness was asked if he knew Mr. Potter he replied: 'Yes, to my sorrow.' It was mentioned that Potter was in the Wisconsin town at the time of the Wallace wedding.

"Mystery still surrounds the real facts of the case and the principals seem now especially anxious to avoid further notoriety. Every effort was made this morning to keep a knowledge of the proceeding from the press. Two women, heavily veiled, were anxiously inquiring their way to Judge Elliott's courtroom this morning and they were evidently vitally interested in the proceedings there. It is understood that one of them is the much advertised Sarah Ham."

Take Arthur Dunn out of "The Runaways" and it would probably cease to pay salaries in about two weeks or less. The inimitable little comedian is pretty nearly the whole show and he provides enough of laughter to cover an ordinary production, but with him off the stage the interest lagged except upon a few occasions. Dunn was recalled so many times that he finally begged to be excused, saying: "the play is long and I am short," a fact which none could deny, for time adds not an inch to the stature of the diminutive fun maker. His song "A Kiss for Each Day in the Week," accompanied by much oseulation with a bevy of show girls, was the song of the piece and was encored to the limit. Everything that Dunn did created the wildest of enthusiasm and the audience was always loth to alow him to leave the stage.

"The Runaways" is a very mediocre musical comedy. Plots of such productions as these are always thin but this was thinner than any and the dialogue provided to hold it together was of the flattest and most driveling sort. Some of the music is catchy but unfortunately there are practically no singers in the company. Emmanuel Whitehead has a good vocal quality but has not learned that one of the first essentials of singing is a good enunciation. Two of the leading people are on the sick list and it may be that this removed the singing ability. Clarence Harvey of Wilbur fame, has a comedy part in which he makes much fun and takes well. His song "The Man With the Dough," was one of the hits of the evening. The Althea sisters do a sensational acrobatic stunt that brought much enthusiasm especially from the gallery. W. E. Meehan was rather clever in a somewhat eccentric characterization of a slangy follower of the race track.

"HER FIRST FALSE STEP."

"Her First False Step" will be at the Metropolitan theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The play is in five acts, each one affording ample material for the unfolding of a very interesting story full of humor, pathos and heart interest. There are a number of good comedy scenes in "Her First False Step" and several pleasing specialties are interspersed during the action of the play. A very thrilling climax to the fourth act is the daring rescue of a child from a den of African lions. These animals are fine specimens of the king of the beasts and are introduced in the circus scene of the play, making one of the most novel incidents ever introduced in melodrama.

BEN HENDRICKS.

The Northland singer, Ben Hendricks, the Swedish comedian, comes to the Lyceum Friday and Saturday, provided with his own company. Mr. Hendricks has one of those enjoyable types of Swedish character to which he is so peculiarly adapted. During the action of "Ole Olson" he will sing six new songs, "Fair Land of Sweden," "Philopene," "Northland Lullaby," "Pass It On," "That's My Friend" and "Scandinavia." Mr. Hendricks and his is a graceful and talented actor and his songs charming as ballads are full of romance and pathos; they are a feature of the performance and each one is a hit.

PRICE OF WHISKY HAS AGAIN DROPPED.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 25.—The basing price of finished goods in the whisky market has dropped another point and was posted this morning at $1.24. Within two months the price has dropped from $1.28 to $1.24. Competition is again assigned as the cause, the strong fight being made between individual independents for business, in addition to the fight waged on the trust by all independents being given as the reason for the continued reductions.

Despite the continued drops, there has been no disturbance in the market. The output, however, is being slightly increased as a result. Eastern business shows the effect in heavier buying.

HAD TO HIDE IT

A mother wrote us recently that she had to keep Scott's Emulsion under lock and key—her children used to drink it whenever her back was turned. Strange that children should like something that is so good for them. It's usually the other way. Scott's Emulsion makes children comfortable, makes them fat and rosy-cheeked. Perhaps that's why they like it so much—they know it makes them feel good.

COURTING AGAIN

Young Phipps Trying to Win Back His Divorced Wife.

Love's Flame Kindled Anew—Romance of Many Millions.

Denver Col., Oct. 25.—"Excuse me for whistling," was the airy way in which Lawrence Cowles Phipps, the Pittsburg and Denver multimillionaire began his second courtship of Genevieve Chandler Phipps, daughter of former Governor Moulton C. Chandler of West Virginia, from whom he was divorced but five weeks ago.

Wearing an orchid in his coat and dressed as if for the gayest occasion, young Phipps stood in the doorway of the Adams hotel as his former wife glanced appreciatively at his impressive appearance. Though but a day or two ago, Mrs. Phipps had been depicted as fleeing from Atlantic City with her children, to hide her grief and pique over the alleged jilting of her for Mrs. Hugh Tevis by A. Hart McKee, with whom Mrs. Tevis had sailed for Egypt. Mrs. Phipps apparently was light-hearted and happy as she responded, "Whistle as much as you wish." Then a laugh escaped her that sounded like so much loot from all the silver mines of Colorado. She gazed at the man on the other side of the doorway, while her daintily gloved hand toyed idly with a gold purse dangling from her belt.

"You see," continued the emancipated benedict, with a bow, "whistling is the only way I can get that cab back here."

As the cabman drove up with a flourish and stopped in front of the hotel exit, Phipps said: "Will you permit me?" Something of the cavalier crept into his voice as he moved to his former wife's side and led her to the coupe. Mrs. Phipps smiled and blushed and smiled again, and the palest ghost of a sigh conceivable fluttered by the chiffon and lace at her throat and lost itself in the sable boa that draped her expressive shoulders. The man's face softened. He glanced sidewise at the vision floating athwart the curb. When Mrs. Phipps was in the carriage, he stooped and lifted from the step a bruised rose. It was the twin of one that nestled under her challenging chin. He slipped it into his pocket and followed her into the cab.

"Home, James," he said abstractedly. Then his face flushed, and, leaning out of the window, he explained to the puzzled driver. "The Phipps mansion," and from the gloom of the interior rippled more of that silvery laughter. The cabman touched his hat, wheeled his horse with a truly metropolitan flick of the lash and drove as if for a record along Colfax avenue.

Since the incident, all the divorce colonists of Denver have been busy with the rapidly spreading report that the remarriage of Mr. and Mrs. Phipps would take place before the month is up, and that the estrangement of several years, first revealed when the husband kidnaped their little daughters, Helen and Dorothy, from the wife's suite in the Hotel Netherland, New York, on June 3 last, will pass into history with the rest in the sensational case that has agitated Smoky City society through the whole summer.

Pending whatever plan the Phippses may have formed, Mrs. Phipps is occupying a luxurious suite at the Adams. Four rooms were refurnished especially for her, and it is said her former husband selected the colors, patterns and styles in preparation for her advent.

When Phipps obtained the divorce last month he reassigned to him bonds of the United States Steel corporation worth $1,500,000, at par. In consideration thereof, he transferred to a trust company in trust for her steel bonds for $750,000, the interest of which she was to receive for life, provided she remained unmarried. If she took another husband, the trust fund was to be cut down to $250,000. Thus a possible second husband, it was arranged, would cost the divorced wife a cool half million—or the income thereof. Now the question arises whether that provision will hold if Mrs. Phipps shall be remarried to her first spouse—will Phipps himself cost her $500,000 by making her again the partner of his much larger fortune and, if so, when it comes to the crucial moment, will she go to the altar and pay the price?

MURDERED BY GIPSIES

Kidnaped Four-Year-Old Boy Found With Throat Cut.

Phoenixville, Pa., Oct. 2.—"Lynch them, shoot them, burn them at the stake!" These and similar cries sounded from an excited throng of over two thousand persons that followed the officers escorting gipsies to the lockup, arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the brutal murder of 4-year-old Michael Meyerski, found with his throat cut from ear to ear and a terrible bruise on his temple. The body of the child was found hidden in the fireplace of an old deserted house, one mile from town.

The child was kidnapped Friday afternoon on Star street by a strong band of gipsies. All trace of the band and the boy were lost until accident revealed the hiding place to a party of chestnut hunters.

Never has a more fiendish murder stained the annals of Chester county and the citizens are aroused to a frenzy of excitement. Only the failure of George Wahl, the boy who witnessed the kidnaping, to identify any of the men under arrest as being connected with the crime, saved them from the hands of the maddened throng that followed them to the jail.

Situated on the Christman road, near the old lead mines, the house has been for more than thirty years untenanted and nothing remains but the crumbling stone shell. It stands a mile from Moore hall, the manor home of Governor Pennypacker, and two miles distant is the residence of Senator Knox. No more desolate or dreary spot can be imagined. Directly opposite the entrance the remnant of a mantlepiece and the old-fashioned fireplace was located. Here the body was found.

According to the theory of the police, the gang of gipsies who stole the child became alarmed at the thought of the punishment which would overtake them if found with the boy in their possession and deliberately murdered the boy to get rid of him.

Shortly after the body had been found, George Wahl, who had seen the gipsies kidnap the child, informed the police that he had seen a dog at the gypsy camp which closely resembled the dog he saw under the wagon in which the boy was taken away. Chief of Police Carter at once made a raid on the camp. Six men were captured, among them Henry Wells, known as the king of the gypsies of Pennsylvania. All the men arrested declare they know nothing of the crime or the criminals.

Refused Life Insurance Because He Had Bright's Disease.

Mr. William F. Montgomery, Coal Dealer of Albany, N. Y., Was Refused Life Insurance, on Account of Having Bright's Disease, but After He Was Cured by Warner's Safe Cure the Company Accepted Him, and He Now Has His Policy.

If you have any symptoms of kidney disease, or if any member of your family in this or past generations has had it (for it's hereditary), write the Medical Department, Warner's Safe Cure Company, Rochester, N. Y., for symptom blank, interesting medical booklet and doctor's free advice. Do it today, while you think of it. Delays are dangerous.

Mr. Montgomery's Eloquent Letter.

MR. WM. F. MONTGOMERY.

"I enjoyed vigorous health up to a year ago, when overwork seemed to undermine my constitution. I paid little attention to the matter until it was brought home to me forcibly when I was examined for life insurance. The company refused me a policy. I was so surprised I went at once to the company's doctor to find out the reason. Imagine my horror when he told me I had Bright's disease. Complications of the stomach set in, and although I doctored with well-known specialists, my strength diminished and I grew rapidly worse.

Interested friends brought Warner's Safe Cure to my attention and told of perfectly wonderful cures they knew of among their acquaintances. In despair I procured the first bottle. After a few days there were some encouraging indications. The slight improvement noted continued, and I gained rapidly in strength and health. I was again thoroughly examined. The insurance company said I was a splendid risk and gladly gave me a policy. Today I am in perfect condition, not even a trace of kidney trouble left. I owe my health and life to Warner's Safe Cure."—53 Hamilton Street, Albany, N. Y. August 10, 1904.

proper and equitable governmental support. Senators and representatives from the Trans-Mississippi territory are frequently delegates to the Trans-Mississippi congress, who also advocate the wants and public necessities of the respective constituencies.

A brief enumeration of the great results obtained is as follows: Deep water for Galveston harbor; the deepening of Buffalo Bayou, affording gulf outlet for that portion of the country tributary to Houston, Texas; deep water for New Orleans and the improvement of the river; the restoration of the salmon fisheries of the Northwest and the establishment of international fisheries; a deep water harbor of refuge and harbor of commerce at San Pedro, aCliforna; the inspiring advocacy of the Isthmian canal; the passage of the Interstate Commerce law, with amendments from time to time, enlarging the powers of the commission; reform in the consular service; establishment of Yellow Stone Park; Pike's Peak and other national reservations; the act of congress creating a department of commerce and labor, persistently advocated by the Trans-Mississippi congress until placed upon the statutes; finally, the passage of an act of congress for the reclamation of the arid lands of the West.

I congratulate the officers and delegates from all the states and territories which constitute the Trans-Mississippi territory, and this is to a large extent the territory of the Louisiana Purchase; therefore, we are gratified, gentlemen, that this meeting assembles here in the shadow of the greatest universal exposition that has ever been devised and completed in the history of the world.

The lamented McKinley said in his last public utterances at Buffalo that "Expositions were the timekeepers of progress and civilization." What would have been the admiration of our martyred president had he lived to see the great palaces, displaying the arts and sciences, that are here spread out in the several square miles of beautiful buildings?

It must be especially pleasing to the delegates here assembled that this great educational exposition exemplifies many improvements which the Trans-Mississippi congress has inspired and insisted upon. The scope of usefulness of this congress is as broad as the extent of the country from the Mississippi Valley to the Pacific ocean.

In the fourteen annual meetings of this organization, now passed into history, its achievements are a part of the fame of our country and its accomplishments are gratifying. In discussion and united action the best results are obtained. In addition to having advocated and obtained the benefits enumerated this congress, to the largest extent possible, encouraged building of additional trans-continental railway lines over plains, mountains and deserts of the great West; also inspired building of branch transportation lines, which enable the producers of the soil to reach the larger markets of the seaport and on to Europe where our cereals and food supplies are reaching every part of the civilized world. Without such transportation facilities, I fear, my fellow delegates, that the trade balance of the United States in the years that have passed since the organization of this congress, would not have run up into the thousands of millions to our side of the balance sheet.

What is equally as important to national progress as transportation lines are good roads, ever advocated by this body as essential for the settlement of the country, without which there would be slow development indeed. This congress has given a helping hand to the carving out of the new states of our glorious Union and the building of towns and cities, and in crossing this western part of the continent, whose heart does not swell with pride when behold the granaries of the Dakotas, the wonderful mining developments yielding up their millions of precious metals—beholding the many important cities and prosperous towns, Denver, for instance, "the Proud Queen of the West," nestled at the foot of the Rockies, now rivalled by Salt Lake City in the inter-mountain region, other cities to the north and south, and the cities of the Pacific states as well—all fair specimens of American push and energy.

The Trans-Mississippi congress has given considerations and suggested and carried through amendments to mining laws; ha spromoted the establishment of national parks, the better protection of the forestry on the public domain, and the many harbors of refuge and commerce on the vast extent of coast line on the Pacific States, where over 2000 miles of the Pacific ocean washes the shores of California, Oregon and Washington.

It is within the memory of all here present that the recommendations and encouragement by this congress has been a potent factor in all national improvements. The magnitude of its benefits cannot be measured by expenditures; the good accomplished by this representative body in all its past sessions for the nation itself as well as for the states and territories which have at all times been ably represented, cannot be overestimated, and gratitude from all communities is due to the predecessors of this congress who inspired and added in having placed upon the statute books of our country the Irrigation law, which is the crowning glory of our country's many effective improvements and the most beneficial and far-reaching law since the "Homestead Law" was passed. The subject of irrigation of our arid lands is recognized to be so important that a separate congress, similar to this in its organization, has been established and will meet in annual session as this congress has met. The irrigation of the arid lands will provide homes for millions; lands of the richest soil upon which the waste waters of the mountain regions will be made to flow, will blossom into perfect gardens and happy homes for the people, increasing the wealth and power of this nation.

Much yet remains to be accomplished. As the United States continues to expand and increase in population, necessary legislation and improvements, as well as public policies, will become apparent. Many subjects of national importance will be brought forward in the present session. Discussion of every subject is the best mode of arriving at a correct decision.

Mingling with the educational features of this great Louisiana Purchase Exposition, our proceedings will pass to the history of the other fourteen annual conferences that have preceded this. Our country has stepped to the forefront as a world power, assuming responsibilities of new territory and millions of people, which has come to our country as the fruits of war. By invoking the blessings of Divine Providence we shall uphold our flag and our institutions, and bestow upon the Philippine Islands the blessings of free government such as we enjoy.

SNAKE SPOILS CABBAGE CROP

Hundreds of Iowa Farmers Throw Out Their "Kraut."

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 25.—Hundreds of Iowa farmers are throwing away barrels of sauerkraut because of the discovery that about eight heads of cabbage out of ten are infected with the "cabbage snake." The state bacteriologist, Dr. Ell Grimes, and the state entomologist, Professor L. H. Summers, are preparing a circular which will say that the "cabbage snake" is not harmful, and may be taken into the system with perfect safety. It is doubtful, however, whether even such high authority will induce people to store in their stomachs cabbage known to have been infested with white snakes eight to twenty inches in length.

Southern Iowa raises more cabbage than any section of the West. The discovery of the cabbage snake has come about by the reports sent in from many farms. The latest specimen offered to the state authorities comes from J. A. Hutchinson, of Truro, and is a healthy 11-inch snake grown on a cabbage head in a patch cultivated by Mrs. M. A. Hayden.

Mrs. Ed Patrick, of Kellerton, had a similar experience. In her letter to the state authorities she says: "This snake may not be poisonous, but I do not want any of it in my stomach."

The cabbage snake, according to Professor Summers, grows and lives upon cold-blooded insects, such as the beetle, grasshopper and cricket. It is a parasite and forms very much in the same manner as the trichina which is transferred from the beetle to the hogs. In moist seasons the cabbage snake will fall from insects upon which it grows and remain for several days, and sometimes for weeks, upon cabbage. Professor Summers says that it is no new discovery, but that the season and the preceding seasons have been propitious for it, hence its presence in large numbers.

The human body, being warm-blooded, cannot long shelter the snake. It will find its way into the intestines and from the warmth and lack of nourishment it will die before accomplishing any harm.

The elements of sauerkraut are such as will furnish complete nourishment to the cabbage snake, and it will survive for months. When taken into the system, however, the kraut loses the nourishment upon which the snake feeds and the snake is literally smothered to death in warmth.

Examination of several shipments of cabbage has shown that almost every head has a snake and some four or five. Out of fourteen head examined in a local commission house, all but four had snakes upon them.

The snakes are small, have no heads, and live entirely by absorption. They resemble in color the leaf upon which they live, and cannot be detected except by the closest examination.

COFFEE WAS IT.

People Slowly Learn the Facts

"All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health but I used to say 'nonsense' it don't hurt me. Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered.

"My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again.

"I was in despair for the very thought of the medicines I had tried so many times nauseated me, of course I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee. Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was. Do you know I found it very easy to shift from the coffee to Postum and not mind the change at all. Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady, I slept well and felt strong and well balanced all the time. Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have.

"There's a reason."

COUNTESS TOO EXTRAVAGANT

Russian Ambassador Calls a Halt on Adopted Daughter.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The younger members of the diplomatic corps and other society people in Washington are torn with anxiety over the report that one of the brightest, prettiest and altogether the most charming of Europeans ever entertained in this country shortly is to leave it in the person of Countess Marguerite Cassini, niece and adopted daughter of the Russian ambassador. Bad enough her mere departure, but at the thought she is about to go away in the fit of pique her hundreds of admirers sigh like so many furnaces and utter fervent prayers that she exercise her womanly prerogative with a swift change of mind.

The countess has been too extravagant for the rather heroic ideas of her guardian and the ambassador has called a halt. In fact, he called it several weeks ago when the countess was in Bar Harbor, but a lot of good it did him. Countess Marguerite arched her bewitching brows, lowered her soft fringed lids, sighed, promised to be more economical, and then, just to show her independence, proceeded to spend $20,000 more as fast as she could. That is the precise sum—with perhaps a little fractional currency for tips—she has expended since her departure from the fashionable Maine resort.

Count Cassini is a patriot. His country is pushed for funds and like the true nobleman he is, he regards it as his duty to strip his estates if necessary in contributing to the government's needs. So he hastened to curtail his enormous expenses for the sake of his country. But the ambassador reckoned without his daughter.

Would Countess Marguerite retrench? Not if the countess knew herself, and she thought she did. It was all very well for a lot of stupid generals to go floundering about in Manchuria and burning money through the cannon's mouth so long as their conduct didn't affect anybody else. But gloves were necessities and so were frocks and ball gowns and hats and other things feminine. Her idea of pocket money runs dangerously close to six figures a year.

So the count pulled his purse strings with a snap that limited the countess to an allowance. Thereupon the Russian beauty flitted from Bar Harbor and began a round of visits to the country houses of friends among American multimillionaires. Count Cassini brooded in his lonely embassy. The next the ambassador heard was that she was resolved to return to her beloved St. Petersburg. Meanwhile the grave men of the diplomatic corps are taxing their ingenuity to procure a reconciliation between father and daughter.

MEDAL FOR CARNEGIE

Steel Master Honored By the Iron and Steel Institute.

New York, Oct. 25.—The opening exercises of the American meeting of the Iron and Steel institute the second meeting which this international organization has ever held on American soil, were held last night. The session was marked by the presentation to Andrew Carnegie of the highest honors that the institute can bestow, the Bessemer gold medal. Andrew Carnegie is the first American to become president of the organiaztion, its membership being chiefly made up of Englishmen. The award last night was made because of his life work in the development of the iron and steel industry of the world.

President Pornos, of the board of aldermen, on behalf of Mayor McClellan, welcomed the foreign visitors to the city. Mr. Carnegie, in reply, returned thanks for the cordial invitation extended. After referring to the meeting held here fourteen years ago, he said:

"Upon our last visit the institute was amazed at your extraordinary development, but they find today, rapid as that has been, it has proceeded at even a quicker pace since then. The figures are positively staggering. Your product of pig iron the year we visited you, in 1890, was 9,200,000 tons; in 1903 it was over 18,000,000. Thus in thirteen years it has doubled. In Bessemer steel, production has made more than doubled, and in open hearth steel the increase is more than eleven-fold—from 500,000 tons in 1890 to nearly 6,000,000 in 1903. Your export trade in manufactures has increased nearly three-fold. In the decade, 1890 to 1900, you added 13,500,000 to our population and the national wealth increased from $65,000,000,000 to $94,000,000,000. No wonder we come to see for ourselves and study such portentious growth.

This institute is cosmopolitan to an unprecedented extent. We have members from no less than nineteen of the most important countries of the world. The inventions and discoveries made in all these lands are promptly and fully explained at our meetings. Some day the statesmen of various powers now viewing each other with unfounded suspicion may take a lesson from the world-wide Iron and Steel institute. Were the representatives of one-fourth or even fewer of the countries which furnish our members to meet, as we do, and co-operate in one common aim as we do in friendly rivalry, we should soon see a better and happier world."

Sir James Kitson, former president of the institute, delivered the speech of presentation.

KEEP THEM BUSY

Superior Shipyards May Employ 1200 Men This Winter.

Already Have One Contract and May Secure More.

It is expected that from 800 to 1200 men, all told, will be employed at the Superior shipyards this winter, where, during the past few months, only a few score have been given work. Advices from Cleveland have it that one of the four big steamers recently ordered by the Pittsburgh Steamship company will be built at the head of the lakes yards, and that if more contracts are secured another vessel will probably be constructed here.

It is considered almost a certainty that more contracts for ship building will be secured by the company having control of the Superior yards. It appears to be quite the fashion to let contracts for new boats, and the general belief is that more will be contracted for within a short time. All the yards along the lakes except those at Superior and Chicago already have enough work to keep them running at full capacity during the winter months, so that no more contracts will be assigned them.

In addition to the crew to be employed at actual ship building, there will be the usual large force of extra men working on the boats in need of repair. This requires a considerable crew in itself. The usual large fleet of boats will winter here this season, according to present expectations, and there are very few of them will not be in need of some slight repair. In some instances the cost of repairs amount to many thousand dollars, and take several weeks to make. At one time two or three years ago, 500 men were employed on the repair work alone.

Twenty lake freighters, nineteen of them vessels over 500 feet in length, have been ordered within the last month. The last four to be contracted for, as announced in yesterday's Herald, will exceed the Augustus B. Wolvin in size, and will measure 560 feet over all, with 548 feet of keel. Their carrying capacity will be 10,000 gross tons of ore. It is one of these boats which will be built at the Superior yards.

THE GLEN IRON MINE ON FIRE

Started on Sunday and Shafts Have Been Stopped Up.

Chisholm, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fire whistles at the Glen and Park iron mines sounded furious alarms Sunday afternoon when fire was discovered in the Glen mine. Soon the mining captains and the miners were running from every direction to the scene of the fire, where nothing could be seen only the smoke rolling out of the shaft. Captain Mitchell went down into the shaft to see if any of his men were there and found none. Two mules were in their stables and cannot be rescued from the burning mine. The fire started in one of the drifts near the shaft and was fanned by the draft through the drift until the miners arrived when they proceeded to stop up the shaft and all the timber shafts and thereby smother the fire. They also turned on the steam, driving it down the shaft, but the fire was too far from the mouth of the shaft for the steam to do much good. All the men can do is to keep the shafts well closed until the fire is smothered. Nobody appears to know just how the blaze started, because it starte on Sunday when the men are not in the shaft and only the watchman is there, who spends most of his time on the surface near the buildings.

WOULD USE GAS

Water and Light Board Urges Adoption of Boulevard Lamps.

Bridge Company Asks For Extension of Time on Contract.

The council last evening:

Considered adoption of gas street lamps in residence district.

Took steps to erect a city polling booth in the Seventh ward.

Received request for an extension of two months on the ferry bridge contract.

Requested the city attorney to investigate claim against E. H. Gay & Co., for not exchanging 6 per cent water and light bonds for 4 per cents.

On the claim of the board of water and light commissioners that the city can effect a saving by adopting the use of gas boulevard lamps in the residence district, to replace the arc lights, the city council will investigate the matter before the time of the renewal of the contract with the Duluth General Electric company.

The board of commissioners of the water and light department, in a communication to the council, claimed that a direct saving of over $6000 a year would be ultimately effected in addition to the large indirect saving to private citizens in the reduced price of gas. The communication was as follows:

"Your board of water and light commissioners, realizing the fact that a contract for lighting the streets of the city for a term of years is in anticipation, and has already received the attention of a sub-committee of the Commercial club, deem the present time opportune for bringing to the notice of your honorable body the fact, that while the city owns its gas plant, the city is not a purchaser of its own product; all revenue for lighting its public buildings and streets passing into the hands of a rival lighting plant, which is indirectly a loss to the taxpayers, and, because of the following conditions an injustice to our many consumers.

"Inasmuch as it is provided in the contract between the city and the Zenith Furnace company that the rate paid for gas to the company shall be, within certain limits, regulated by the quantity consumed; that the rate now paid of 45 cents per 1000 feet shall be reduced to 42½ cents when the quantity reaches 100,000,000 feet per annum, making a direct saving to the city of $2500 per annum; and further, that this rate will again be reduced to 40 cents when the consumption shall have reached 125,000,000, making an additional saving of $3125 per annum; it is respectfully urged by your commissioners that your honorable body consider the advisability of lighting with gas at least a sufficient portion of the resident parts of the city that are reached by your mains, to assist the department in obtaining the reduced rates described above.

"To the end that your honorable body might have the necessary information as to the character and cost of the installation and the operation of what is known as the 'Boulevard lamp,' furnished by the Welsbach company, and which is used so largely in New York, Boston, Milwaukee and various other cities, your commissioners have had direct communication with a representative of the said company, and have made inquiries into other particulars, and are prepared thereby with the following data, which are respectfully submitted:

"We find that the erection of a lamp at the crossings of the streets and avenues, and one in the center of each block in the east and west streets, as is customary in other cities, that it will require the replacement of one electric arc by three boulevard lamps, and which, we believe from the experience of other cities, will be a considerable improvement upon our present manner of lighting the resident portions of the city.

"The Welsbach company will furnish, under a five years' contract, all of the material required except the piping from the mains to the lamp, the city to be at the expense of providing the said service connections and the erection of the posts, which are to be furnished by the company.

"It is estimated by your commissioners that this expense will average about $5 per lamp, which, under a 5-year contract, is an average annual expense per lamp of $1.

"It is also ascertained that the expense for the gas, the rental of the lamps, their care and maintenance, will amount to $17.06 per lamp per annum, which, with the $1 each for erection as above, makes their entire annual cost to the city $18.06 per lamp.

"The comparative cost will upon this basis be as follows:

One electric arc	$55.00
Three boulevard lamps	54.18

In order that your honorable body may know that the installation and use of these lamps are successfully and satisfactorily accomplished, and in fact wisely so, the following statement of their use in some of our larger cities is respectfully submitted:

New York city has	30,000 lamps
Boston	10,000 lamps
Philadelphia	15,000 lamps
St. Louis	16,000 lamps
Milwaukee	2,500 lamps
Omaha	1,500 lamps
San Francisco	5,000 lamps

"We have in our possession also, many testimonials from all over the country as to the beauty, comfort and efficiency of the Welsbach Boulevard lamp, and which we will be pleased to submit to your honorable body.

"As a further information, and as also an explanation of the motive that influences your commissioners at this time, is this: That the department is now taking from the Zenith Furnace company, 'lighting gas' at the rate of 97,000,000 feet per annum, and that the utmost efforts are being made by the department to increase this output to 100,000,000 feet by the expiration of the present fiscal year ending Aug. 1, 1905, which will result, if accomplished, in a rebate of $2500 to the department from the rates now being paid the Zenith Furnace company.

"In view of this fact it is respectfully asked that your honorable body will give this your careful consideration."

The council directed that two of the lamps be installed in a central location in order to demonstrate their efficiency in lighting the streets.

In a second communication, the water and light board called attention to the fact that the city has lost over $800 a year, because of the failure of E. H. Gay & Co., the city purchasers of the water and light bonds, to exchange a part of the six per cent bonds for four per cents as agreed upon in the contract.

It was stated that when the plant was purchased in 1898, E. H. Gay & Co. had agreed to turn over $50,000 or more of the six per cent bonds for four per cents. On January 22, 1900, the city council passed an ordinance providing for the exchange of $295,000 of the six per cent bonds for four per cents. For some reason, Mr. Case stated, the exchange was never made, and the city is still paying six per cent on the entire issue. The board claimed that the failure to exchange was making a difference of $8200 in the fixed charges of the department and he urged that the city attorney look into the matter to see if the city could not collect the amount from E. H. Gay & Co., and also enforce the immediate exchange of the bonds.

Because the fumes of cooking meat which are inhaled by the judges of election in the third precinct of the Seventh ward from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. tend to become unsuiting before night, Alderman Haven introduced a resolution at questing the board of public works to submit an estimate of the cost of erecting a rough booth to be used as a polling place.

Mr. Haven stated that the occupant of 2732 West Third street was not responsible for the condition of affairs, since the store is used for a butcher shop and the large boiling kettles are kept in the rear room where the poling booth is situated. Efforts to find another suitable location in the neighborhood have failed, and the council is compelled to consider the plan of erecting a small building to be used for the purpose.

Treasurer J. K. Lowry of the Modern Steel Structural company asked for an extension of sixty days on the time allowed for the completion of the ferry bridge. Under the contract it was to have been finished by November 1, but under the extension, the company is allowed until Jan. 1. The reasons given for the request were the non-arrival of material, delap in the shipment of the false work, and the bad weather. The request was referred to the proper committee.

On a motion by Alderman Moore, the city comptroller was requested to file with the council each Monday evening a statement of the condition of the permanent improvement, public works, general, and light funds, with the balance to date, and the deductions for appropriations made by the council.

JAPS CALLED HOME.

Large Number Will Leave Honolulu and Oregon.

Honolulu, Oct. 25.—A large number of Japanese army reserve men residing here have received notification by cable from the military authorities in Japan calling them home for army service. It is believed that two or three hundred men will try to secure passage on the next steamer leaving here for the Orient.

Pendleton, Ore., Oct. 25.—With the departure of four Japanese for their native land to enter the army an exodus of Japanese from this city in response to an order from the Japanese government has commenced. The order was received about a month ago and directed all Japanese to settle their business affairs and return to Japan at once. There are more than 200 Japanese in Pendleton, a majority of whom it is said, will obey the order. The men who have just left were merchants and disposed of their stocks at a sacrifice.

His total score was 451 with fifty shots at 50 yards. This score was three points less than that made by J. E. Gorman at San Francisco last year. C. F. Armstrong, of Creedmoor, won the second prize and J. B. Crabtree, at the same range, the third.

The pistol championship of the United States was won by Dr. E. H. Kessler, at St. Louis, with a total score of 461. This is a new record, beating that made by Thomas Anderson last year by seven points.

Dr. Calkins at Springfield, and J. B. Crabtree, at Creedmoor, won the second and third prizes respectively.

A silver bowl, representing the military revolver championship of the United States, was won by Thomas Anderson, at Creedmoor, with a total of 485, beating Lieut. R. H. Sayres' score of last year by twenty points. The latter won the second prize this year with 548 points and Lieut. M. H. Smith, at Creedmoor, won the third prize with 534.

The military record match was won by Thomas Anderson with a score of 266, Lieut. Sayre capturing second prize and A. L. Wright, third, both at Creedmoor.

THE PYTHIAN DISTRICTS

Grand Chancellor Announces Division of Domain of Minnesota.

A division of the domain of Minnesota, for Pythian purposes, on an entirely new plan, has been announced by Grand Chancellor Carroll S. Barrum, of St. Paul.

Heretofore the division has been solely for the purpose of holding one district convention each year, and the deputy appointed has been charged with no other duty than that of superintending the work of the convention. Under the division this year, however, the district is made permanent for the year, and the deputy, who retains his position for a year, is charged with several specific duties, as follows:

To confer with the deputies of the lodges of the district and to secure a uniform rendition of the work; to evolve plans for the furtherance of the interests of the order; to see that there are no infractions of law such as might unintentionally be made; to take steps to organize charter lists for new lodges within the district, and to confer with the lodge deputies and ascertain if it is the sentiment that a convention be held in the district, and, if so, arrange the time, place and scope.

Heretofore these conventions have been arbitrarily located and the time for holding them fixed by the grand chancellor, with the result that the times and places were not always satisfactory to the lodges participating. With few exceptions the various districts are permitted under the new plan to determine whether or not the district shall hold a convention, the grand chancellor saying that he believes the convention is a power for good when properly conducted, yet he prefers to have no convention rather than one in which the lodges take little or no interest.

The districts are divided on new lines, and there are twenty-nine in the domain. The divisions and the deputies for this section are:

District No. 2—Lodges at Duluth, New Duluth, West Duluth, Two Harbors and Cloquet; convention at Duluth. James L. Cromwell, P. G. C., deputy.

District No. 3—Lodges at Virginia, Hibbing, Eveleth, Biwabik and Grand Rapids; no convention place suggested. Fred A. Klass, Hibbing, G. I. G., deputy.

LABOR IN DEMAND

Plenty of Woods Orders But Few Men Available.

High Wages In Threshing Districts Are Holding Laborers.

"The fact that the heavy rains during the past few weeks have been adverse to logging operations, and have, to some extent, set the work back, does not seem to have very much effect on the demand for labor," said a local employment agent yesterday afternoon.

"We have been receiving orders right along in spite of the wet weather, and some of them are for large crews. The demand is not for any particular class of men, but for laborers who can do most any kind of woods work.

"There are still a great many men out in North Dakota, who usually are found here at this time of the year to go in the woods. They have not been coming back as fast as was expected. Some of the farmers out there, who are anxious to get their threshing done are paying $3, and as high as $3.50 per day, to hold the men. It has been raining so much out in North Dakota that even at the high wages the men are able to put in only two or three days in a week, I am told."

The loggers will hail a freeze-up with a great deal of satisfaction, for there are districts where the ground is very soft from so much rain, and where some of the country is fairly under water. If cold weather should come on now, and the ground freeze while it has so much moisture in it, and before the snow falls, the contractors claim that conditions would be very favorable for their winter work. As conditions are now, cutting and skidding has been made practically impossible.

The demand for men in Northern Minnesota, at or near the boundary, is taken to indicate that operations will be carried on a larger scale in that part of the country this winter than ever before. As a rule, it has been a difficult matter to get men to go that far north, and the wages paid have been higher than in this district. This year however the employers have been making additional efforts to get woodsmen in that part of the state, and many of the laborers are said to have gone direct to the boundary line operations from the wheatfields, instead of coming back to the Duluth and Twin City labor markets.

The O'Neal & Nelson company, which has been logging on a large scale north of Virginia, on the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road, is preparing for an active winter, cutting about 6,000,000 feet of logs. The company employs about forty men.

The Mashek Lumber company, which is cutting for the Longyear lake mill, will employ about 100 men near the Kinney mine. A great deal of state pine is being logged in the same vicinity this year.

The Backus-Brooks company and Stitt & Howe are putting in camps on range 62, near Sturgeon river, where logging will be done this winter.

Camps north of Virginia and employing about 125 men have been started by the W. T. Bailey Lumber company.

The Scott-Graff company has started several camps in the eastern part of 59-14, where logging has been carried on for the past many years and the timber was supposed to have been pretty well cleared off.

The Swan River Logging road will log on the Sturgeon river, about twenty miles north of Hibbing. The company will extend its logging road north to tap the country operated in. It is expected that a large amount of timber will be taken out the coming year for various interests. Most of the logs will go down the Mississippi river from Brainerd to Minneapolis.

GRAND RAPIDS MAGNET

Bid In By the Mortgagee For $1700.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Grand Rapids Magnet, which was established fourteen years ago by A. G. Bernard, of Cass Lake, was sold at public auction Monday by Sheriff O'Hoolihan. The paper was owned and operated for several years by Fred Stevens, who two years ago disposed of it to Henry R. Cobb, owner of the Park Rapids Enterprise. He in turn sold the plant, good will, etc., to James A. Stuart, of Duluth. It was for the purpose of satisfying a chattel mortgage held by Mrs. Stevens, for $1700, that the sale was made yesterday. There were present at the sale several outside bidders, but as the highest sum bid did not represent the face of the mortgage, George H. Spear, attorney for Mrs. Stevens, bid in the property for the full amount and the mortgagee is now in possession. It is more than probable that the Magnet will be finally disposed of to practical newspaper people within the next ten days.

EDUCATING JACKIES

Step By United States That Other Nations May Emulate.

Field Marshal Oyama's Success Pleases People of Geneseo, N. Y.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the days of which Capt. Marryat wrote, every man-of-war in the British navy was a school ship in which "middies" were educated and fitted for commissions in his majesty's service. In those old days boys, generally the sons of gentlemen, were appointed midshipmen before they reached their "teens." Today the British government, like that of the United States, maintains a school for officers for the navy where boys are educated in seamanship and gunnery to such an extent that the graduates are better fitted to command a gunboat when they are assigned to duty, than the middie of 1800 was to command a gig.

It has remained for the United States navy, however, to take a step in advance towards the education of the "Jackie," which other nations are certain to emulate in the future. The other day the coxswain on the Alabama went West to see his parents. He is a native of Sioux City, Iowa, and is a bright, intelligent young fellow of two or three and twenty. "My term of enlistment expired yesterday," he said, "and I was paid off and discharged at League island. If I re-enlist within four months I return to the service with the same rating which I held at my discharge, and further, my service will be held as continuous, which will be of material benefit to me if I ever come up as a candidate for a warrant.

"It would surprise most people to know," continued the coxswain, "that a great number of the men 'before the mast' on the modern American war vessel are fairly well educated boys when they enlist. But beyond that a large number of them realize that more education would benefit them and increase their chances for promotion. Consequently, scores of boys and young men in the American navy today are taking courses in the various correspondence schools, which have become so popular in recent years. Some take up the study of navigation, some mathematics and mechanical engineering, and others a plain business course. In these efforts to increase our own knowledge we have the hearty support of the officers on board ship. On the Alabama, in particular, one of the younger lieutenants has taken great pains to help the men along, and he conducts a regular school, free to all who care to avail themselves of the privilege, in which higher mathematics, navigation, gunnery and kindred subjects are taught with a skill worthy of the Naval academy professors themselves.

"The days of 'Dick Deadeye' are passed and the bosun of an American man-of-war—who may be a commissioned officer six months from now—is a well educated man, who understands the usages of polite society almost as well as the officer who is one grade higher and who holds a commission, instead of a warrant."

"Is there much feeling among the enlisted men in the navy over the failure of Morgan, the gunner, to obtain a commission because of the report of Admiral Samson?"

"So far as can be seen that report has created no feeling whatever. The man Morgan does not appear to be popular with his shipmates, and the men before the mast have gotten over their resentment, if they ever felt any, towards the admiral because of his letter to the secretary of the navy.

There is great rejoicing in a small village in New York state, at least, over the brilliant success which Field Marshal Oyama has achieved with the Japanese army over his Russian enemies. It is quite generally known that the brilliant Japanese soldier is a graduate of an American university, and it is equally well known that his brilliant wife recognizes Vassar as her alma mater. But few people outside of the village of Geneseo, N. Y., know that Oyama obtained his knowledge of English in the old academy in that village, and yet such is the fact. It is many years now since that old academy, once one of the famous educational institutions of the state, was abandoned and succeeded by the state normal school. But there are many residents of the state, and for that matter of many states, who were at school with Oyama. "Just before the outbreak of the war between Japan and Russia," said one of the old students, now a resident of Washington, I was visiting some of my old friends in Geneseo, when one of them received a bulky envelope from Japan. It proved to be a cordial letter from the famous Japanese soldier, in which he enclosed photographs of his family and himself. In the letter he named several of his old schol-mates, who were his warm friends, and requested that photographs of them be sent to him. Marshal Oyama's picture finds a place in many of the albums on the parlor tables in Geneseo, and you may be sure that there is no village or town in the country where the news of continued Japanese successes is more eagerly read than in the valley of the Geneseo, one of the most fertile spots in the entire United States."

The American Gas Light association was in annual convention in this city during last week. In the stores along Pennsylvania avenue have been exhibited all sorts of appliances for improving gas light and for controlling the flow of gas through the exasperating meters. Nearly all the devices for the improvement of gas light depend for their success upon a film-like mantle, the principal part of which is some sort of a mineral. The first of these ever introduced in this country was the invention, or discovery, of an Austrian chemist named Welsbach. The managers of one of the branches for the manufacture of these mantles tells an interesting story of how former wastage has been eliminated in the factories. "Fifteen years ago," he said, "we lost fully 50 per cent of the mantles in the course of manufacture. The fabric is so delicate in construction that the greatest care is necessary to prevent breakage and consequent loss. At first every broken mantle was thrown away as practically worthless. But after a few months we were advised by the main office to save all the broken mantles as that office would pay $1 an ounce for the ashes. The component part of chief value, as the treasury schedules put it, is a mineral called thorite. At the time of which I speak every ounce of thorite used in this country was brought from Austria. But the great demand stimulated the search for the mineral in this country and within recent years discoveries have been made in several states, especially in the Carolinas, and as a consequence the price has dropped so that an ounce of the ashes, formerly worth $1, brings only 30 cents today. The point I desired to make is that the manufacturer of gas mantles today, in common with all other manufacturers in the country, is carefully looking after the odds and ends of his factory which were formerly consigned to the scrap pipe or the ash heap."

Arguments in the United States supreme court last week in the suit of the Western Union Telegraph company against the Pennsylvania railroad, brought to public notice a great deal of interesting matter concerning the extent of the telegraph service in these United States. The Western Union Telegraph company, it appears from the briefs, was first organiezd in New York in 1851. Its poles and wires now extend through all states and territories of the United States, and portions of the Dominion of Canada, and in addition connects with all lines of Mexico and through them to the republic of Central and South America. At present the total pole and cable mileage of the company exceeds 192,000 miles, while 900,000 miles of wire are in use. There are upwards of 20,000 offices for the receipt and transmittal of messages and the total number of messages sent each year exceeds 65,000,000, or nearly one for each inhabitant, man, woman and child, in the United States. This total is exclusive of millions of words transmitted over the leased wires of the press associations, the great daily newspapers and the brokers and commercial offices in the large cities.

When it is considered that the Western Union company, while the largest telegraph corporation in the United States is not the only one doing gusiness, it will be understood that the American people have come to depend upon some other method than that afforded by the mails for the transmission of important business communications, and that the telegraph as claimed by the counsel for the company, is fully as important a factor in the daily life of the American people as even the railroads.

Yet today, in spite of the wonderful advancement made in perfecting lines and instruments, in overcoming static induction and all other deterrents: in spite of the fact that the duplex and multiplex systems have been invented which permit the transmission of several separate messages over a single wire at the same time, the old system of dots and dashes invented by Professor Morse is still the only method used for the transmission of intelligence by telegraph and if Professor Morse were alive today he could probable read any message which might be sent by an operator, except some of the most expert who would be too rapid for the ear of that great universal benefactor.

"The rascals are waking up all over the country," said Postmaster General Wynne. "They seem to think that the postoffice department and not the treasury is the proper place to which to send conscience contributions. This department has just heard from one of these, but not a very important one. A woman in California sent 25 cents in a letter in which she wrote that she has been in the habit of writing notes on the margins of newspapers. She recently discovered that such practices are violations of the law and her conscience has troubled her in consequence. Careful computation leads here to believe that a quarter, or two bits, is about the amount due the government. She has sent it with a prayerful plea. If everyone who has ever defrauded the postal revenues will 'make good,' this department will soon become self-sustaining."

INCREASES IN PROPERTY

For Taxation By Equalization Board Is Compiled.

St. Paul, Oct. 25.—S. G. Iverson, state auditor, yesterday completed adding up the increases made by the state board of equalization in the various items of taxable property as returned by the county boards of equalization. Several interesting figures have been compiled from the results. It has been computed that the state tax rate this year will be 1.5 mills. Notices were sent to the county auditors that the taxes would be apportioned to the funds in the following manner: 1.10 mill, soldiers relief fund; 2.10 mills, funding tax fund; 2.10 mills to agricultural college fund, and 1 mill to the state revenue fund. In addition to this, the county auditors are notified property for the state school tax. The total increase made by the state board on personal property this year is $12,717,696. The total amount as raised by the board is $169,447,692, as against $156,729,996 in 1903. Real estate was raised from $647,253,261 to $701,066,777, which makes the total assessable property in the state equal $870,514,469.

It has been found that there are 59,056,204 acres of land, exclusive of city and town lots, which are assessable. The value of the land, exclusive of structures and other improvements, is $382,223,240.

The total raised valuation, as returned by the county board on all classes of property, amounts in round numbers to $867,000,000.

THE COLORADO IS FAST.

Boston, Oct. 25.—The armored cruiser Colorado, built for the United States navy by William Cramp & Sons, of Philadelphia, yesterday on her first trial covered 88 nautical miles in 3 hours, 57 minutes and 7 seconds, maintaining an hourly average speed of 22.26 knots throughout the run, exceeding the speed of 22 knots called for in the builder's contract by more than a quarter of a knot. It is thought that tide corrections made increase her average slightly. The highest speed developed was 23.33 knots, and this was maintained for six and six-tenths miles during the homeward run.

RUSSIAN SHIP SCUTTLED.

London, Oct. 25.—The steamship Esperanza, which is due to sail from Barry with provisions for the Russian Baltic fleet, was found yesterday to be in a sinking condition, her hull having been pierced below the water line. The injury is not explained, but it must have been done yesterday, and it is suggested locally that it is the wanton act of some man employed about the ship in resentment of the North sea incident.

BREAK IN WHEAT

Market Is Weak Under Allaying of Foreign Political Excitement.

Eastern Demand Continues Very Poor—Flax Is Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 25.—Wheat had a break today, and the Minneapolis market which has been the leader in the advance was the weakest. The decline in December there was 1¾-¾c against 1½c in Duluth 1⅛-3c in Chicago and 1¼c in New York. Foreign markets were not excited over recent political troubles and this allayed the uneasy feeling that had arisen yesterday. This was in a considerable measure responsible for the decline. Liverpool was ½d higher, but London was up ld. Paris closed 1@1½c lower and Antwerp unchanged.

Shippers report no improvement in the demand for wheat from the East. A little contract wheat can be sold but grades below that, no matter whether good milling wheat or not, find no sale.

Car receipts at Duluth were 408 against 485 last year, and at Minneapolis 459 against 591 last year. Chicago received 90 against 153 last year. Winnipeg received 626 cars against 365 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,114,705 bus. last year, 1,229,113 bus. Shipments 254,570 bus, last year 678,704 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 25,-013 bus.

Bradstreet reported an increase of 3,-539,000 bus in the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Aockies there was an increase of 2,879,000 bus and in Europe and afloat of 760,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¾@⅞d higher. In the Chicago market December corn closed ⅜c higher. December oats closed ⅛c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 200,200 bushels last year 700,300 bushels. Shipments, 287,500 bushels, last year, 369,312 bushels. Clearances were 107,945 bushels. Bradstreet reported a decrease of 1,162,000 bushels, in the world's visible supply of corn.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was dull. The December option opened with a decline of ⅛c, at $1.18⅝, sold at $1.18½ at 9:40, fell to $1.18 at 9:53, rallied to $1.18¾ a moment later and fell to $1.17¾ at 10. It then bulged to $1.18⅝ at 11:05 and from that point fell back steadily to $1.17 at 1:10, and closed there, a loss for the day of 1½c. The May option had the same decline.

Cash wheat closed upon the same basis as yesterday, 3c over December for No. 1 northern and 4c under for No. 2. An effort was made at the close to depress the No. 2 offers being made to sell to No. 2 and buy the December option at 5½c difference, whereas the closing price was at 4c difference. Some of it was traded in at that price.

Flax was dull and lower. October sold ⅜c down to $1.14½, rallied to $1.14¾ and then fell back again to $1.14½ and closed there, a loss of ⅜c. November fell 3c and December and May 4c.

Oats advanced ¼c and rye was unchanged. The lower grades of barley showed a slightly stronger tendency, while the choice was a little weaker.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Easier Foreign Market Influenced the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Easier foreign markets, caused by a general feeling that the North Sea incident will be amicably adjusted, influenced the Chicago wheat market today. The December option opened ¼c to ⅜c lower at $1.15¼ to $1.15⅝. May opened ⅛c to ⅜c lower at $1.14⅜ to $1.14¾. On a scarcity of offerings and fair support from local buyers both options went up. December went to $1.15⅞ and May touched $1.14⅝. Selling by the longs sent May down to $1.14¼@⅜. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 367 cars as against 1158 last week and 972 last year.

The market had a fair rally on covering by shorts, December advancing to $1.16. In the meantime May sold up to $1.14⅜@⅝. Later a sharp break occurred as a result of heavy selling by Northwestern houses. Slack flour demand at Minneapolis and a rumor that the mills there are about to shut down were largely responsible for the selling pressure. The low point on December was reached at $1.14⅜. May dropped to $1.13¼@⅜. The close was weak with December off 1¼@1⅝c at $1.14½@⅝. May closed at $1.13⅝, a net loss of 1¾c.

Reports of ideal weather for marketing purposes in the corn belt, together with the influence of the wheat market, ruled the corn market. December opened ⅛c lower to unchanged at 46@⅝c to 46¼c, a firmer foregn market the price went up to 49c, but dropped back to 48¾@⅞c. Local receipts 150 cars, 15 of contract grade.

In spite of the weakness in wheat corn became firmer on an active demand for December. After selling up to 49¾c December closed with a gain of ⅜c at 49⅛c.

The oats market was predominated by the other grains. There was little trading. December opened a shade lower at 28¾c, rallied with corn to 28⅞c and dropped back to the opening price. Local receipts 172 cars.

Selling by local longs and a poor market at the close governed the provision market. January pork sold off 10c at $12.45. January lard sold off 7½c at $7.20 and January ribs sold off 5c at $6.50.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald: Last week saw a rapid approach toward a parting of the legitimate and speculative in the wheat and flour trades. It was brought out more clearly that there is not, if not a liberal supply, of wheat for all legitimate uses, but that the speculative supply is at present undeniably short. The high quality wheat that is the basis of all future delivery contracts is such a small proportion of the present crop as to be but a poor representative of it. Nevertheless, the legitimate trade will handle the crop as it is and not as it might have been.

The crop movement, both from the winter and spring wheat sections, is above ordinary in volume, and must be met by consumption or shipment. Investment demand sufficient to absorb all that would usually go out to foreign buyers and that to be taken at home besides. There are indications that the consumer and investor cannot follow the pace set by the speculator. As long as the miller could sell flour made from medium and low-grade wheat on the basis of high-priced options he was perfectly willing to help the wheat speculator maintain prices. Just now there is a lull in the flour trade. This makes unpleasant and possibly expensive the recent plan of bidding the price of the few available carloads of speculative grade wheat. This grade has all season sold at large premiums over futures, while milling wheat, comprising the great bulk on sale, has sold at tremendous discounts. On Saturday even No. 1 northern wheat was being resold by Minneapolis millers to the elevator people, from whom it was originally bought. It will be the task of the speculator to take care of such offerings, and it remains to be seen how much of a burden he will be called upon to sustain.

Thus far this season the miller has made large profits. An export sale of patent flour made at Duluth last week was from wheat not grading No. 1 spring and selling at 40c below the price of December delivery. Under such conditions of manufacture there was a small margin of profit even for export to European countries that are almost low enough in their wheat prices to ship here and pay the import duty of 25c per bushel. It is safe to assume that no important export sales can be made under such conditions, or that they would be attempted if there were an adequate home demand to supply.

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: A Liverpool letter dated Oct. 18 says: "The market is steady with a good consumptive demand, and while the market may remain quiet during the month, we see no reason for very much decline, the latest information we have from France is that native wheat is not offered freely, farmers being very firm, owing to the shortage in the yield. She will, we feel sure, import a large quantity of wheat. There is no doubt that several of the Mediterranean and Black sea countries will export wheat this season throughout. It will require 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 quarters. With regard to Austria, she is already importing, while on previous years she has been an exporter. Roumania, will not give more than one million or one and a half million quarters, and South Russia has much less to sell than last year. The shipments from that quarter are fairly heavy at the moment, but after the next week or two they should fall off. In any case the wheat she is now shipping is required, and it is hard to say what would happen if she were not in the field with the quantity she is shipping, because there is not much to come from the River Plate and the cargoes now arriving are not at all good quality, Australian wheat is held above the market, and for the balance of the last crop now remaining she is asking extreme prices. South Africa will probably get the bulk of it. It remains to be seen if the receipts in Manitoba will bring shippers into the market, but at the moment they are rather wide apart."

Chicago: The Examiner quotes a grain man as follows: "There is a lot of frosted wheat in Manitoba which will further increase the low grade wheat in the current receipts. The exporters are taking quite a little of the low grade wheat and are likely to increase their takings right along. I am more impressed than ever with the fact that the Southwest is out of it and the Northwest is in a crippled condition for supplies, and that higher prices this year than have been yet seen are inevitable. The Oregon wheat is a sop thrown to the situation. The effort will be to work it off. Already Tacoma is increasing its wheat shipments to Europe, while sales of flour to the Orient, from the entire Pacific coast are increasing again."

* * *

Chicago Record-Herald: "I am as big a bull on wheat as I ever was," said J. A. Patten, who returned yesterday from the Pacific coast. "I've had advices to day that 75 per cent of the wheat crop near Grand Forks, N. D., had already left the farm. I do not believe the three Northwestern states have raised 125,000,-000 bus of wheat."

* * *

Chicago Examiner: "Everybody is advised to wait for a let-up in primary receipts before buying wheat," says E. W. Wagner. "It is well-intentioned, but wrong. Buy it while the receipts are heavy, while others are holding off, and while the market looks hopeless, for then prices are lowest. Do your waiting after you have bought. Wheat is five to seven cents higher now than when big receipts were the cry and began to staggger the market. The price will be 10 cents higher when everybody sees them smaller."

"I believe that I am right on my estimate of the corn crop," said H. V. Jones in Chicago, "and I feel so sure of my position that I would not raise the figures to 1,950,000,000 bus. I am alone in my estimate, it is true, and if wrong will acknowledge it. I have gone over the country in a careful manner and the husking returns thus far received bear out my estimate."

Chicago Tribune: War scares are always expected to bull the price of wheat, and always do. Shorts do not like to see them and there was naturally heavy covering yesterday on the first rumor to appeared on the horizon. As practically no wheat and not much flour is going out of this country for export, prices being above an export basis, there was less than usual reason for an advance, and this consideration may have operted with the report of a prompt apology from Russia to induce the heavy realizing which kept the advance within such moderate limits.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It was very quiet, steady during the early part of the day, but later dragged off on its own weight. Primary receipts large and cash markets everywhere neglected. With the winter wheat mills, business is beginning to be disappointing. It was a case of scattered liquidation, but very little short interest and poor support. Immediate conditions and tendencies do not seem to us bullish.

Corn—Cash corn continues scarce and today contract grade was selling 3¾c over the December price, or nearly 4c over the May. Husking is proceeding slowly. It has not advanced far enough yet to give any clear idea, but so far the straws from Ohio, Indiana and Nebraska have a disappointing tendency. Practically all the May corn that is bought is sold short by some one. We are inclined to think that its purchase will not hurt much and may easily prove quite profitable.

Oats—The undertone is strong, but speculative operations are not very large. It will be very likely to be influenced by the movement, which is slow. We are inclined to think they are low enough.

Provisions—Weak and lower. The support was not good and the scalring interest working for a decline. The product is relatively cheaper than the live hogs, but packers, while they talk bullish are not lending a very active support to prices. The action of the market is not encouraging.

EXCITED BUYING

Of Union Pacific In Enormous Volume on Stock Exchange.

Early Advance Was Practically Wiped Out By Profit-Taking.

New York, Oct. 25.—The stock market opened animated and higher today following the recovery of London. There were enormous dealings in the Union Pacific securities on account of the report that the Oregon Short Line participating bonds were to be retired. Ten thousand shares of Union Pacific sold at 109¾ and 110, compared with 108½, last night and subsequet transactions were in 1000 to 3000 share blocks. A block of 325,000 of the Oregon Short Line bonds sold at an advance of ¼ and the Union Pacific convertibles were up a point on the transfer of 100,000 blocks. Southern Pacific was up ½ on the sale of 4100 shares.

Opening sales of Ontario & Western were of 8000 shares at 46⅛ and 46¾ compared with 45⅝ last night. There were large blocks at large fractional advances of United States Steel preferred, People's Gas, Copper, Sugar, Colorado Fuel, Smelting, Pennsylvania, Atchison and St. Paul. Chicago Terminal preferred and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo were up a point. Four thousand shares of Erie sold at 41⅛ and 40⅞, compared with 41 last night, and the price then ran off to 40⅝.

The excited buying of Union Pacific continued in enormous volume with 110⅜ the top price. St. Paul was run up 3, and gains reached a point or over in Atchison, Denver & Rio Grande preferred, Wabash preferred, St. Louis Fuel, 1⅝ in Consolidated Gas and 1¾ in Northwestern. Ontario & Western fell back to 45½ and Reading and Erie were heavy in sympathy. A break of 2½ in Pressed Steel car affected the other railroad equipment stocks by sympathy and the local tractions. Sugar, Lead, Illinois Central and Westinghouse Electric were below last night.

Chicago, Great Western preferred "B" broke 2. A rise of 2 in Delaware & Hudson steadied the coalers at 11 o'clock.

The rise of 2½ in Delaware & Hudson was followed by sharp advances in other high grade stocks. Northwestern rose 2¾ on buying in one thousand share blocks, and the preferred 5. Lackawanna touched its record price at 300. St. Paul rose 3½ in all. United States Steel preferred rose strongly 1½, the local tractions rallied strongly, Metropolitan Street railway gaining 2⅜, and there were gains of 1 to 2 points for the Chicagos, Great Western, Illinois Central, Texas & Pacific, Sugar, Tennessee Coal and Sloss-Sheffield. The market ran off after the announcement of an engagement of gold for exports. Erie, Central of New Jersey, Locomotive and Rubber Goods preferred got 1 to 1¼ under last night, Westing house Electric 2 and St. Paul, Delaware & Hudson and Smelting reacted a point or more. A number of activo stocks were carried below last night, including Rock Island, Mexican Central, National of Mexico preferred, Southern railway, the Kansas & Texas stocks, Chesapeake & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, the Colordo & Southern stocks, and a number of minor industrials. Colorado Fuel shot up 3⅜, but the market continued irregular at noon. Bonds were irregular.

New stocks took part in the advance after 12 o'clock, but the diversion of interest in others did not retard a further rise in some earlier favorites, notably Union Pacific and United States Steel. New York Central reached 130¾ and Pecple's Gas rose 1⅜ in short order. United States Steel met a good many thousand shares when it touched 22, but it eventually took all at that price and cold a fraction higher. The preferred reached 98¾. Transactions in Union Pacific continued on an enormous scale and the buying of it up to 110¾ was attended by higher prices for the other Pacifics. St. Paul, Erie and Reading made momentary spurts upward, but fell back again, the two last named touching their lowest prices.

Union Pacific went to 112 before it fell back and carried Southern Pacific up 1½. Pennsylvania's gain reached 1. When Union Pacific fell back 1⅛ the whole market followed, the reaction running from 1 to 1½, for Southern Pacific, Atchison, New York Central, United States Steel preferred, Sugar, Tennessee Coal and Colorado Fuel. The Lead stocks dropped 2¼ and General Electric, Smelting preferred, Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred and National of Mexico preferred 1 to 1¼. St. Paul got 1⅜ below the highest.

The profit taking became free and general and the bears worked to further the reaction. Rumors were circulated of further demonstration against the Russian ambassador in London. St. Paul lost more than its gain and Southern Pacific reacted 2¼. Consolidated Gas 2½. Metropolitan Street railway 2. United States Steel preferred 2, and the list generally a point or more. Erie fell 2 points below last night, Reading 1⅝, Rock Island 2¼, and Brooklyn Transit. Chicago Great Western, Kansas & Texas, Louisville & Nashville, Colorado Southern, Colorado Fuel and some other important stocks 1 to 1¼. Westinghouse Electric lost 4. There was no effective rally and the closing was unsettled and weak.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: As this is probably the last stock letter I shall write you, permit me to take this opportunity to congratulate myself, if not yourselves, that for some months past I have not misled you as to the probable course of the market. It has seemed so clear to me that all the conditions were favorable to higher prices that I have felt perfectly safe in predicting them. I do not think that the market has yet spent its force in that direction. The great mass of dividend payers are still worth more as an investment than the money in the bank. The tide of general business activity has turned and all the conditions which govern and make it are favorable to its continuance and growth. A movement like the one we have had and are now having almost never stops at a rational stopping point. It goes too far. I do not think that the "Too FAR" point has yet been reached. All through the summer I predicted that the waiting list of investors would get left. The only change of view I now have is that the waiting list will have its chances. The daily trade in stocks is up around two million shares. This represents a good deal of conservative profit taking and more or less accumulation of stocks in the hands of the temporary holders. There is also an increasing contribution of stocks that were paid for by small holders everywhere during the decline and low prices of a year ago. These holdings are now coming on the market. Election day is fast approaching. Certain as the result seems, yet it will make some liquidation with timid holders. Practically the only change of view I have is that he who waited for a break on which to buy stocks during the past four months was wrong, but he who waits to buy stocks on a break now will be likely to have his expectations realized.

New York to B. E. Baker: Feeling is growing in financial circles that the North Sea matter is close to settlement. Impossible to obtain confirmation of this in any official quarters but a number of circumstances tend to give color to the theory that underneath the surface differences there has been reached an agreement.

Harriman to Paine, Webber & Co.: Recommend the purchase of first grade securities and believe that stocks obtained at prevailing prices will show handsome profits before the turn of the year. We expect to see an improving market today.

New York to Coe Commission Co.: The action of yesterday's market in persistant advances notwithstanding enormous liquidating sales by holders with large profits, confirms the view expressed by expert judges of financial matters, that the advance has got to go before any decided reaction will occur. Rich investors continue to absorb all offerings and the closing session witnesses an advance to new high levels. In more than one grcup of stocks Mexican Central and Great Western were bought in large blocks and it is asserted that these stocks are good for 25 or 40 points advance.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Oct. 25.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 2 points, or about as due on the cables. Heavy frosts were reported quite generally over the belt east of the Mississippi, and while the bears claimed that the crop was too nearly made to permit of much damage as a result of the freezing temperatures, the bulls seemed to be becoming a little more aggressive, particularly as rains were reported in the western belt, with the outlook for cold weather there in the near future, and immediately following the call prices showed a pretty firm undertone on a fairly active demand. But before the end of the first hour there was a renewal of pressure, in anticipation of a bearish ginners' report at midday, and the market sold off a little under last night's figures.

Cotton spot closed quiet: 10 points advance; middling uplands, 10.00; middling gulf, 10.30. Sales 563 bales. Futures closed steady. October, 9.61; November, 9.62; December, 9.79; January, 9.87; February, 9.91; March, 9.96; April, 9.98; May, 10.02; June, 10.04; July, 10.08.

A DELAY IN LOADING

Lumber Carriers Await Their Turn to Take on Cargoes.

Virginia Lumber Company Shipping Ten Million Feet This Week.

The fact that by the end of the present week the Virginia Lumber company will have shipped 10,000,000 feet of lumber down the lakes by boat, in one week, more than any other local company for the same length of time, means a delay in the loading of some of the lumber carriers, something unusual at the head of the lakes.

The lumber is taken on at the Mesaba log dock, where three vessels may be loaded at the same time. At present there are seven boats after cargoes to be taken from the Virginia company's shipments, and as only three of them can be loaded at one time the other four must of necessity lie outside the dock to await their turn. The delay does not generally amount to more than two or three days, though in some instances it may be longer.

The lumber, brought direct from the mills at Virginia and loaded on to the boats from the cars, is consigned to different ports along the lakes, the most of it going to Chicago, Cleveland and Buffalo.

THE MORSE IN COLLISION.

Detour, Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—While turning to go to the dock for fuel last night, the steamer Samuel F. B. Morse, collided with her barge, the Alexander Holley, cutting her tow line and breaking of the Holley's tow cheek. She is now anchored here in the river, waiting for another tow line from the Soo today. The Morse was uninjured and left during the night.

BUT LITTLE GRAIN IN SIGHT.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The grain trade is in such shape that it gives vesselmen little hope of doing much in that traffic for the balance of the season. At present there is not much corn in Chicago elevators, and whatever is being held at a premium, too high for shipment. For thirty days past the receipts have been at a low ebb, and even at present high prices not much more grain has been coming in, indicating that the farmers in the West are pretty well sold out. If such is the case, the grain movement will be dull to the very end of the season. Today vesselmen were able to secure little grain, and the only thing that keep rates up is the fact that the ore trade is ready to take all the boats offered.

RAISES HIS FIGURE

Julius H. Barnes Says Wheat May See $1.50 a Bushel.

Calls Attention to Possibilities For Manipulation of Market.

Julius H. Barnes today issued another letter to the grain trade and in this he raises by 10 cents the notch he formerly fixed for the possible maximum price of wheat before a new crop. Formerly he said that wheat would probably reach $1.40 a bushel. He now says that probabilities favor a price of as high as $1.50 a bushel. His letter is as follows:

"Since our last letter to the trade we have passed an epoch in American trade history—viz., the importation of foreign wheat for domestic use, and paying a duty of 25 cents per bushel. Last week we ourselves were able to import small quantities all rail to Duluth, and this week we have sold Eastern millers in cargo shipments from Fort William, Manitoba wheat on which the duty will be paid on arrival at Buffalo and the wheat ground for domestic consumption. As this is the first time since a protective duty was imposed on wheat that this has been possible, and as we have stoutly maintained that this situation would grow out of our extraordinary wheat situation this year, we are gratified that it was also ourselves to make the first importation of foreign wheat. With our American wheat prices practically on an import basis, the situation of our Northern neighbor, Manitoba, becomes of intense interest. To date the Eastern Canadian milling demand, which has been enlarged by the failure of wheat crops in Eastern Canada, has taken care of the Manitoba movement at premiums, and the almost entire absence of export outlet for Manitoba wheat has as yet been scarcely felt. With the almost certainty that America will need some millions of this Manitoba wheat before another crop, we estimate that Manitoba prices are apparently independent again of European markets. Minneapolis mills it is reported are preparing to bond part of their capacity for Manitoba use, and it is quite certain that for the finer grades of wheat, Eastern millers must look to Manitoba for supplies this winter.

"Regarding our own Northwest situation, conservative trade estimates are to the effect that 40 per cent of our Northwest crop has moved to market within less than eight weeks. This is an extraordinary percentage, but there are reliable grain men who claim an even higher percentage marketed. Certainly prices have been such as to draw every bushel of wheat possible to markets. If this situation has had the same effect in the Southwest, with its surplus of hard winter wheat, which has been compelled to supply Eastern millers, then it must be true that at least one-half of our American wheat crop has gone to market since July 1. What has been the result? Our visible supply is a trifle larger than last year, but at uncomfortably low figures. The country movement is showing signs of exhaustion, while owing to the high prices and the danger of hedges, the mills everywhere are scantily provided for their fall and winter requirements. The fact that our primary receipts have exceeded a year ago without a corresponding increase in our visible, would indicate that even the high prices ruling for the past sixty days have not materially curtailed our domestic consumption, especially as our exports for the same time are considerably lower than a year ago.

"Now as to the foreign situation, at present they seem as independent of the necessity of drawing on our supplies as we are of the necessity of selling anything in their markets, but there are already far-sighted grain men abroad who are anxiously looking for the source of their supplies during January and February next even supposing that the Argentine crop fulfills its present fine promise to supply them freely during March and April. The political complications of the past two days are really given little weight in grain markets, but out of them may grow a very serious situation. To sum up the wheat situation, we see it as follows:

"After sixty days of high prices and after a crop rush which has moved a larger percentage of our crops than ever before, there is accumulated in the six great markets of this country (Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis and Duluth) less than five million bushels of contract wheat.

"The present quality of our primary receipts is such as to show that no great quantity of contract wheat exists on this crop. Such a favorable condition for manipulation has not been known in years. There is a latent speculative fever in the American public which has lately been strongly exhibited in the stock market. With the certainty that our newspapers this fall and winter will be filled with news of the wheat market, its wide fluctuations, its high prices, its importations of foreign wheat, it is quite probable that the speculative sentiment will crystalize at sometime this winter in the option pits.

"There are a dozen prominent wheat operators in this country capable of seizing such a moment to take care of the contract stocks, which would be no burden to their means, and propel wheat prices to a point at present scarcely deemed possible. To believe that these people will be deterred by any mere sentiment as to prices, is not to give due credit to the shrewdness which has before made them fortunes in wheat and grain manipulation. Therefore, we believe we are right in saying that the probabilities favor a price in contract wheat this winter of $1.30, $1.40, or even $1.50, at sometime before a new crop."

TO PREVENT MIGRATION

Site of Boat Clubhouse to Be Filled In With Sand.

Members of the Duluth boat club have decided against moving for the present. It has never been the desire of the club to change its location but nature has been rather persuasive during the short life of the club house at its present anchorage on the point, and measures are now being taken to relegate nature, if possible, to a more becoming state of quietude.

This winter the house is to be given a firmer foundation by a filling of sand, which is now being pumped under the structure. An island is planned for the permanent foundation of the club house and this ground is now being made of lake sand, drawn in by pumps of the Peavey elevator company, which have been engaged for the purpose. The intention is to form an island to consist of about 10,000 yards of sand, and this material is being pumped into place at the rate of about 1000 yards per day.

In all probability the work will be completed before the end of the present week, and is expected to preclude the annoyance to which the organization and its habitues were subjected during the last cold season.

As an indication of the ice pressure in the winter it is said that the government life boat house has moved six inches in the last ten years. It is located some distance south of the boat house on the point shore.

There was no great necessity about getting the work done by the Duluth boat club so early in the season, but to prevent any unexpected interference by a sudden introduction of winter weather it was considered better to get the work under way and done as soon as possible.

Dr. Nelson P. Hurst, who, as vice president of the Oliver Iron Mining company, was chairman of the local committee of arrangements for the meeting here of the American Institute of Mining Engineers last month. He is in receipt of a personal letter from Dr. R. W. Raymond, the versatile secretary of the institute, the following part of which he was persuaded to permit being published:

"My Dear Sir: I send you herewith an official general letter, which you are quite at liberty to print in the newspapers. As it blows, (not unwarrantably, however) the trumpet for Duluth, they will, no doubt, be glad to print it. But I wish to add, also, personally, as well, as officially, a recognition of your special and personal services, to which we owe so much additional pleasure. It is not so much effifcient committees as congenial persons that make us experience, on such an occasion, a thoroughly and memorably good time.

"In addition to my letter to you I am writing special acknowledgments of personal activity to Mr. Wolvin, in recognition of his reception of visitors on the steamer bearing his name; to Messrs. Olcott and McGonagle for their respective railroads, and to Messrs. Cole and Sibenius, for personal attentions."

Following is the official letter to which the above refers:

American Institute of Mining Engineers, Secretary's Office, New York City, Oct. 17, 1904.—Dr. Nelson P. Hulst, chairman of local committee, Duluth, Minnesota: Dear Sir,—By direction of the council of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, I have the honor of expressing to you and through you to your associates upon the Duluth local committee, the cordial thanks of the council, visiting members and guests of the Institute, for the cordial reception extended to the Institute on the occasion of its recent Lake Superior meeting, and for the generous and skillful arrangements which enabled your guests to see, to so large an extent and in so convenient and satisfactory a way, the immense development of natural resources which, through the intelligence and energy of such men as are represented on your committee, has created the marvelous progress and promise of Duluth, established the commercial superiority of the United States, and, reinforced by a corresponding advance in scientific and mechanical methods, well-nigh revolutionized the industry of the world.

Yours truly,

R. W. RAYMOND, Secretary.

PERISHED AT ALTAR

Aged Woman's Dress Ignited By Lighted Candles.

Opelousas, La., Oct. 25.—While engaged at prayer in the Catholic church here Sunday, Mrs. Donal Guillory, aged 100 years, was burned to death in a horrible manner.

She was bowing before the altar, near which a number of candles were burning. Her devotions concluded, she rose to leave the church, when her dress came in contact with a candle and in an instant she was ablaze.

Only a few worshippers were in the church at the time, and their attention was attracted by the agonized cries of the centenarian. They ran to the woman's rescue, but too late. She died in agony a few minutes after her removal from the church.

Thomson, of the Pennsylvania lines, St. Paul, who was making his second official visit to the head of the lakes, and L. K. RUSSIA FORMALLY REPLIES TO BRITAIN; HARDLY SATISFACTORY IN PRESENT FORM

GREAT ARMIES ARE NOT YET READY TO RENEW HOSTILITIES

Two Forces Still Hold Positions In Entrenched Lines.

Sniping and Artillery Fire Are Kept Up Continuousiy.

Reason For Delay of General Engagement Is Unknown.

Advices from the front today indicate that the Russian and Japanese armies are not yet ready for the predicted great struggle, but the delay is not explained. The two forces hold their positions in entrenched lines within short range and maintain a continuous sniping and artillery fire. Several unimportant affairs are reported, among them what is described as "a weak effort" on the part of the Japanese to retake Lone Tree hill, which was repulsed. Beyond the general statement that the positions of the two armies are unchanged no light is thrown on the disposition of the forces.

Gen. Oku's Headquarters, Monday, Oct. 24, 4 p. m., via Fusan, Oct. 26.—The position of the opposing armies is unchanged. Yesterday Russian cavalry drove back the Japanese outpost on the extreme left, in turn retiring before a detachment of Japanese cavalry.

Desultory artillery fire continues daily, and sniping goes on between the infantry in the trenches.

Information regarding the reason for the delay in making further movements is not obtainable.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26.—Gen. Sakharoff telegraphs that there was no general fighting during the night of Oct. 25-26, but the Russian sharpshooters harrassed the Japanese during the night along the whole front.

Mukden, Oct. 26.—There was no incident of importance yesterday. Both armies are resting and preparing to resume the slaughter.

There is a rumor among the Chinese at Mukden that the Japanese are ready to attack.

DESULTORY FIRE

Maintained All Day on Russian Right Flank.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26.—Gen. Kuropatkin telegraphs that there was no fighting of importance Oct. 25. He adds:

A desultory artillery fire was maintained all day long upon the front of our right flank by both the enemy and ourselves.

On the night of Oct. 24, Russian volunteer sharpshooters ambushed advancing Japanese outposts and forced them to retire southward. Another detachment recovered a Russian gun carriage.

On the Russian center a detachment drove back the Japanese advance, near the village of Yautchai, but upon the appearance of strong Japanese reinforcements, the detachment returned to the village of Shakhe after burying the bodies of several Russians killed during previous fights and collecting large quantities of arms and ammunition."

GREAT TENSION

On Both Sides Caused By Present Situation.

Mukden, Oct. 26.—The situation is one of great tension for the troops on both sides. Gen. Kuropatkin and Field Marshal Oyama seem to be watching each other like hawks. It is impossible to tell which will make the first serious move. There are occasional exchanges of desultory firing at the outposts, but nothing of great importance has transpired. On Sunday night the Japanese made a feeble attempt on Lone Tree hill, but the attack was not pressed. The Russians used several siege guns of great range on Monday, bombarding the Japanese positions near Shakhe. The Japanese replied with Shimose shells. The Chinese say the Russian fire destroyed three Japanese field pieces.

The Japanese have evacuated Shakhe railroad station, but it and the railroad bridge between the lines are in the field of fire of both sides.

Although it is reported that there is no activity on the Russian left flank, little is really known concerning the situation there. A Japanese movement from the west along the railroad is reported, but this has not been confirmed. The general state of uncertainty breeds many rumors. On Monday a quite heavy artillery fire was heard westward.

The Japanese prisoners say the cold weather is causing an increase of illness among their troops.

The tree which gave its name to Lone Tree hill has disappeared. It was cut down Monday night for firewood.

CALM BEFORE THE STORM.

Quiet at Theater of War Is So Considered.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26, 12:50 p. m.—The quiet now prevailing at the theater of war is considered to be only the calm before the storm. There is every indication of the imminence of the resumption of fighting on a large scale, as the proximity of the two armies make it impossible for them to much longer defer a renewal of the battle. The correspondents at the front are strangely silent concerning the coming developments, but from the slight movements reported, and the continual reconnoitering of the Japanese positions, it is regarded as certain that Gen. Kuropatkin has a perfectly free hand accorded him by his elevation to the post of commander-in-chief, and that he is about to undertake an offensive movement. Field Marshal Oyama is reported to be fortifying his whole line south of the Shakhe river, showing that he is preparing to meet the Russian onset. Not a ray of light as yet has been shed upon Kuropatkin's plans.

STEAMER STRIKES MINE.

Che Foo, Oct. 26, 11 a. m.—The steamer Kashing struck a floating mine north of Alceste island at midnight last night. Two Chinese were killed and three were injured. The Kashing reached Wei-Hai-Wei today. The Kashing had a narrow escape from total destruction. The explosion tore a hole in the port bow carrying away nine plates. She was saved forward by a collision bulkhead, which held secure and enabled her to reach Wei Hai Wei today, where she now lies.

NO ADDITIONAL CASUALTIES.

London, Oct. 26.—All the steam trawlers, including the Gull, from Dogger bank, are now back at Hull. There are no additions to the casualty list, which is confined to the crew of the Crane. The three wounded men who were brought to Hul today belong to the Crane, having just left the hospital ship. They tell graphic stories, amply confirming previous reports of the affair, but seem unable to say positively whether they were cruisers or battleships which fired upon them, though they believe they were battleships.

ARMIES AT CLOSE RANGE.

Yentai Coal Mines, Manchuria, Tuesday, Oct. 25, via Fusan, Oct. 26.—The two armies remain confronting one another at close range along the entire lines. Both forces are working hard at the construction of strong entrenchments.

On the Japanese left the artillery is exchanging bombardments.

Maj. Prince Carl Anton Von Hohenzollern, the representative of the German emperor, with the Japanese army, has arrived at Liao Yang and will soon visit the front.

SECOND DAY'S SESSION OF THE BUTTERMAKERS.

St. Louis, Oct. 26.—At the opening today of the second session of the National Creamery Buttermakers association, a message was received from Ex-Governor Hoard, of Wisconsin, expressing his regrets at being unable to attend. Addresses were made by W. F. Jensen, of Topeka, Kan., Carl Shallinger, of Hutchinson, Minn., and M. Michaels, of Garnet, Wis. Geo. T. Yetter, of Pipestone, Minn., led the discussion.

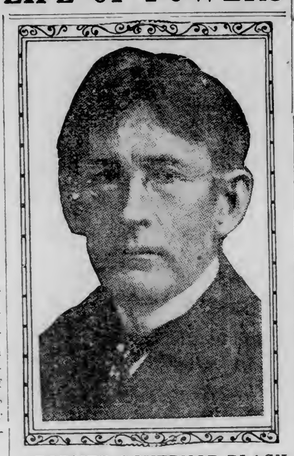

HACKLER'S PRIDE WINS.

London, Oct. 26.—Hackler's Pride won the Cambridgeshire stakes, a handicap of twenty-five sovereigns, with 500 sovereigns added, at the Newmarket-Houghton meeting today. Veril was second and Nabob third. Seventeen horses ran.

FORMER GOVERNOR BLACK WILL TRY TO SAVE LIFE OF POWERS

Who Awaits Execution For Complicity In Goebel Murder.

Black Offers Services Because He Believes Powers Innocent.

FORMER GOVERNOR BLACK.

New York, Oct. 26—Immediately after the election next month, Former Governor Frank S. Black will go to Frankfort, Ky., where he will enter into a legal battle for which he has volunteered his services, with the hope of saving the life of Caleb Powers, who is awaiting execution in that state for complicity n the assassination of Governor William Goebel.

Mr. Black has told his friends that he believes Powers innocent, and declares he will fight against the verdict of the lower courts, and, if necessary, carry the case to the supreme tribunal at Washington.

The testimony of 300 witnesses living in all sections of Kentucky will be taken.

CHINKS ARE TO REVOLT AGAINST EMPRESS TSI AN.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 26.—The Oregonian prints an article to the effect that the Chinese reform association, which has a large membership in every city on the Pacific coast is preparing to start a revolution against the present empress of China, during the celebration of the next Chinese new year, which occurs in February.

The article declares that as an insult to the Empress Tsi An, the members of the association, have been ordered to cut their queues which are a mark of submission to the reigning power. They have determined to place the young and deposed emperor, Little Juong Suey, on the throne. The organization expects to use him as a figure head and as a tool while Yip Yen, the head of the association who is in Vancouver, B. C., will be the real ruler in his position as prime minister.

HERDERS STEAL AND SELL 3000 SHEEP.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Junius Wright, a ranch owner, of Boise City, Idaho, having discovered 3000 of his best sheep had been stolen by one of his tenders and shipped to Chicago, has come here only to learn that the sheep have been sold for $7000, and the man his disappeared. The police are working on the case.

TRIAL OF SCHAUMANN EXCITES MUCH INTEREST.

Abo, Finland, Oct. 26.—The trial of Former Senator Schaumann, father of Eugene Waldemar Schaumann, the assassin of the late Governor General Bobrikoff, arrested on July 2 on suspicion of having had knowledge of his son's crime, is arousing great popular interest. The indictment charges him with conspiracy against the government. When his house was searched, June 17, the day after Bobrikoff's assassination, Police Inspector Molodkin found plans for a general arming and training of the whole population, together with appeals, exhorting the people to preserve political alertness and be prepared for any exentuality. Schaumann, in his reply, does not deny the authorship of the plans, but contests the revolutionary interpretation given to them.

PRETTY CORSET AGENT

Alleged to Have Captivated Wealthy Old Man.

Meridan, Conn., Oct. 26.—In the probate court Mrs. John O. Noxon, of Brooklyn, told how her married life of fifty-four years was brought to an unhappy end when her wealthy septuagenarian husband fell in love with Mary E. Remington, a pretty corset canvasser, and ran away to this city to bask in her warm smiles.

Mrs. Noxon said she found out seven years ago that her husband was providing for the young woman in a house near her own in Brooklyn. She scolded him for it, and he promised faithfully to be good in the future. Instead of keeping faith, the enamored old man sold his drug store in Court street and disappeared the day after he was scolded. Mrs. Noxon traced him after nearly two years' searching and found Mary E. Remington, the corset canvasser, was his housekeeper. She ordered Mrs. Noxon from the house, making the assertion she owned it. Then Mrs. Noxon began a suit against Miss Remington to recover $10,000 for alienating the old man's affections, and that suit is pending.

"That woman," said Mrs. Noxon, trembling as she pointed to Miss Remington, "exercises some hypnotic influence over my husband."

THEATER AT TOLEDO BURNED.

Toledo, O., Oct. 26.—Fire, which started on the stage of the Grand theater, early today, completely burned out the playhouse and damaged the National Union building, in which the theater is situated, to the extent of $75,000.

NO EXPLANATION OF THE OUTRAGE IS AS YET FORTHCOMING FROM THE ADMIRALTY

Russia Fails to Agree to Punish the Offenders.

Reply, However, Promises Full Reparation For Attack.

Lord Lansdowne Trusts Matter Will Soon Be Settled.

London, Oct. 26, 5:52 p. m.—Foreign Secretary Lansdowne considers that Russia's reply in its present form is incomplete, especially in the failure to grant Great Britain's demand for the punishment in principle of such officers as might be found responsible.

Lord Lansdowne said late this afternoon, however, that he trusted the matter would be settled within twenty-four hours.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26, 5:15 p. m.—Ambassador Hardinge has sent another note to Foreign Minister Lamsdorff expressing his opinion that the measures reported to have been taken by the Russian admiralty to communicate with Admiral Rojestvensky were entirely inadequate.

At the foreign office the fullest confidence is expressed in an amicable settlement of the incident.

RUSSIA'S REPLY

To Great Britain Promises Full Reparation.

London, Oct. 26.—The Russian reply to Great Britain's note on the subject of the North Sea tragedy has been received by the British government. It expresses deep regret at the occurrence and promises full reparation so soon as an official report is received from Vice Admiral Rojestvensky.

The reply was received by Ambassador Benkendorff during the night and was forwarded to Foreign Secretary Lansdowne in the shape of a formal letter, in which the ambassador waiting on cable instructions from St. Petersburg, gave the above assurance adding that while the Russian government at the time of cabling was still without official knowledge from its own sources of the occurrence in the North Sea, it feels so certain it was an error that it wishes at once to express its regret and assures the British government that full compensation will be made as soon as the details are received. A reply in identical language is expected to be handed to Ambassador Hardinge at St. Petersburg today.

Ambassador Bendendorff himself drove to the Lansdowne house before noon, had half an hour's conference with Foreign Secretary Lansdowne and subsequently proceeded to Downing street and saw Premier Belfour. During the conference Lord Selborne, first lord of the admiralty, called in Capt. Prince Louis of Battenberg, the director of the naval intelligence. Attorney General Finlay was also present. The premier, Prince Louis and Lord Selborne are all members of the defense committee. The conference lasted about an hour.

Lord Selborne's speech at the Pilgrim's dinner yesterday evening is accepted as revealing the precise nature of the British demands, namely, an ample apology, generous compensation, the punishment of the guilty and an adequate guarantee against a repetition of the offense. The first lord of the admiralty confirmed the Associated Press advices of yesterday morning.

Apart from the admiralty's announcement that precautionary orders had been issued to the fleets there are practically no signs of anything in the nature of warlike preparations, thus confirming the opinion universally held in all well-informed circles here that the pledges given by Emperor Nicholas and the Russian government will be generally fulfilled and that the crisis will pass away without serious consequences.

A telegram from Portsmouth reported that orders had been received this morning to hurry the equipment of certain ships of the reserve, but this, it is understood, was comprised in the admiralty's order already announced, and this continues to receive high approval from public officials and the newspapers, though the more jingoistic of the latter express the hope that it means that the Russian fleet will not be permitted to go beyond Gibraltar or, if it does, that the squadron will be followed. Vice Admiral Lord Beresford's vessels, the channel squadron, are lying conveniently in the shadow of the rock of Gibraltar.

The British cruiser Suffolk, which was to have left Gibraltar for Malta today, was ordered to remain at Gibraltar.

Reports of the whereabouts of the Russian fleet are coming in from various quarters.

From Fiume, Hungary, comes an announcement of the arrival there of six British warships, while the rest of the British Mediterranean fleet is on its way to Pola, Austria.

It was stated in naval circles that undue importance must not be attached to the movements of British warships, or to the activity in British dock yards, in view of the later news indicating the passing of the acute phase of the crisis. It is suggested that the naval authorities and the defense committee were glad of an opportunity for testing the mobilization plans. Col. Sir George Clarke, of the defense committee, has stated that he is no longer apprehensive of the matter reaching a climax.

ROJESTVENSKY'S REPORT

In the Czar's Hands But Not Made Public.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26, 4:40 p. m.—It is asserted on high authority that Emperor Nicholas this afternoon received Admiral Rojestvensky's report.

Admiral Avellan, chief of the admiralty, has gone to Tsarskoe Selo and will not return till late this evening.

There is no clue yet as to the character of the report. It is entirely probable that if Rojestvensky is found to have been responsible for the blunder, and he is recalled, Vice Admiral Choukrin, commander of the Black sea fleet, will succeed him in command of the Secopd Pacific squadron. The announcement now that Rejestvensky's recall and suspension have already been decided upon is premature.

UNREASONABLE DELAY

In Rojestvensky's Report Will Not Be Tolerated.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26, 2 p. m.—Again at noon today the admiralty announced that Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's report had not yet arrived, but the British embassy has been assured that it is on its way here. Therefore, the long-awaited Russian version of the North sea incident, upon which the future action of Great Britain depends, cannot be much longer delayed. The admiralty does not offer any explanation of how the report is coming, but it may have been mailed at Cherbourg, as intimated in these dispatches last night, although it is possible that one of the torpedo boats, which sailed from Cherbourg, may have been sent to secure it.

Capt. Caithorpe, the British naval attache, was at the Admiralty again to day, in full uniform, in quest of information as to when the report could be expected. It is evident from the vigor with which the British embassy is pressing its inquiries that it is not the intention of the British government to await it indefinitely and that, on the contrary, anything in the nature of unreasonable delay will occasion new representations. However, the admiralty's statement conveyed to Ambassador Hardinge today is regarded as reassuring, and altogether the situation is considered to have entered on a distinctly better phase, though the acute stage cannot be regarded as having passed until the character of the Russian explanation is revealed. If, upon the receipt of Admiral Rojestvensky's report, the Russian government in communicating its explanation voluntarily announces that a searching inquiry will be made in order to fix the blame, and that the offenders will be punished, it is not thought Great Britain can reasonably demand more, inasmuch as Emperor Nicholas himself has already offered an apology for the unfortunate affair, and has given assurances that the victims will receive the fullest compensation.

The admiralty has dispatched a swift ship from Vigo to ascertain whether any British fishermen are off the Spanish coast, and to warn Rojestvensky.

RAISING SUBSCRIPTIONS

For Families of Sailors Killed In North Sea.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26, 7:30 a. m.—The semi-official Journal De St. Petersburg has opened a subscription for the families of the British fishermen killed by the guns of the second Pacific squadron. The paper opens the list with a contribution of $25.

The first harsh note sounded by the press in connection with the affair, is found in the Russ, which declares today that the British government, knowing the serious problem of self-preservation confronting the Russian fleet, should have taken the precaution of warning the trawler fleet against getting in the way of the warships.

The Russ adds that it has reason to believe that "certain other vessels" suffered with the fishing fleet, about whose faith nothing will be said in England.

BEYOND COMPREHENSION

Was the Act of Sinking British Fishermen.

Tokio, Oct. 26.—8 a. m.—The Nichi Nichi, in commenting upon the sinking of the trawler Crane in the North sea by the Russian second Pacific squadron, says that the action is beyond the capacity of comprehension of the ordinary sane mind. The vessels were harmless fishing boats belonging to a neutral power, and to indulge in such a flagrant violation of international usage is only possible with those holding nothing in common with civilized people.

"The act it too flagrant to be explained as a mistake and doubtless the government of the injured people will take due action against Russia."

The Nichi Nichi then goes on to recite other illegal acts of Russia against neutrals. It pronounces this the crowning act of an already well known inhumanity, and declares that the Russians "completely lack a sense of humanity, an attribute of enlightened minds."

TO REVICTUAL AT SEA.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 26.—Telegrams in cipher have arrived here for Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, commanding the second Pacific Russian fleet. The government has ordered the local authorities to only permit revictualing of the Russian fleet within the port on condition that the ships enter one at a time. Consequently, the Russian consul is proceeding to Cies island, in the bay of Vigo, for the purpose of communicating with the fleet to arrange for revictualing three miles from the coast.

ALEXIEFF IS SUCCEEDED AS COMMANDER BY KUROPATKIN

Doughty General at Head of the Whole Russian Army.

Viceroy's Elimination as Military Factor Causes Great Relief.

GEN. KUROPATKIN.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26.—An imperial ukase dated Oct. 23, appoints Gen. Kuropatkin commander-in-chief of the Russian army.

The text of Viceroy Alexieff's order of the day which was read before the troops in the far East Monday and announced the appointment of Gen. Kuropatkin to be commander-in-chief of all the land forces in the East is as follows:

His majesty today acceded to my request that I be relieved of the duties of cammander-in-chief, and has appointed Gen. Kuropatkin commander-in-chief of all our land forces in the far East while retaining me in my position as viceroy. His majesty at the same time deigned to favor me with an expression of sincere appreciation for my forces in the viceroyalty, their concentration in the war zone and my conduct of affairs as commander-in-chief of our forces in the far East.

While notifying the land and sea forces in the territory of the far East of the imperial will and mark of favor graciously conferred by our monarch, I consider it my duty to convey my cordial thanks to the glorious troops under my command who have taken immediate share in the military operations, for their truly self-sacrificing service distinguished by many heroic deeds on the part of both men and leaders of all grades. I also express my sincere thanks to the troops which have not yet met the enemy for their energy and indefatigability in difficult positions.

I shall always be very proud and hold in the highest honor that special confidence the monarch conferred upon me as commander-in-chief of the glorous troops which have adorned their banners with fresh glory.

It is my firm belief that, with God's help our strong foe will be overthrown by our troops—to the glory of the emperor and the welfare of our beloved fatherland.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26.—Viceroy Alexieff's order of the day announcing Kuropatkin's appointment is in the same grandiose vein as Kuropatkin's order of October 5 and is regarded as having definitely established the authorship of that ill-starred document. While Alexieff takes particular pains in turning over the supreme command of the land forces to Kuropatkin to inform the soldiers and the world of the marks of imperial confidence reposed in him and to announce that he will remain as viceroy, the order is considered as virtually his farewell address and that it will soon be followed by his return to St. Petersburg. His elimination as a factor in the military situation has caused a sigh of relief. The papers all welcome the announcement of Kuropatkin's appointment to the chief command as a well merited recompense for the manner in which he discharged the difficult role imposed upon him, and, reading between the lines, as promise of better results now that Alexieff is eliminated and there is no longer a prospect of the elevation of a grand duke to the supreme command.

ONE VERSION

Of the Attack on British Fishing Fleet.

Cherbourg, Oct. 26.—As a result of the visit of the Russian torpedo boats here on Monday, a report is circulated in naval circles, giving the following version of the North sea incident:

"The hull fishing fleet had its lights extinguished when the torpedo boats making up the Russian fleet collided with some of the fishing boats. The Russians claim that no shots were fired and that they were about to render assistance, when, seeing other fishing boats succoring the damaged craft, the squadron proceeded. One torpedo boat, which is said to have been damaged during the collision, is reported to have been repaired in the outer harbor here during its stay here on Monday, but this is not confirmed."

RUSSIAN WARSHIP DISABLED.

London, Oct. 26.—The trawler Princess Victoria arrived at Aberdeen today. She reports passing a disabled Russian warship during the night of Oct. 21-22, about forty miles from the place the Hull trawlers were fired on.

The warship early Saturday morning was burning two red lights. The Princess Victoria, thinking the warship required assistance, steamed close to her and hailed her, but though the trawler remained near the ship for three-quarters of an hour, no answer was given.

WARSHIPS AT VIGO.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 26.—A division of the Russian second Pacific squadron, consisting of five battleships, has arrived here and is entering the port.

HAS SECURED THE MONEY

Road From Texas to Duluth to Be Built at Once.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Houston, Texas, says:

Edward D. Steger, president of the Denison, Bonham & New Orleans railroad, has just returned from France, where he has been for three months arranging with one of the largest banking institutions of the continent for the financing of what will be the first through railway North and South in America. It is to run from Duluth, Minn., via Kansas City, to Galveston, Texas, with subordinate lines. The construction will amount to 2000 miles. The road is to be completed in five years. The contract with the French syndicate is for an investment of $78,000,000. Construction will begin in Texas within sixty days, according to Mr. Steger.

FIVE MEN KILLED

After Being Put Off Train Three Times.

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 26.—J. Francisco, a cigarmaker of this city, and four tramps were killed in the wreck of a Wabash freight train at Sadorusa, Champaign county, after having been put off the train three times. Martin Tracy, also a cigarmaker of Boston, who was suspended four hours with his head hanging close to the dead bodies of his companions, tried to suicide by strangulation, but was discovered and the trainmen released him.

H., Oct. 26.—Dartmouth alumni and other friends of the college filled this town today having come to attend the exercises in connection with the laying of the cornerstone of a new Dartmouth hall. An interesting event of church was the conferring of the degree of doctor of laws upon the earl of Dartmouth, who arrived Tuesday.

DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS

CURED BY Pe-ru-na

KIDNEY DISEASE IN OCTOBER.

Mr. F. B. Richards, 609 "E" street, N. W., Washington, D. C., War Correspondent, writes:

"Exactly six years ago I was ordered to Cuba as staff correspondent of the New York Sun. I was in charge of a Sun dispatch boat through the Spanish-American war.

"The effect of the tropical climate and the nervous strain showed plainly on my return to the States. Lassitude, depression and incessant kidney trouble made me practically an invalid. This undesirable condition continued, despite the best of treatment.

Finally, a brother newspaper man induced me to give a faithful trial to Peruna. I did so.

"In a short time the lassitude left me, my kidneys resumed a healthy condition, and a complete cure was effected.

"I cannot too strongly recommend Peruna to those suffering with kidney trouble.

"Today I am able to work as hard as at any time in my life."—F. B. Richards."

OCTOBER is notably the month of kidney diseases. The reason is:

During the warm months the skin has been freely throwing off water in the form of perspiration.

The cool days and cooler nights of October in a measure stop the action of the skin.

The superfluous impurities must find their way out through the kidneys. This puts upon the kidneys a great strain of function.

The passage of these poisons through the kidneys irritate them and excite Bright's disease.

At this time the kidneys need some encouragement, some assistance. Peruna gives just this assistance.

It gently stimulates the kidneys to increased function, and thus guards against the possibility of disease.

People inclined to weakness of the kidneys, ought to use the precaution of taking Peruna during the month of October. At the first sign of kidney disease, such as scanty urine, backache, puffiness under the eyes, etc., Peruna should be taken. It may save months of sickness.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio, and he will give you the benefit of his valuable advice gratis.

ONE HOME FOR CONSUMPTIVES

Board of Control Decides to Abandon the Cottage Plan.

St. Paul, Oct. 26.—The state board of control in conference with the sanitarium commission, decided to abandon the plan of separate cottages for the new home for consumptives to be erected at Walker, and to erect one large building. The cottage plan of housing consumptives was considered too expensive.

Drs. H. L. Taylor and G. S. Wattam, of the sanitarium commission, gave notice that they will ask the next state legislature for $150,000 for the erection and equipment of the new building, but the members of the board of control thought that $75,000 is sufficient to launch the new institution.

There is likely to be much bickering among the public institutions of the state as to appropriations for the next two years. Two big items of expense have developed recently, the establishment of the sanitarium for cosumptivs and rebuilding of the main building at the state university, which was debated before. The regents of the university have hinted that they intend asking for an appropriation of $500,000 for a new building.

SWEET MARIE WINS RACE.

Memphis, Oct. 26.—Sweet Marie, the California mare, easily won the free-for-all trot yesterday at the Driving park, beating Dr. Strong handily in straight heats. Sweet Marie was never fully extended and her time in the second heat was very creditable. The Emerald stake for 2:06 pacers brought out four fast horses. John —, the Smathers entry, was an odds-on favorite, and after losing the first heat to Locanda, he easily won the succeeding heats. Prince Alert was sent against 1:59½ pacing record, but failed.

Kempf apears in the La Follette column for state treasurer. The name of August C. Backus, who it was reported would be placed on the ballot as an independent candidate for state treasurer and be supported by the La Follette wing, does not appear.

COLUMBUS BELLBOY KILLED BY A WOMAN.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 26.—Theodore Bancer, aged 21, a bell boy at Smith's hotel, was sot and killed by Ollie Davis, a young woman, early this morning in a flat on East Main street. The woman claims that Bancer was flourishing an old revolver, when she drew a weapon and pointed it at him and it was accidentally discharged. She was arrested. Bancer came here from Grand Rapids, Mich.

FOOTBALL GAME AT FAIR CANNOT BE ARRANGED.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 26.—In reference to the proposal of President Frances, of the Louisiana purchase exposition, that the universities of Minnesota and Michigan settle the Western football championship by a game at St. Louis, Charles Baird, director of athletics for Michigan, said last night that there was no possibility of the game being arranged. He said it would be premature to consider such arrangement before Michigan had met Chicago and Wisconsin, and that it was against Michigan's policy to play a game away from the regular grounds of a college.

TWO COMMIT SUICIDE.

One Was on Spree, Other Was In Debt.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 26.—A ranch hand named Giles, who had been drinking heavily, wound up a spree at Windom by taking a dose of morphine. He was about 30, and had no relatives so far as known.

John Hay, a rancher, near Terry, has committed suicide by shooting. He left a note saying that he was helplessly in debt and felt it better to rid the community of his presence.

NEW CIVIL CASES

Several Started In District Court of This County.

They Vary From Divorce Action to Ejectment Proceedings.

Ferdinand Thurnher seeks, through the medium of district court, to recover from Anna Thurnher possession of property located in the Fifth division of West Duluth, which he claims she is illegally withholding from him. In his complaint filed yesterday afternoon, Thurnher claims that by terms of a contract made with Martin Thurnher, in October, 1899, the latter was to occupy the property, the term of occupancy expiring last September. Anna Thurnher, it is claimed, came in possession of the property through some agreement with Martin and, it is alleged, has refused to vacate since the lease expired. Ferdinand asks for a writ of ejectment. Anna Thurnher has filed a counter claim in which she sets forth that she is sole owner of the property.

G. R. Patterson has brought suit against T. Kurowski to recover possession of certain lands in 34-52-15 which he claims are illegally withheld. Patterson also asks for $50 damages and the costs of the action.

Mrs. Anna Larson, widow of John Larson, who was killed by accident at the St. Louis Lumber company's mill Feb. 17, 1903, has brought suit against the lumber company to recover damages in the amount of $5000, the statutory limitation in case of death. Larson was employed at unloading logs and it is claimed that one of the chains used in binding the logs on cars was so weak that it broke under the strain and Larson was struck by the end of it and hurled into the "hot pond" where some logs rolled on him, crushing his skull. Mrs. Larson claims that the company knew of the weak condition of the chain and was, therefore, guilty of negligence in not providing the proper safeguards about its employes.

Lucy Ulrunda has instituted an action against Dominic Ulrunda, asking for a decree of divorce, claiming a misfit marriage. In her complaint Mrs. Ulrunda says they were married at Soudan, Minn., December, 1899, and that shortly after the nuptials her husband began a course of abuse and illtreatment, finally quitting work and compelling her to take in boarders and support the family. Besides a decree Mrs. Ulrunda asks for custody of their 4-year-old daughter. The parties live at Chisholm.

F. J. B. Hibbard, of West Duluth, has given notice of a suit against the city of Duluth to recover damages for injuries claimed to have been received in tripping over loose planks in a defective sidewalk, and receiving a bad fall.

FIRST SNOWFALL.

One Inch Falls, Opening the Winter Season.

Duluth experienced her first snowfall of the season yesterday afternoon and last evening. According to observations taken at the hilltop weather station at 7 o'clock last night the fall was .5 of an inch, and at 9 o'clock the snow had reached a depth of one inch.

Records at the weather bureau show yesterday's snow to be ahead of the average date when a snowfall has been registered in Duluth. The average date is Nov. 5. Snow flurries are not taken into consideration in this record, each measurement being .1 or more inches.

The earliest snowfall of the season during the last twenty years occurred in 1884, on Oct. 20, and the latest date on which the first snow fell was Nov. 21, in 1891 and 1893. The heaviest first snowfall in these twenty years was 2.3 inches, on Nov. 17, 1886.

JUST ARRIVED!

Two car loads heavy draft horses. The best that ever came to Duluth. For sale by Barrett & Zimmerman, at their stables opposite Post Office.

Stop Twenty Austrians.

Immigration Inspector W. H. Dean has discovered another attempted evasion of the head tax laws. Twenty Austrians arrived direct from the old country by way of Port Arthur. They came via the Red Star line to New York and passed through that city "in transit," coming on to Port Arthur, the destination named in their transportation contracts. At Port Arthur they boarded the steamer America and came on to Duluth. The immigrants were allowed to land. Under laws which recently went into effect the Red Star line will have to pay the twenty head taxes, amounting in the aggregate to $40.

Merrill-Gheen Contest.

The case of Fred Merrill, contestant, against Stephen Gheen, claimant, which originated at the Duluth land office, is now before the secretary of the interior for decision. The homestead involved is in sections 15 and 22, township 7-67-19, and is said to be worth $25,000 for the timber on it. From the local office the matter was taken to the commissioner general at Washington, where a decision was rendered in favor of Merrill. Gheen is a half-breed Indian, employed as a farmer on the Nett Lake reservation. The contest affidavit alleges that he has not lived up to the requirements of the homestead laws.

FINED FOR CRUELTY.

John Erickson Accused of Maltreating a Horse.

Charged with cruelly beating a horse he was driving, John Erickson was arrested by Sergeant Gillen, of the police department, yesterday afternoon and arranged in the municipal court.

The officer stated that the prisoner was mercilessly beating the horse because it was unable to pull a heavy wagon out of the mud-hole in the city dump between Seventeenth and Eighteenth avenues West.

The prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $5 and costs by Judge Windom.

LEAVE FOR WOODS

Trappers Preparing to Start In on Their Season's Work.

Several Parties Have Already Left Duluth and Range Towns.

Several parties of trappers have left Duluth and the range towns within the past week or two, bound for the forest regions of Northern Minnesota, where they will become engaged in their winter's work of catching fur-bearing animals. Most of these parties contain only two or three men, and the majority of those going on such expeditions are young men who have had some experience in the woods. Otto Carlson and E. B. Christenson, West End young men, left Duluth only yesterday with their trapping outfit, bound for the Tamarack river, in the Red Lake country.

In certain spots in the northern section of the state fur-bearing animals are still to be found in considerable numbers, and experienced trappers, who are willing to work, have an opportunity this year of making the winter months quite profitable, it is claimed. Furs are bringing good prices and it takes only a few mink or marten a week to bring in fair wages to the men catching them. The Lake Superior fur is excelled by none in America, and brings a top-notch price. It is now in prime condition, and will remain in this state until the warmer spring months. Usually the trapper winds up his season's work in March or April.

Musk rat, mink and marten form the chief factors in the trapper's calculations. A musk rat skin is worth only from 10 to 20 cents, but in a region where the animals abound they may be caught in large numbers and with little work. Mink are much more difficult to trap, not only because they are fewer in number, but because they are much more intelligent and knowing than the more sluggish rats. Their skins are worth as high as $4 each in their raw state, while that of a marten sometimes brings as high as $15.

Otter and fisher are also caught in limited numbers in Northern Minnesota. They are worth about $6 each. The common fox is worth up to $3, the grays bringing only $1 each. Shooting an occasional black bear helps to swell the trapper's proceeds, for a good bear skin is worth $25.

CHURCH FAIR!

POSTMASTER VAN COTT DEAD

Well Known New York Politician Passes Away Suddenly.

New York, Oct. 26.—Cornelius Van Cott, postmaster of New York City, died suddenly yesterday of heart failure, following a sharp attack of acute nervous indigestion.

He was taken ill Monday afternoon at his office in the federal building and his condition was such that the attending physician deemed his removal unwise at that time. Yesterday noon Mr. Van Coot appeared much better and was taken to his home in West Eighty-sixth street. He walked to the elevator in the federal building without difficulty and his physician believed that the postmaster was merely suffering from an attack similar to several he had had during the past year. A consultation of physicians was held as soon as Mr. Van Coot reached his home and they gave a favorable prognosis, provided appoplexy did not supervene. Shortly after, the patient had a sinking spell and died at 3:25 o'clock of heart failure.

Mr. Van Cott had been a vigorous man, but of late he had been subjected to an unusual amount of trouble, this is believed to have underminded his health. He assisted in the establishment of a commercial agency and signed notes to a large amount. The concern failed and Mr. Van Cott was called upon to pay over $23,000, which took practically the savings of his life. About this time an investigation of the New York postoffice was undertaken by the Washington officials but the integrity or probity of the postmaster was not impugned. Notwithstanding the favorable outcome, he worried much over the affair.

The recent arrest of his son, Richard Van Cott, charged with colonizing, was a severe blow to the postmaster, who expressed his firm belief in his son's innocence. These troubles coupled with advanced age—he was in his sixty-seventh year—played an important part in bringing on the fatal illness.

Postmaster Van Cott came from Knickerbocker stock and was born in this city Feb. 12, 1838. He commenced life as a printer. Mr. Van Cott's first political appointment was that of deputy inspector in the custom house.

In the campaign against Tweed he was particularly conspicuous and as a reward for his endeavors was in 1874 made fire commissioner by Mayor Havemeyer. He was reappointed in 1881. During his two terms Mr. Van Cott inaugurated many reforms in the fire department.

He was posmaster of New York during President Harrison's administration and was appointed again by President McKinley in 1897.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION HOLDS FINAL SESSION.

Boston, Oct. 26.—The triennial general convention of the Episcopal church, which has been in session here since Oct. 5, was ended late yesterday with a public service in Trinity church.

Little business of importance was transacted at the final business session. A resolution permitting foreign congregations now in communion with the church to use forms of service in their own tongue was adopted after a sharp contest. This legislation was enacted specifically for the benefit of Swedish congregations in Minnesota.

Among the many negative actions taken was the decision not to change the name of the church at this time, nor to act on the proposition to group the dioceses into provinces, with a primate at the head of each.

The next convention will be held at Richmond, Va., in 1907.

THE DEBATE IS ARRANGED

Between John Lind and J. A. Peterson on Dunn's Record.

St. Paul, Oct. 26.—Despite a vehement protest from some of the Republican leaders, arrangements were made yesterday for the Peterson-Lind debate on the record of Robert C. Dunn in the Iron Range land grant.

James Peterson, accompanied by Millie Bunnell, of the Duluth News Tribune, and John A. Sweet, of Minneapolis, conferred with Frank Day, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, and the arrangements for the debate were completed.

If possible, it will be pulled off at the auditorium in Minneapolis Saturday night.

Mr. Lind will open the argument with an hour to his credit. Mr. Peterson will follow with an hour and fifteen minutes, and Mr. Lind will make a closing talk of fifteen minutes.

Mr. Peterson is to have the further option of another five minutes if Mr. Lind brings out anything foreign to the argument.

If President Northrop, of the university, will serve, he is to be chairman of the meeting. Referees are to be picked by the Hennepin county committee.

Mr. Peterson's desire to meet Mr. Lind was evidently not relished by Mr. Dunn's managers, for neither Coyde Hamlin nor James A. Martin is identified with the negotiations. The telephone between Minneapolis and headquarters was kept hot with messages from leaders in the Mill City protesting against the meet. Others made personal calls.

United States Marshal Grimshaw was one of these. He aired his sentiments freely and carried them in the shape of a big kick to C. S. Mitchell, in charge of the speakers' bureau. "A lot of Republicans in Hennepin county who are working to elect Mr. Dunn are endeavoring in some way to head off this debate," said Mr. Grimshaw. "Jim Peterson has already cost Mr. Dunn 4000 majority in Hennepin county, and if this fool affair is allowed to go on it will cost Mr. Dunn 8000 majority."

Manager James Martin and C. S. Mitchell both disclaimed any connection with the debate. "I have not had anything to do with it," said Mr. Martin. "It is a personal matter between Mr. Lind and Mr. Peterson. I know nothing of any negotiations or challenges except what I have seen in the newspapers."

MR. JOHNSON'S PLURALITY

Traveling Man Who "Makes" 263 Towns Says 30,000.

Minneapolis, Oct. 26.—"I see Mr. Dunn has an explanation for the opposition of the traveling men to his candidacy for governor," said a well-known commercial traveler yesterday. "He says that we are against him because when he was auditor he raised the taxation of our companies, and we are talking at the dictation of our bosses. In the first place, that is an insult to the independence of the traveling men, who think for themselves on matters outside their business. However, I don't know anything about Mr. Dunn's relation with the Minnesota houses. My concern is located in Ohio and pays no taxes in Minnesota at all, and many of us are situated the same way. We are citizens of Minnesota, however, and have a decided opinion on the governorship. With hardly an exception, the knights of the grip are against Dunn, because they have a different idea of what a governor ought to be. They know that he got the nomination by unfair means, and they believe in fair play in politics as well as business.

"I have taken some pains to get a line on the situation," the traveling man continued, "and I have made up my mind on it. I make 263 towns in Minnesota from Wadena south to the Iowa line. I have been all over that territory this fall, and I have improved all my opportunities to talk with the business men and with the farmers as they gather in the stores. I have found the Dunn men decidedly in the minority. There are some to be found, but they are not enthusiastic over Dunn. They only say that they are Republicans, and will have to stand by the party. The great majority I have put the question to are openly for Johnson.

"I believe Roosevelt will carry Minnesota by about 60,000, for there will not be a very heavy vote cast. On that basis I look for about 30,000 plurality for Johnson. If Roosevelt carries the state by 75,000, it will mean 18,000 to 20,000 for Johnson. I don't believe the Roosevelt vote will run up so high that it can wipe out the lead Johnson has in the hearts of the voters of the state."

SAVES TWO FROM DEATH.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Y., "but, when all other remedies failed, we saved her life with Dr. King's New Discovery. Our niece, who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for coughs and colds.

FIGHT WITH SNAKES.

Farmer Has a Desperate Encounter With Rattlers.

Mondovi, Wis., Oct. 26.—Patrick Lamb, of Yucatan, had a desperate fight in a nest of blacktail rattlesnakes yesterday. While walking through his back pasture he came upon a few of the rattlers which were sunning themselves. Picking up a club he began to kill, though some fought savagely. Soon others came out of holes in the hillside, and before Mr. Lamb realized his situation he was surrounded by snakes. Not until he was nearly exhausted did Mr. Lamb succeed in beating back the snakes enough to enable him to make his escape. At once summoning help he returned to the scene, but only the bodies of eighteen dead snakes were to be seen. The rest had returned to the nest. Mr. Lamb declares there must have been at least 100 on the ground when he beat his retreat.

RHEUMATISM

A few years ago I was taken with inflammatory Rheumatism, which, though mild at first, became gradually so intense that I was for weeks unable to walk. I tried several prominent physicians and took their treatment faithfully, but was unable to get the slightest relief. In fact, my condition seemed to grow worse, the pains spread over my entire body, and from November to March I suffered agony. I tried many patent medicines but none relieved me. Upon the advice of a friend I decided to try S. S. S. Before allowing me to take it, however, my guardian, who was a chemist, analyzed the remedy and pronounced it free of potash or mercury. I felt so much better after taking two bottles, that I continued the remedy, and in two months I was cured completely. The cure was permanent, for I have never since had a touch of Rheumatism, though many times exposed to damp and cold weather.

58 Cliff St., Roxbury, Mass. MRS. ELEANOR T. JONES.

For over four years I suffered intensely with Sciatic Rheumatism. The Rheumatism first troubled me in my hip, then spread to my shoulders, head, and finally all over my body. I became such an invalid that neither my family nor friends thought it possible for me to survive long. I had tried so many prescriptions given me by physicians (which contained a great deal of potash) that my stomach was ruined and there seemed no hope for recovery. I had been reading in the newspapers of S. S. S. and decided to try it, and to my joy commenced to get relief before the second bottle was gone. After completing five bottles I was an entirely different man, and felt that I had a new lease on life. The cure in my case has been so wonderful that I shall tell every one of it. S. S. S. not only cured my Rheumatism, but also put my system generally in excellent condition. I have a good appetite, sleep well and once more enjoy life.

Mt. Sterling, Ky. B. M., FRISBIE.

RHEUMATISM comes from poor digestion, stomach troubles, torpid liver, weak kidneys and a general sluggish condition of the system. Food souring in the stomach poisons the blood—it becomes too acid. The liver and kidneys fail to act properly, and the circulation is clogged with impure matter and burning acrid fluids which penetrate and saturate the bones and muscles, joints and nerves, producing the terrible pains and aches and other disagreeable symptoms of Rheumatism. As it originates in the blood and affects the whole system, it will not do to depend on liniments and other external remedies. Such treatment is helpful, but the blood must be restored to a pure, healthy state before the cure is permanent. When S. S. S. has driven out the impurities and built up the thin, acrid blood and stimulated the sluggish organs to better action, the cure is thorough and lasting. The feverish, excited nerves then are soothed and the muscles relieved of the torturing tension, and the whole system is restored to its former healthy state. S. S. S. contains no potash or alkalies, but is guaranteed purely vegetable. Our special book on Rheumatism will be mailed free to all desiring it. Our physicians will cheerfully answer all letters asking for special information or advice, for which no charge is made.

RUNS OVER TERM

Business of September Term of District Court Unfinished.

Has Been Largest on Record—Forty-Six Cases Continued.

With today closes the last opportunity of filing notes of issue for cases which are to be called at the coming November term of district court. Up to this noon a number of new cases had been filed, but not nearly so many as for the September term, which is just closing. The calendar will be in the hands of the printer tomorrow. The November term, from the present outlook, will be a comparatively short one.

The September term was the longest on record where three court rooms have been occupied continually with cases. The September calendar contained nearly 200 cases, and so many were there that it was found impossible to try all the actions noted, and forty-six cases were continued to the November term, practically because there would be no opportunity left in the few remaining days of the September term to try them. Of these continued cases twenty-six are for jury trial, fourteen for trial by court. Six divorce cases also went over the term.

Among the new cases noted for trial in November, but for which no complaints have yet been left with the clerk of court, are the divorce actions of Emma Fleer against Oscar Fleer, Ada Scoville against Fred A. Scoville, Clara Robinson against W. J. Robinson, and Della M. Longtin against Arthur J. Longtin.

Two actions to recover from the Cloquet Tie and Post company were filed by Erick Edstrom and Peter Flodin this morning. Each complains that he was employed by Lewis Olsen, at Payne station, this county, to cut and peel poles and posts. Edstrom claims to have earned $50.67, and Flodin $50, which amounts they claimed as a right of lien on the poles. It is alleged that the tie and post company removed the poles, knowing the right of lien on them by Edstrom and Flodin.

The condemnation proceedings brought by the Minnesota Canal and Power company against W. C. Yawkey and others, is still progressing in Judge Cant's court, and as yet shows no sign of being near its finish.

This morning City Engineer Banks, of Superior, who was one of the engineers that planned the system of reservoirs proposed by the canal and power company in the Birch lake system, was on the stand to testify to the technical points of the proposed construction work, the drainage area, precipitation in the area, elevation of the water in Birch, Eagle and Fall lakes storage capacity of the reservoir, and the estimated proportion of run-off.

In Judge Dibell's room the case of O. H. Simonds, trustee, against the Huntress-Brown Lumber company and others, is still under consideration.

EX-MAYOR OF GRAND RAPIDS IS ON TRIAL.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 26.—The bribery trial of ex-Mayor George R. Perry began today with the opening statement of Prosecutor Ward, and the statement of Attorney A. A. Ellis, for the respondent. Prosecutor Ward repeated the story told by Lant K. Salsbury in his confessions that Perry was given a bribe of $3333 to aid the Lake Michigan water deal. Attorney Ellis denied that Perry received any money and declared that at the time the $25,000 boodle fund was sent to Salsbury he was so heavily involved financially that he was contemplating suicide. He had the poison in his desk, so Mr. Ellis said, and was dissuaded by Judge Newham from using it. Mr. Ellis declared that a man in such straits would not hand out any of the money if he received a $25,000 boodle fund as Salsbury confessed he did. Salsbury was the first witness this afternoon.

Have you been at Haley's restaurant lately? Service is fine.

SECRETARY SHAW SPEAKS ON BROADWAY.

New York, Oct. 26.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw was the principal speaker at a Republican meeting on Broadway today. His speech dealt entirely with the tariff.

He said that Wall street and Iowa had identical interests — both were producers and both wanted all things cheap, but at the same time wanted prices for all they had to sell. The Republican party, he said, had provided the best markets in the world, both for buyers and sellers.

FLOATER FOUND

Body of Unknown Man Discovered In the Harbor.

Believed to Be Missing Watchman of Bon Ami.

The body of an unknown man supposed to be Nels Nelson, the missing watchman of the steamer Bon Ami, was picked up in the harbor this afternoon by some longshoremen.

It was discovered floating in Northern Pacific slip No. 6 shortly after noon today. The men who discovered it notified Coroner Boyer and the body was sent to Durkan & Crawford's undertaking rooms.

While it has not yet been positively identified, is is believed to be the body of Nels Nelson, the watchman of the Bon Ami who disappeared a week ago Sunday.

Nelson left the boat saying he was going to get a drink, and never returned. He has not been seen or heard of since that time although there is a small balance in wages due him from the White Line Transportation company.

It was feared that he had met with some accident and his friends have been conducting a fruitless search for knowledge of his whereabouts.

None of his friends could be found early this afternoon, but some of the men on the dock who knew Nelson slightly, stated that they thought that it was his body that was discovered.

The dead man was, apparently, about 35 years of age, and wore a mustache. He was dressed in a heavy dark sweater and a black coat. The body bore the appearance of having been in the watr about a week or a little over, which is the time Nelson has been missing.

Several letters and a laundry bill were found in his pockets, but the addresses on the letters were so badly faded from the exposure to the water that they were not decipherable. The laundry bill was from the Peerless laundry, and had a sub-heading "for steamships," which leaves little doubt but that the dead man was Nelson.

Nelson was an unmarried man and so far as is known had no relatives in the city.

The body will be held at the undertaking rooms awating the examination of the coroner and the more positive identification of some of the dead man's friends.

AMBITION OF THE SLEUTH

Lost Him His Job as House Detective In Hotel.

New York, Oct. 26.—Larry Summerfield is the ever-present bogie man for New York detectives and they arrest him whenever they see him. He is one of the light-fingered gentry with an international reputation for artistic work of his peculiar kind. An uncontrollable fondness for big hotel lobbies makes him conspicuous.

Manager Muschenheim of the new Hotel Astor was talking with one of the house detectives in the hotel office when a smartly dressed man walked up to the cigar counter and bought a cigar.

"Do you see that fellow?" said the detective to Muschenheim. "Well, take a good look at him. He is the notorious Larry Summerfield and he won't do this place a bit of good."

"Hi, you come over here," said the detective, with his hand on the man's arm. "He is the most notorious confidence man and grafter in New York. All I've got to say to him is that if he ever comes in here again I won't ask him to get out. I'll kick him out."

The man's face had been getting redder and redder.

"Why, you ass, I'm no more Sommerfield than you are," said he. "You are making a mistake." The sleuth had him by a shoulder and was shoving him down the corridor when Muschenheim interceded.

"Will you step into my office, sir?" he asked politely.

The two disappeared. The wise sleuth gaped after them. In five minutes they reappeared. The man with a cigar was smiling. The proprietor of the hotel was white.

He almost yelled at the quaking sleuth: "You get out of here, and if you show your face in here again there will be trouble."

The sleuth bolted. The man with the cigar and the hotel proprietor shook hands solemnly, walked down the corridor together and separated with another shake. The guest, a prosperous merchant, had accepted the apology in good part.

"I fired the detective in three seconds," said Mr. Muschenheim.

On Monday detectives arrested two men in Broadway whom they said were Sommerfield and a pal. There was no charge against them, they just took them in on general principles. In court Summerfield gave the name of William Jones, coal heaver, residence royal suite, Hotel St. Regis. The other gave his name as William Smith, truck driver, oriental suite, Waldorf-Astoria. They were promptly released by the magistrate.

Cash, Broker and Stenographer Disappear at Same Time.

Wife Left Destitute and Will Start Divorce Suit.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Leaving a wife and son, whom he affectiontely kissed goodbye a week ago, a prosperous business of which he was the head, the Mathews brokerage agency, 112 Monroe street, Murray Mathews, till two weeks ago the chancellor of the exchequer of Inierdomain lodge, Knights of Pythias; a Mason, Oddfellow and Red Man, has disappeared, taking with him nearly $5000. Employes of the concern have taken out writs of attachment on the office furniture.

A pretty 16-year-old stenographer employed by Mathews is missing. She has not been at the office of the Mathews brokerage agency since a week ago Saturday, the day Mathews disappeared.

Mathews' wife will commence proceedings for divorce. She has been left in a luxurious home with only $20.

On Monday, Armstrong found a letter in Mathews' desk on the envelope of which was scribbled in lead pencil: "A friend will mail this in a few days." The words struck Armstrong as being peculiar, and he opened the letter.

This is what he read:

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 22, 1904.

Mathews Emy, and B. Co., 112 Monroe street: I am going to the timber country and expect to work in the woods until spring. I should advise that you call a meeting of all stockholders and elect a director in my place, also a president.

If you act the part of wisdom you will not mention the fact that I am no longer active in the affairs of the company. I take with me $1500 of the shares of the company and expect to hold them, and if you folks put your shoulders to the wheel and push the business the stock will all be worth its face value. One thing I want to caution you against, and that is to keep it from the landlady that I am no longer actively connected with the business, as she wants to get these premises again in her possession, and if she knew I was out she could and would cancel the lease and cause you all to lose.

Pay your rent pretty promptly and don't injure your business by any foolish attempt to make it known that I am out of it. There will none of you lose a dollar if you act sanely. Perhaps two or three of you had better get hold of all the stock. Some of you are drawing too much money.

Let Mr. Dick get some good live man to run his department for half he can make till it is built up. Mr. Busch will and can readily make a general male help department pay. All is over with me. I have lost all the labor of years. I was over $1000 in debt Sept. 1. Owed the lodge fund $800. I am squared up and you folks have the business for less than one-third of its real value. I have done no act that is criminal, and I have no fear. But I am going away for good and for all time.

MURRAY MATHEWS.

On the top of the letter head was written: "Do not bother my wife, as she does not know where I am going, nor will I write her even, this winter at all."

Armstrong had the safe in the office broken open. There was no money in the drawer. The books showed that Mathews held these amounts belonging to persons employed in the office:

P. J. Armstrong, $600; H. Busch, $600; Miss Helen Johnson, $300; Mrs. R. D. La Mont, treasurer, $2100; Robert Dick, $500; D. O. Fosgate, $300.

Armstrong also learned that Mathews drew on Saturday $2100 from one bank and $850 from another, and it was known also that he had a large amount of cash besides.

Rate to Madison.

Cheap rates for the Michigan-Wisconsin game, to be played at Madison, next Saturday, have been made by the Omaha road.

A straight single fare has been given from Superior to Madison. The road was unable to give a rate from Duluth on account of the interstate agreement, but tickets may be purchased from the Superior office.

A number of local enthusiasts are counting on attending the game.

HADFIELD OF ENGLAND

Next President of Iron and Steel Institute.

New York, Oct. 26.—The first business session of the American meeting of the Iron and Steel institute was held here today. Andrew Carnegie, president of the institute, presided. He announced that his successor, the next president of the institute, would be Robert Hadfield, of Parkhead house, Sheffield, England.

TO THE ROOTS.

Food the Cause and Another Food the Cure of Stomach Ails.

When sickness comes it is best to go to the root of the trouble at once—take away the kind of food used when the person got ill for the food evidently didn't keep the body up. Feed the patient on Grape-Nuts. That is the way of the food cure which has so many remarkable cases to its credit.

Several years ago my husband became affected by a most disagreeable and painful diarrhea, lost his appitite and grew shockingly thin and haggard. I persuaded him finally to see a physician but after taking a course of medicine he was worse than ever and this discouraged him so he tried a lot of home-made remedies but they gave him only temporary relief.

"Finally I persuaded him to try another physician who treated him for indigestion which he said was the cause of all his trouble, but after several months treatment the physician said: 'You have let it run so long it has become chronic and exceedingly difficult to cure and you will always be troubled more or less.'

"Well you can imagine how this made him feel.

"Sometime after that some friends advised Grape-Nuts food and he thought he would just give it a short trial. To our surprise he began to improve at once. He kept on each day getting better and better until now he can eat anything he likes and declares he never felt so well in his life, has absolutely no trouble with his stomach or bowels and is fleshier than he has been for years. Three cheers for Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Sounds too easy almost to be true but ten days trial by anyone will prove the value of Grape Nuts, the most scientific food in the world.

"There's a reason."

"Get the famous little book, 'The Road to Wellville,' in each pkg."

WOULD NOT CONSENT

That Black Sea Fleet Should Pass the Dardanelles.

Great Britain Would Strongly Oppose a Russian Request.

London, Oct. 26.—The Associated Press learns that, while there is no foundation for the rumor which recently emanated from Constantinople that the Russian government is approaching the sultan with the view to obtaining his consent to the passing of the Black sea fleet through the Dardanelles, Russia is actually taking steps to sound the other continental governments as to whether any objections would be raised by them in the event of a formal request being presented by Russia to the powers jointly for the removal of the international restrictions governing the passing of the Dardanelles. It is obvious that whatever be the replies of other governments to the Russian inquiries, it would not be possible at the present juncture of affairs in the far East for Great Britain to acquiesce in such an arrangement.

BATTLESHIPS AT VIGO.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 26.—The Russian battleships Alexander III, Borodino and Kniaz Souvaroff, another vessel of the same class and the transport Amadou have anchored in this port. Other ships of the fleet are approaching.

MANY MINES LOOSE.

Che Foo, Oct. 26.—The recent storms are believed to have torn many mines loose. The steamer Irene, which arrived here this evening, picked up a mine between Newchwang and Port Arthur and towed it into this port.

LANSDOWNE NOT SATISFIED.

London, Oct. 26.—In interviews at the foreign office with the foreign ambassadors, this being the regular reception day, Lord Lansdowne though in no degree pessimistic regarding the eventual outcome, gave his callers clearly to understand that he did not regard Ambassador Benkendorff's letter as altogether satisfactory and that it was distinctly incomplete. It was gathered that Lord Lansdowne had insisted that in the written reply to be handed to Ambassador Hardinge by Foreign Miniser Lamsdorff, punishment in principle shall be included, and, that though Great Britain is unable at the present moment, to specify the individuals likely o be found responsible, Russia must pledge herself not only to ascertain who are responsible but to punish them in the most severe manner. One of the ambassadors who visited Lord Lansdowne today said that not one of his colleagues believed that a hostile demonstration was possible.

FRIEND'S WIFE DEAD.

Detroit Visitor Found Her Sitting In Chair.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 26.—William W. Walker, an aged farmer in Flint township, experienced a most terrible shock by the discovery that his wife had died in her chair while he was absent from the house about twenty minutes. The discovery was made in a startling manner.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker had been sitting by the stove and Mr. Walker arose and went to the barn to feed the stock. Upon his return to the house he entered by way of the sitting room, just as Micheal O'Flaherty, of Detroit, knocked at the door. Upon opening the door he greeted his old friend in a cordial manner and led his visitor into the kitcheon to see Mrs. Walker. As Mrs. Walker did not make any more to receive them, it was thought she was asleep. Mr. O'Flaherty, thinking he would surprise her, stepped up behind her chair and reached out and took hold of her hand that was extended beside the chair.

He started with surprise when he found the hand stiff and cold and looking into her face exclaimed:

"Why, your wife is dead!"

The words almost stunned the aged farmer. Dr. Robert Dullam, of this city, was called and Coroner Charters was notified. As Mrs. Walker had heart trouble it is supposed that death was due to that disease, and it was not thought that an inquest was necessary.

Deceased was born in New York and was sixty-eight years of age last Monday. She was married to Mr. Walker at Royal Oak thirteen years ago. Two years later they removed to Flint township, where they have since resided.

DROPPING OFF

Railroads Say the Movement of Wheat Is Getting Lighter.

Lumber Traffic Is Light —Big Contract For Ties.

Some of the local roads report a falling off in the wheat movement, although the Omaha alone had about seventy-five cars in yesterday morning from Southern Minnesota and other points. This was a very good proportion for the Omaha, which does not claim to be a grain carrying road, the greater portion of the wheat brought into this port being from more directly Western territory than is reached by the Omaha.

Another feature of the railroad business which is showing up poorly at this time is the carrying of lumber. The wet weather recently has been working considerable of a hardship to the local lines, who find it difficult to obtain business from the lumber interests, owing to the added weight of the lumber caused by the soaking in of the water.

"Lumber does not take in so much water when it is piled," said a railroad man this morning, "but as soon as man begins to move it and load it onto the cars the work of nature begins to be made clear. Every single piece of wood that is lifted from a lumber stack and carried into the cars through the rain gets wet in the operation. Every square inch of surface on the pile exposed by the removal of this one piece continues to be rained on until it is also put into a car. So the man that owns the stuff is not particular about moving it by rail, at least not until there is less water to be counted in at freight rates."

Pulpwood movement will not be as great this coming season as last, either. All the mills anticipated plenty of orders, and took a chance by sending in applications for material for future delivery. Many of the logging roads were unable to get the stuff moved during the early part of the season, owing to the freeze-up of the severe winter, and when pulpwood finally began to move with the breaking of spring, the sidings of the factories that ordered the stuff were soon filled to overflowing, and if the railroads had been able to collect demurrage on delayed cars, without fear of the enforcement of such charges influencing future business, their treasuries would have been materially enriched.

The great supply of pulpwood which was on the hands of the railroads when it was too late for them to use it for the original business, has led to an overplus on the market for this time of the year, and the local agents will endeavor to make up for the lack of pulpwood movement by securing other business.

LARGE TIE CONTRACT.

Heavy One For the Milwaukee Road.

One of the largest contracts for ties ever known in this section is being filled for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road M. J. Rice, the tie inspector for the company, who has been here in connection with the fulfillment of the order, left last evening for Milwaukee, owing to the severe illness of his mother there, but will return shortly to Duluth to look after the remainder of the contract.

The order embraces 150 cars of ties from Knife river, which have been secured through negotiations with the Pillsbury-Watkins concern, as well as a lot more material from points on the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, which will not be handled through this point.

Notwithstanding the size of the order, the ties are not to be used in new construction by the Milwaukee road's extensions, but for the replacement of uncertain stock already set, as fast as necessary The ties will be distributed over the company's lines as fast as needed. It is said that the company did not need so many ties now, as the roadbed is generally in good condition, but saw a chance to make a deal that was advantageous and took the whole lot.

Gasoline Car.

The Union Pacific has placed an order for the construction of a gasoline car for use in passenger service. The engine is of a new type which has been perfected in the head's Oamaha shops after a couple of years' experimenting. The new motor will be governed as easily as an electric motor, and can be started and stopped as quickly.

It will be capable of a speed of sixty miles an hour, and is intended to give more economical and more rapid passenger service on branch lines where travel is light. If it proves the success that is anticipated, it will be introduced on all the Harriman lines. The first car,, it is announced, will be in operation early in January. It will carry thirty passengers.

New Style of Roundhouse.

The square "roundhouse" represents the latest newest departure in railroad construction. The old fashioned round roundhouses built about a turntable is giving way to the square structure. The rectangular table, running on a track down the center of the building. The engine is run on the table and carried to its stall.

This form of engine house occupies less space for the same accommodation than the old fashioned round building, and can be easily and economically extended if necessary. The transfer table is under the same roof with the pits and does away with the snow and ice that renders many an outdoor turntable inoperative during the winter months. Other advantages of the new design are in heating, lighting and the use of cranes for repairs, and the open spaces around the engine pits.

The Stage

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN—Thursday, Friday and Saturday, "Her First False Step."
LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, Ben Hendricks in "Ole Olson."
LYCEUM—Monday, Blanche Ring, in "Vivian's Papa."

"OLE OLSON."

"Ole Olson," honest, good natured, whole hearted and simple, but true and chivalrous, has long retained a firm grasp on the affections of theater goers and has survived enough years of continuous presentation to warrant the placing of this delightful creation in the same category which holds "Rip Van Winkle," "Uncle Josh Whitcomb," and others of that popular class. It will be played at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday, Ben Hendricks appears as "Ole."

"HER FIRST FALSE STEP."

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," is exemplified in the new melodrama "Her First False Step," which is at the Metropolitan theater Thursday for three nights and Saturday matinee. The third act showing a garret with its low, broken walls, its cheerless, cold and desolate surroundings, the heart-broken mother bending over her baby who is slowing starving to death, form a picture of object misery that stamps itself upon the memory and leaves an impression that is not easily forgotten.

BLANCHE RING COMING.

Blanche Ring in "Vivian's Papa" will be at the Lyceum next Monday evening and everybody should be prepared to laugh for it is said to be a farce of the funniest sort and admirably presented by a company of fun makers who are past masters in the art.

ARE BROUGHT BY PRAYER

Founder of Bible Students' Community Tells of His Work.

Spencer, Mass., Oct. 26.—Farms, buildings, horses, furniture, farming tools, live stock and money have been given to the Rev. Essek W. Kenyon, of Hillsville, founder of the Bible students' community known as Bethel. The young evangelist started a few years ago penniless and now has thousands of dollars worth of property. He says that it all came to him in direct answer to prayer.

"The divine gospel of St. Matthew's says: 'Ask and it shall be given you.' I interpreted it literally, as the whole Bible should be interprted, for it is all reality,' he said. "I prayed for a farm and it was given to me by Deacon John M. Marble, of Sutton. I wanted more buildings in which to lodge my Bible school, and these, too, were given me. Once I needed $50. I prayed for it, for I had no money and in less than an hour a woman came to me and gave me a check for that amount. Again I wanted $100 to pay expenses. I was just starting my community of Bethel. I asked God to send the money. It was but a few more than an hour before another woman sent me an envelope containing exactly $100.

"I would not pray vaguely for help, but if I wanted a farm or a horse or a building or a sum of money I would say so in my prayer and all these things would be given me. We take no collections. We do not present our needs to the public nor even to the church. We have lived by faith in God alone."

One of the many rules and regulations of Bethel reads: "No familiarities, love-making or going out together between men and women."

IS STILL RISING

Copper Continues to Advance and Situation Is Strong.

Domestic Consumers Buying More Freely—The Copper Shares.

The advance in copper has not yet come to an end. It is still on the upward trend getting close to the 13 cent per pound mark. George L. Walker reports domestic consumers as now buying more freely and the advices from foreign copper users are quite as encouraging as they have been at any time. Walker says:

"Copper continue to advance. Lake is now selling at 13¾ cents and electrolytic at 13¾ cents per pound. The heavy export movement goes on uninterruptedly, the prospect now being that October shipments may reach 25,000 tons. Domestic consumers are buying copper more freely than they have for many months past. It is declared in trade circles that home demand for November and December delliveries is fully as large in volume as it was last year at this time. Consumers are confident that business conditions are looking up, and they are satisfied that the motal market is natural and legitimate and that still higher prices are likely to be realized. A leading trade authority is predicting that copper will sell a tl4 cents in the immediate future.

"Foreign advices are especially encouraging. It is said that every brass and copper mill in Germany is running its full capacity. A comparative statement of exports of copper this year and last from this country to the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Italy and Russia has been made up, and the figures make it clear that the trade improvement has been felt about equally in all these countries. The increase in the grand total is 8 per cent.

"The prospect continues very favorable that the price of copper will average close to 14 cents per pound during the year 1905.

COPPER SHARES.

"The time has come to sell New York stocks and buy the Boston coppers. Railroad and Industrial stocks have had their advance. The large interests behind the speculative movement have liquidated their surplus holdings, shorts have covered and the New York list is not in as strong hands as it was a few months ago. Prices may go higher later on, but at the moment the stocks to buy are those in which there has as yet been no speculation, and this means the coppers. There are fewer copper stocks held on margin in the commission brokerage offices now than at any previous time in the past seven years. On the recent advance in prices holders have shown very little disposition to sell, and there will be no considerable liquidation until a considerably higher level has been reached.

"New York interests have been watching the coppers in our market for some time past, and have been considerable buyers of several leading stocks. Boston brokers are now arranging to turn the tide of speculation to the coppers, and those who make early purchases will surely be the greatest gainers."

SOLIDLY BUILT AS FORTRESS

The Feudal Palace of a Rich Washington Eccentric.

Washingtno, Oct. 26.—The story of Washington's most eccentric millionaire, the late Dr. Leroy M. Taylor, who for three years made his home in an impregnable fortified castle in the heart of an alley in the northwest section, has just become public by reason of the fact that the Washington Loan & Trust company has undertaken the settlement of his estate.

Owning more than 120 houses in the city, Dr. Taylor, who was a man of wealth, refinement and education, chose to make his home during the latter years of his life next door to a stable and in a narrow court inhabited by negroes.

When the executors of his will made an examination into his intimate private affairs on Saturday last, they found the most remarkable place of residence in the capital. His house is a feudal palace, protected by all the inventions of the twentieth century.

Two stories in height, solidly built as a fortress, with heavy sheet iron doors and windows, and iron bars at every aperture and steel wire netting clamped upon the inside of each opening, the weird habitation stands at an angle of a "blind court" in Brown's alley, between Fourth and Fifth and L and M streets northwest, surrounded by shanties, like a medieval chateau frowning upon a neighboring peasant village. The exterior is as grim as a dungeon or a madhouse, which is resembles.

Inside are luxuriously furnished apartments, containing costly furniture most unique, and one of the most valuable libraries in Washington; trophies of the chase, weapons, and curios from the Orient, rare engravings and etchings, rugs and draperies from India—a whimsical collection of art, literature and sciences from the four corners of the world.

When the officials of the trust company threaded their way through the alley to enter the queer building they stepped from the squalor of a metropolitan slum into an atmosphere of occultism. Dr. Taylor was a student of the mystical religions of the East, where he was an honored traveler, and back to Washington to a dingy alley he brought a picturesque assortment of books and decorations which would attract none but a man of peculiar sensibilities and discriminating taste.

In 1896 Dr. Taylor, grief stricken at the death of his wife, who was the daughter of the late Charles W. Utermehle and from whom he inherited his fortune in Washington real estate approximating $1,000,000, built, after designs of his own, a strong double-walled structure in Brown's alley. He moved there the furnishings of his handsome home in Massachusetts avenue and took up his residence in the place. It was said he did not care for society after the death of his wife, and that he selected the alley as his home, to escape all but a chosen circle of friends.

HIS GREAT POWERS

Ernest Case of Toledo and His Wireless Mind Reading.

Tests and Investigations Are Made By Prominent People.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 26.—Up to a few weeks ago Ernest Case, a mechanic, 35 years of age, of 1209 Greenwood avenue, was as little known as any other hard working man of his station. Today he commands the attention of the whole world, by reason of his marvelous visions and astounding powers of revelation, theologians, physicians and scientists being greatly amazed by the peculiar powers he possesses.

How can the visions he sees and revelations he makes be explained?

Facts in his astounding story are vouched for by sane, reliable men, who have no motive for telling anything but the whole truth.

It was while engaged at work on the Eads bridge at St. Louis that the first of the unusual events in the previous humdrum career of Ernest Case took place.

He experienced a vision, which told him that he was about to pass through a spell of sickness, and all its harrowing details were given. Being a family man, he went home and told his wife about it, who thought it was only a notion. She knows better now.

It was somewhat odd for her husband to have such a dream, for he had always been an unusually hard-headed, sensible man. He was not religiously inclined at all, though he is, and more to please her than from any profound convictions in the matter he consented to join the East Broadway United Brethren church of Toledo. The pastor of that congregation, Rev. W. C. Shupp, noticed that he did not take much interest in the church and was only a passive lay member.

As for spiritualism and other "isms" of its kind, he used to characterize them as "bosh."

Now that Case has developed into a celebrity, it is recalled that he had amazing influence over masses of men and they idolized him. He had nearly 20 men employed under him on the Eads bridge, and he handled them with great skill. His employers recall, too, a startling thing. He was shown the elaborate plans for the great bridge, and after he had carefully looked them over, they say he never referred to them again, even for computation, measurements, material or anything of the kind.

Recently Case was taken with a severe illness. His wife was startled to hear the attending doctor say it was abscesses in the stomach, for that is exactly what Case himself had foretold through his first vision. He was in bed for twenty-seven days. Lately he has been sitting up a little or lying on a couch. Here is his wife's account of what happened then:

"Two weeks ago, as I was nearly worn out, I lay down, and to please him I feigned sleep. Suddenly I was startled to see him lean over in the chair with his eyes closed, and I sprang forward to catch him. Judge my astonishment when I saw him begin tracing characters on the floor with his fingers. Watching closely I made out the following:

"'Ernest Case, Died 27.'

"He designed no month or year. He was unconscious and utterly oblivious of his surroundings.

"That same day he suffered intense pain and by some accident, he chanced to lie upon the couch with a Bible beneath him. As if by magic his pain left him and he went to sleep. In arranging his pillow I removed the Bible. Instantly he was on his feet, and, although his eyes were closed, he marched directly to where I had placed it in the front room, and with one finger upon the book he pointed the other at me, at the same time muttering something. After that we tried many times the experiment of removing the Bible, and he invariably went directly to it.

"Rev. W. C. Shupp has also called here and tried the experiment, with the same result. Ernest is not a believer in spiritualism or the doctrine of Universalism. When I questioned him about the 27th he broke into tears and said he could not tell me what month he would die, but that it would be on the 27th. He says an angel visits him every day, and that he receives all his knowledge from him. He says his movements are guided at all times by two lights, a large one and a small one, representing the Old and the New Testaments."

Case can tell, even when they are a block away, who is coming toward the house, and also read their history and character accurately, even though he be lying upon his couch, with eyes closed at the time.

A friend whom he had not seen for many years got upon the Hocking Valley train at Fostoria recently to come and visit him. Fostoria is thirty-five miles distant from Toledo. At the instant his friend got on the train he remarked the fact, gave the man's name and entire conversation with the brakeman and conductor of the train. This has been absolutely proved, and was vouched for by the local ministers the following Sunday evening in the presence of large congregations.

Strangers have visited the Case home, and he suddenly pointed his finger toward them and narrated events in their lives, in several instances so secret that the guests begged him to desist and finally hurriedly left the house. These cases have been carefully investigated. In one instance, it is said, a man left the city.

In conversation with Rev. Mr. Shupp one day he started, while in a trance-like condition, to tell the histories of one after another of his church members, until the minister begged, over and over again, that he would stop. But the minister felt it his duty, in conjunction with other ministers, to investigate, and the result has produced a terrible sensation in the community as well as in the church organization.

Case, who dislikes the notoriety his case has provoked, declares that in one of his visions he saw in golden letters a foot high on a wall, thick, yet transparent, wonderful revelations of the other world, having had a glimpse and insight of heaven and hell.

"If the people could see what I have seen," he said, "they would immediately become influenced to lead better lives."

He says the moon and sun have both been inhabited, but were burned off, just as this world will be in time.

MINERALS AND TIMBER

Have Brought Large Sums to State Treasury.

St. Paul, Oct. 26.—The first 128 pages of the state auditor's biennial report received at the capitol contains a comparative table showing payments received from stumpage, tresspass, interest on deferred stumpage, payments, mineral leases and contracts, and royalties on iron ore from 1864 to 1904, inclusive.

Stumpage payments amounted to only $1101.20 in 1864, and in three years increased to $42,147.46, dropping back in 1868 to $29,119.65. The amount fluctuates in succeeding years, showing a general increase until in 1901 it was $638,414.42. The total stumpage payments for the forty years is $4,139,310.86. The state received $295,479.82 for trespass and $43,830.80 as interest on deferred payments during the forty years.

The first mineral leases were taken out in 1890, one year after the mineral land laws were passed, and in that year the state received $5925 from leases, compared with $16,765 in 1904. The fourteen years' payments for mineral leases aggregate $262,186.27.

The first shipment of iron ore was made from state lands in 1894 by the Mountain Iron mine.

RUINED HIS BUSINESS.

Coal Carrying Roads Caused $800,000 Loss to Dealer.

New York, Oct. 26.—John C. Haddock, an independent coal mine owner and operator, testifying yesterday before the interstate commerce commission in the case of William Randolph Hearst against the coal carrying railroads, said that as a result of tariff discrimination, his company suffered a loss of more than $800,000 in less than eight years. This loss meant the difference between solvency and insolvency, and his company, which at one time had a reputation of high standing which he jealously guarded, as a result of the alleged discrimination is now in the hands of trustees. Mr. Haddock said that he had persistently complained to the management of the Lackawana company, and had been met by the proposition that he turn his properties over to the railroads. This he had declined to do. In the end there was a compromise by which he received $150,000 from the Lackawana company in settlement of his claim for $800,000. Mr. Haddock also said that the Lackawanna company would not furnish a sufficient number of cars to market the output of his mines during the anthracite coal strike, and that they caused tc be removed spur tracks into the yards of dealers in Norwich and Cortland, N. Y., who purchased coal from his company.

When Mr. Haddock had completed his testimony, counsel announced that the complainant would rest his case. The case of the coal carrying companies will be begun at ouce.

"THE WINK TEST"

The New York Telegram recently printed the following:

"It is easy, said an oculist, to tell what kind of light most thoroughly suits the eyes. The light that is best for you is the one wherein you wink the least. The wink, you see, is the eye's sign of weariness. I have experimented on myself and I find that an electric light is even better for my eyes than daylight. In daylight I wink 2.8 times a minute, where in an electric light I only wink 1.8. Candle light is bad for me. In it I give 6½ winks a minute. Gas light is better, for in it I only give 2 1-3 winks.

"This wink test of light is not my own invention; a German Opthalmologist originated it and it is regarded on all sides as accurate and good."

Winking Is Very Tiresome

Whenever you wink, if you will think that if you were using electric light you would not wink over half the number of winks you would when using some of the other modes of light, you would naturally think of the Duluth General Electric Company and would at once see them with reference to installing electric light in your homes, place of business, etc.

Timber Dealers and Lumbermen Watch Forestry Experiments.

Will Determine Various Matters of Importance to the Trade.

Timber dealers who are largely interested in the tamarack and cedar business in the Northwest are watching for the outcome of a series of experiments that the National Forestry commission will conduct in Northern Michigan, the coming year, to determine the changes in tamarack poles cut at different seasons and the relative amount of shrinkage between cedar poles brought from the cutting ground by rail or by water. The commission is also to investigate the relative shrinkage in weight of lumber that has been sawed from logs towed to the mill by water or shipped there by rail.

Experienced timbermen and lumbermen have known for a long time past that timber from rafted logs loses a certain amount more in weight when the lumber is cured than does the lumber cut from logs transported to the mill by rail. How much this shrinkage amounts to has never been determined.

If the result of the experiments determines that rafted poles and logs lose so very much more in weight when cured than do poles and logs which are not rafted, it is believed that it will lead to a desire to lessen the cost of shipping by using the waterways as a means of transportation whenever possible.

It is understood that arrangements have already been made by the commission to have the poles cut and delivered very soon at Escanaba, Mich., and Menominee, Mich., at which two places the experiments will be conducted.

The efforts which are being made along scientific lines in the past few years toward discovering the longevity of timber, reforestation, treatment of railroad ties, manufacture of pine stumps into profitable bye products, indicates the policy of the latter day lumbermen to make the most out of the timber that is available. Time was in the northern part of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota when the vast and seemingly unlimited amount of pine forest tended to make the lumberman profligate in his operations and thousands of feet of timber was then wasted where scarcely a few feet goes to waste in these days. The diminishing supply of timber has led the lumberman to husband his resources to a degree that the old-time lumberman never could have anticipated.

Thirty Cases of Diphtheria Worry People of Yankton.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—Yankton has thirty cases of diphtheria among school children, and a committee of the board of education is investigating the situation. If the number of cases increases it is likely the schools will be closed. Many of the victims have been attending the Garfield building, and Dr. C. C. Gross, president of the board of health, is making a special investigation as to the sanitary conditions of that school. So far there have been no fatalities and the cases are for the most part mild.

The corn crop of Southeastern South Dakota is going into the crib as fast as men and teams can place it there. The husking in Yankton county began last week. The crop is not only larger than that of last season, but is of much better quality. The fact that there has not yet been any freezing weather has held back the cribbing of the corn, but the crop is now in fine condition. Huskers are being paid 3 cents a bushel and labor is scarce, even at that price. The average yield is fifty bushels to the acre.

Huron—The German-Russian colony in Milford township dedicated its new church building on Sunday, the sermon being delivered by Rev. H. D. Ward, of this city. The structure cost $1700 and is the property of a large Mennonite denomination, Rev. John Kleinsasser being the pastor. Seventeen families are included in the church membership, and the structure was dedicated without debt.

An important gathering is the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Central association of Congregational churches, now being held in Iroquois. A program of special interest has been prepared.

Professor Henry Bishop of the chair of Greek and Latin in Redfield college, occupied the Congregational pulpit here on Sunday. In the evening he delivered a lecture on the political conditions of Asia Minor, and being a native of that country, spoke from personal knowledge.

Pierre—The Hughes county court house caught fire from some unknown cause in the woman's department of the jail. The blaze was between the walls, making it hard to control and causing more damage from water than fire.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The new St. John's hospital, erected by the Sisters of St. Joseph at a cost of about $70,000, not including the furnishing, will be dedicated on Wednesday. The formal blessing of the building will follow high mass, which is to be celebrated by Bishop John Shanley at 9 o'clock in the morning. In the afternoon will come the nurses' graduation exercises, at which two nurses will be given their diplomas and medals. In the evening there will be a reception to the benefactors, physicians and surgeons, the mayor and city council and county officials. Thursday and Friday afternoons there will be receptions for the public of Fargo and Moorhead and vicinity. The new hospital and the old one, with the realty, now represent an investment of $110,000.

The police consider the series of holdups to be the work of some amateur and believe only one man was implicated. However, men without any visible means of support are to be given no quarter, as the mayor is determined to rid the city of an undesirable floating population. Monday night several arrests were made for vagrancy and several gamblers were raided and fined.

Barney Sweeney, who was arrested a few days ago on a charge of uttering forged checks, pleaded guilty before Judge Pollock in district court today and was sentenced for one year.

Roy Lowry, who attempted to utter a forged check here and in Moorhead last Saturday, waived examination and has been committed to the county jail until the next term of the district court. He says he has respectable connections in St Paul and thinks they will be able to get him out of his trouble. He blames drink and bad companions for his predicament.

Grand Forks—While trying to climb upon a dray loaded with coal at Reynolds, the 3-year-old son of John Olson fell and the wheel passed over his head, killing him instantly.

Shanghai, Oct. 25.—The imperial authorities of Pekin have cut off the appropriation in support of the Nan Yang college, patterned after Western educational institutions, and the school is closed. The college was founded en years ago and it was considered he foremost seat of learning in China.

Amasa Man Loses His Life By the Kick of a Horse.

Amasa.—Charles J. Winquist, of Amasa, Iron county, was almost instantly killed at that place as the result of being kicked by a horse, which he had taken out to water. He was returning to the barn, when the horse suddenly kicked out with its hind feet striking Winquist in the pit of the stomach and knocking him down. When men nearby reached him, Winquist was dead. He was aged twenty-one years and is survived by a wife and one child.

Stephenson.—Julius Cunard, a young man of Stephenson, Menominee county who intended to lead a bride to the altar this week, was so seriously injured at the post mill at Koss that, even should he recover, his marriage has had to be postponed for an indefinite period. Cunard was a new employe at the mill and was splitting cedar posts. Miscalculating the force of the saw and his own strength the post was thrown back, striking him in the pi tof the stomach.

Powers.—Henry Ploutz, a farmer living about three and a half miles south of Powers, Menominee county, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. Shortly before putting an end to his career, he went to a neighbors's house and asked to borrow a rifle, saying he intended to kill a dog. The rifle was loanded him and when the man was a few rods from his house he placed the rifle to his face and shot. The bullet entered below the jaw and escaped through the top of the head, blowing the entire face off. Despondency prompted the deed. Ploutz leaves a wife and five children in poor circumstances.

Munising.—The case which will attract the greatest atention at the term of the Alger county circuit court in session this week at Munsing is that of the people vs. James Tyner. Tyner is the man who made the dastardly attempt to murder Prosecuting Attorney Freeman on the evening of the Fourth of July. He will be defended by Attorney Crocker, of Ishpeming. The court will appoint some attorney to prosecute the case. It is said that an effort will be made by the defense to have the case continued until the next term of court in the hope that Tyner will fare better. Tyner has said that he expects to get not more than a ten-year sentence.

Escanaba.—Julius Stein, three-year-old son of Frank Stein, of Escanaba, had a narrow escape from death. The child got possession of a bottle of medicine which had been prescribed for its father and drank a large portion of it. The concoction contained morphine and it was only after much hard work on the part of a physician that the child safely rounded the crises.

TRANS-MISSISSIPPI CONGRESS.

St. Louis, Oct. 26.—The second session of the trans-Mississippi commercial congress, held today in the hall of congresses wa marked by an even larger attendance thn characterized the evening session. THE GRAND JURY.

After giving reasons why the grand jury might be abolished with advantage to the public, the Grand Marais Herald brings up one matter that it considers a serious objection, saying:

"It is easy to see in circumstances attending many criminal prosecutions conditions under which a county attorney lacking in courage and judgment, or unknowingly influenced by motives of friendship or otherwise, might hesitate to act and thus permit the escape of the guilty. This is a danger that cannot exist under the present system. Will some advocate of a change tell us wherein this objection is not a good one?"

This would indeed be a serious objection if there were no possible remedy. But the very thing that the Herald fears might be done by a county attorney lacking in courage and judgment has been done by grand juries in St. Louis county. Men charged with serious offenses have been released without trial because of their prominence and influence, when it was generally believed that they were guilty of the offenses charged.

Furthermore, the average grand jury is almost entirely controlled by the judgment of the county attorney, as the editor of the Grand Marais Herald must know if he has had any experience in that line. Again a corrupt or incompetent county attorney can, in effect, nullify the indictment of any grand jury by failure to draw up a proper indictment or failure to properly present his case to the petit jury. There are many things that people must take on faith, and one of these things is that a county attorney is just as honest as the members of the grand jury until proof is produced to the contrary, when he should be retired from office.

Moreover, if the grand jury is done away with, the legislature could make it a law that if a county attorney refuses to prosecute an alleged criminal the matter could be brought to the attention of the court by any citizen and the court could be given power to order prosecution and appoint some disinterested attorney to prosecute. That should be done. Again the legislature could and should provide for the calling of a grand jury at any time it is petitioned for by a certain number of citizens or at any time the court might deem such action necessary. That would give the people a grand jury when one was needed and do away with the unnecessary expense when not needed. Such a grand jury might also be given power to bring an indictment against a county attorney for willful violation of his duty, if such a thing should occur, or against any other officer who had violated the provisions of his oath of office.

There would be no more chance for escape of the guilty under such a system than there is now, and perhaps not as much.

There has been objection raised on the other hand that if the present grand jury system is abolished innocent men might be prosecuted at the behest of a vicious county attorney, but everybody knows that many men are declared innocent by petit juries after both the county attorney and the grand jury have practically declared that they have reason to believe them guilty.

The legislature will have the power to throw around the purposed system all the safeguards that are now thrown around the present system, and more too, for that matter. It is simply a matter of trusting the legislature to devise a better and less expensive system than we have today. If the people feel that they cannot trust the legislature to make a better law than we possess then they should vote against the proposed amendment, otherwise they should vote for it.

INCONSISTENT AND UNJUST.

Closing an article on the "Philippines and the Tariff," the Indianapolis News says:

"If the Philippines are a part of our coast line, if Philippine ports are American ports, and if we have a right to limit their trade to American ships, it seems, to say the least, inconsistent to keep them outside of our tariffi system. We can not, or, at least, should not, call them foreign for the sake of protecting some industries, and domestic for the sake of protecting other industries. We should like very much to hear from Mr. Root on the real issue."

There are a great many things that this nation should not do that it has done. And one of the very worst of these thigns was the taking of territory that can not be treated as the other portions of the country are treated without injustice to the American people, and which can not be treated differently from other portions of the country without injustice to the people of such annexed territory. That is one of the principal objections to the annexation of either the Philippines or Porto Rico at this time and next to the immorality of the proceeding that is one of the chief objections to the governing of outside territories as colonies.

People as widely differing from Americans as are the Filipinos and Porto Ricans should have no voice in the trade policies of the United States and, equally true, the people of the United States should have no voice in the management of their affairs, either internal or external, except such as they might willingly grant and ask us to assume.

If it is considered wise policy to erect a tariff barrier on the Canadian border, against a people of essentially the same race, customs and civilization as ourselves, why is it not even better policy to maintain a tariff where necessary against the competition of a people who are radically different and who are so much farther away?

The Herald contends that the tariff against Canadian products works an injury to the people of the United States, because the Canadians put up retaliatory tariffs against us. It is just as great an injury to the masses of the people as would be a tariff wall between the states of the Union. Only a few special interests are benefited or would be benefited in either case.

But in the case of the Philippines there might be injury worked to many people in this country by the free admission of all their products to this country, and very likely there would be, because of the facts mentioned above. It is true, however, that if we insist on holding the Philippines and Porto Rico we should grant them absolute free trade. But since it might and probably would work to our disadvantage to do so, we should not hold them as colonies. But the Republican administration is neither disturbed over the injustice we do these people by dictating their tariff policy, nor the injustice we do the great bulk of Americans by keeping up a tariff barrier between this country and Canada. That party's chief concern is for the welfare of the few who contribute its campaign funds. Far from sympathizing with the injustice being done to the people it does not even care whether, in working this injustice, it is inconsistent.

LET US FLY.

The dream of ages is apparently about to be realized and man will soon be able to travel through the air, directing his course at will.

The partially successful flight of Capt. Baldwin's balloon ship at the World's Fair grounds yesterday, while it was somewhat hampered by the breaking down of the motor, will be gratifying to all the inhabitants of the earth, because the hope of being able some day to navigate the air is almost universal in the human heart.

Although the motor broke down about 15 minutes after the start was made the operator of the balloon did not entirely lose control of the machine, but was able to steer its course to a landing place of his own selection.

The gasoline engine is very uncertain as a power and it would seem that some better motor must be devised for the successful propelling of air ships, unless they are able to carry two engines, each of sufficient power, and a machinist to put one in condition while the other is in operation. The gasoline engine has not yet been devised that can be absolutely depended upon to give continuous service. Possibly in time air ships will be operated by electricity and gather their power from the clouds as they sail.

It would also seem that the really practical flying machine will be one that can raise its own weight without the use of a balloon, but the successful handling of a balloon ship will, no doubt, ultimately lead to a solution of that problem. It is claimed that an English inventor has already made a successful demonstration with an aeroplane that will carry a man, and can be directed at the operator's will.

It is stated that Capt. Baldwin's propellor is arranged to pull the ship through the air instead of push it, which would seem to be the better plan, because it will undoubtedly be easier to keep the ship to any desired course.

While this trial was not what may be considered an unqualified success, it will give encouragement to all who are seeking to solve the problem of air navigation and will, no doubt, lead to inventions which will make the air ship a practical success in the near future.

FRENZY OR FAKE?

The latest installment of "Frenzied Finance" by Thomas W. Lawson in Everybody's Magazine deals with H. H. Rogers' attempt to purchase Lawson's allegiance away from "Gas" Addicks, Lawson's refusal to sell out, although he knew that Addicks was both dishonest and treacherous, and then how Rogers and Lawson sat and gazed into one another's eyes like two lovers in a park until each read the other's soul and knew that the other would deal honestly by him for all time.

The whole article reads like the product of an unbalanced mind, and a reasonable inference is that Lawson is either crazy or is writing in that vein for the purpose of deceiving his readers into the belief that they are really going to learn so nething new when he gets ready to tell it.

If Lawson really knew anything incriminating against these men and is desirous of doing something to right matters, instead of babbling about the "system" for a year or so through the columns of a magazine, he should tell his troubles to a county attorney or a grand jury and make an effort to send the thieves over the road. He certainly cannot accomplish anything by telling people about a "system" that is as old as thievery itself.

Publicity is all right in a way, but the details of the three-shell game have been made public thousands of times and yet it is worked on some unsuspecting victim every day in the year. A sucker is born every minute and as long as suckers are born there will be sharpers to offer them baited hooks.

Notwithstanding all the experience that Duluth suckers have had they are not through biting yet.

And it looks as though both Mr. Lawson and the publishers of Everybody's Magazine are simply beckoning to a lot of "come-ons" themselves.

THE FIELD SURVEY

A New York man was recently sent to jail for six months for carrying a concealed weapon. He fired it off in the street but did not hit anybody. That is the way Duluth should treat any man found carrying a revolver or other dangerous weapon concealed on his person.

The Detroit Tribune says that Minnesota Democrats are opposed to primary reform. That is the first time The Herald has heard of it. There may be a few men in Minnesota calling themselves Democrats who oppose direct nominations, but they form but a mighty small minority, and they are not representative of party sentiment in this state.

Rev. Jessie Y. Burk, secretary of the university of Pennsylvania, suffered ill health from childhood. He survived years of suffering from rheumatism, the amputation of his right hand to overcome cancer and pneumonia, but finally succumbed to a combination of tuberculosis and formaldehide. He had been placed on a milk diet and the formaldehide had been used in the milk without his knowledge. Many a man goes to his grave as a result of food adulteration and food poisoning. It would seem as though this ought not to be added to the other dangers that assail the human family.

Hotel Gossip.

Frank M. Gibbs, of Johannesburg, South Africa, who has for some time been in the city visiting friends, has left for the south of France to spend a portion of the winter. He is a mine superintendent and has charge of operations in the Rand for H. P. Peterson & Co., well known diamond diggers. The company has work in progress both at the Rand and Delagoa bay, but the work at Delagoa bay has been suspended for the present, it now being the rainy season.

Work is always hard on the laborers during the rainy season, so that it is usually suspended until the season abates and the other climatic conditions get sway. As Mr. Gibbs expressed it, "it costs too much to bury the Kaffirs" in the rainy season, for most of the workmen employed are these natives of the nearby soil, who are unable to withstand the trials of the wet months. In the miserable climate of the wet season the workers get malaria and succumb rapidly, so that of late operations have been let alone. If work was not stopped it would mean a great thing for the quinine market, as this drug is a valuable portion of the treatment given for the affliction of the malarial variety.

The Peterson company is now sinking one shaft which will probably go down into the earth 6000 feet before the caluable strata is found. But all work is on an unusually firm basis, as it is reckoned that the ledge is always sure to be found in certain precincts, which makes haphazard buildings undesirable and impracticable.

Mr. Gibbs says there are iron deposits in the mining districts of South Africa, and speaks very sanguinely of the prospects. He seems to believe that development will eventually lead to the iron ore deposits of that far country competing with those of this country. The formation is with the limestone first, coal second and iron ore below the coal.

One of Mr. Gibbs' reasons for going to the south of France for the winter is the fact that he wishes to learn to speak the Portuguese language, which will enable him to conduct the superintendency of the mining operations with more facility. A large number of the workmen of the mines of South Africa are Portuguese and it is difficult to deal with them if the head of the movement does not speak their language, for they are indifferent to learn to speak English fluently, if at all. The labor used is either Kaffirs or Portuguese.

"I had a funny experience not so very long ago on a private car," said a railroad man lounging in the McKay last night. "I was down East to see an official of the Baltimore & Ohio road, who is in Baltimore. It was with D. B. Martin, passenger traffic manager, and when I got there to see him found that he was just preparing to go out on the road in his private car.

"As my business was important and my time short, I explained the fact to him. He immediately told me that his private car trip was not important nor as private but what he could well find time on the journey to talk business with me and suggested that we go together and he would bring me back in time for my next engagement that evening.

"We got started. It was a little before noon when the train pulled out and it was not very long until time for dinner rolled around and we sat down to the table, while the colored fellow began bringing in good things to eat. The meat was first and then the vegetables. One of the vegetables was potatoes and while I had a little dish with two large ones on it, my host's portion was one small potato.

"'Look here, Sam,' said he. 'Are you sure everything is all right?'

"'Yes, sir,' the colored fellow answered. "'Not a case of f. h. b., is it?'

"'No, indeed, sir.'

"'All right. See if you cannot fix me up a little better than this.'

"So he handed me, then the potato dish and it was brought back well filled. I was a little puzzled by the proceeding, although I could see that the result of the parley was more potatoes for Mr. Martin. Finally I thought he might not be offended if I asked him the cause of the use of such a funny code in talking to his men. He explained that it was not necessary to use any signals to conceal anything from me, but that being in the habit of it, he followed it to keep in practise. F. h. b., he said, was one of the most important of the private table code that he used with the waiter.

"When anything in particular of the day's menu was scarce it was preferred to give the guests the better portions and make the 'family hold back. The first letters of that phrase make f. h. b. If the colored man had answered that it was f. h. b. about the potatoes Mr. Martin would have gone through the meal with only his one little potato.'

The Two War Lords.

London Spectator: It is not a little remarkable that on the day President Roosevelt's letter of acceptance was published the German emperor made a sort of manifesto on the nation's duty to the navy in terms singularly suggestive of President Roosevelt's. Both regard the navy as the key to foreign politics; and if President Roosevelt rather spoke of it as the foundation of international peace his meaning was that it enabled his government to exercise greater pressure on other governments than would else be possible. German interests in South America especially compel the Germans to naval efficiency, and if the peace of the world is threatened the threat is likely first to come from the pretensions of the United States in South America and the encouragement to extended interpretations of the Monroe docrine which a stron navy will stimulate.

The Star.

Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
How I wonder what you are.
At the footlights bright and gay,
Having all your own sweet way.

How I wonder if the paint
On your cheeks will e'er grow faint;
If your slippers, trim and neat,
Will look flabby on your feet.

How I wonder if that smile,
Which you use men to beguile,
Turns into an ugly sneer
When your patrons are not near.

How I wonder if your gems,
From your crown to fluffy hems,
Are but glass beads, cent a piece,
Borrowed on a broker's lease.

How I wonder if you feel,
After all, that life is real;
If you say, when you are free;
"Oh, what fools these mortals be!"

Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
While your cheeks and hearts are par;
Soon you'll find some other orb
All your homage will absorb.

Soon you'll find your sweetest self
Snugly laid upon the shelf.
Make your hay while eyes are bright;
Twinkle, twinkle, all the night.

Her "Humbliest Monster."

Gertrude Atherton has returned to America, and after a few days spent in New York has gone to California, to remain until Christmas. Just before leaving Germany she received a letter from a German who endeavored to express in sufficiently impressive English, evidently with the aid of a dictionary, his admiration of the author's last novel "Rulers of Kings." He added, "I hope to see soon some more works from your prodigious hand," and in a frenzy of humility signed himself, "Your humbliest monster."

Too Much to Ask.

Life: It was opening day at a school in the Ghetto. The principal glanced at the dirty little applicant for admission, and then said to the mother:

"Yes, I will take your son, but you must first give him a good bath and dress him in clean clothes."

"Oh, lady," exclaimed the representative of our foreign element, "I can't do dat; he's sewed up for de winter."

One Benefit of the Campaign.

Milwaukee News: If there could be a presidential campaign on all the time, Theodore Roosevelt would be as peaceable a president as ever drew breath.

Under the Rule.

Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune: The Russian generals were holding a conference.

"Perhaps we had better protest the game," said Kuropatkin.

"On what ground?" asked Stoessel.

"That Oyama has professionals on his team."

Realizing that they could easily qualify as amateurs, they decided to do so.

Satisfied.

New York World: The beef trust in the last eight years has advanced the price of meats at retail 40 per cent.

It has advanced wages about 12 per cent.

It has maintained the price of cattle at a figure practically stationary for five years.

The administration has obtained a temporary injunction restraining the companies in the trust from combining to control prices.

The bureau of corporations has been "investigating" the trust.

Prices are still fixed and controlled by the trust.

J. Ogden Armour, one of the ruling factors in the trust, says: "We are going to support Roosevelt most emphatically. We have been satisfied with his administration and will be well satisfied to have him continue in office."

Infinitude of the Infinitesimal.

St. James's Gazette: In his recent "Introduction to Spectrum Analysis," Dr. W. Marshall Watts shows that "in a drop of water the number of molecules is so great that, if we could see them when the drop was magnified till it had apparently the dimensions of our earth, they would appear like a heap of tennis balls, in number something like 9,556,000,000,000,000,000,000,000." Even then, it appears, each molecule would be subdivisible into three atoms, two of hydrogen and one of oxygen. And it is, of course, a matter of common knowledge that in every atom of hydrogen there are some thousand electrified "corusculos."

More Likely.

Springfield Republican: Judge Parker's election, according to Mr. Bryan, promises relief from the race issue "and this will permit the Democrats of the South to turn their thoughts again to economic questions." But on those questions alone the South is as likely to become Republican and protectionist as to continue democratic and low tariff.

Sagacity of the Buffalo.

John Burroughs in Outing: When I was in Montana last year I heard of a weed called the loco weed that made horses crazy if they ate it. In a magazine article published since I wondered if the buffalo had learned to avoid this weed. A Western correspondent now assures me, on what appears to be good authority, that buffalo do eschew this plant. A ranchman in the Panhandle of Texas has crossed buffalo with polled Angus—the "black cattle"—and he has found that an animal with one-sixteenth buffalo blood will not touch the loco weed. If this is a fact it is a very interesting one. It shows how discriminating wild creatures become in the course of ages, and how this wisdom becomes instinctive.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Cass Lake Times: There has never been a time in the history of politics of our state when the situation was so uncertain and doubtful as now. Almost every newspaper in the state which does not openly support Dunn brings us the news of Republican support of Johnson, and many of them declare that, though they can and will support the balance of their ticket—they cannot and will not support Dunn. We can see no reason for this distinction; if Dunn is guilty of the acts he is charged with he certainly ought not to have the support of anyone, be he Republican, Democrat or what not, but Ray Jones, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, has been adjudged a timber trespasser (a mild term for thief) and is, or ought to be, as objectionable as the man at the head of the ticket. If Dunn is defeated because he failed to perform his duty when a servant of the state, he is not more amenable to punishment than he who stole the Indians' timber and was convicted of the crime, not in a criminal action but in a suit for trespass. There are others on the Republican ticket whose record is not as clear as we might wish, but they may, perhaps be consistently supported.

Wheelock's Weekly: As for Ray Jones, it seems almost hideous to say it, yet the prospects of his election are much brighter than those of Mr. Dunn. So many voters ignore the names of the candidates after they have carefully selected their candidate for governor, that Jones is likely to slip into office by the sheer indifference or ignorance of voters. The state has already endured the disgrace of his one term as lieutenant-governor. It is hard that another two years of that disgrace is possible.

Anoka Union: The pine log will soon be a thing of the past in Minnesota, and I'm sorry it must be so. It has been a great thing for many people. Made a whole lot of them roll in wealth, who owa fine mansions, steam launches, handsome equippage. Has furnished employment for thousands of men, who by saving are comfortably fixed today. Has built up towns and cities, that will prosper and increase in population after the supply is exhausted. Certainly the pine log has played an important part in the history of our state, and its final departure will be regretted by a host of people.

THE FUNNY FELLOW.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Yes, he sent her $4 worth of violets.

"But can he afford it?"

"Oh, I guess so. She's worth half a million."

Town Topics: Binks—Old Skinnem, the trust promoter, is dead.

Winks—That so? He's got now what he always wanted.

Binks—What's that?

Winks—The earth.

Judge: "Oh, yes, I enjoyed my vacation. Had a fine, airy room, good bed, nice grub, perfect attendance and lots of rest."

"For heaven's sake! where were you?"

"In the hospital, with a broken leg."

Philadelphia Press: Bridget (at the door)—The missus is sick, ma'am.

Mrs. McCall—But—er—don't you think she could see me?

Bridget—Oi'm sure she could an' did, ma'am. Oi'm thinkin' that's what made her sick.

Tit-Bits: "Do you drink coffee?" asked the doctor of an aged patient.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Coffee," continued the M. D., "is a slow poison."

"Yes, very slow," replied the old man. "I have taken it daily for nearly eighty years."

New York Weekly: First Citizen—The spirit of anarchy can only be found in large cities.

Second Citizen—Guess that's so. A man never feels like slaughtering the whole human race until he lives in a flat, with a piano above and a baby below.

Philadelphia Ledger: "When a person's 'wool-gathering' that means he's lazy, doesn't it, pa?"

"Not necessarily, my son! He may be gathering the wool off the lambs in Wall street."

JUDGE PARKER IS A FIT CANDIDATE.

Grover Cleveland in November McClure's: If the leading characteristic of the Democracy's candidate is devotion to duty, and if his eminent ability to discern presidential duty is not denied, it is quite in order to inquire whether he has the moral stamina and stability to withstand all temptations to compromise on any account or for any purpose his convictions of right, and whether he is courageous and fearless enough to follow the way of duty as it is made known to him—however rugged and difficult the way may be.

Fortunately, he has has by his own recent conduct furnished clear and convincing evidence on this question. When his policy of silence prior to his nomination was criticized, his answer to an intimation questioning its expediency amounted to a declaration that he had determined upon his course in the premises and should adhere to it. After his nomination on a platform which, in his opinion, did not treat the financial question with definiteness, he promptly addressed a communication to the convention, while still in session, stating with the utmost distinctness his position on the subject, and his fixed determination to be governed by the judgment he had formed; and at the same time he invited the convention to select another candidate in his stead, if his views were unsatisfactory to a majority of its members. The circumstances surrounding this incident stamped it unmistakably with unique courage and unequivocal independence. Any suggestion of premeditated trick or of the coercion of political expediency, is childish and silly. It was the individual and unforced act of a sincere and fearless man.

His address when notified of his nomination also supplies, it seems to me, evidence of the especial qualities we are now discussing. As a party nominee he announced party doctrines, but he based them on his own conceptions of the Democracy's true spirit and he announced them in his own way, in terms that leave no doubt of his meaning and notably in a tone of sincerity and self-reliant boldness and confidence. To put this branch of my topic in few words, I do not believe the closest scrutiny of Judge Parker's entire course will develop a single instance of cowardice or surrender of conscientious conviction.

I am persuaded that the American people will make no mistake if they place implicit reliance in Alton B. Parker's devotion to duty, in his steadfast persistency against all temptation to leave the way where duty leads, and in his safe and conservative conceptions of presidential responsibilities.

GEMS FROM BRYAN.

Indianapolis Sentinel: In his speaking tour Mr. Bryan has left the land in a perfect flood of literary gems that will live when this campaign is forgotten. For instance, at Greensburg he was told how Republicans were trying to get silver men to vote against Parker because he was for the gold standard, and Mr. Bryan said:

When I hear that the Republicans are urging some of you to vote against Parker because he is a gold standard man," he said, "and when I recall how they urged you to vote against me because I was for silver, I am reminded of the man who said that when he was traveling in the mountains the path was so crooked he frequently met himself coming back.

And on another occasion when reference was made to the fact that Republican congressmen from this state had done nothing for the farmers and the plain people, Mr. Bryan quickly answered:

I remember reading, when I was young of Ulysses coming to the land of lotus eaters. You know that the lotus was a fruit and that when you ate of it you forgot your home and your native land. Well, down in Washington there seems to be a lotus fruit and when men are sent to represent great farming communities they eat of that fruit and they forget the people who sent them to congress and they stand there in the interests of great corporations, to the neglect of the great struggling masses.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

Boston Herald: The Herald, yesterday, devoted a large amount of space to a review of the business prospects of the country. We made no attempt to obtain information from biased sources, one way or the other. We merely sought the opinions of business men, bankers and railroad men in regard to the prospects for the closing months of 1904 and the year 1905. Our inquiries covered a vast field of territory and a wide range of mercantile, transportation and banking interests. The opinions expressed on all sides were almost unanimous that the prospects were bright and that the people of this country may expect to again be favored by an era of prosperity, marked by general business activity as well as by strong prices in the stock market. It should not be overlooked that confidence is a great element in prosperity. The fact that the business men of the country are confident of good times as was plainly shown by the dispatches we published—will of itself do much to assure the realization of the increased business activity that is anticipated. When merchants fear bad times they curtail their production and their purchases as much as possible. While this to some extent is analogous to the careful skipper who shortens sail before the squal, it may also be said that, when good judges of weather begin to make sail again, it may be taken as quite convincing proof that the weather is improving, in business that prosperity is near at hand.

Primary Reform Vindicated.

Detroit Tribune: A complete and indisputable vindication of primary reform has been wrought by the voters of Wayne county. In spite of the unavoidible crudities in the new law, and notwithstanding the vicious ripper legislation which has thrown state, county and city elections together, necessitating a three-day voting and a two-day count, the principle of the direct vote has scored a triumphant success. Its emphatic victory carries an appeal to every man of right mind. The cry of the people for relief has been answered in Wayne county.

In every instance where public sentiment was appealed to, where a moral issue, an issue of good government presented itself, the voters made unequivocal reply. Not one of these three ends, the utter defeat of that intolerable machine blatherskite, "Pop" Goodell, the swift rebuke of the use of money in the Newberry interest, the upholding of Prosecutor Hunt, or the defeat of the alderman who pawned his badge of office, could have been accomplished were the voters tied, hand and foot, by machine delegates trading in convention. Primary reform was expected to do this. And it has done it. And done it so decisively that the traitor and the corrupter may well say: "D— primary reform."

Coldest City in the World.

Chicago Journal: The coldest city in the world is Yakutsk, Siberia. It is the great commercial emporium of East Siberia and the capital of the province of Yakutsk, which in most of its area of 1,517,063 square miles is a bare desert, the soil of which is frozen to a great depth. Yakutsk consists of about four hundred houses of European structure, standing apart. The intervening spaces are occupied by huts of the northern nomads, with earthen roofs, doors covered with hairy hides, and windows of ice.

SEPARATE BALLOT

Voting Machines Cannot Be Used For Constitutional Amendments.

Law Designates Special Way to Vote on Amendments.

The four voting machines which have been installed in four of the precincts of the city will not be used for voting upon the constitutional amendments.

This is not for the reason that the machines are not fitted for the work. There is provision made in the machine for amendments to the constitution or to the charter, but the election law provides that amendments to the constitution shall be voted upon on separate pink ballots. No provision is made in the law covering automatic voting machines for the use on amendments to the constitution, and it has been decided by the city authorities, that in order that no question shall arise, the separate pink ballots shall be issued to the voters using the machines.

The machines have all been installed, however, and they will be made use of on voting for the different candidates both for the county, state and national tickets.

They were the center of much interest in the four precincts yesterday. All those coming in to register examined the machines, and there are now but few voters who will have to use them on election day who are not familiar with their methods of operation.

The judges say that it seldom took more than a minute or two to fully explain their method of operation, and that at the end of that time the great majority of the men who examined them could cast their vote without assistance.

In addition to this exhibition, printed circulars have been sent out to the home of every voter in the four precincts where the machines are to be used and the judges expect no trouble on election day.

P. G. Sjoblom, the agent for the machines in Minnesota, is anxious to make a record for them in Duluth, as this city is the first one in the state to adopt their use.

He will keep a careful record of the time required to get returns from the four precincts, and these records will be telegraphed to all the daily papers in the state.

ANOTHER AIRSHIP READY.

St. Louis, Oct. 26.—The airship invented and constructed by T. C. Benbow, of Montana, which has been in the World's fair aerodome, was today brought out into the aeronautic course and made ready for a light in the event that the wind, which was at that time blowing about fifteen miles an hour, decreased sufficiently to give the airship's powers a fair trial.

NEW FIRM.

The Turnbull-Cameron-Degler Co. of Superior Open With Great Discount Sale.

One of the most important changes in retail commercial circles that has taken place at the head of the lakes for a number of years was the transfer, last Monday, of the stock of the Grand Rapids House Furnishing Co. to The Turnbull-Cameron-Degler Co., the stock of furniture that the "Grand Rapids" has handled during its period of existence is known throughout the northern part of Minnesota and Wisconsin as the most complete, up-to-date and best selected of any in the territory, and the owners have borne the reputation of selling goods at a lower per cent of profit than any of their competitors. It is the intention of the new management to make the present discount sale "the only one" of its kind. They realize that their conduct during this sale will affect their future welfare to a great extent, and assure the public that there will be no statements made in print that will not be carried out to the letter. The sale commences tomorrow morning, at 9 o'clock.

FIRST SUCCESSFUL

Flight Made By an Airship In America.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 26.—The first successful airship flight ever made in the United States was accomplished yesterday afternoon from the World's fair grounds by A. R. Knabenshaue, the noted Toledo aeronaut, in the big Baldwin dirigible balloon, the Arrow.

Clinging to the framework of the car, his precarious foothold an iron tube that forms one side of the base of the triangular network of supports and ribs of the airship's body, Knabenshaue directed the movements of his flying machine and maneuvered in circles and against the wind high over the monster exhibit palaces of the exposition before the accident to his motor which rendered the big fan-like propellers useless and curtailed his command of the airship.

Notwithstanding the breaking of the motor, Knabenshaue did not lose complete control of the machine, but with the momentum given by the wind he was enabled to steer the machine in a course that varied several points in each direction from the trend of the wind and land at a point of his own selecting.

After he had landed, Knabenshaue stated that when he found he could control the movements of the airship even after the motor was useless, he determined to make the test a fair one, and decided to effect a landing on the east side of the Mississippi river.

PENSIONS WANTED

Police Would Have Them Possible In Certain Cases.

To Urge Measure Similar to That Adopted For St. Paul.

Chief C. H. Troyer, A. G. Fiskett and D. H. Lavine, of the police department, are a local committee which is endeavoring to stimulate interest among the local legislators in getting Duluth included in a bill for pensioning the police of the Zenith City.

A bill was passed by the last legislature creating a pension for retired and disabled police officers of the city of St. Paul, which bill the Minneapolis department is making a strong effort to have amended at the coming session to include the Flour City, and the Minneapolis department has asked the co-operation of the Duluth department in the matter with a view of having Duluth included in the amendment.

The committee named above was appointed Oct. 12 at a meeting of the Duluth Police Relief association, and is asking local candidates for the legislature, none of whom have any opposition, by the way, to state their views on the proposition.

The committee sets forth that the local department is now on a civil service basis and several members have been in service twenty years. They are liable to become so impaired in health at any time that they cannot do further service in this department, and practically none of them has ever been able to lay up anything for the future. This would mean a very bad situation for their families if it should become necessary for them at any time to discontinue service owing to inability.

"It seems to us that a man giving all the best years of his life to the police service, when the salary which is paid to police officers is taken into consideration, should in some way be taken care of," the committee asserts, "if it is no fault of his that he has to withdraw. Officers are liable at any time to be permanently disabled in the discharge of their duties whether they have been a long or short time in the service, and in such cases it seems eminently proper that a way should be provided for them.

"It is the aim of the present chief of police to eliminate politics entirely from the department and to keep no men in the service, except such as perform their duties faithfully and in a proper manner, and in this regard the department is constantly improving. This is another reason why we think we should receive your favorable consideration."

The Minneapolis bill provides and permits such a police relief association as may be organized to pay from any funds it may have received from the state or any other source, a service pension in such accounts and in such a manner as its constitution and by-laws designate, not, however, to exceed $40 per month to each of its pensioned members, 55 years old or more, who shall have done active police duty for 20 years or more in such paid municipal police department, or who having been disabled physically or mentally because of any injury received or suffered while in the performance of police duty, so as to render his retirement from active police service.

The pension board may lower or raise the pension within the $40 limit, whenever because of funds on hand or any other circumstance, such change is desirable. A pension is not to be paid to any person while drawing salary in any amount from the police department, and no member shall be entitled to said pension after he removes his residence from the city where the relief association is organized, or who shall have been convicted of felony or misdemeanor for which he shall be adjudged to be imprisoned or who is an habitual drunkard. Payments made shall not be subject to judgment, garnishment, or other legal processes, and no person entitled to such payment shall have the right to assign same nor shall the association have authority to recognize or pay over any sum which has been assigned.

An assessment of 1-10 mill is provided for against the city, but may be reduced if the fund gets large enough to warrant it.

The governing board shall consist of five members to be elected annually for terms of one, two, three, four and five years, respectively or until their successors are duly elected and qualified, and the mayor and chief of police shall be ex-officio members of the board.

Vacancies in the elective membership shall be filled by a special election and the governing board shall file annually on or before Sept. 1, with the city comptroller, a detailed financial report.

The assessed valuation of Duluth at the last report was $28,278,847, so that the 1-10 mill assessment called for by the bill would mean about, $2827 annually in local taxation, additional to the present millage.

CUT WRONG FOOT

And $10,000 Judgment Returned Aaginst Physicians.

Monroe, Wis., Oct. 26.—Paul Parkhurst, plaintiff in the case against Drs. W. T. Nuzum and J. Sutherland, of Brodhead, which has been on trial in the Green county circuit court for six days, was awarded damages of $10,000 by the jury last evening.

The plaintiff is a boy, 7 years old, who is a resident of Lyle, Minn. He was operated upon by the defendants for a defective fool, and the operation was performed on the wrong foot. Five tendons were cut, giving the boy only limited use of the foot and making him a cripple in both feet.

The case has attracted wide attention and was sharply contested. Leading surgeons of the country were brought here to testify as experts.

MANY VOTING FRAUDS FOUND IN NEW YORK.

New York, Oct. 26.—In an interview here today Governor Odell is quoted as saying:

"We have found 10,000 cases where frandulent means have been taken to establish a voting residence in the greater city. There are undoubtedly many hundreds more of small cases which we have not gone into. The proper authorities will institute proceedings in 2000 of these cases today."

PHILLIPS & CO. | PHILLIPS & CO.

St. Paul, Oct. 26.—There was a large gathering of Minnesota women at the Congregational church at St. Anthony park yesterday to attend the tenth annual state conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution and to do honor to the chief executive of that organization, Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks.

Mrs. William Liggett, state regent, presided. Upon the platform beside her were Mrs. Fairbanks, president general; vice president general, Mrs. Rising, of Winona; ex-state regent, Mrs. Ell Torrence, of Minneapolis; ex-state regent, Mrs. Thompson, of Minneapolis; state vice regent, Mrs. Van Sant; Mrs. Blant, of St. Anthony park, state secretary, and Mrs. Brown, of St. Paul, a real daughter, much honored by the society.

After the invocation and the singing of "America," Mrs. Liggett delivered an address of welcome in which she spoke of the great honor paid to Minnesota in the presence of their president general, Mrs. Fairbanks, and then reviewed the work of the past year, which she declared had been a most prosprous one. A graceful response was made by Mrs. J. L. Washburn, of Duluth.

The reports of chapter regents were then called for and responses were made by women from Duluth, Rochester, Mankato, Faribault, Winona, Fergus Falls and the local chapters of the Twin Cities. Favorable progress was reported and much patriotic werk done and undertaken.

At 2 o'clock the program was resumed, some belated business dispatched and ex-state regents delivered short addresses.

The speech of the day was made by Mrs. Fairbanks, who spoke eloquently of the labors of the national society and of the great ideals for which the Daughters of the American Revolution stood and would stand for all time. She urged the members not to become too rich, not to forget the simple, heroic lives of the women who went before them, but to keep ever before their eyes and minds the principles of liberty, which animated and inspired their forefathers. She spoke with much feeling of the beautiful memorial to perpetuate the memory of the brave men who fought for freedom and to embalm the efforts of the women who are striving to do them honor. Mrs. Fairbanks besought the women of Minnesota to help with this great work and announced that if each woman did something toward it the building would be a complete reality within two years. Mrs. Fairbanks' words were received with much applause and appreciation.

After adjournment the women attended a reception given by Mrs. Liggett at her house in honor of her distinguished guest.

Mrs. Page Morris, Mrs. Hugo, Mrs. Washburn, of Duluth, and many others assisted in receiving.

NEEDLEWORK GUILD.

Annual Round Up Is a Conspicuous Success.

The round-up of the Needlework guild took place yesterday, and with the advent of the first snow flurry, the work of gathering together the warm, new garments for the less fortunate of the city's people, was particularly seasonable. The work of the Needlework guild is a charity that appeals to a large number of the thoughtful people of the city. The guild stands for no creed or belief, and to become a member, or contributor, two new garments are given each year. The round-up takes place the latter part of October, and the garments gathered together are distributed to the charitable institutions of the city, and to some poor families.

This year a large number of contributors reported, and a large amount of warm, comfortable clothing is piled up on the tables at the store on 25 East Superior street. Underwear, stockings, dresses, shoes, mittens, caps, coats and other garments, brand new and ready to be worn, are collected together. The officers and directors of the guild were busy yesterday assorting and preparing the contribution, and today many interested in the work called to see the display. At 2:30 o'clock today the annual meeting was held, and tomorrow the distribution will take place.

AMONG THE CLUBS.

Twentieth Century Club Literature Class to Study Myths.

The Literature class of the Twentieth Century club met yesterday afternoon, and after the half hour devoted to current events, the study of myths was taken up. Miss Mogford, of the high school, spoke informally of the creation and origin of the myth, and with this talk as an introduction, the further discussion of the fascinating study was taken up. The class is planning to give even more time to this part of literature than was at first intended. It has been said that for a broad enjoyment of literature a knowledge of the Bible and of the old myths is necessary, because of the constant reference to them, encountered in reading. The study is proving most enjoyable and the members of the class are delighted with the year's study course.

This evening the second in the series of three lectures will be given by Dr. Richard Burton, at the club room of the library. THE WOMAN CHOOSES.

That Man Does Is Only an Illusion.

Nixola Greeley-Smith in New York World: One of the most false and possibly for that reason the most cherished illusions of man is the idea that he chooses his own wife, when, as a matter of fact he merely succumbs to a young person that has marked him for her own as inevitably as smallpox or the black hand.

The much quoted statement that any woman can marry any man she wants to, like most other glittering generalties, lacks confirmation in fact. But it would be very much truer if the fair participants in the man hunt would devote their attention to a particular man instead of wasting time in a scattering fire. Very often they undertake too much and in trying to bring Tom and Dick and Harry to the proposal point at once fail with all three. The same amount of attention given to one of the trio would have convinced him that the dearest woman in the world might with a great deal of persuasion consent to marry him and make him the most blessed among his kind.

How this wonderful result is brought about only the girl knows—though very often she doesn't know, but is, like the selected husband, just an obedient pawn in the hands of her wise and elderly female relatives. For a homely girl with an experienced mother as just about forty times as great a chance to capture a man as a prety girl without one. For the pretty orphan is frequently ingenuous enough to think that the feminine role in courtship consists in breathing a whispered yes to the most favored of a half dozen ardent suitors and so leaves to chance what the wiser maiden accomplishes by cold science.

Of course, only a widow has the science of man-trapping thoroughly mastered, and a new occupation might be furnished impecunious relicts if some kind philantropists would only endow a school of courtship for women and employ the widows to give object lessons in subtle love making to the inexperienced of their sex.

However, to give reality to the lessons men would probably have to take the passive part in them which fate assigns the prospective husbands in real life. And in this event the widows would probably gobble them up faster than the faculty could supply them. For any widow can marry any man she wants, unless he is warned in time and has himself sentenced to life imprisonment in Sing Sing or Auburn in self-defense. And even then it would be by no means certain that she wouldn't get him.

We cannot all be widows, however, and those of us not of that privileged class can only cudgel our dull wits over the "preliminaries of marriage," as they were styled in the Passionist father's address, and do the best we can in the serene anticipation that some time even our day of widow's weeds and wiles may dawn.

THE SHADOW OF HER LIFE

By J. M. Williams.

(C opyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Browne gazed in astonishment at the girl beside him. What could she mean? Was she really in earnest in telling him this ridiculous story? In the sad eyes that looked steadily into his there was nothing but the most intense earnestness. Perhaps—but he thrust the thought from him; he could not,—would not think the girl he loved mentally unbalanced. During the last few weeks he had watched her change from a bright, glad-hearted girl into a nervous, despondent woman; the eyes once so gay and frank had now a shifting, haunted expression, which panied him inexpressibly.

"Judith," he asked, "how long has this creation of your imagination,—I beg your pardon, dearest—this companion of yours been known to you?"

"Ever since I was a tiny child," Judith replied wearily.

"A child! How very strange!"

"Immediately after my mother died, in those sad days when I was alone and desolate, Henri began to visit me. He was a beautiful boy, as bright and full of spirits as I was melancholy. He changed my life, Charles. I believe I should have gone insane but for him. You know I always was a very nervous child."

"And now," thought Browne, "she is a very nervous woman. That is the only explanation possible for this strange idea of hers; her extreme nervous temperament and the morbid state of mind brought about recently by her father's death."

"Yes, Judith, I remember well what a pale, sensitive little creature you used to be, but after your stepmother came, you changed wonderfully. I believe you were happier and more healthy after that, were you not, dear?"

"Yes, very much happier. Mamma has indeed been a blessing to me. From the time of her coming up to dear papa's death I was perfectly content, and during that sweet, happy time, I had very few visits from Henri. In fact, he stopped coming altogether, and I had given up all hope of ever seeing him again until about a month ago."

"When you were a child, and he visited you so frequently, did anyone else see him?"

"No, Charles. That is the strangest part of it; he never came when others were about, and everyone laughed at me, and thought me crazy when I talked of him."

"Well, dearest, I am glad you told me this, for I want to know your past life and all your experiences. But Henri does not afect our life at all; he has nothing to do with your love for me nor mine for you."

"Oh Charles, you do not understand! He affects our life very much."

"What do you mean, Judith? Has your heart changed toward me?"

"Oh no, no! It will never change toward you, dear," answered the girl, looking steadfastly into Browne's eyes, while her own were full of love, and yet of a deep sadness as well.

"Well, dear one, can't you tell me what is the trouble then?" asked Browne, drawing her closer to him.

"Charles," she replied, "when Henri and I were growing up, in those days when he was everything to me, I promised to be his wife, to wait until the time came when he could come for me from his home in France, where he was poor and unhappy and misunderstood. You understand now; I am engaged to Henri, dear."

"Oh Judith, Judith! Can you let a phantom, a hallucination, come between us? How can you use me so?" Browne's face was full of agony.

"Charles, don't speak so! I'd give the world if it were only a phantom. Wait a moment." And Judith drew from her neck a chain, and Browne saw, suspended from it, a simple little ring, set with a few tiny garnets. "This is our engagement ring," she continued. "Henri has one from me just like it."

"Oh God!" groaned her lover, "what can be the meaning of all this! Her mind is unbalanced through her grief!" But Judith's eyes were quite sane and full of womanly tenderness as she tried to comfort him.

"Be patient, dearest," she said. "I shall try to be true to you, and when Henri comes, as he will soon, I shall explain it all to him, and it may be he will release me from my promise. I did not mean to be false to him; oh, no! I never meant that! But after papa's second marriage, when I was so happy with mamma, Henri seemed to leave me altogether, and I thought he had forgotten all about me. And then you came, and I loved you so!" And now it was Browne's turn to offer comfort, as Judith hurled her head in his shoulder, sobbing pitcously.

"When Henri visited me again," she continued after a few minutes, "just a short time after papa died, he was much changed. He was a boy when we parted; now he is a man, and a rich one, at last, but he is lonely and needs me, he says. Oh Charles, it is so strange that no one else knows Henri! I cannot understand it! But it will all be clear. Henri is coming for me soon. He will arrive on the Nereus."

"The Nereus! That is due next week! And if he does not come, Judith, what then?"

"He will come, Charles; I know he will!" she insisted, and nothing Browne could say could shake her confidence in the arrival of her mysterious friend.

"The Nereus is in Judith," Browne remarked, as he greeted her a few days later.

"Yes, I know, dear," she replied quietly, but her voice trembled with excitement and her eyes burned feverishly. "I am expecting Henri every moment. Don't leave me, Charles. I am a little nervous today."

"Sit down, dear. Wait for him here."

"Oh no, I can't sit down! I can't stay still! Come out on the porch with me."

"Soon it will be all right, dearest," Browne reassured her, as they stood together looking out on the street. But although his tones were quiet, he was as excited and anxious as Judith herself, for he felt his life and hers depended upon the issue of the present crisis. A few moments passed in silent waiting. A cab came slowly into view. To Browne's surprise it stopped at the gate.

"Does Miss Clermont live here?" the cabman inquired.

"Yes," Browne replied, "have you news for her?"

The man did not reply, but lifted out and slowly bore up the steps the unconscious form of a handsome Frenchman. For a moment Judith seemed stunned, then she quietly led the way to a bed room, and asked that her mother and a physician be summoned. A foreigner who had assisted the cabman in bringing in the body remained in the room, watching the scene, his face full of sadness.

"Who is this?" Browne asked him, pointing to the quiet form over which Judith bent.

"He is my friend, Henri Le Blanc," answered the man in low tones. "We came on the Nereus this morning; he is to be married. Henri is a good fellow."

At this moment, Mrs. Clermont entered with a physician and for hours they labored over the unconscious Le Blanc, Judith moving about as in a dream.

"He was struck by a wagon," the foreigner explained to Browne. "He did not see it coming; he seemed to be in a dream. He never was like other people. If he were not so good, I should think he had a devil in him! he is so queer. He talks when no one is near him and acts so strangely. But Henri is a rich man now, so no one speaks ill of him. When he was poor,—ugh! no one would associate with him then,—said he was crazy."

"Have you known him long?" asked Browne.

"Oh yes, all my life. He made me his slave, but I love him! He always was good to me. I wish to drink, to gamble; he stops me when I am a hundred miles away from him! I am about to commit a dreadful crime. I have to give up and go to Henri, and he all the time far away from me! Oh, Henri has saved me many times! Then he made me come over to America with him to see him marry this young lady here."

"It is no use," said the doctor. "He is gone now. He seems to have been all nerve and brain, and no vitality, poor fellow."

"Henri gone!" cried the little foreigner. "Mon Dieu, I must go, too!" And his small body rocked in a paroxysm of grief. Gently Mrs. Clermont led him away, and Browne and Judith were alone, looking down at the quiet face and folded hands of the dead Frenchman. Suddenly Browne started.

"Look, Judith," he exclaimed, "the same little ring you wear! See, five little garnets!"

But Judith did not hear him. For a long time she knelt beside the inanimate form, Browne watching her with ever-increasing dread and anxiety. Finally she raised her head and looked into her living lover's eyes.

"It is all over now, dearest," she said, a light breaking over her face, "nothing is between us; the shadow of my life has disappeared."

SEA HERMIT IS MARRIED

Sails Away For Honeymoon In Two-Masted Schooner.

Galveston, Texas, Oct. 26.—After living practicaly a hermit's life for twenty years on the bays and seas, Capt. Adolph Frietsch has ended his lonesome existence by marrying a young woman whom he accidentally met. Alone in the little two-masted schooner Annie F., the two have sailed away.

It was while he was cruising in the gulf that Capt. Frietsch met his fate. Last winter he put into Beaumont with a cargo of fancy shells, gathered on the Mexican reefs. The girl who is now his bride was visiting in that city.

The family party happened to stroll down to the river, and saw the shells and the boat.

The girl and her brothers looked at the shells, while Capt. Frietsch looked at the girl.

"She'd stand up in a strong breeze or make headway in a calm," he says he thought to himself as he recounted his adventures to the visitors in an absent-minded way. By the time he had thought of it long enough he found himself well acquainted.

When he left Beaumont it was to take one of those long trips alone. "What I wants a wife," he decided during the long hours of a long day under a tropical sun. He sought a port and wrote a letter that settled his fate.

Capt. Frietsch decided that he could take on one more cargo of shells before the nuptial knot was tied. Consequently he made sail for the Mexican reefs. When a short distance from his destination he ran into a hurricane.

He was blown far from his course to the Mexican coast above Yucatan. When the storm was over he started again for the reefs in the teeth of a trade wind, which kept him back long enough so that he was caught in a second hurricane.

He looked at his compass and at his chart. Then he consulted his calendar and gazed at his clock.

"It's about time to get married," he said to himself and started for Galveston.

Capt. Frietsch has taken his bride for a honeymoon voyage.

"This will give her a chance to get used to the water," he said before sailing off from the wharves. "It's all off with the squalls for the season. After she's once tried it she'll like it better'n a ranch."

In his two-by-four boats Capt. Frietsch has been cruising the sea almost all his life and all alone. He has explored the deserted shoals and fought his way through untraveled seas.

"And now I'm tired of it," he declares. When he goes cruising by himself again it will be because his wife has a mind for lonesomeness herself.

CHAPMANS LIKE BRIECES.

Father and Son Wed Mother and Daughter.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 26.—The Chapmans and the Brieces, of Northfield township, seem to be much in love with each other, and Monday a double wedding occurred in which the father and son respectively married a mother and daughter.

The marriage licenses read as follows: Andrew Chapman, 49; Elsie Briece, 40. Arthur Chapman, 20; Vercie Briece Pickering, 19.

Vercie Briece Pickering, the daughter of Andrew Chapman's bride, was the wife of James Pickering. She secured a decree of divorce from him Sept. 26, and the bill alleges that she had been married to him five years, thus making her age at her first wedding as 14 years. The two couples will live on the Chapman farm in Northfield.

WILL GIVE PARTY

Members of the Junior Y. M. C. A. to Celebrate Hallowe'en.

Old-Fashioned Games to Be Played—Other Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Between the hours of 7 and 10 p. m. on Monday evening, the district between Third and Fourth streetes, on Sixth avenue east, will not be a favorite resort for citiezns with delicate nerves.

The 350 members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. are going to hold an old-time Hallowe'en party and the evening is likely to be a lively one.

The boys will all come supplied with jack-o-lanterns with which to decorate the building, and pea blowers to stir up an interest in life among their fellow-members.

The association will supply nuts, apples and candies for the boys and the evening will be spent in playing all the regulation Hallowe'en games that can be thought of by the boys or the secretary. The boys will duck for apples, try to bite apples swinging from strings and do all the other stunts which are attempted on but one night in the year.

The association has been promised several donations of fruit and nuts from grateful East End property owners, who realize that the party will keep several hundred boys of a dangerous age away from their front gates and parlor windows on the dreaded night.

* * *

The first step toward the construction of a new building for the central Y. M. C. A. was taken this week when the association formed a compact with the Star Lecture course, whereby part of the proceeds of the lecture shall go toward the fund being created for the new building. The association members are out selling tickets to the course, and they hope to realize a good sum as a nest egg toward the fund.

This evening an attempt will be made to revive the game of chess in Duluth. The vice president of the Iowa Chess association is in the city and will organize a chess club this evening at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. on East Superior street. The club will elect officers tonight and will probably affiliate with the National Chess association. Regular meetings will be held during the winter months and chess tournaments arranged to decide the championship of the city. Matches with outside cities may also be planned.

The trial of L. W. NEW SCHOOL FOR WORKERS

Professor Triggs Proposes to Go Back to the Country.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—With sharp criticism of the university of Chicago and its methods, Professor Oscar L. Triggs announces the establishment of his new educational institution, the "People's Industrial School," in which he expects to bring the arts and industries together upon a harmonious plan. The new institution has an office at Twentieth street and Indiana avenue, but the school will be established outside of the city. The curriculum embraces no studies but farming, woodworking, ironworking and other industrial arts. Higher mathematics will be omitted as of little value, and history and geography will have no place there.

"The basis of the school is work," said Professor Triggs Monday night. "Work and unity is our aim. A school somewhat similar to mine was founded a few years ago by Col. Parker and Professor Dewey, but it was forced out by the university of Chicago, for the university is against unity, and, we might say, any work. The students there are idle half their time, and they have a club fitted up in a manner to further their idleness.

"The football games they rush to are senseless. Their dances, their rooting, mass meetings, as they call them, are all senseless. Work is what we want, and the modern student is trying to get out of it.

"My school is quite different from the institutions you meet with nowadays. It will be in a village some distance from the city, well out of the way of vice. Science shall be studies, not for the sake of science, but to do good for man and to help industry in every way it can.

"All trades, however, are not educational, yet most of them are. I expect the higher arts and crafts are the most so. It remains for us to find the educational value of all work. Health is necessary for good work. Education is a life process.

"We shall make our school self-supporting and will not depend on millionaires like the university of Chicago and many other large educational institutions.

"We are going back to the woods. Business in the city is non-social—every man is trying to walk over his brother, and crime and vice are rampant. Therefore we will go to the peaceful country and do our work in our own way. Every boy shall be a farmer, and soon the idle college man will be a thing of the past.

"The present universities are retrograding, for they live upon others—our school shall stand by itself and scorn the millionaire.

"We will not teach the higher mathematics unless we need them in our work. We will not teach history nor geography, for they are senseless, and one soon forgets everything of that kind they learn in school, anyway. I think my new venture will be a great blessing to mankind."

ANCIENT CITY

Of the Aztecs Discovered In the Andes.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 26.—An ancient city, deserted for 200 years, but once inhabited by Aztecs of much larger stature than those who lived in Central America, is reported to have been discovered in the Andes mountains, 250 miles from Arauce, Chile, by Professor Emil Von Burgess, the Berlin archaeologist, and William J. Heminway, of New York, who has spent years in exploring South America.

The discoverers, who expect to add greatly to the scientific knowledge of South American prehistoric races, have just returned from Chile, and are now hurrying East to present the results of their researches to American and German scientists.

The deserted city was found in a valley, reached only after weeks of hardship. It was in an excellent state of preservation, the explorers finding stone houses built twenty centuries ago, crumbling and grown over with mosses and shrubs, yet standing upright. Ancient tools of husbandry and household implements of stone, found hermetically sealed in graves, gave evidence of a high state of civilization. A large quantity of articles taken from the city are being taken East.

The city is thought to have had a population of 150, and Professor Von Burgess believes that either flood or disease exterminated the race.

OLD GREEK TRAGEDY

Of "Ajax" to Be Portrayed By Many Berkeley Students.

Fifteen Men to Compose Chorus and Render Classic Music.

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 26.—The fine eucalyptus and cypress trees which look down into the beautiful Greek theater here are to see something new under the American sun—a Greek tragedy given in the open air, just as it might have been given thousands of years ago among the hills of Greece.

The opening of the theater a year ago was celebrated by the production of "The Birds," under the direction of the classical department.

It is more of an undertaking to give the tragedy than was contemplated, and to assist the students in this effort President Wheeler and the department of Greek invited Miss Mabel Hay Barrows, of New York, to come to California and take the direction of the "Ajax" of Sophocles. She is here and the work is well under way.

The story of Ajax makes its appeal today, as much as it did when it was played before the old Athenians forty years before Christ. It is as follows:

The arms of Achilles had been awarded, after his death, to Odysseus, though Ajax was generally considered second to Achilles among heroes of that day. Ajax was angry with thwarted ambition and vowed vengeance on the men who had voted against his claims. In the dead of night he went out to kill these foes, or at least the chief of them, Agamemnon, Menelaus and Odysseus. Athena, who loved him none too well, turned his blind fury against the cattle which had been brought in as booty. When morning dawned and reason returned he was overwhelmed with remorse and determined to end his own life.

He bids farewell to wife and child and friends, his warriors and sailors from Salamis, and seeking a secret spot on the seashore, buries his sword hilt in the sand, falls on the point and dies. His heart-broken wife finds the body, but before it can be removed Agamemnon and Menelaus arrive in anger, declaring that the body of the would-be murderer must be left a prey for "birds of carrion." Teucer, half-brother of Ajax, demands decent burial for the dead chieftain, and through his persuasion, backed up by the unexpected approval of Odysseus, permission is granted to Teucer and his friends to deal with the body according to usage. The play ends with the funeral procession, the little child leading his hand upon his father's bier, warriors and sailors following, with Tecmessa, the stricken wife a picture of sorrow and desolation.

The chorus, made up of fifteen men, so distinctly a feature of a Greek tragedy, plays an important part. The music for this chorus was written specially for the play. The composer, Willis Peck Kent, of New York, made a study of all the scraps of Greek music that have survived to the present time, including the famous Hymn to Apollo which was unearthed at Delphi ten or a dozen years ago. The voices are accompanied by a quartet of clarionets.

The simplicity of this drama, with its unity of thought and action, is its main charm. It is rich in beautiful lines and interesting in grouping. It is a masterpiece that moves the hearts of those who see it acted, even though they may not understand a word of Greek.

The "Ajax" was played first, in modern times, in Cambridge, England, in 1882, by university students. It was revived last November by Miss Barrows, who gave it in Chicago, with Greek actors. So successful was it that she was invited to try the same experiment in New York and four performances were given in New York city last March.

A committee has been formed in California to assist in awakening a public interest in this classical production. The list of names includes nearly a hundred representative men and women of the state, from Palo Alto to Sacramento, with a score of public-spirited San Franciscans, presidents of clubs, leaders in society, education, art and literature, who are warmly seconding the efforts of the department of Greek in the university.

The training of the students is left for their academic instructors. They are required to read and reread a good English version till they are familiar with the story of the play, the action it demands and the emotions that are excited. After some competition for parts they are assigned in accordance with the material that offers, certain requirements having to be considered. Ajax must be the largest and tallest of all; Odysseus shorter; Agamemnon tall and handsome; the messenger fleet; the attendants strong enough to shoulder Ajax after the death scene; Tecmessa pathetic and slight; her attendants pretty and graceful. These physical requirements have been fairly met among the students and graduates at Berkeley. Miss Barrows herself takes the part of Tecmessa.

Then comes the learning of the lines, no small task, when a hundred and fifty or more lines must become so familiar that they trip from the tongue with ease and fluency, sounding like poetry. Added to this difficulty is the fact that the modern Greek pronunciation is used in this production. The accepted pronunciation of the university is the old Erasmian, but on account of its superior musical quality, especially for singing, Miss Barrows prefers the living pronunciation.

It was the joy of giving a play in an outdoor setting that induced Miss Barrows to cross the continent in the heat of summer and spend two months drilling the students in their lines, dances and singing. Every day and all day long she may be found in the beautiful theater training the actors by ones and twos, or in larger groups, in spite of the hundreds of wayfarers, Templars, Odd Fellows and ordinary tourists who wander up the hill to see this new California wonder nestled among the trees, which are even indebted to the Greek for the very names they bear—eucalyptus and cyprus.

PLEA MADE BY TEACHER

For a Little Girl Charged With Poisoning a Baby.

New York, Oct. 26.—The case of the people against little Alice Klingenburg, charged with manslaughter and lodged without bail in the Essex county prison in Newark, is one of the most remarkable puzzles in the annals of crime.

Here is a child, barely turned 13, almost abnormally sensitive, possessed of a pride that denies her the relief of tears and a power of self-control that makes her seem many years older than she is, accused of having deliberately poisoned the baby niece whom everyone who knows her declares she loved devotedly.

She is a silent child. She has made no protestations. She has wept no tears, shows no grief, no fear.

When she was first charged with the murder of the baby she made no reply. A detective piled her with questions for half an hour. She returned his keen, practiced scrutiny of her facial characteristics with steady and unflinching eyes that had in them something of analysis and calculation themselves.

She told him she had given the baby a drink from a bottle which she thought contained soothing syrup, but which she afterward saw from a label on the reverse side of the bottle was poison. She would not answer his question as to why she had not gone for her uncle and aunt when she found out her mistake, instead of walking away to school and staying there until she was sent for, but her reply to his question as to why she had washed out the spoon and cup she had used to administer the dose was most ingenious.

"I thought someone else might use them and be sick," she said simply.

Before they took her away her teacher in the Mount Hebron school, a pretty, gentle, brown-eyed young woman, came in to see her and went away crying.

"Oh, they don't know what they are doing to accuse that child of crime," she exclaimed. "They don't understand her. Nobody understands her. They didn't understand her at home. She has stayed away from school to take care of the baby. She talked about it to me and wrote little things about it into her compositions. I know what she is suffering. It will kill her if it is allowed to prey on her mind."

Her pretty school teacher, finding that there is no use in trying to get bail for the child, is now casting about for other ways to secure her release.

SLAYER OF CONSTABLE

Pardoned After Serving Only a Short Term.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 26.—Charles Cackley was released from the Iowa state prison at Fort Madison yesterday, and returned to Van Buren county, Iowa, whence he will proceed to Caledonia, Mo., to join his wife and family. The incident ends a most remarkable story of real life.

Cackley killed a constable at Bonaparte, Iowa, in 1866. He was a young soldier just back from the war, and he was accused of stealing a horse. The constable who had him in custody was argumentative, and a quarrel followed, in which Cackley killed the fellow. He afterwards broke jail while waiting for trial and disappeared. Thirty-six years ago he married Sarah Jeffers, in Iron county, Mo., and they settled down on a farm with a house in the edge of the timber. He had assumed the name of John Beck, and his past was unknown to his neighbors.

For thirty-five years he lived there, an honest, industrious, but not very prosperous farmer, reared a family of children, and had the respect of all the neighbors. A year ago he applied for a pension under his assumed name. His history was traced and the Iowa police went after John Cackley.

The indictment still stood, and the old man who had been torn from his family pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree. A considerate judge gave him a sentence of ten years, the least possible, and recommended his pardon. A large petition came to Governor Cummins from the old neighbors of Beck, or Cackley, in Missouri, and petitions came from old soldiers and philanthropic persons in several states.

Governor Cummins, in view of the thirty-five years of good living of the old soldier, granted a pardon, and Cackley was yesterday released from prison.

The Calling of a Second Peace Conference.

Berlin, Oct. 26.—While the United States note inviting a second peace conference at The Hague for the purpose of broadening and strengthening the original convention has not yet been received by the German government the foreign office again emphasizes to the Associated Press Germany's wish for another conference. This must, however, avoid plans for universal peace and aim solely at practical reforms. While the conference cannot have any direct effect upon the Russo-Japanese war, since neither side wishes outside interference, still questions of international law have arisen in connection with this war which demand a settlement and it lies to the interest of the world's peace to reach an international agreement on such questions and get as many nations as possible to subscribe to its terms.

HE WANTS A SHARE

New Alleged Heir of a Kansas City Man Appears.

He Says He Is the Son of a Wayward Son.

Kansas City, Oct. 26.—A great surprise will be sprung on the heirs of Robert H. Wilson, who died in 1895, leaving property in Kansas City to the value of more than $1,000,000, when notice of a suit is served on them. The suit is being brought by Attorney George Horn, for M. Moran, a new party in the contest over the distribution of Mr. Wilson's property. Moran sues for a child's portion of the estate and asks that the brick building at 504 Main street be given him as his share of the estate.

The story of this case would make an interesting novel, so fascinating and strange are the circumstances connected with it. And this latest arrival on the scene to demand a portion of the wealth left by one of Kansas City's first settlers has added more mystery and interest than any other feature of the case.

When Mr. Wilson died he left one daughter, Mrs. J. D. Little, of Monticello, Kans.; one son, Robert T. Wilson, and three grandchildren, Kate Dean, of Liberty, Mo.; Susie Brooks, of Dubuque, Ia., and Robert W. Drury. The last three were children of Mrs. Professor Drury.

The son went to Leavenworth, and there, it is said, married. He became involved in trouble while in that city and left returning here. One day while working in a sawmill in Arkansas he was seriously injured and was told by a doctor that he could not live long.

"Get those papers in my pocket, then, and open them," he told the men around him. "Notify my people, whose names are found in them. I have been a wayward son and they do not know where I am, as I have been evading the law."

The papers showed the names of his parents and sisters and they were notified. Some of them went to Arkansas and had the body buried, so it is said, and later erected a monument in Elmwood cemetery here to his memory. Wilson had changed his name, so the newcomer in this suit alleges, and was known when he died as Robert Moran. The wife of Wilson died two years later, leaving a little son, who was brought to Kansas City and has been cared for by relatives of his mother. He is now about 23 years old, according to his attorney.

The boy heard of the litigation over the estate of Robert H. Wilson and two years ago, when he became of age, he decided that he should have some of his property. He waited some time before he acted and finally placed his case in the hands of Attorney Horn, who has been waiting for developments.

"I have told the heirs of Mr. Wilson of this young man and they deny his existence," said Mr. Horn, in discussing the case. "I expect depositions will be taken soon in the suit and in all probability I will be questioned first of all by attorneys for the defendants so they can make or produce the new claimant for a share in the wealth. When they are ready I am, for he is in Kansas City now and has been here many years. More than that, he has waited until he had plenty of evidence to prove his identity before going into court."

The estate would have been divided among the heirs long ago had not another person made a claim for a share of the property, causing a long and hard fight in the courts. This person was Mrs. Minnie Grantham, and the contest in Judge Gates' court over her claims and the final settlement by the supreme court was a sensation.

Mrs. Grantham was raised by Mr. Wilson and laid her claim to the fact that she was an adopted daughter. Her father started from Illinois in a covered wagon with her and her little brother. He was going to Kansas, but when he reached Kansas City he left one of the children in a bakery and the other in a butcher shop, saying he would return for them. But he did not return and Mr. Wilson, finding the little girl crying and deserted, felt sorry and took her home, where she grew to womanhood. Her maiden name was Triplett, but she married and went to West Virginia and was there when the death of her adopted father occurred. She returned to Kansas City and asked for some of the estate, but this was denied her, and she brought suit in Judge Gates' court to recover her share. A decision was made by Judge Gates July 18, 1901, which divided the property in three parts. One was to go to Mrs. J. D. Little, the daughter, another part to Mrs. Grantham, and the third to the three grandchildren. This decision was based on the belief that the son, Robert T. Wilson, died, leaving no heirs.

The defendants in that case, however, appealed to the supreme court, and last April it reversed Judge Gates' decision and barred Mrs. Grantham from receiving any portion of the property.

Besides the brick business building on Main street belonging to the estate of Mr. Wilson, there are three brick residences on Park avenue, between Elventh and Twelfth streets, a 100-foot lot with a fine house on it near Oliver on Twelfth street and other property. The petition for suit names the daughter, the three grandchildren and the administrator of the estate, A. N. Gossett, as defendants.

OKLAHOMA TO SHOW COUNTRY

Its Resources By Train Loaded With Grain and Fruit.

Enid, Okla., Oct. 26.—Twenty-five cars loaded with Oklahoma advertising left Enid last week en route to New York city. On the way to the nation's metropolis, four days will be spent at St. Louis, where arrangements have been made for the big train to be on exhibit in the World's fair. Stops will be made at all cities and towns between here and New York.

It is the famous Dixon Oklahoma train, divided into two sections, with brass bands, corps of speakers and a small army of advertising agents, representing twenty odd towns and cities of the territory. A carload of literature descriptive of Oklahoma is carried, which will be distributed along the lines traveled. The brass bands will draw the crowds and the speakers will issue verbal invitations to the people of the North and East to visit the "garden spot of the world."

Last June, Syl Dixon announced there would be an Oklahoma train leave Enid this month, and invited the territory cities to take part in the advertising enterprise. So many responded that all could not be cared for. The following were selected as being representative of the sections in which they were located: Enid, Pawnee, Arapaho, Clinton, Thomas, Hobart, Anadarko, Alva, Cherokee, Carmen, Cleo, Helena, Drummond, Carrier, Garber, Kremlin, Hunter, Perry, Wakita, Blackwell and Waukomis.

The twenty-five cars carry quantities of corn, wheat, flour, broom corn and other farm products, to be disposed of in an Eastern market. They are loaded with the cream of Oklahoma production this year. An exhibit car carries samples of fruit, vegetables and kindred farm products, and housed in a sleeper is the army of advertising gaents, who are expected to tell of the merits of the country and city sending them.

A DREAM AS MURDER CLUE

Officers Follow Identity Thus Revealed and Secure Evidence.

Midvale, N. J., Oct. 26.—Remarkable testimony about the imprint of a bloody hand on the wall of the room in which Mrs. Cenina Steward, a negress, was found murdered, was introduced at the coroner's inquest, and resulted in the jury holding Joseph Miller for the murder. The testimony showed the red outline fitted Miller's hand perfectly, and when that fact was added to other evidence the jury decided Mrs. Steward had come to her death at Miller's hands.

Testimony of a remarkable nature was introduced. One witness, the Rev. John W. Lewis testified that on the night of the murder he dreamed Mrs. Steward was being killed and that Miller was doing the killing.

Charles Hudson, a negro, testified he lived in Mrs. Steward's home in Haskell, and that a week ago he found her body on the floor of her room. It showed many stab wounds. Her baby four months old, was lying in the bed, under the covers, Hudson says he called Dr. Sippe and the two made a thorough examination of the room. On the floor, Hudson asserted, he found a razor he identified as belonging to Miller.

John Pitman, superintendent of the Haskell powder works, in which Miller was employed, testified that on the morning after the discovery of Mrs. Steward's body he found a pair of trousers and a slouch hat belonging to Miller drying in the cellar on a line. Miller never had used the cellar before, always washing his clothes outside and drying them in the yard.

Jetson Braxton, employed by Mr. Pitman, said that on the morning after the murder she found Miller at the door waiting to get into the kitchen. He got two pails of hot water and went into the cellar. Later she smelled smoke. Mrs. Pitman called down to him and he said he was burning rags.

"He told me," said Miss Braxton, "that he had heard terrible screams that night in the direction of Haskell and couldn't sleep. After he had heard about the murder I asked him if he was going to see Mrs. Steward's body and he said he didn't care to see any more murdered people, as he had seen a man murdered in Charleston and that was enough for him."

The Rev. John W. Lewis testified he had held services on Friday night of last week, and that Miller was not there, although he had been admonished by the pastor to attend regularly. That night the clergyman said he dreamed Mrs. Steward had been murdered and in his dream he saw Miller wounding her with a razor. Mr. Lewis asserted Miller had a bad reputation, and that women of the congregation frequently had complained of him.

Detective Lewis then told of the bloody imprint on the wall. He said that he had seen the outline of a man's hand traced in red, and after Miller was suspected of the murder and arrested he took the prisoner to the house. He placed Miller's hand against the outline, the detective said, and found the hand fitted the marks exactly. It took the jury only ten minutes to decide Miller should be held for the crime.

THE STEEL WORLD

Interested In Process to Revolutionize Manufacture of Steel.

Important Discoveries In Chemistry to Save Government Millions.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 26.—The steel world at present is greatly perturbed and interested over the sensational revelation recently made that two young men, chemists, George A. Chase and L. H. Gantt, of Philadelphia, the former of high standing, the latter a member of the humbler class of life, have discovered a new process for the making of steel, which will surely revolutionize its manufacture in this country and Europe, as the cost of production will be less than one-hif of what it is at present while the metal cast will be both hard and tenacious.

It is known that the Midvale Steel company of Philadelphia, has control of a new process for making armor plate at a cost very much below that of the Harvey or Krupp method used by the government for warships and that the secret process is believed to be that of the Chase-Gantt method.

These two young men have, until recently, been in the employ of the Midvale Steel company, and for ten years and more have been working on the problem, but, strange to say, each worked in secret, neither knowing the other was so engaged, thus adding a tinge of romance to the affair.

It is asserted that under the new method armor plate can be made at a profit of $100 a ton, while under contracts now in force the plates cost the government nearly six times that amount.

It is probable that the Krupp monopoly in the manufacture of armor plate for warships soon will be broken, in which event the government will save in the neighborhood of $1,50,000 on work now in sight. The Midvale Steel company, which is under on these contracts or been able to fill them at a profit if it had not been for the discovery of the new and much cheaper process of armor plate manufacture.

If the Midvale people are in possession of this new patented secret for the manufacture of steel, there is nothing to prevent them from making all the armor plate of that kind their plant can turn out.

That would virtually mean the invalidation of the contracts which the Carnegie and Bethlehem steel companies have with the Krupp corporation, giving them the exclusive right to make Krupp armor in the United States. The government, in its contracts with the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies, agrees to pay royalties if necessary, but not otherwise.

The Carnegie and Bethlehem people, the ordnance officers understand, would be glad to have the government show that it can get armor plate such as the Krupp process produces without first having bought the secret from Krupp, as that will relieve them from the payment of royalties.

The Midvale Steel company is supposed to be a rival of the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies.

Chase and Gantt several years ago started to study the problem of making steel, each working secretly and unknown to the other, despite the fact that both men were on the pay roll of the Midvale Steel company.

Gantt dreamed of a steel that burglars could not drill, while Chase, a clever chemist, thought only of unpierceable armor plate. Curiously enough, neither thought of the other's use of steel. Chase was a graduate of the university of Pennsylvania in the class of '85, being next to the youngest member. For years he studied and dreamed over an armor plate that would displace that now in use, for, after all is said, the present method of making armor plate is expensive and uncertain, producing no especially uniform results.

The problem was, intrinsically, a simple one. It was the object of the steelmaker to make a steel that was hard enough to repel the shot of the enemy, yet soft enough to be tenacious, so as not to split or crack. The armor maker tried to make a plate that possessed two different and opposing qualities—hardness and tenacity. This is done at the Carnegie and Bethlehem plants by casting the steel and then treating it subsequently so that, by rolling or blow pipe, the outer surface is hardened, while the inner remains soft. This method is expensive and uncertain, and the price demanded—$600 a ton—is not excessive, considering the time and labor involved.

Knowing these facts, Chase endeavored to cast steel that would be hard on one side and soft on the other. It seemed like an utter impossibility, but he kept at it for years until, finally, he developed his method and applied to Washington for a patent. His ideas were so revolutionary and so far from the conceptions of the men in authority that his application was refused, and he was obliged to go to Washington and teach the men there exactly what he was able to do. Then he was granted "basic patents" covering the application of his method—not merely to steel, but to all metals.

While he was working with the governmental experts, Chase found that there was another man with the same ideas applying for patents. To his surprise it turned out to be a fellow-worker at Midvale—Gantt—and instead of fighting each other's claims, they combined and the process is now called the "Chase-Gantt" method.

Gantt's idea of steel of varying tenacity and hardness was to its use in vaults and safes. It is a well-known fact that in drilling steel, if the drill strikes softer steel, its speed is increased quickly and the drill is broken off. This branch of the business was quickly developed and sold to a safe company. Midvale not being interested in this line of work.

It is impossible to describe to the laity exactly what the process is, but in simple terms it consists in the casting of steel, hard on the outside, soft on the inner. This is done by the use of certain selected sands, whose composition and proportions are a strict secret, but whose properties are such that in the castings, the different forms of steel are produced in one piece, hard on the outside, soft on the inner.

This is a remarkable achievement—beyond belief years ago, and apparently beyond belief even yet at Bethlehem, where the steel cast is all of on character, being manipulated later. The significance of this method of casting steel is scarcely grasped by the unprofessional mind. It means the saving of time, labor and all other forms of expenses.

This fact injects many phases into the steelmaking world. Bethlehem, bought recently by Schwab, is largely profitable owing to its contracts with the government, but armor-plate at $100 a ton would make the Lehigh concern see bankruptcy worse than it has already experienced.

RESTRICTING PROSPECTORS

Must Have $5000 and Furnish $2000 Bond to Government.

Washington, Oct. 26.—A questionable practice has been inaugurated in the matter of leases of oil lands owned by Indians. It is being done by order of Secretary Hitchcock, and is in the form of a letter.

This order requires the officials who are charged with the duty of making the leases to require the prospective lessee to show a certificate of deposit for $5000. If the man who wants to lease land for the purpose of satisfying himself what there is or is not oil where he suspects it may be found cannot show such a certificate of deposit, he may not have the lease.

The applicant does not discover this at the outset. All he gets when he makes application for the rules and regulations is a copy of the statutes that may apply and a copy of the rules formulated by the head of the department.

The letter requiring the exhibition of a certificate of deposit of $5000 he learns about when just about ready to close the deal—not before. Ninety per cent of the men who have drilling tools are not able to make such an exhibition of idle money, and they are the ones who develop new territory. But for them there would be no "wild-catting," as the drilling of wells in strange territory is known among oil producers.

As a rule a driller tries to keep his "string" of tools at work all the time. When he has no contracts he goes into the business of prospecting in any part of the country except Indian Territory and other Indian reservations.

If he has a desire to do work in those parts of the country he must find a backer who has much idle money. He must find a man like Col. J. M. Guffey, of Pittsburg, or one of the scores of underlying companies which constitute what is known as the "Standard Guffey."

It is a notorious fact that the Standard is not anxious to have new territory developed. Whenever or wherever a wildcat well is found to produce oil in paying quantities it means that the Standard must make arrangements to stifle it or grab it.

The impression conveyed to applicants for Indian land leases is that the showing of $5000 on deposit in a bank is merely for the purpose of establishing their responsibility. The flimsiness of such a pretense is evident when it is remembered that a bank account is subject to checks payable on sight.

Having made the $5000 showing, the applicant must give a bond in the sum of $2000 for the faithful performance of the contract between himself and the Indians made on behalf of the latter by the government of the United States. Subordinates of Secretary Hitchcock have the power to say whether the bond offered is a good and sufficient one, but even if they had not that power, the interests of the Indians would be safeguarded by still another official, named Schoenfeld, to whom all leases are submitted for approval or rejection.

Without his approval the lease is not sent to the agent. The man who wants the lease stops at that point, and he loses all the work he has done, no matter how good a faithful performance bond he may be able to give. The $5000 proposition may not have been made for the purpose of favoring the Standard, but it does, and Secretary Hitchcock can learn the fact easily if he does not already know it.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

Rheumatism Cured.

Mr. Michael Doran, Youngstown, Ohio, says:

"I suffered for a long time with acute Rheumatism in my knee. I tried all kinds of remedies, including an expensive course of electric treatment,-all in vain. At the suggestion of my druggist I took a bottle of Paracamph to try. The effect of its use was magical. I got relief at once and after using three or four bottles believe I am permanently cured. It is a wonderful remedy, and upon my advice a number of my friends have tried Paracamph, and the verdict is unanimous that it is all it is claimed to be. I come of my own accord with this statement because Paracamph is a blessing." Sincerely,

"MICHAEL DORAN."

HE LOOKED ON HIS OWN GRAVE

William P. Walsh Has Not Solved the Mystery Yet.

Troy, N. Y., Oct. 26.—William P. Walsh, of this city, visited the rural cemetery last week and there looked upon his own newly made grave. He is the freight-delivery clerk of the Citizens' line of steamboats plying between Troy and New York.

In relating the circumstances, Mr. Walsh said:

"In 1855, while I was at sea as a sailor, my folks purchased a lot in the cemetery, and my father, mother, sister and a brother are buried therein. This week I paid a visit to their graves and the first thing that met my gaze was a newly made grave. I knew that four of the family rested there, but not heard of a fifth. I called the cemetery keeper and asked him who was buried there.

"'William Walsh,' replied the keeper.

"'And how long has he been dead?' I asked.

"'About six weeks,' said the keeper.

"'Where did he die?'

"'At one of the hospitals in the city.'

"'Well,' I said, 'I'm William Walsh; it is my family lot; my parents and brother and sister are buried here, but I did not know until now that I was.'

"The keeper came near fainting."

Wednesday Mr. Walsh called on the undertaker who had buried the body, but he did not appear to know anything about the identity of that body.

"Yesterday when I revisited the cemetery," Walsh said, "the undertaker and the cemetery authorities had been there and had taken up the body and placed it in another lot. This is not the first time I have been reported dead, but it's the first time I ever looked upon my grave."

REGISTER MANY

Over 1300 Voters Added Their Names to the Books.

Number Now Exceeds the Total For Two Years Ago.

The total registration in the city up to date falls about 200 short of the 10,000 mark which is considered a normal registration for a general election.

One chance yet remains to those who have not yet placed their names on the books, as the boards will meet again next Saturday from 6 a. m. until 9 p. m.

The registration yesterday was fairly heavy, especially in the Second and Fifth wards, which showed a fight registration at the primaries. The total registration for the day was between 1300 and 1400. Three precincts are still to be heard from, but they can be pretty closely estimated. The missing precincts are the third of the First, the first of the Sixth and the fourth of the Eighth. Estimating them at 60, 10 and 20 respectively, the total for the day was just 1500.

The total number registered at the present time is 8979, which is 200 in excess of the total numebr registered in the three days, two years ago, and over 1000 in excess of the number registered in the first two days, two years ago.

The comparative tables for 1904 and 1902 for the first two days of registration, taken by wards, is as follows:

	1902	1904
First	1052	1119
Second	1096	1146
Third	892	925
Fourth	682	796
Fifth	1021	1127
Sixth	742	891
Seventh	952	1141
Eighth	791	834
Totals	7077	8979

The total number registered in the three days of registration in 1902 was 7871. About 800 voters registered on the third day two years ago. This year it is hoped to bring the total registration up to the 10,000 mark, which will require a registration of nearly 2000 persons next Saturday.

The following table shows the registration by precincts, yesterday, and at the primaries:

West Duluth TO FORCE SMITH

Creditors Begin Bankrupt Proceedings Against Former Banker.

Mr. Smith Will Make No Fight—Other News.

Involuntary proceeding in bankruptcy against Hansen Smith and James P. Smith, as co-partners in the defunct Merchants' bank of West Duluth, were started yesterday afternoon by the filing of the necessary petition and papers with the clerk of federal court.

Brown Mallough & Son, C. T. Fancett and C. O. Berquist are the creditors whose signatures are attached to the petition, which recites that up to August 14, 1903, the defendants were conducting a banking institution in West Duluth, known as the Merchants' bank, and that on that day the bank closed its doors never since reopening for business.

The petition asserts that when the bank's doors were closed amounts exceeding $25,000 were due creditors, only ten per cent of which has since been paid. This amount was paid the creditors on Nov. 20, 1903. Hansen Smith is described as a speculator and broker while James P. Smith is said to be in the real estate and brokerage business. Each of the partners, it is asserted, is involved, and the creditors claim to have probable claims against them amounting in the aggregate to more than $500 in excess of the securities.

Brown Mallough & Son, grocers, are said to have been the largest depositors when the bank closed its doors. Their balance on deposit was then $1,950.61. The claim of C. T. Fancett is placed at $320.92, and C. O. Berquist claims that the sum of $650.64 is due him.

The Smiths are cited to appear before Judge Page Morris on Nov. 1 and make answer to the petition, and it is also ordered that they shall appear November 9 and show cause why they should not be adjudged bankrupt. The petition asserts that the Smiths committed an act of bankruptcy on October 8, 1904, when they delivered a letter, directed to Brown Mallough & Son, in which they admit they are bankrupt and unable to pay their debts and, that they are willing to be adjudged bankrupts on that ground.

Hansen Smith has made a statement to the effect that he is sorry his creditors have decided to force him into bankruptcy, and says he does not intend to fight the bankruptcy proceedings.

"I have done everything in my power to prevent their taking this step," he said, "knowing that if such action were taken those who have claims against the estate will lose money. If given a fair chance I believe I could pay all the debts of the estate. I do not believe the action of the creditors a wise one."

At a meeting of creditors in September each claimant received a letter from Mr. Smith asking for time to arrange his affairs. He maintained that by allowing him time he would be able to realize on securities. The extension of thirty days then granted expired about two weeks ago. It since became known that the petition of the three creditors was in the hands of Attorney H. H. Phelps, trustee, and Mr. Smith issued another statement, asking for an extension of time. This last appeal did not accomplish the desired end, however, as is shown by the filing of the petition yesterday.

FOR A CITY DOCK.

Plans For One In West Duluth Drawn Up.

City Engineer McGilvray has drawn up plans for the proposed West Duluth city dock and they have been submitted to the owners of property at the foot of Ramsey street, where it is planned to have the dock built. A conference will be arranged for in the near future between the property owners in question and the proper committee from the common council, to ascertain what can be done towards getting the necessary land for a dock site. It is understood that a considerable sum has been levied for work similar to this next year, and that there will be no difficulty relative to building the structure if the desired site is obtained. It is thought likely the owners of property will be willing to deed enough ground for the purpose.

WHY APPENDICITIS?

Why is appendicitis so common today?

Because we have got into the pernicious habit of eating too fast.

Dr. Curtis, the great authority on this disease, says: "Appendicitis often follows the eating of a very hasty, or particularly large or indigestible meal."

After carelessly following a foolish custom, you can insure your safety by taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

It is an accepted scientific truth, which admits of no dispute, that if you will only keep your digestive apparatus in good order, you will never suffer from this dread disease, which, at best, means a weakening operation, with long weeks wasted in bed, and big doctor's and surgeon's bills to pay as souvenirs.

Keep your appendix in health by the proper use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, whenever you have laid yourself open to danger by overeating, and upon the least sign of stomach or intestinal trouble, for otherwise, at any time, this dangerous disease may lay you low.

The curative influence of this great medicine is quickly shown in the gentle, soothing effect it has on all inflamed conditions of any part of the digestive tract.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets tone all parts up to a proper condition of perfect health, and regulate their functions into a proper working state.

They also make away with all the causes of irritation, inflammation or indigestion, by helping to dissolve, digest and assimilate, or put to proper use, all the food which is lying around in odd corners of your digestive apparatus, fermenting, rotting and curdling, like so much garbage in a dirty sink.

In these natural and perfectly simple ways, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets restore all sufferers, from any form of dyspeptic trouble, to health.

They are safe and reliable. They never fail to relieve and cure, quickly and permanently.

Use them, and you need nevery worry about your appendix vermiformix.

CURLING CLUB.

Another Delay In Selection of a Rink Site.

The meeting of the Western Curling club of Duluth, in the office of L. A. Barnes last evening extended over nearly three hours' time. A spirited discussion as to the selection of the site for the erection of the proposed curling rink was indulged in. One site had been decided upon by the committee, but this proved unsatisfactory to some of the members, and it was finally determined to appoint another committee to investigate the matter. Accordingly Henry Gifford, William Chestock and George Cruikshank were named to look further into the matter and report back to a meeting of the officers of the association next Friday evening.

The choice of a site lies between the corner of Fifty-seventh avenue west and Bristol street and the corner of Grand and Fifty-fourth avenue west. Some of the members were in favor of purchasing a site, but a motion to this effect was voted down. It is feared that as a result of last night's controversy the rink will not be ready for use until early in December.

MORE VANDALISM.

Miscreants Tear Down Building on Ramsey Street.

Vandals are again getting in their work in West Duluth. Their latest work was the tearing down of the little building erected at the corner of Fifty-fourth avenue west and Ramsey street to be used as a paper distributing station by The Herald. The police are now working on the matter and think they have a clue as to who the miscreants were. When caught they will be punished as much as the law will allow. An effort will be made to hold them up as an example, so that no one else will care to follow in their footsteps. It is claimed that more vandalism of this nature has been reported in West Duluth during the last few months than from any other part of the city, and the police have now determined to put a stop to all such unlawful practices.

FINDS FORTUNE

Only to Hear the Call of Death.

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 26.—With the fortune for which he had spent the best years of his life searching finally exposed before him, Frederick Erdman, 73 years old, felt death approaching and left the gold fields of Cape Nome in a race for home, hoping to see his relatives again before the end came.

He finished the race here and collapsed in the Panhandle depot, after leaving the train. Relatives knew he was coming, but did not know on what train, so there was nobody to meet him. Hours later he was found there, almost unconscious. He was taken to the home of Rudolph Bernat, but died before the arrival of a physician.

Erdman went to Alaska thirty years ago. Once he was successful. He loaded his gold dust on a dog sled and started back along the trail. Crossing treacherous ice the sled broke through, the gold and dogs were lost, and Erdman, again a poor man, thought himself lucky to escape alive.

Long years were spent in prospecting. Then came the news to friends at home that he had struck wonderful "pay dirt" and was working his claim. While he delved the call of death came and he abandoned the claim to try to reach home and kindred before the end.

JACOB THOUGHT

He Was Buncoed at Express Auction Sale.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 26.—Fortune's wheel, for Jacob Greenberg, rolled on and on and never once did the little gilt ball drop in the proper pocket when Jacob attended the Wells-Fargo Express company's auction of uncalled-for packages Saturday.

From 10 in the morning until late at night the express company sold, "sight and unseen," packages of various sizes, shapes and colors, for which there were no owners.

Jacob Greenberg was there when the doors opened, and when they closed at night it took a dray to get his purchases to his home.

In his auction debauch Jacob had spent one whole day and $76.90 of his hard-earned money. When he reached home, and, with anticipation, opened the packages, he found that instead of having several thousand dollars' worth of property his belongings would count up in value to about 20 cents.

For $76.90 this is what Greenberg purchased: One dozen packages of Dr. Thomas' uncooked bread at $3.50; one bottle of stove polish, $2.50; two trunks filled with old clothes and rags, one of which cost him $7.50 and the other $5.50; one keg of stones, one box of mixed candy, a volume on corporation securities, a handax, a woman's hat and waist, three men's shirts and a number of dishes of different shapes and patterns, with other things of a similar character.

Later he appeared at the office of the company and said that he had been buncoed nd would take it up to the courts because he had an idea that some of the bundles he had purchased had been fixed up on purpose for the auction.

WHEAT IS LOWER

Northwestern Markets Lead In Another Decline In Price.

News Not at All Bearish Though Demand Continues Poor.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 26.—The wheat market had another break today, and Minneapolis was again the weakest market, the December there falling 1½c against 1¼c in Duluth, ⅝c in Chicago and ¾c in New York. There seemed to be no reason for the decline except a natural heaviness. The receipts were lower than a year ago, and news was rather more bullish than bearish. The cash demand continues poor in this market, the Eastern inquiry showing no better tone. The foreign bids for Manitoba wheat this morning, however, indicated a firmer feeling abroad.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d higher, Paris unchanged to ¼c lower, and Antwerp unchanged.

Car receipts at Duluth were 199, against 173 last year, and at Minneapolis 488, against 597 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 687, against 770 last year. Chicago received 68, against 91 last year. Winnipeg received 229 cars.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,043,800 bushels, last year, 1,289,436 bushels. Shipments 327,962 bushels, last year, 685,289 bushels.

Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 31,000 bushels.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d higher. In the Chicago market December corn closed ⅝-¾c higher. December oats closed ¼c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 291,350 bushels, last year 645,830 bushels. Shipments, 173,584 bushels, last year, 772,703 bushels.

Clearances were 102,000 bushels.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was fairly active. The December option opened unchanged at $1.17, sold at $1.17¼, a few moments later and fell to $1.16⅞ at 9:45. It then bulged to $1.16¾ at 10, reacted to $1.16⅝ at 10:08 and sold at $1.17⅛ at 10:37. It again fell to $1.16½ at 10:45, sold at $1.16⅞ at 11:20, at $1.16⅝-¾ at 11:39 and at $1.17 at noon. From that point it had a steady decline to $1.15⅝ at 12:55 and closed at $1.15¾, a loss of 1¼c. The May option lost the same, and closed an even 1c below December.

In cash wheat the price of No. 2 northern is the principal thing of interest. For that grade to arrive 4c under December is readily paid but for the same grade in store bids at the close could not be obtained within closer than 5c under. The price was closed nominally at 4c under, however. No. 1 continues at 3c over.

Flax was very dull and a little firmer. All options advanced ¼c except November which was up ⅛c.

Oats had an advance of ¼c.

Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 hard, $1.20¾; No. 1 northern, $1.18¾; No. 2 northern, $1.11¾; in store, No. 1 northern, $1.18¾; No. 2 northern, $1.10¾N; durum, No. 1, $1.01; No. 2, $1; December, $1.15⅝; May, $1.14⅜. Flax—To arrive, $1.14⅜; on track, $1.14⅜; October, $1.14⅜; November, $1.14⅝; December, $1.14¾; May, $1.17¼. Oats—To arrive, 29½c; on track, 29¼c. Rye—To arrive, 79c; on track, 79c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Fair Demand Holds Price of Wheat Steady.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—A fair demand from commission houses and shorts held the wheat market steady today. Speculative trading lacked the support of the recent strength of the cash markets, the demand for spot wheat being not so urgent. December opened a shade lower to a shade higher at $1.14½ to $1.14⅝. After selling up to $1.14⅞, the price declined to $1.14⅝, but rallied again to $1.14⅝. May opened unchanged to ⅛c up at $1.13⅜ to $1.13⅝. An advance to $1.13⅝ was followed by a reaction to $1.13⅜, but later the price sold up to $1.13⅝. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 750 cars, against 776 cars last week and 861 cars a year ago.

In sympathy with a sharp decline at Minneapolis the wheat market here broke severely late in the day. On liberal liquidation, December sold off from $1.15⅝ to $1.13⅝@¾. May declined to $1.12⅜. The market closed with both deliveries showing a loss of ⅝ final quotations on December being at $1.13⅝. May closed at $1.12⅝.

A brisk demand for cash corn had a stimulating effect on speculative trading the market holding strong in spite of excellent weather conditions. Firm cables and smaller receipts were additional bull factors. December opened ¼c to ⅜c up at 49⅜c to 49½c. After selling at 49¾c, the price reacted to 49⅝c. Local receipts were 72 cars, five of contract grade.

The market became stronger later in the day, there being a disposition manifested to bull the December option. After advancing to 50c, December closed with a gain of ⅝@¾c at 49¾@⅞c.

Decreasing receipts and a good cash demand caused a firm oats market. The strength of corn also had considerable effect. December opened ¼c higher at 29½c and firmed up to 29¾c. Local receipts were 67 cars.

On a fair demand from shorts provisions were firm. Sentiment was rather bearish at the start as a result of a 10c reduction in hog prices at the yards, but an initial loss was soon regained. After opening off 2½c, January pork advanced to $12.37½. Lard and ribs were each down 2½c, at $7.07½ and $6.40. Later lard sold up to $7.15 and ribs to $6.45.

Close: Wheat—October, $1.12⅞; December, $1.13⅝@1.14; May, $1.12¾; July, 98c. Corn—October, 54c; December, 49¾@⅞c; May, 46¾@½c; July, 45¾@⅞c. Oats—December, 29⅜; May, 31⅜c; July, 31¼@⅜c; October, 30. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Broomhall cabled the advance in cables this morning caused by the demand for Russian cargoes for nearby positions, owing to nervousness over political situation. The Kansas City Star estimates 33 per cent of the crop, or 21,000,000 bus, still remaining in Kansas. Cash business in all markets reported slow and inclined to ease off. The market today at no time showed any tendency. In the last half hour wheat sold off rather sharply from no apparent reason. Considering the flour situation and the slow cash demand we still incline to the belief that it will be hard to maintain present high prices for wheat. The political situation is a factor that must be watched carefully. Anything unfavorable from the other side will be apt to cause a very sharp advance here. The market is two-sided and we believe traders should be content with moderate profits on either side of the market.

Corn—The market ruled very firm throughout the session. There was good buying by prominent cash and elevator people. The cash demand can be called good. While it is not very urgent as yet, when we consider the slow husking returns and what we have ecelved showing a rather disappointing condition, we feel that money cannot be made on the short side of corn.

Oats—This market influenced largely by the strength in the corn pit. Oats have been under pressure for some time. There is a fair cash demand which we think likely will improve. The action of the market today had no special significance aside from some of the cash and elevator people getting out of hedges. We incline to the idea that oats should be bought on any set-back.

* * *

W. S. Crosby, Chicago: The fine frost everywhere we are now having over the corn belt will be likely to increase the husking of corn. So far as it has already proceeded the tendency of the returns is a little disappointing. I think it is well to keep in mind that we have all slept under blankets all summer and that while the estimates of such experts as Jones and Inglis may be somewhat extreme, yet they doubtless saw something in their examination on which to base it. The supplies of old corn are exhausted and it is getting to be a scarce article. There is so little of the new crop yet cribbed that practically all the selling of May corn is short stuff. A discount of 6¾ or 7 cents is pretty big odds in favor of the buyer. The speculative buying in this market the last two days is of a much more encouraging quality. I do not believe it will hurt to buy May corn.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Yesterday's reactionary market was extended a little further but these little drives must not be mistaken. They are made to lead the bears on and offer opportunities for picking up cheaper wheat. Foreign market ignored our last decline and Liverpool sent higher quotations. Several points furnished very strong bull news regarding small contract stocks and at Chicago there were only 256,000 bushels deliverable without a penalty attached. Minneapolis mills are making large shipments of flour which discounts the statement of no flour orders and talk of closing down mills. Oregon wheat continues to be sold to southeast mills until there is no more available. Balance to be used in California, and increasing trade with the Orient. The situation abroad is still critical and Broomhall cables much improvement in buying of nearby cargoes. The market will even though most important conditions are bullish, show occasional weak spots like today, but they will be only temporary and rallies will follow from this on as they have before and for the same reasons that have given us an advancing market for months past.

St. Louis: The St. Louis stock of wheat is practically exhausted and there are inquiries here today for No. 2 red for Eastern shipments.

FAIRBANKS IN ILLINOIS

Makes Speeches at Decatur, Springfield and Other Cities.

Dectaur, Ill., Oct. 26.—Senator Fairbanks' special train swept over the corn belt of Illinois today, his first speech being made at Decatur. Senator Fairbanks did not arise until a short time before Decatur was reached, although at several points along the way there were crowds waiting an opportunity to greet them. The day's itinerary includes addresses at Springfield, Jacksonville and Griggsville, Ill., and a night meeting at Hannibal, Mo. The senator was greeted by a good sized crowd at Decatur, and from a platform near the station he spoke for ten minutes.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 26.—Senator Charles W. Fairbanks addressed an immense audience in the Springfield auditorium today.

In his opening speech at Decatur Senator Fairbanks said to the school children, who came up while he was speaking:

"It will not be long until, in the course of nature, we shall step aside and leave free the way to the boys and girls who are now before us. We can teach them no better lesson than the lesson of Republicanism. They will do well to learn from those who followed the cause of Abraham Lincoln and William McKinley the true significance of Republican policies."

AT CLOQUET.

Cloquet, Minn., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Cloquet football team is rapidly coming to the front rank, and if they keep up the fast gate they have now struck they will surely land in first place at the end of the season. Their speedy style of play netted them a pretty victory over the Duluth Gophers a week ago, and last Sunday they went out of their class and played a tie game with Company A of Duluth. Company A team was composed of older, heavier and more experienced men than the Cloquet team, and everybody predicted a speedy victory for them. Nevertheless the locals went into the game with a rush and played so fast that they kept the big fellows guessing all the time. Although Company A did not show much of their offense, they held the ball just long enough to demonstrate that the locals, though light, had a stout defense as well as swift mode of attack. Cloquet averaged about 142 pounds, and Company A about 160. Company A had three or four Duluth central high school stars on their team, and although they did not win the game they left behind a feeling of good fellowship. They played good, clean ball and proved to be gentlemen both on and off the field.

TRADING IN STEELS

Heavy Early at Higher Prices But Advance Was Lost.

Market Yielded In Final Hour and Closing Was Easy.

New York, Oct. 26.—The feature of the irregular opening stock market today was the enormous supporting orders in some of the low class stocks and the heavy dealings in United States Steel stocks. Six thousand shares of United States Steel preferred sold at 81½ and 81⅝, compared with 81½ last night, and the common stock rose a ½ on the purchase of 3700 shares. Ontario & Western on the sale of 4000 shares sold at 46¾ and 47, compared with 45½ last night. Thirty-five hundred shares of Rock Island sold at 32 and 32⅝, compared with 31¼ last night, and Erie and Chicago Great Western rose 1¼ on the sale of 1,500 shares each. Colorado Fuel was up 1⅜ on the sale of 2500 shares and Union Pacific was up ⅝ on the sale of 3000 shares. Peoples' Gas gained a point. Elsewhere there were irregular changes of a small fraction.

Strong buying began in many quarters following the initial dealings and the market became buoyant in spots. Union Pacific advanced to within a fraction of yesterday's top price touching 111⅝. All of the opening strong features extended their gains considerably and by 10:30 o'clock improvements had been established of 2⅜ in Colorado Fuel, 2¾ in O. & W., 2 in Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred, 1¾ in Erie and Union Pacific and 1 to 1½ in Atchison, Northwestern St. Paul, Reading, Louisville & Nashville, Kansas & Texas preferred D, and H. Amalgamated Copper, Tennessee Coal Sugar, Consolidated Gas, Manhattan and Metropolitan Street railway. Erie first and second preferred and Rock Island preferred were under early pressure in contrast to the strength of the common stocks but they later improved. Pressed Steel Car and General Electric fell a point but quickly recovered.

After 10:30 the market began to yield and Reading was forced below last night. Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, O. & W., Erie Tennessee Coal, Sugar and other active stocks reacted a point and United States Steel preferred fell to 80¾.

The selling movement reached through the list pretty thoroughly and wiped out the gains. Chesapeake & Ohio, Mexican Central, National of Mexico preferred, Erie second preferred, and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis were forced to 1 to 1½ under last night before the force of the selling exhausted itself. The market steadied when Missouri Pacific was lifted a point over last night, but broke again under renewed offerings on the advance and went lower than before. Southern Pacific, and Metropolitan Street railway fell 2 points below last night, United States Steel preferred 1¼ and St. Paul, Pennsylvania, Reading, Tennessee Coal a point or more. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Covering by room shorts on the rise in Ontario & Western to 47¼ rallied the market a fraction. Fresh liquidation met the advance and the market fell back in some cases to a lower level than before, notably in Union Pacific, St. Paul and United States Steel preferred. Union Pacific got as low as 109. Overnight losses of 1 to 2 were scored by Norfolk & Western, Northwestern, the Colorado Southern stocks, Erie second preferred, Brooklyn Transit, Metropolitan Securities, Manhattan and a number of minor stocks. The market rallied strongly before 1 o'clock with recoveries from the lowest running a point in Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, St. Paul, Rock Island, Erie, Reading, Louisville & Nashville and Manhattan. Tennessee Coal rallied 1 to a point over last night. The market quieted at the rally.

The market showed hesitation for a time and backed and filled and then advanced with more confidence on large buying orders. Rock Island was lifted 2¼ over last night and some of the other leaders a fraction, while losses from last night's prices were pretty fully restored.

The advance halted during the final hour, but there was no renewal of heavy liquidation. Virginia-Carolina Chemical rose 1, Chicago Terminal 2, the preferred 2½ and Great Northern preferred 1¼, while Toledo, St. Louis & Western lost 2 and Corn products 2⅜. Prices yielded in the final dealings and the closing was easy and rather dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is holding strong. So far we doubt if there has been much pyramiding. The volume of business has been large for some time, and stocks have been distributed very well. While we believe in higher prices later on, owing to sound business conditions, improved demand for steel and iron and a large export business for corn, steel and copper, we feel, in view of the large advance we have had without any setback, that one should be cautious about buying at the top. Reactions will come on which we would buy good stocks. The political situation in this country cannot be called a factor.

* * *

New York to Coe Commission Co: The activity in Colorado Fuel was explained yesterday in messages from New York to La Salle street houses to the effect that the property was to be taken over by the United States Steel. No explanation was made as to the time or the terms of the transfer. This report on Colorado Fuel has been circulated nearly every time there has been any movement in the stock since the United States Steel company was organized. Negotiations looking to the sale have been on more than once, but have always ended before. It is possible that under the Rockefeller control of Colorado Fuel, however, there may be a different outcome if there are any present efforts to turn the property over to the larger corporation. Mr. Rockefeller's views have greater weight in the corporation than have those of John W. Gates or any of the other big ones who have tried to effect the trade.

* * *

Dick Bros. to B. E. Baker: O. & W. is being steadily bought in a way that gives color to the stories of a 2 or 2½ per cent guarantee. There is no great pressure to sell. Commission houses are not selling any stocks. The new strength of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific is encouraging general buying.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Our market was again broad and active with prices practically unchanged from last night's close. The exception was Old Dominion, which advanced 3½ points and closed at the top. Both the Boston and New York markets had the appearance of being very weak, but the way prices stood up shows that the buying is good. The majority of people here are very bullish on the situation but most of them have already sold their stocks and would like to see a reaction in order to get in again. The feeling was strong on the metal situation and that will prevent any extensive break in the copper stocks and that any further rise in copper will put prices higher than they have yet been. Do not be afraid to buy any of the good coppers whenever weak.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $144,453,732; gold, $78,298,906; silver, $10,211,747.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, Oct. 26.—Close—Money on call steady, 1¾@2½ per cent; closing bid, 2 per cent; offered at 2½ per cent. Time loans easy and dull; 60 days 3 per cent; 90 days 3¼ per cent; six months, 3½ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 4@5 per cent. Silver certificates, 58¼c. Mexican dollars, 46¼c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds heavy.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Oct. 26.—The cotton market opened steady in tone at a decline of 2 points to an advance of 2 points. Liverpool cables were slightly disappointing and the market at the beginning of the call felt this influence while later an improved demand from outside sources influenced by yesterday's ginners' reports, became evident and the market during the first few minutes of trading showed firmness with prices working up to a net gain of about 4 to 7 points. But the advance offerings increased and the market turned easier. New Orleans and Liverpool seemed to be selling here, the latter probably on a crop estimate of 12,000,000 bales or more, and at the end of the first hour the market was unsettled and 5 to 7 points net lower.

Spot closed quiet, middling uplands, 10.05; middling gulf, 10.30. Sales 627 bales. Futures closed steady: October, 9.52; November, 9.52; December, 9.66; January, 9.75; February, 9.80; March, 9.84; April, 9.86; May, 9.90; June, 9.93; July, 9.97.

MIDWAY HORSE MARKET.

Minnesota Transfer: St. Paul—Barrett & Zimmerman report that the market ruled sluggish on all classes of horses, but heavy loggers. Horses weighing from 1600 to 1800 pounds were principally sought. Values:

WARD AMES, JR., WINS.

Defeats E. P. Towne In Fall Championship Contest.

In the fall championship match at the North Land club links yesterday there was some very pretty scoring between Ward Ames, Jr., and E. P. Towne, with the former the victor. The match was a tie during the first 17 holes, Mr. Ames getting the better in the 18th hole, with 1 up. It was a very pretty game and being won by such a narrow margin, shows the evenness of the work of the two contestants.

Both players were attended by unusually competent caddies, L. J. Hopkins acting for Ames and E. P. Alexander for Towne. Incidental to the regular duties, the caddies gave advice to the players and coached them in lively fashion.

The trophy for the championship is the cup which has been played for twice before, T. W. Heopes and L. J. Hopkins being previous winners. To obtain permanent possession a player must win it three times.

In the finals for the single club championship, E. P. Towne is to play W. W. Walker.

NEW STORM LIGHTS.

Arc Lamps to Be Used at the Weather Station.

A system of arc lights to be used in warning lake vessels of expected storms is to be installed at the hilltop weather bureau. The idea is original with Forecaster Richardson, and his station will be the first to be authorized to put in operation such a system.

At the present time kerosene light warnings are displayed on a tower at dock No. 5 on the bay front, but this is not entirely satisfactory. A red and white arc lamp, with powerful reflectors, will be placed in front of the weather bureau, and at night will be visible from all point in the harbor and from a considerable distance down the lake. A red light alone will signify high easterly winds and both the red and white displayed together may be taken as a warning of high westerly winds. The vessels in port will be expected to delay clearing or to shape their course in accordance with the storm signals displayed.

It is expected that the new system will be ready for use within a week. A telegram was received from Washington yesterday authorizing the installation.

DECLINE ON THE BOURSE.

Paris, Oct. 26.—The tone on the bourse today was heavy, the market became very feeble on bad London advices concerning the North sea incident and there was a general decline in prices. Internationals at the close were feeble. Russian imperial fcurs were quoted at 93.75 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 513.

BUNNELL CALLED

To Take Charge of the Republican State Campaign.

Hamlin and Martin Must Bow to the Duluth Man.

Minneapolis, Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Times today says that G. G. Hartley's representative has now taken charge of the Dunn campaign. The Times says:

There has been another shake-up in the Republican state central committee which threatens to widen the breach already existing between the numerous heads who are conducting the campaign for R. C. Dunn. Dissatisfied with the unsuccessful efforts of the managers to stem the tide of Johnson sentiment, both Chairman Conde Hamlin and Manager Martin have in reality been replaced by a new head.

The man who is now at the helm of the Dunn campaign is Mille Bunnell, of Duluth, who has practically taken charge of the hopeless task within the past day or two. To Mr. Bunnell has been delegated the work of bringing some sort of order out of the chaos in which the preceding managers have plunged, and his power is to exceed both Manager Martin and Chairman Hamlin.

Both Mr. Martin and Mr. Hamlin are to be retained at headquarters, but, according to the stories which emanated from the state committee's rendezvous in the Manhattan building over in St. Paul, the word of the Duluth newspaper man is to be law, and his instructions are to be followed without question. Mr. Martin will be retained in his capacity as an organizer, while Mr. Hamlin will, unless he resigns, be retained as chairman, but in name only.

Mr. Bunnell's first opportunity to assert his authority came yesterday, when it was up to the state committee to take some action with reference to James Peterson's determination to accept John Lind's challenge for a debate on Mr. Dunn's record.

Mr. Bunnell shared the opinion of his coworkers in that it was a most disastrous move on the part of Mr. Peterson, but when the Minneapolis man declared his intention of going ahead whether his action had the sanction of the committee or not, Mr. Bunnell came to the front as the manager-in-chief, and overruled both Mr. Martin and Mr. Hamlin.

The former managers have given out that the state committee had nothing to do with the debate, but Mr. Bunnell realized the futility of such a claim, and when there was no other alternative, he went ahead and made arrangements to suit himself, and he did not consult farther with Mr. Dunn's former managers in doing so. Mr. Bunnell simply entered into an agreement with Frank Day, chairman of the Democratic state committee, as to the terms of the debate, and when an agreement had been drawn up, the Duluth man signed the name of "Conde Hamlin, chairman," to it with an air of a man who was sure of his authority to do so.

The plans are to have the debate take place in Minneapolis next Saturday, at the International Auditorium, if the place can be secured, the expense to be divided between the Democratic and Republican county committees.

As a result of this farther turndown and humiliation, Chairman Conde Hamlin is said to be ready to cut loose from the management of the Dunn campaign and permit the new leaders to handle the situation the best they can. Chairman Hamlin has had very little to say since James Martin was installed at headquarters, and now that Mille Bunnell has been brought in to "save the day" he is not even consulted on matters of importance.

The change was the cause of considerable talk about headquarters yesterday, and the wisdom of it was doubted by many. It was admitted that Manager Martin had been a failure so far as lining up the Collins forces was concerned, and it has been acknowledged all along that Chairman Hamlin has accomplished practically nothing, yet in the face of these facts, it was argued that both of these men had done as well as anyone else could possibly have done under the adverse circumstances, and it was feared another change at this late date would result in a still farther loss to the already shattered support that is being held in line for Mr. Dunn.

Oscar Olson Loses Life Coupling Cars on Missabe Tracks.

His Head Is Crushed—Graduate of Duluth High School.

Oscar Olson, one of the members of last year's graduating class at the high school, and a former football player, was suddenly killed this morning while engaged in his duties as car checker on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern ore docks in Oneota.

The young man was engaged in coupling cars on the dock and through a misstep was caught between two of the cars. His skull was crushed in, and he died almost instantly. The body was taken to Stewart's undertaking rooms, where it awaits the inspection of the coroner.

The young man resided with his parents at 4125 West Sixth street. He graduated from the Central High school in the class of 1902 and was very popular among the students in the institution. He played end on the football team during his last year at school, and was considered one of the best men in that position that ever played on the team.

He has been employed by the Missabe road since leaving the high school, and was engaged in checking the ore cars when he met with the accident that resulted in his death.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

TALKS OF TRIP

Assistant United States Engineer Darling Back From St. Louis.

Duluth Has Strong Chance For 1906 Meeting of Engineers.

Assistant United States Engineer J. H. Darling returned yesterday from St. Louis, where he attended the exposition, and, more particularly the International Engineering congress, which was held under the auspices of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

"It would not be an easy matter to say anything particularly new about the exposition," said Mr. Darling this noon.

"Not but that there were plenty of new things to see, but the fact of the matter is there was so much that for one to begin to describe all he saw would be confusing. Considering its size, the St. Louis fair is of no more comparative interest than were the big expositions at Chicago and Buffalo. Of course it is on a large scale and there are more things to see. The fair will stand as a great educator, but like many others I only found out the best way to see it after I had already been there.

"The International Engineering congress was a great success. Men celebrated in the engineering world from every civilized nation on the globe were present. It is hardly probable that there was ever before so notable a gathering of civil engineers. The attendance is estimated at about 7000 and the sessions were held in the hall of congresses in the administration building on the exposition grounds. The congress lasted for one week. So many matters had to come before the convention that it was divided into sections each with a chairman and each section took up a subject and its discussions. At the closing of the convenion the several chairman made their reports. The papers that were read and the discussions of the same will be printed in the proceedings of the International Engineering congress and it is said that the matter presented will fill six large volumes.

"On the second day of the congress Maj. D. D. Gaillard's paper on 'The Harbors of Lake Superior, Particularly the Duluth-Superior Harbor,' was presented. It was an able treatise of the subject. Maj. Gaillard's conection with the Lake Superior district having given him ample opportunity to thoroughly inform himself about its harbors. Discussions on Maj. Gaillard's paper were presented by three members of the local office, Mr. Coleman, Mrs. Wadsworth and myself. The paper and the discussions will be part of the records of the congress.

"We attempted to convince the gathering of the claims of Duluth for the next convention, which will be held by the American Society of Civil Engineers next summer, but the city of Cleveland had been longer in the field and will probably secure the convention. A year ago Cleveland went after the 1904 convention and this year that city had the advantage on the ground that she had previously been turned down. The city of Cleveland worked hard for the 1904 meeting and every inducement was held out to the engineers to meet there in 1905. By a vote of 550 to 50, the engineers indicated their wishes. The selection of a site depends on the board of direction, composed of twelve members, but it is hardly likely that the board will decide against the wishes of the majority. The fact that Cleveland is centrally located, has ample transportation facilities and hotel accomodations worked in her favor, but I believe the canvass made for Duluth will give her a strong claim for the 1905 convention. The society is usually represented at the annual meetings by 400 to 500 members. When it came to a question of having things of interest to show engineers Duluth was in the lead of the other cities that competed for the 1905 convention."

Mr. Darling was accompanied by Mrs. Darling, and they spent several days visiting in Kansas and Iowa, before returning to Duluth.

GIRL FORESEES

The Death of Her Mother In a Dream.

New York, Oct. 26.—Mabel Roberts, a little girl, whose father is employed by the Lackawanna railroad in that city, dreamed last Friday night that her mother had died. The dream was so real she woke in fright and it was all her mother could do to comfort her. "Don't worry, Mabel, mamma is not going to leave you for ever so long. To dream of death is a sign some one is going to be married."

But on Saturday night the dream in which she saw her mother dead came to her again, and again, Mrs. Roberts tried to reassure her. She failed, however, and it was several hours before she could induce the child to go to bed. The father works at night and mother and daughter were alone in the house.

Just as dawn broke today the child awoke screaming, and, finding her mother missing from her place in bed, ran through the house calling wildly for her. At last she reached the parlor, there her mother was sitting in an arm chair. Her head was resting against the back of the chair. Apparently she was asleep.

"O, mamma, I dreamed again you were dead and I couldn't find you," cried the child hysterically.

The form in the chair did not move. "Mamma, don't you hear me? Wake up, it's Mabel."

Neighbors going early to work heard the words as they passed the door. They paused and then they heard the child scream: "O, mamma, you're dead."

Neighbors tried to get into the house but failed. All was silent inside, and, wondering what the matter could be, they went their ways.

The father got home from work about seven o'clock. When he opened the front door he found his wife dead in the family arm chair and across her feet lay Mabel unconscious.

Dr. Foliana said Mrs. Roberts had evidently succumbed to heart disease.

To Shield Themselves.

New York World: Exonerating themselves, the local board of steamship inspectors blamed Engineer Conklin, as well as Capt. Van Schaick and Pilot Van Wart, for the Slocum disaster. The report of the federal commission not only exonerates but praises Mr. Conklin and his assistant, Mr. Brandow, for sticking to their posts. The inspectors were evidently looking everywhere for culprits—except at home.
